All foreigners were wonderfully well treated in Europe, but especially in Germany. My vacation was spoiled only in one respect, namely, by the cancelling of all the Wagner and Mozart operas, which I intended to hear. But instead of that the playhouses of Munich gave some of the old German classics, which one so rarely hears in America, and some of Ibsen's plays, so I heard and saw fine performances of Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell," Lessing's "Minna von Barnhelm" and Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" (the latter with all of Grieg's incidental music, also rarely heard). The "Peer Gynt" performance was especially noteworthy for fine acting and exquisite taste in staging and lighting, done by the simplest means. . . . After three weeks we went to Holland on one of the special trains arranged with so much friendly courtesy by the German Government for the Americans—and before the train left the station the Mayor of Munich came to give us all the good wishes of the city and a "bon voyage" and every lady was presented with a little bouquet of flowers. . . .

After much difficulty in securing passage Mr. Gebhard finally reached Boston via Montreal, and is now recuperating from the effects of the voyage. He will open his studio in Steinert Hall, October 3, and his concert season about November 1.

WILLARD FLINT'S SEASON.

An early season chat with Willard Flint revealed things as coming along splendidly for this excellent artist and teacher. On the strength of his fine reputation as an oratorio singer in the East, Mr. Flint was approached this summer by Ernest L. Briggs, the Chicago manager, with a very flattering offer. Engagements resulting from this combination so far are a Chicago recital, December 6, and a Milwaukee appearance, December 7, in the "Damnation of Faust." In addition, Mr. Flint has pending a tenth reengagement with the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston for its Christmas "Messiah" performance. Quite on a par with the quality of his solo work is Mr. Flint's teaching ability, which combines absolute conscientiousness with the thoroughness and authority of an established artist. To which facts Mr. Flint's large class of pupils bear eloquent testimony.

FLONZALEYS TO RETURN.

Definite word has been received from the Flonzaley Quartet to the effect that they will return to America this season and undertake, among others, their customary three concerts at Jordan Hall.

JESSIE DAVIS TO OPEN STUDIO OCTOBER 3.

From North Colebrook, Conn., comes this postcard greeting from Jessie Davis, the well known pianist and teacher: "Just finishing my vacation in these lovely Litchfield hills. Shall open my studio in the Pierce Building, October 3." BLANCHE FREEDMAN.

Mme. Molière to Open Studio in New York.

Mme. Molière, who has been singing during the last five years abroad, luckily escaped the war afflicted territory by visiting this country in June, her intention then being to return to Europe in August to fulfill her engagements with the opera in Berlin this season.

Owing to the European trouble she will remain in New York indefinitely, where she will be heard in opera and concert. Mme. Molière has had marked success in Berlin.

MME. MOLIERE AS ELIZABETH IN "TANNHAUSER."

Germany, and critics proclaimed that her performance of Elizabeth in "Tannhäuser" was sung with magnificent interpretation, and that she possesses an unusually beautiful voice.

Her husband, who has lately returned from Europe, was not fortunate in escaping in time. He was mobbed and arrested as a spy and liberated only through the kindness of the American consul.

Mme. Molière has taken a country home in Pelham, a suburb of New York, where she hopes to receive her friends this winter, and will have a studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building after October 1.

Florence Austin, American Violinist.

Florence Austin has been the guest of relatives in Minneapolis, Minn., for some weeks past. While away, ostensibly resting, she has been busy practising her extensive repertoire, in which she will be heard this winter.

FLORENCE AUSTIN, VIOLINIST, AND HER SISTER, MARION, IN PEACEFUL WATERS.

The snapshot herewith reproduced shows her in the center of the boat with her sister, Marion Austin Dunn. They are seated in "Canoe Beethoven" on Lakes of the Isles, Minneapolis, in front of the Gates Mansion.

CINCINNATI NOTES.

A chamber concert of especial interest will take pla at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music about the midd of October. The participating artists will be: Theodo Bohlmann, pianist; Bernard Sturm, violinist, and Juli Sturm, cellist. Among the numbers on the program w be one of the works of Korngold, seldom heard in th country.

An interesting series of concerts is being planned f the College of Music faculty this winter. In addition the regular series of concerts by the College String Qua tet, there will be several evenings of ensemble mus Emil Heermann, violinist, and Walter Gilewicz, piani have declared their intention of giving an evening sonatas, and those who remember their brilliant wo together last season will hail this news with delight. A other feature of the concert series will be a program d voted to the German lied, by Hans Schroeder, barito with Louis Victor Saar as accompanist. It is also thoug probable that Adele Westfield may be heard with t String Quartet in the Schumann quintet. Those who r member the fine performance of Offenbach's "Tales Hoffmann" last December will be pleased to learn that t Springer Opera Club will give another performance t winter.

Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, who has a large and teresting class in harmony at the Conservatory of Mu will vary her routine of teaching this winter by appeari more frequently in concert. She will be heard in l husband's new quintet, playing the piano part, and doubt will appear again this year with Stillman Kel in the scholarly lectures on the symphony programs, wh were such delightful features of the symphony season l year. These lectures are free to the public and take pl the Saturday before each concert.

The College of Music has received word of the flatt ing successes from several of its gifted pupils. Cec Hoffmann, a young soprano, who graduated from the c lege little more than a year ago, under Mme. Dotti, been selected for the leading part in "High Jinks." S has a voice of great beauty and a pleasing stage prese Marie Hughes, the coloratura soprano, who won admi tion for her clever work as the Doll in "Tales of Hi mann" and also as soloist at one of the popular conce will coach under Mme. Dotti again this year. She has s eral important concert dates. Cyrena van Gordon, c tralto with the Chicago Opera Company, is in Cincin coaching with Mme. Dotti, her former teacher, and appear in concert this winter, as the Chicago Opera C pany has suspended its performances temporarily, ow to the European war. Eleanor Brogle, who won a m for proficiency in piano at the college last year, has b appointed director of the piano department in Lucy C Institute, Athens, Ga.

Tecla Vigna, teacher of singing, has moved her st to room 215, Odd Fellows' Temple, northwest corne Seventh and Elm streets. Her classes began Septem 21 with a large enrollment and many promising voi Mme. Vigna had a strenuous summer in Europe and clares she is happy to be home again, even if she did h to come home in the steerage and sleep (?) on a bunk

JESSIE PARTLON TYRE

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE
Address: Care of Musical Courier

WILFRIED
KLAMROTH
TEACHER OF SINGING
Resumes teaching in New York October 1, at his new studio
124 EAST 39th STREET

VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone
MANAGEMENT: LOUDON CHARLTON, CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pia
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, M

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOS

IRMA SEYDE
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address, THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Bos

GEORGE EVERET
BARITONE—Boston, Covent Garden, Century Opera Companies
Manager, Frederick M. Waterman, 177 Huntington Avenue, B

FELIX FOX PIANI
WESLEYAN BUILDING
581 Boylston Street - - Bos

WILLARD FLINT BA
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chi

CLARA TIPPET
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, M

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Sin
602 Pierce Bull
BOSTON - M

NEW ORLEANS MAY NOT HAVE FRENCH OPERA THIS WINTER.

War Interferes with Engagement of Competent Male Artists—Company May Come from South America—Some of the Concerts to Be Given This Season.

New Orleans, La., September 19, 1914.

From present indications, this city will have no regular French opera season this winter. The war has made impossible the engagement of competent French artists (male), and, unless some itinerant company—English, Italian, Spanish, Greek, Dutch, or polyglot—comes this way, opera lovers will experience a great want. Of course an all-female opera company would be a sensational novelty, but it would doubtless be with a slight feeling of anxiety that the auditor would follow a contralto in her interpretation of such roles as Marcel, Mephisto, Brogni, Don Pedro, or Wotan. A falcon as St. John, Raoul, Tristan, or Vasco da Gama would, at best, seem a trifle out of her genre; and, somehow, with the best intentions, it would be difficult to fancy a chanteuse legere as Wilhelm Meister, Des Grieux, Cavaradossi, or Gerald. Striking, and perhaps grateful, innovations here would be a decollete maestra and feminine trombonists. The latter would certainly be more tractable and considerate than male trombonists usually are.

It is rumored that an effort is being made to secure the opera company now concluding a season at Buenos Aires. This is a happy move, which, it is hoped, will prove successful.

New Orleans Concerts.

The Philharmonic Society's series will be inaugurated January 13 by a piano recital to be given by Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, who, a few years ago, made a very sueeessful debut in this city. The other attractions of this praiseworthy and successful organization are, the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, February 18; Maggie Teyte, February 27, and Jacques Thibaud, March 25. All these concerts will be held at the Athenaeum. Following are the officers of the Philharmonic Society: President, Corinne Mayer; first vice president, Mrs. H. T. Howard; second vice president, Mrs. J. K. Newman; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. P. Werlein. The directors are: Mrs. F. W. Bott, Mrs. R. E. DeBuys, Mrs. Mark Kaiser, Blanche McCoard, Mrs. L. R. Maxwell, Lena Little, Mary V. Moloney, and Mrs. M. B. Trezevant.

The writer will continue his managerial activities and thus far the following artists have been booked to appear under his direction at the Athenaeum: Olga Samaroff, March 1; Leo Slezak, March 8, and the New York Symphony Orchestra, April 19.

Harry Brunswick Loëb.

Yelena von Sayn, Russian Violinist.

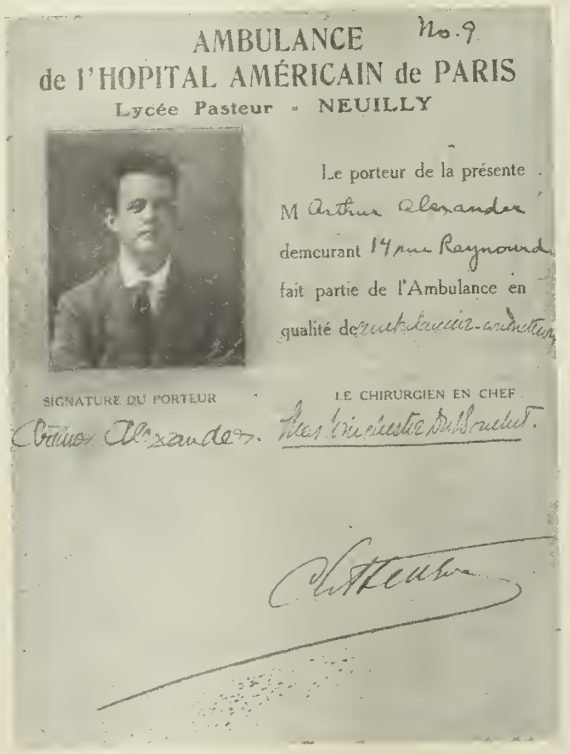
Yelena von Sayn, the young Russian violinist, and Alice Eversman, soprano, of the Century Opera Company, appear in the garden picture herewith reproduced. The garden is a part of the grounds belonging to the former's home in southern Russia, which is also reprinted here. The castle was built in the eighteenth century. During the Turkish war, thirty-five years ago, it served as a hospital for wounded soldiers.

MISS VON SAYN AND ALICE EVERSMAN IN THE GARDEN OF THE OLD EIGHTEENTH CENTURY CASTLE.

It is of interest to note that Yelena von Sayn is a great grand-niece of Kosciuszko, who fought so valiantly in the war of the Revolution under Washington. She comes from a noble and distinguished family, her father being one of the generals of the Czar.

YELENA VON SAYN'S HOME IN SOUTHERN RUSSIA.

Yelena von Sayn is a graduate of the Leipsic Conservatorium, where she was a pupil of Hans Sitt. Later she studied under Sevcik in Vienna.



She has already toured Europe, Asia and America, winning wide appreciation.

On her forthcoming tour Persian and Oriental music will be introduced by the violinist.

Alexander Drives an Ambulance.

Like most of the so called refugees who continue to arrive in New York from Europe by every boat, Arthur Alexander, the young American baritone, has many interesting tales to tell of his experiences abroad during the present conflict. Mr. Alexander has been a resident of Paris for a number of years and during this time he has made many friends among the members of the officials of the French capital.

A short time after the war broke out he was speeding in the Bois de Boulogne when a gendarme stopped him and requested him to turn over his automobile. Mr. Alexander asked the policeman to get into his car and together they went to the prefet de police. The baritone offered his services as chauffeur and for several weeks he ran his motor as an ambulance. A facsimile of the pass which was issued to him is shown herewith.

Florence Larrabee Returns to America.

Owing to the unsettled conditions abroad, Florence Larrabee, the pianist, has returned to America. Miss Larrabee was well known here before her departure for Europe two years ago, having been heard in concert and recital throughout the East and South. Under the management of Radcliffe of Washington she made an extensive and successful tour of the South Atlantic States, and won particularly great success by her playing of the MacDowell concerto in D with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. She has given a number of recitals in Boston with unvarying success and was invited to play with Alma Gluck, but could not do so, because her passage for Europe already was engaged.

Miss Larrabee's object in going to Europe was to be with Teresa Carreño, whose influence she was under during the whole of her two years' stay abroad. She played frequently in Europe, and would have made her [illegible] with orchestra in Berlin this season had it not been for the war.

Miss Larrabee has been greatly complimented for her playing by many of the noted musicians of the day, among them Ferruccio Busoni, Dr. Karl Muck, Leopold Auer, at whose villa she played the Brahms concerto at a private musicale, and Paderewski, who wrote upon the music, after hearing her play his own concerto: "With compliments upon a very fine performance of this concerto," signing his name to it—a valuable autograph.

Carl Fiqué Lectures on Richard Strauss.

In celebration of Richard Strauss' fiftieth birthday (born June 11, 1864), Carl Fiqué, musical director of the National Singing Festival of 1915, is delivering a series of lectures on the works of this German composer.

Mr. Fiqué's first lecture took place September 29, under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn. His subject was "Der Rosenkavalier." Mr. Fiqué told the story of the opera, playing the motives and melodies upon the piano. This recital was the first of a series of six, which are to take place on Tuesday evenings, the remaining subjects being: October 6, "Thus Spake Zarathustra" and "Till Eulenspiegel"; October 13, "Salome"; October 20, "Symphonia Domestica" and "Death and Transfiguration"; November 3, "Elektra," and November 10, "The Songs of Richard Strauss," with Katherine Noack Fiqué as assisting vocal soloist.

CARL FIQUÉ.

Mr. Fiqué is booked also for Richard Strauss' lectures at the New York College of Music and numerous musical clubs.

Carl Fiqué is an authority on Richard Strauss and this opportunity of securing a lecture that is both entertaining and instructive should not be overlooked by clubs and educational institutions.

Address Carl Fiqué, 128 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn.

Frenchman—Isn't Sibelius' music beautiful?

Englishman—No—it's awful.

Frenchman (surprised)—He's the most gifted of the Finnish composers.

Englishman—Finland? That's in Russia, isn't it?

Frenchman—Yes.

Englishman—Oh, I beg pardon; I thought Sibelius was a German. His music really is ravishing.

Engelbert Humperdinck celebrated his sixtieth birthday recently.

THEODORE
SPIERING
CONDUCTOR — VIOLINIST In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Ave., New York

FLORENCE LARRABEE
PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

Reception of Chicago Woman's Musical Club.

The Chicago Woman's Musical Club, of which Eleanore Capps-Hostler (Mrs. Amandus Emery Hostler) is president, has sent an invitation to the Chicago representative of the MUSICAL COURIER to be present at the opening reception and program to be given on Thursday, October 1, in the Francis I Room of the Congress Hotel.

ELEANORE CAPPS-HOSTLER,
President Chicago Woman's Musical Club.

The program will be furnished by Georgia Kober, pianist; Mabel Corlew-Smidt and Marie Ludwig. Ethel Geistweit Bendict will play the accompaniments.

Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn., September 24, 1914.

Anne Hughes, head of the public school music department, returned from her vacation at Isle Royal on Monday, September 21. Miss Hughes is to be tendered a reception at the Radisson Hotel on Friday evening, September 25, by the Thursday Musical, of which organization she is president.

At Stanley vesper service Sunday, September 20, a musical program was given by Ethel Daugherty, pianist; Luella Bender, reader, and Robert Fullerton, tenor, as follows: "Sonata quasi una fantasia" (Beethoven) (three movements), Miss Daugherty; "In Native Worth," from "The Creation" (Haydn), "Diassera" (Vannini), "O lieb" (Liszt), Mr. Fullerton; reading, group of poems: "The Men Who Don't Fit In," "The Men Who Knew," "Comfort," by Robert Service, Miss Bender; barcarolle, "Caprice Espagnole" (Moskowski), Miss Daugherty; "Young Night Thought" (Homer), "My Native Land" (Suppe), "Some Rival Has Stolen My True Love" (Broadwood), "If I Were a Rose" (Liddle), Mr. Fullerton.

Enrollment for the dancing classes at the conservatory, to begin Saturday, October 3, is already being made, and the season's work promises to be unusually heavy in this department. Mrs. Leslie Hall Pinney, who has had the department in charge for the past thirteen years, will continue its direction. Mrs. Pinney has, as usual, spent several weeks of her vacation with the finest masters, making a study of the latest ballroom dances, which will be a feature of this season's work. This summer, she received a diploma and degree from the Russian school in the Chicago Normal School of Dancing.

David Patterson gave a lecture-recital September 12, choosing as his subject "The Role of the Listener." The lecture is preliminary to a series of lecture-recitals connected with the work of the symphony orchestra. Mr. Patterson will be assisted by several members of the faculty and advanced students in the analysis of the symphony programs on Thursday afternoons at 4 o'clock, previous to their being played. Some twenty members have already enrolled for this course.

The annual reception given by the president to students and their friends in honor of new members of the faculty will take place on Friday evening, September 25. Miss Evers was assisted by Miss Holbrook, dean of the conservatory, Mrs. Leslie Hall Pinney and Ethel Daugherty, head of the normal department, and Luella Bender. Members of the class of 1914 also acted on the receiving committee.

The second division classes, which are usually made up the fourth week of the conservatory year, are to be organized earlier this season because of the large enrollment. The first recitations of these free classes took place on Monday, September 21.

A large audience attended the regular Wednesday afternoon student recital, when pupils from the piano classes of Ethel Daugherty, Karen Westvig and vocal class of Mrs. Hawkins appeared in a program at conservatory hall.

Manuel Quirogo to Tour America.

Manuel Quirogo, the Spanish violinist, whom Sam S. and Lee Shubert have engaged for a concert tour in America, will sail from Havre on the steamship Rochambeau, October 3. He will arrive in this country October 13, and will make his debut in a violin recital at Carnegie Hall, New York, Saturday afternoon, October 17, with an interesting and varied program.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Quirogo will also appear at two popular orchestral concerts at the Hippodrome Sunday evenings, October 18 and 25.

After that he will give recitals in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Boston, Brooklyn, Detroit, Indianapolis and Chicago.

His tour is being managed by R. E. Johnston.

David Hochstein in America.

David Hochstein, the young violinist, arrived in this country last week after having encountered many rather thrilling experiences on his outward journey from Dresden to the frontier and thence to London and Liverpool, from where he finally succeeded in engaging passage to America.

Mr. Hochstein has been abroad many years, and the career he has made for himself both on the Continent and in England is especially noteworthy as an introduction to his initial American concert tour. In 1911 he graduated with splendid honors from Sevcik's meisterschule in the Royal Conservatory at Vienna. He won the coveted first prize which is yearly given by the Austrian Government—a feat seldom performed by an American student. The following year was spent by the young violinist in concertizing throughout Germany and England, and the success achieved in this undertaking was marked on every occasion. His remarkable technic was commented upon everywhere and, above all, the various critics in Berlin, Vienna, Dresden, Munich and London unhesitatingly acclaimed the splendid artistic qualities revealed in his playing and accredited him with genuine virtuoso abilities.

During the past year Mr. Hochstein continued his studies with Leopold Auer at Petrograd (St. Petersburg) and at Loschwitz, near Dresden. In the late summer another short concert tour was made by the violinist through Finland, which also terminated in a successful manner.

Arrangements are now being made by which in the near future the violinist will enter upon an extensive concert tour throughout this country. In the meantime, as New-York will be the center of his activities, Mr. Hochstein has taken a studio at Carnegie Hall, where he expects to enroll a limited number of pupils. His first appearance with orchestra in this country will be made in the early part of October at Rochester, N. Y., with the Rochester Symphony Orchestra.

DAVID HOCHSTEIN.

Burmester at Kiel.

Willy Burmester gave a recital at Kiel late in the spring which now is known to have been the final musical event of importance which took place in the city and Mr. Burmester's last public appearance before the outbreak of the war. The Kieler Neueste Nachrichten refers to this event in rather interesting language. A literal translation follows:

Willy Burmester is the most brilliant and most important representative of the violinistic art of northern Germany. He is unsurpassed. He stands alone and his manner of playing, as well as his technic, are unequaled. Verily, he is a child of our period, the period of technic. Last night his fingering and his command of the bow oft-times exceeded comprehension. Here is a degree of technical knowledge, which, as it were, appears unreal and from whose demoniacal influence it is hard to get away. Should it be true, after all, what has often been said, that Burmester stands in league with the Devil himself?

But no; he is no uncanny magician, but an artist. He stood on that platform distributing with a lavish hand of the wealth of his art, so that each of his hearers, and there were many of them, received a rich share. Art is still real pulsating life and not a mere display of technic, indispensable as that may be.

D'Arnalle Returns to America.

After a long absence, the baritone, Vernon d'Arnalle, has returned to America, being a victim of the war conditions abroad.

D'Arnalle has long been an established favorite in all the European capitals and his recitals of German lieder have always called forth large and enthusiastic audiences, as well as the warmest praise from the press. In Italy he is regarded as a singer of pure bel canto, and critics have likened him to Battistini, the Nestor of this school.

Arrangements are now being made for concerts and recitals by this singer, and he will also accept a few serious students. D'Arnalle has been honored abroad by many decorations from the various courts, including that of Emperor Wilhelm, King Ludwig of Bavaria, Archduke Joseph of Hungary, and the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg.

Vancouver's Loss.

We are highly flattered to see in a recent issue of the New York MUSICAL COURIER a reproduction of one of our paragraphs, but were very sorry to notice that the home of the Saturday Sunset was in Victoria, B. C.—Vancouver, B. C., Saturday Sunset.

VERA BARSTOW VIOLINIST
1914-1915 Season Now Booking
Management, Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Arthur Aldridge.

B

Mrs. A. M. Blair, Birdice Blye, Alice L. Bryant, Norah Brandt, Enid Brandt, Jessie Baskerville, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Edmund Burke, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Wilhelm Bachaus.

C

Enrico Caruso, Cleofonte Campanini, Shanna Cumming, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Mrs. Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Julia Culp, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani.

D

Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, J. F. Delma-Heide, Jenny Dufau, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel, Loretta Del Valle, Camille Decreus.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, Edwin Evans, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitzhugh, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia, Carl Friedberg, Adelin Fermin.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Archer Gibson, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, William J. Guard, Paolo Gallico, A. J. Goodrich, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Mrs. Warner Gibbs.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, Ellis Clark Hammann, George Harris, Jr., Sue Harvard, Margaret Huston, Edwin Hughes, Carl Hillman, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargrave, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Marie Hertenstein, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann.

J

Sascha Jacobson, Anna Taylor Jones, Clayton Johns, Edward Johnson, Hermann Jadlowker.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Georgia Kober, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Leopold Kramer, Walter Kirschbaum, Frank King-Clark, Mrs. Frank King-Clark.

L

Felice Lyne, Hans Letz, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Jasef Lhevinne, Louis Lombard, Frank la Forge, Theodor Lattermann, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare, Elizabeth Leonard.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Florence Macbeth, Zitella Martin, Marguerite Melville, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Christine Miller, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Francis Macmillen, Isolde Menges, Ottilie Metzger, Lucian Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, Elisabeth Mack, Hans Merx, John McCormack, Daniel Maquarre, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Daisy McKay, Victor Maurel, Carmen Melis, Pietro Minetti.

N

Emma Nevada, Mignon Nevada, Hildegarde Nash, Arthur Newstead.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober.

P

Paul Petri, Louis Persinger, Dolly Patterson, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Alfred Piccaver, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, S. van Praag, Anna Pavlowa.

R

Titta Ruffo, Kate Rolla, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, Jacques Renard, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

Bruno Steindel, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Albert Stoessel, Andrea de Segurola, Carlos Salzedo, Katharine Loyal, Phillips Shaw, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Arrigo Serato, Sevcik Quartet, Max Smith, Josef Stransky, Giulio Setti, Ann Swinburne, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt, Umberto Sorrentino.

T

Louis Cambell-Tipton, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tremonti, Elizabeth Topping, Isadore Troostwyck, André Tourret.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Alice Verlet, Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Coenraad von Bos, Luisa Villani, Constantin von Sternberg.

W

Felix Weingartner, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams, Frederic Warren, Mrs. Warren.

Y

Eugen Ysaye.

Z

Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

C. A. Ellis, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York last Friday, September 25, on the steamship Mauretania.

Rudolph Ganz, the Swiss pianist, reached New York Thursday, September 24, on the steamship Antilles.

Louis Koemmenich, conductor of the Oratorio Society of New York, returned from Europe last Thursday, September 24, on the steamship Antilles.

Dr. Karl Muck, conductor of the Boston Symphany Orchestra, was booked to sail on the steamship Ryndam, sailing from Rotterdam last Saturday, September 26, for New York.

Julia Claussen, the Swedish contralto, returned on the steamship New York, of the American Line, September 24.

Anita Rio, the soprano, arrived in Boston, Thursday, September 24, on the steamship Canopic.

Josef Hofmann and Mrs. Hofmann were passengers on the steamship Antilles, which arrived in New York, Thursday, September 24.

Pietro A. Yon, organist and composer, returned from Europe, Saturday, September 12, on the steamship Europa, of the Italian Line.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Aldrich arrived on the steamship New York, of the American Line, from Liverpool, September 24.

Mme. Sembrich will sail for America on the Rotterdam, October 3.

Alfred Price Quinn has returned to his home in Oklahoma City, from Europe.

David Hochstein, the young violinist, is now in America, having recently come from Europe.

Antonio Scotti, the Metropolitan Opera baritone, arrived on the steamship Mauretania, September 25.

Daisy McKay, piano instructor, of New York, returned from London this week.

Joseph Phillips, the baritone, returned from Europe recently.

Manuel Quirogo, the Spanish violinist, will sail from Havre on the steamship Rochambeau, October 3, [illegible] is due to arrive in this country October 13.

Katherine McNeal, a Washington, D. C., piano student, has returned from Berlin.

Otto Torney Simon and Mrs. Simon, Felix Garziglia and Mrs. Garziglia, of Washington, D. C., have returned from Europe.

Anton Witek, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, Vita Witek, the pianist, are due to arrive in New York this week from Rotterdam.

A. Holy, harpist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is due this week from Rotterdam.

May Scheider, the American soprano, returned to New York last Saturday.

W. R. McDonald, business manager of the Boston Opera, returned to that city last week from Europe.

Margaret Huston returned to America, September 24, on the steamship Canopic.

Thuel Burnham, the pianist, is en route to America via the steamship Rotterdam, which is due to arrive in New York, October 1.

Louise Gunning, the soprano, has returned to New York from Europe.

Kate Rolla was a passenger on the steamship New York of the American Line, which reached New York, September 24.

George Hamlin, the American tenor, returned from Italy on the steamship Canopic, which reached Boston last Thursday, September 24.

MORE OPENING DATES.

In addition to the list of opening musical attractions for the season 1914-15 published in last week's MUSICAL COURIER, the following dates have been received.

OCTOBER.

1—Olive Fremstad, Seattle, Wash.
6—Dr. Bartlett's Series, Des Moines, Ia. Anna Case.
7—Redpath Lyceum Series, Des Moines, Ia. Ernestine Schumann-Heink.
17—Manuel Quirogo, New York City.
20—Behymer Philharmonic Series, Los Angeles, Cal. Olive Fremstad.
22—Myrtle Irene Mitchell Course, Kansas City, Mo. Alice Nielsen and Rudolph Ganz.
25—Clara Bowen Shepard Course, Milwaukee, Wis. Helen Ware and Harold Bauer.
27—Mai Davis Smith Course, Buffalo, N. Y. Frieda Hempel and Edmund Burke.
27—Fritschy Concert Series, Kansas City, Mo. Emmy Destinn and Dinh Gilly.
30—George F. Ogden Series, Des Moines, Ia. Margarete Matzenauer.

NOVEMBER.

3—Anna Pavlowa, New York City.
6—Percy Hemus, New York City.

JANUARY.

13—New Orleans Philharmonic Society Series. Ossip Gabrilowitsch.

Yvonne de Tréville's New York and Brooklyn Recitals.

Yvonne de Tréville, the coloratura soprano, will give her unique costume song recital, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne," at Aeolian Hall, New York, on Friday afternoon, November 6.

At the Brooklyn Academy of Music, under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, Mlle. de Tréville will present "Three Centuries of Prime Donne" on Wednesday evening, November 4.

At these recitals Mlle. de Tréville will sing three new songs by Henry K. Hadley, composer, and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. These songs are being written especially for this charming artist.

Englishwoman's Piano Concerto.

At a recent London Promenade concert there was a first performance of a piano concerto in C by Kathleen Bruckshaw, the composer appearing as soloist. "The work proved altogether worthy of a hearing," says one critical report, "and there is much in it which justifies the hope that this British composer may be better known in the future. The influence of the French and Russian schools is suggested rather than the Teutonic, and while the first movement is somewhat lacking in consolidation, the andante contains many charming passages, and there is no lack of thematic invention and beauty in the work as a whole."

May Scheider Here.

May Scheider, an American singer, who has been winning success abroad in opera, arrived in this country last Saturday and will remain here until after the close of the European war. It is not known as yet whether Miss Scheider will accept engagements while in America.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Frances Sanford will teach the Dunning System of Improved Music Study for Children in Pasadena, Cal.

Mrs. R. M. Motley is in charge of the music at the Horrell Hill School, Columbia, S. C.

Franz Kohler, who led the Erie Symphony Orchestra last season, will again head the organization. The officers elected are: John Galbraith, president; directors, F. J. Demuling, J. V. Yelgerhouse, A. Kohler, H. Wiesbauer, Fred Fielder and James Cavanaugh. The soloists for the season have been decided upon, although the order of their appearance is not certain. They will be Mrs. Charles McKean, soprano; Joseph Erhart, tenor; Miss Bonnazzi, pianist, and Franz Kohler, violinist.

The fourth and last studio event of the summer series of recitals at Epping Forest, Pittsburgh, Pa., occurred recently, when the following persons furnished the program: Mabel Wright-Hunter, reader, of Greensburg, Pa.; Mary Huber and Annie Lane, of Pittsburgh; Mary Caldwell, of Sheridanville, Pa.; Mmes. George P. and Helen Mae McCracken, of Steubenville, Ohio, and the Bankert Orchestra, of Glenfield, Pa.

Ernest R. Kroeger, the St. Louis composer and pianist, is said to be able to play from memory, on the piano, more than 1,300 pieces.

Rudolf Larsen, late of St. Petersburg—or, more strictly speaking, Petrograd—Russia, has taken up his residence in Toronto, Canada.

Emil R. Keuchen, of Buffalo, has reopened his studio at 183 North Pearl street, where he will teach piano and pipe organ. Mr. Keuchen is a Buffalo organist, and his studio is equipped with a three manual organ. In the piano department is a teachers' course. During the summer, pupils of Mr. Keuchen assisted as substitute organists at various Buffalo churches.

May Leggett-Abel, a Detroit (Mich.) violinist, has just established an exclusive violin school in that city. Mrs. Abel was head of the violin department of the Michigan Conservatory of Music. Associated with Mrs. Abel in ensemble and accompaniment work are the pianists Ella Dafoe-Eustice, Clara Koehler-Heberlein, Lillian Lachman-Silver, Sarah Weinberg and Edward Manville.

Harold E. Kuhn has recently joined the Buffalo musical forces. He is organist of Grace Episcopal Church and has opened a studio for both piano and organ. He was a pupil of Dr. William C. Carl, of the Guilmant Organ School, while in New York.

Dalton Baker, the London baritone, has opened a studio in Toronto, Canada.

Elizabeth L. Walker, teacher of singing, has resumed her work at the Toronto (Canada) Conservatory of Music and at the "Norwood" (Toronto).

Hildegarde Brandegee will head the violin department of the Ganapol School of Musical Art, Detroit, Mich.

William Wrigley is to be at the head of the violin department of the Detroit Institute of Musical Art.

Winnifred Hicks-Lyne, soprano, and Grace Smith, pianist, Toronto, Canada, musicians, gave a recital in Aeolian Hall, London, during their summer spent in England.

Gena Branscombe's song, "If You E'er Have Seen," was sung at the MacDowell Festival recently. It is dedicated to Yvonne de Treville, who will use it on her programs this season.

George Dixon, the tenor, has returned to Toronto, Canada, from his studies in New York, and is now at his studio at the Hambourg Conservatory of Music.

Among the Detroit (Mich.) musicians who have recently resumed teaching are Clara Koehler-Heberlein, musical director of the Chamber Music Society (piano); Alice May Harrah (vocal); Bessie Brockway Brown (vocal); Elizabeth Thorpe, Grace Johnson (vocal), at the Detroit Institute of Musical Art, and William Howland, head of the vocal department at the Detroit Institute of Musical Art.

Angela Binden-Edwards, soprano, is also back at her studio at the above mentioned Toronto conservatory.

Mrs. George S. Fell, of Trenton, N. J., has opened her studio for piano, harmony and musical history.

Charles W. Pette and Fred Ball are also other Trenton musicians who have resumed studio tuition.

The City Park Band, Baltimore, Md., has closed its season, the attendance at which has never before been equaled.

B. N. Silva, a Mexican musician, recently gave an informal violin recital before a few members of the Denver Motor Club. Silva has composed a march, which he has dedicated to the Denver Motor Club, and the recital was given to allow the members of the club to hear it before it is published.

C. A. Stein has been engaged to lead the Choral Club, Troy, N. Y., to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Allan Lindsay.

Malvina Ehrlich recently returned to Troy, N. Y., from Berlin, where she was a pupil of Lhevinne.

Charlton Harris, a Denver (Col.) blind girl, has opened a studio in that city. She is said to be equally gifted on the piano, organ and the violin.

J. Guernsey Curtiss, baritone; George A. Dostan, tenor; Nevada van de Veer, contralto, and Marie Stoddart, soprano, were the soloists at the Rochester (N. Y.) Music Festival.

August W. Mertens, of Troy, N. Y., tenor soloist at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Albany, and Mary Haynes Wallace, of Schenectady, formerly of Troy, soprano soloist of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, Albany, with Mrs. August W. Mertens as accompanist, took part in a musicale given recently at the Plaza Hotel, Asbury Park, N. J.

Burnham Will Arrive October 1.

Thuel Burnham, the pianist, found it necessary to change the date of sailing for America, and is now returning on the steamship Vaterland, which is due to arrive in New York about October 1. His tour of the West and Middle West is being booked by Harry Culbertson, of Chicago, and a large number of dates to begin in the early fall have been secured. Mr. Burnham also will be heard in recital in New York and other cities of the East.

William Thorner Locates in New York.

William Thorner has just arrived from Paris, where his studio on the Avenue Marceau is well known. Mr. Thorner has been teaching singers, who have already become prominent throughout the musical world.

As Paris is almost deserted, Mr. Thorner will locate in New York, having opened his studio at 70 West Sixty-eighth street. Some of his artist-pupils are Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci and Carl Cochems.

Seagle Makes New York His Headquarters.

Oscar Seagle the baritone, who is again making a tour of America this season, will make his headquarters in New York at the Hotel Laurelton, 147 West Fifty-fifth street. Mr. Seagle informs the MUSICAL COURIER that he is so arranging his tour that he will be able to receive pupils and that the latter need not feel they will be neglected because of the exigencies of public performance.

Emma Heckle in New York.

Emma Heckle, the vocal teacher, of Cincinnati, passed through New York recently on her way home from New Jersey, where she has been spending the summer. She will reach Cincinnati about October 6.

Mme. Del Valle En Route.

Loretta del Valle, the coloratura soprano, who will make her first American tour this year, sails today, September 30, from Liverpool. Mme. del Valle will be under the management of Antonia Sawyer.

OBITUARY.

F. Loui King.

F. Loui King, founder and director of the King Conservatory of Music, San Jose, Cal., died in that city on Sunday, September 13, following a prolonged illness.

Arthur Rech.

Arthur Rech, recognized as a virtuoso of fine attainments, and teacher of piano at the Chicago Musical College, died suddenly at his residence, 908 Dakin street, Chicago, Ill., last Wednesday, September 23. Mr. Rech had studied at the Chicago Musical College for a number of years and won diamond medals in his class four successive years. In June, 1899, Mr. Rech completed the artists' course in the college and received the degree of Master of Music. He had visited Europe several times and for two years coached with Godowsky and Reisenauer.

The Bremen Opera reopened recently with a performance of "The Attack," the libretto of which deals with the Franco-Prussian War.

TO LET

TO SUBLET—Beautifully furnished studio for half day or evenings. Best central location. Reference required. Address "PROFESSIONAL," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

WANTED

CHURCH SOPRANO wanted. Apply with music to F. W. R., care of MUSICAL COURIER office, 437 Fifth Ave., corner Thirty-ninth St., 2 p. m., Thursday, October 1.

WANTED—2 Pianists (for advanced students), one Violinist and one Vocalist (all must be artistic performers) for large Pacific Coast Conservatory. Only very best of credentials (character as well as musical) and satisfactory salary demands will receive consideration. Address "E. M. Y.," care of MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

Mrs. HALL McALLISTER
TEACHER OF SINGING
Musical Management
407 Pierce Building - - Boston

Mrs. MINNIE M. McCONNELL
Voice Culture and Coach
McConnell Vocal Trio
204 Cathedral Parkway, (W. 110th St.) New York
Phone: River 6439

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 9517

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

Mme. M. Karweska
GRAND OPERA ARTIST
SOUTHERN RUSSIA, BUDAPEST and VIENNA

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX
CONTRALTO BEVANI OPERA COMPANY, BOSTON
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Ave., New York

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID HARPIST
THE FOREMOST WOMAN HARPIST IN AMERICA
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, P

JOHN B. MILLER, TENO
624 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Emily Church BENHAM Pianis
Concerts Recitals Lesson
Studio: 1299 Bryden Road, Columbus, Oh

MARIE YAHR Contralt
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Ope
Phone Ravenswood 2319 849 Lakeside Place Chic

SUSANNAH MACAULA
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YO
Composer of "Allah Is Great," "The Butterfly," "Ave Mar

LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
OCT 12 1914

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 14 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1802

LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
12 OCT 1914

CHARLES W. CLARK

The American Baritone

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sigbt-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

E. PRESSON MILLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
451 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3067 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 W. 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUE,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. tourin Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 600 West 114th St., New
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLE
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE
VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62
Complete musical education given to from the begining to the highest perfectio
F. & H. CARRI, Dir

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MRS. J. HARRISON-IRVINE,
PIANISTE—ACCOMPANISTE.
Instruction in Piano, Teaching, Accom
Coaching of Operatic Roles, Concert,
Sight Singing and Reading Classes, Har
1013 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Phone, Columb

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOE
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 162 East 62d St., New

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE Lessons in Organ, Theory and Compo
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 5

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—A
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLIN
Nine years of successful teaching and con in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New Y
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1 mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 228

DOUGLAS POWELL
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Special attention paid to Concert Breathing and Tone Placem
Studio: 448 Madison Ave., Phone Plaza

HERBERT WILBER GREEN
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of 701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

OL. LXIX.—NO. 14. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1802.

BERLIN RESUMES ITS MUSICAL ACTIVITIES.

Royal Opera, Charlottenburg Opera and Numerous Other German Stages Open Their Doors—American Artists Give Concert for the War Fund—Humperdinck Celebrates His Sixtieth Birthday—Bayreuth's Deficit This Season 400,000 Marks—Many Artists Sailing.

[The appended letter, although written before the one published by the MUSICAL COURIER last week, arrived here later than that communication, a result of the disturbed European mail conditions.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

Berlin, September 5, 1914.

The Berlin Royal Opera ened for the regular win- season on September 1, in te of the war. This was made ssible by the patriotic spirit of e members of the solo personnel, o are all singing at greatly reduced laries. Prices of admission have also en cut down, as the public is, of course, ort of money. There was, nevertheless, large attendance on the opening night, ien an admirable performance of "Lohen- in" was given.

Other important stages that have also re- med activities notwithstanding the great Euro- an upheavals are Vienna, Dresden, Stuttgart, unich, Weimar, Hamburg, Magdeburg, Frank- rt and Prague. The attendance in all of these wns, thus far, has been very satisfactory. Conditions are verywhere the same—prices are lower and the salaries f the artists greatly reduced.

CHARLOTTENBURG OPERA REOPENS.

Berlin's second big operatic institution, the Charlotten- urg Opera, also has reopened its doors, not without diffi- ulty, because many of the artists have been called to arms. Among these are Rudolf Krasselt, one of the leading onductors; Felix Lagenpusch, stage manager, and Messrs. Klein, Hermann, Bilk, Plaut and Kirchner. To add urther to the director's embarrassment, the patriotic pub- ic has demanded that neither Heinz Arensen, the prin- ipal tenor, nor Waghalter, the conductor, both Russian ubjects, be allowed to appear. The embitterment against Waghalter seems to be particularly great, for Director Hartmann received many letters declaring that the public would cause a demonstration if he appeared in the con- luctor's chair. The season was opened with an excellent nd well attended production of the "Meistersinger." As prelude to the opera, Victor Blütgen delivered a brief nd pithy patriotic speech, after which the audience stood ip and sang "Deutschland, Deutschland, über alles."

STERN'S REOPENS.

The Stern Conservatory reopened for the season in all ts departments on September 1. The attendance is, of ourse, slim, compared with other years, but it is a hopeful ign that there are pupils enough to enable Director Hol- ander to open at all.

CONCERT BY AMERICAN ARTISTS.

Concerts for the Red Cross and numerous other war unds now are given nearly every evening. In one of the ccompanying pictures the American colony is seen in the Zoo concert hall at a concert given by American artists for the war fund. The stage was tastefully decorated with green and with the Stars and Stripes and the German flag. Augusta Cottlow played Bach's organ toccata, transcribed by Busoni, and Liszt's tarantelle, "Venezia e Napoli," both magnificently. Louis Persinger was heard in very fine performances of Tartini's G minor sonata and a group of small pieces. He was admirably accompanied by his charming young wife. Phadrig d'Agou sang a couple of arias with fine dramatic effect. The orchestra played American patriotic songs during the intermissions, and at the close of the program the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung by a chorus and the entire audience.

FRITZ KREISLER'S LATEST PHOTOGRAPH, AS A LIEUTENANT IN FIELD UNIFORM.

Taken in August, just before he left for the front. Mrs. Kreisler now is a Red Cross nurse, as revealed by the badge on her arm.

HUMPERDINCK'S SIXTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Engelbert Humperdinck celebrated his sixtieth birthday on September 1. His latest opera, "Die Marketenderin," because of its patriotic character, will be a favorite repertory number with various German stages this season. Its first Berlin performance will occur at the Charlottenburg Opera the end of this month.

MUSIC IN PROSPECT.

The large hall of the Philharmonie has been completely renovated by Director Laudecker, and it promises to find considerable use during the winter, in spite of the war. It has now been decided that the Philharmonie Orchestra will give its regular series of popular concerts three times a week, on Sundays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, as in former seasons. This is joyful news, for Berlin could ill afford to dispense with these concerts, when for a mere trifle the world's best orchestral music can be heard in finished renditions. With the Royal and Charlottenburg operas playing nightly, and the Philharmonie three times a week, the musical public will not go hungry.

But there will be plenty of other high class musical entertainments. Julia Culp and Ludwig Wüllner are to give concerts for the Red Cross on September 10 and 17. It has not yet been decided whether the Nikisch concerts will be given, but it is quite probable that they will be renewed.

SAILINGS FOR ARTISTS.

Anton Witek and fourteen other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are booked to sail from Rotterdam on a Holland-America Line steamer on September 19. These bookings were made possible through the courtesy of Major Ryan, who came over on the "Tennessee" to look after the interests of Americans here. The American Embassy also is assisting in getting important European artists, due for American tours, booked on the Holland steamers. Among these are numerous Metropolitan Opera singers. It was reported here that the Metropolitan Opera Company were to send a special steamer for their artists, but it seems that this is not true. A number of the singers will sail from Italy.

Christine Miller is now in Berlin, where she will stay during the month of September. She has secured passage on the Potsdam, sailing from Rotterdam on October 10. Dr. Ernst Kunwald and Willy Burmester are booked for the same steamer.

THEODORE SPIERING'S ABSENCE.

Theodore Spiering's departure from Berlin is felt keenly here, for he had made a great name for himself in Berlin as a conductor and violin pedagogue. Spiering's programs of novelties with the Philharmonic Orchestra had come to be important features of the Berlin season. Well, Berlin's loss will be America's gain, and our country undoubtedly is glad and proud to welcome back to its shores one of her sons, who has "made good" in such a large way in Germany.

ARTHUR M. ABELL.

BRINGING IN THE CAPTURED FRENCH AND RUSSIAN CANNON TO BERLIN, SEPTEMBER 2.

In the rear of the picture at the left is the historical Brandenburger Arch, rich in Napoleonic associations.

THE CROWD IN FRONT OF THE PALACE ON "SEDAN" DAY.

THE NEUTRAL POWERS IN BERLIN EXPRESS THEIR SYMPATHIES FOR GERMANY. MEETING AT THE ARCHITECT HOUSE OF THE VARIOUS NEUTRAL COLONIES. THEIR "HOCH DER KAISER."

Washington Choral Sings English Works.

Otto Torney Simon, musical director of the Motet Choral Society, of Washington, D. C., is in receipt of the following encouraging missives from two of England's gifted composers:

Vale House, Tufnell Park, N.

DEAR MR. SIMON: It is very nice of you to write so on my "Zante" song. I love Poe. Never do I feel so happy as when I am setting him. You will see that I have done all his great poems, yet America has not done one for orchestra or chorus. You are the first to do one. They are my best works, I'm told. I trust your choir will accept my sincere thanks for liking it also. If you can with orchestra and chorus do my "Bells" or Choral Symphony (both on Poe), I need not say I will even try to come over for it.

I am, my dear sir, most grateful for the sacred appreciation we all need. All success to you!

Sincerely,
JOSEPH HOLBROOKE.

30 Elvetham Road, Edgbaston, Birmingham.

DEAR MR. SIMON: Very many thanks for your cordial and appreciative letter, to receive which was a real pleasure. I am interested to see how many of my choral pieces have been sung by your society and hope you will convey to them as well as to yourself my greetings and sincere thanks.

With kind regards, Yours very truly,
GRANVILLE BANTOCK.

These two letters signify that the work of this worthy Washington organization is meeting with success more than local, and that its progress is being watched by music lovers in other countries besides the United States. This is as it should be, for the Motet Society has fixed its aim very high, and under the energetic direction of Mr. Simon is steadily climbing toward that goal.

Florence Austin and Her Artist-Pupil.

Florence Austin, the American violinist, announces her annual recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, for December 3. She was soloist at the present Maine Music Festivals, at Bangor and Portland, where she was heard with the Boston Opera House Orchestra.

Charlotte Moloney, her artist-pupil, gave a recital at the Shrine Theatre, Rutland, Vt., September 25. Miss Moloney's New York friends have heard that she appeared before a capacity house, so beautifully did she play that each number was received with enthusiasm. Following were her selections:

Prize Song, from The Meistersinger.....Wagner-Wilhelmj
Valse de Concert.....Musin
Romance from Concerto in D minor.....Wieniawski
Liebesfreud.....Kreisler
Air (for the G string).....Bach
The Bee.....Bohm
Scenes de la Czarda (No. 4).....Hubay

Charlotte Moloney.

Wolle at Nazareth.

In the Nazareth (Pa.) Moravian Church, Dr. J. Fred Wolle gave an organ recital on September 24, assisted by Mrs. David D. Wood, vocalist. The program was as follows:

Passcaglia.
The Little Post Horn Air.....Bach
Toccata, air and fugue.....Bach
Dr. Wolle.
Slumber Song.....Franz
Mrs. Wood.
Liebestod from Tristan and Isolde.....Wagner
Dr. Wolle.
Miriam's Song of Triumph.....Reine
Mrs. Wood.
Melody from Lanier's Flute.....Sidney Lan
Pastoral Sonata (Third Movement).....Rheinber
Dr. Wolle.
Ave Maria.....Schub
Mrs. Wood.
Theme and Finale.....Th
Dr. Wolle.

The Bethlehem papers spoke highly of the concert, s cial mention being made of Mrs. Wood's interpretation her husband's composition, "Slumber Song," as an core. Dr. Wolle's work, as always, displayed his thoro musicianship and scholarly interpretation, and was gr ly enjoyed by those fortunate enough to be in attenda

What Do You Mean?

If Moscow witnessed the mobilization of troops, so one wonders what Warsaw.

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

OLGA AND HELENE CASSIUS
Vocal Instruction
Pupils prepared for the operatic and concert stage. Specialties: Placing of ruined voices, rectifying of wrong methods of breathing by articulation of consonants and voice inflection, and fundamental building of speaking voice. Send for Olga Cassius' "Die Erzieuhung der Stimme und Atmung."
Studio: Prager Str. 35, Berlin, W.

MAURICE ARONSON VERA KAPLUN
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERT
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germar

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE LESCHETIZKY METHO
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 19

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

FORT WORTH MUSICIANS BACK FROM EUROPE.

Some Have Returned and Others Are En Route—Activity in the Local Fraternity—New Male Quartet.

Fort Worth, Tex., September 9, 1914.

The beginning of the war found a number of Fort Worth musicians in Europe, but I am glad to state that all have either returned or are en route. Lucy Ault, violinist, studied in Germany during the summer, but left with a party of English friends soon after the opening of hostilities and after much difficulty secured passage for America. W. J. Marsh, organist of the First Presbyterian Church, who spent the summer with his parents in England, returned last week. Carl Beutel, musical director of Texas Christian University, has been touring Europe since June, but has recently returned. Josef Rosenfeld, who has been studying with Hans Becker, is expected home September 15, and Yves Nat, who will be with the Texas Woman's College this season, is reported to have sailed from Havre on August 31. Mrs. Frank Morris, who is in Liverpool, will return soon, while Katherine Rose and Edna Lewis are en route.

A Midsummer Recital.

An interesting midsummer recital was given by three pupils of Thomas Holt Hubbard. Mrs. Edwin H. Neu sang "The Fairy Pipers" (Brewer), "The Swallows" (Cowen), and "Margery" (Bischoff), revealing a pleasing voice of wonderful clearness, her work being characterized by effortless tone production and good diction. Mrs. Thomas Holt Hubbard, contralto, sang "When You Come Home" (Squires), "The Dream-maker Man" (Nevin) and "The Voice of the Rain" (McCoy) with a great variety of expression, her rich tones being intensely dramatic in "The Voice of the Rain." Mermod Jaccard, bass, followed, singing "Neptune" (Gordon), "The Armorer's Song" (DeKoven) and "The Clank of the Foeman's Steel" (De Lazarre). Mr. Jaccard is one of Fort Worth's younger singers, but he surprised his auditors by the depth and smoothness of his tones. His voice ranges from low B flat to G above middle C, and throughout the scale maintains the quality of the true basso. The accompaniments were played by Janet Shepard, who was at all times in perfect accord with the singers. Mr. Hubbard's first year as a vocal teacher has shown gratifying results and his pupils sing with good tone and clear enunciation as well as a confidence which shows technical understanding.

Apollo Male Quartet.

A new organization which will doubtless add much pleasure to the musical life of the city is the Apollo Male Quartet. The members are: W. C. Eichenberger, first tenor; A. F. Mills, second tenor; Walker Moore, baritone, and M. C. VandeVenter, bass. Composed as it is of four good voices which harmonize beautifully, this organization will do creditable work this season. Several former appearances have been unusually satisfactory.

Harmony Club Concert Course.

The deplorable conditions in Europe will have little or no effect on the Fort Worth musical season. The Harmony Club has just issued an attractive booklet announcing the following concert course: Louise Homer, October 29; Ferruccio Busoni, December 1; Helen Stanley and Francis Ingram, joint recital, January 20, and the Zoellner String Quartet, February 16. It will be seen that all these artists are Americans with the exception of Busoni, and it seems very unlikely that he will be detained in Europe. In addition to this splendid course an engagement of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra is announced for February 12. The local manager is James F. Roach, whose enthusiasm in this undertaking is to be greatly commended.

ALEXANDER MOISSI,
The famous Italian actor, who became a German citizen after the outbreak of hostilities and enlisted in the Prussian army. Max Reinhardt has been paying Moissi 100,000 marks salary at Deutsches Theatre.

AMERICAN ARTISTS GIVE A CONCERT IN BERLIN FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE WAR FUND.
The audience consists almost entirely of Americans.

Harmony Club Meetings.

The Harmony Club will begin its regular meetings on October 7, and an interesting year's study of the classic composers has been planned. The choral work again will be in charge of Carl Venth, the efficient director of last year. The committee in charge of the piano department consists of Mrs. E. Clyde Whitlock, Mrs. F. Byrd Lary and Marian Douglas. The voice department is in charge of Mrs. W. C. Bryant and Mrs. Frank Morris, while the concert work is handled by Mrs. T. H. Wear, business manager; Mrs. A. L. Shuman, assistant manager; Mrs. W. B. Tyer, Marian Zane-Cetti and the club's president, Mrs. J. F. Lyons.

Strong Musical Faculties.

Both Fort Worth Colleges will open with strong musical faculties this season. Texas Christian University retains the capable director of last year, Carl Beutel, while associated with him as codirector will be George Elliot Simpson, whose efficient work as director of Polytechnic College is well remembered. Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Cahoon retain their former places as heads of the violin and voice departments respectively.

Texas Woman's College, which succeeds Polytechnic College, will open with a faculty of high standing. Yves Nat, the young French pianist, who toured with Tetrazzini last year, has been engaged to direct the piano department. Andrew Hemphill, the tenor, will direct the vocal work and be in charge of the City Conservatory. Carl Venth, one of the best musicians in the South, will have charge of the College Conservatory and teach violin, harmony and composition.

Thus with many excellent private teachers, Fort Worth offers unusual advantages to the student of music.

L. M. L.

Mendelssohn Choir Suggestion.

[Vancouver, B. C., Sunset.]

While America may be the gainer on account of the terrible war, Europe will be a great loser musically in a choral way, for the reason that the great Mendelssohn Choir, which is one of our national institutions, has been obliged to cancel its whole series of concerts planned for 1915.

Let us hope that the management may see its way clear to coming West with the choir, instead of crossing the Atlantic; we firmly believe that the audiences which would turn out to hear them would fully reimburse them for any outlay which would be incurred.

Kind Words on Music.

What drives the upper ten thousand to the concert halls? It is the facility of the enjoyment. One does not have to think in listening to music. It is taken as a nerve stimulant, like tea, coffe and tobacco. Moreover, the personality of the executing artist plays an important part in music. That's what makes women, in particular, wild about it. They nearly always forget the work for the individual soloist or conductor who interprets it. This music cult is simply a disease of modern civilization, like the anemia of our young women and the nervous prostration of our mental workers. As for the general run of music folk, none of the other arts can show anywhere near so much stupid conceit and general imbecility as those who cultivate the tonal art.—From "Kraftmayr," the musical novel by Wolzogen.

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave New York

FLORENCE LARRABEE
PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM
AMERICAN ENGAGEMENTS
Management ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano

First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah
Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

After Nine Years in Leipsic
MRS. CARL
ALVES
has returned to New York and has resumed the teaching of voice at her Studio,
48 West 90th St., New York

BARITONE

Concert, Oratorio, Recitals, Etc.
BERNHARD STEINBERG
"A voice of really beautiful timbre, combined with unusual intelligence of interpretation."—New York Tribune.
"A wonderfully beautiful voice, resonant, manly, admirably managed; a voice of character, the timbre of which lingers in one's memory.—Daily Mail, London.
LECTURE RECITAL ON HEBREW TRADITIONAL MUSIC
For terms and dates address
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Vernon d'Arnalle's Versatility.

Among the singers who have attained a unique position in the vocal field is Vernon d'Arnalle, the baritone. Mr. d'Arnalle's career began as a pianist, and it was after he had already revealed promise as a pianist that his voice began to claim his attention. Nature endowed this artist with a voice of exceptional beauty, warmth and range. Mr. d'Arnalle belongs to those artists whose ideals have ever led to perfection, and as he himself says—work, and only incessant work, is the secret of his success. It is this which has brought him to the place he now occupies.

He is master of the best Italian traditions of vocal art—a smooth, flowing and brilliant style. Coupled with this bel canto are the rich temperament and musicianly qualities of the one-time instrumentalist. Mr. d'Arnalle is especially happy in his singing of the German classics, for he insists upon really singing them, and so his readings of Schubert, Schumann and Brahms have always been a delight to those who worship at the shrine of the best in vocal art. In all his appearances, whether in opera or concert, his sincerity and lack of affectation have carried his audiences with him, and won for him an affectionate place in the heart of the music-loving public of all the European capitals.

An example of this artist's versatility is shown when some time ago he finished singing under Richard Strauss in a Strauss Festival, and immediately joined Saint-Saëns for some concerts in France, while a few weeks later he was actively engaged with Italian opera in Rome.

VERNON D'ARNALLE.

Mr. d'Arnalle possesses an almost unlimited repertoire and will be heard in America this season in some of the historical programs which have proved such an attraction abroad.

Carl Bernthaler's Baton Activities.

Six years of orchestral conducting in Pittsburgh, Pa., is the record which Carl Bernthaler, of that city, has to his credit. With the exception of the summer season of 1911, when he conducted the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, he has given of his unbounded enthusiasm and never tiring efforts to place on a high artistic plane a representative symphony orchestra for Pittsburgh. His work began there in 1908-1909 when he was the assistant conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, whose conductor was then Emil Paur, and when that leader went to accept a position in the Berlin Royal Opera, Mr. Bernthaler was engaged as successor to Mr. Paur. The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra is no more, but the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra is very much alive and a creditable example of Mr. Bernthaler's industry and perseverance. For six summers Mr. Bernthaler has conducted the concerts of this organization to the entire satisfaction of the public and the members of the orchestra.

The choirmaster, who for fifty-eight years has led the singing of a Michigan congregation, has the doleful record of having sung at 500 funerals in that time.—Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer.

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF
The Russian Violinist
In America 1914-15
Management
JOHANNA SHERRICK
Room 1007 200 Fifth Ave., N. Y.
DANIEL MAYER, London

Hermann
WEIL
Great Wagnerian Baritone
Metropolitan Opera House, New York
Hans Sachs—Amfortas—Wotan
Roles in Bayreuth Festivals
For Concert Dates Address Exclusively
ANNIE FRIEDBERG
Metropolitan Opera House Building, - - New York

MARCELLA
CRAFT
Five years Prima Donna Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS
SOLOIST
Maine Festivals, Portland & Bangor, Oct. 1-5, 1914.
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 6, 1914.
San Francisco Recital, Nov. 8, 1914.
Riverside, Cal., Recital, Nov. 10, 1914.
Los Angeles, Cal., Recital, Nov. 12, 1914.
San Diego, Cal., Recital, Nov. 13, 1914, etc.
Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal

ELEANOR SPENCER
PIANIST

Returns to America Season 1914-15
Management, Antonia Sawye
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

Jerome Uhl
BASS-BARITONE
"It is simply gorgeous singing, that is all!"—Oscar Hammerstein.
"This popular baritone is deserving of the epithet great."—Toronto World.
"By far the best in the casts I have attended at the Century."—E. Marzialle (alternate baritone with Titto Ruffo in Spain).
Management, R. E. Johnston
1451 Broadway, New York Phone 608 Bryant

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1451 Broadway, New York

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management: Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management;
Gertrude F. Cowen, 1451 Broadway, New York City

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

William Thorner
VOCAL TEACHER
Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:
"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.
(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."
Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.
Address 70 West 68th St., New York.

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO
Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.
"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914
American Tour, March-May, 1915
OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English
Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

The Sensation of the Year
CARL
FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

Where the Flonzaleys Work.

There are few more charming spots anywhere than the Pochon farm at Tronchet, Lausanne, Switzerland, where for ten years past the Flonzaley Quartet members have spent their summers. The farm is located on the meadows immediately below the crumbling tower of Gourse, and overlooks the Lake of Geneva, 4,000 feet below. There the Flonzaley Quartet members are housed, miles from a railway; but despite their quiet surroundings the life they lead is not one of leisure. Adolfo Betti, for example, is very fond of reading, and would like nothing better than the constant companionship of his books. Ugo Ara is a devotee of calisthenics, a horseman and a pedestrian of no mean endurance, but even in such a delightful environment his opportunities during the busy practice period are limited. Alfred Pochon would be glad to put in his time composing if only his quartet work permitted; while Iwan d'Archambeau would be content enough to pass each day with his corncob pipe, strolling through the neighboring forests in search of the champignons which abound in the region.

Nothing but illness, however, interferes with the daily and weekly schedule. Every day, except Sunday and Monday, the work begins with individual practice immediately after breakfast. At eleven o'clock the four artists meet for ensemble in a little chalet a few rods from the house. After lunch, much the same plan is adhered to—individual practice followed by concerted playing. The evenings, save on Fridays, when a more or less formal rehearsal is held for members of the Pochon family and a few friends, are unoccupied, and then each one follows his particular bent, including, usually, a spirited game of bridge.

On Saturday evenings the Flonzaleys journey to the beautiful home of their patron, E. J. de Coppet, and on Sunday they are ready for the weekly concert in the music room of the De Coppet villa, an event for which invitations are eagerly sought. Monday is the Flonzaleys' day of rest.

Auer in Dresden.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Volpe are shown in this picture with Prof. Leopold Auer between them. The snapshot was made in Dresden before the illustrious violin maestro became marooned in that city and unable to return to his St. Petersburg home and pupils.

PROF. LEOPOLD AUER AND HIS PUPIL, ARNOLD VOLPE, AND MRS. ARNOLD VOLPE.
This photograph was taken at Laschwitz, near Dresden, last July.

Nina Morgana at Maine Festival.

Nina Morgana, soprano, is singing at the Maine Music Festival, held at Bangor and Portland. She appeared Saturday evening, October 3, at Bangor, and will sing this evening, October 7, in Portland. Her numbers are by Bellini and Gounod.

A complete account of these appearances will be given in the October 14 issue of the MUSICAL COURIER in the report of this festival.

Miss Morgana had been engaged to sing with the Chicago Grand Opera Company this year, but, on account of the cancellation of its season, she will now be available for concerts and recitals.

Miss Morgana is at present coaching with A. Carbone, the New York vocal authority.

King Albert of Belgium is a very good violinist.

"Dawn in the Desert"
By GERTRUDE ROSS
Sung with great success by Mme. Schumann-Heink
WHITE-SMITH COMPANY

HERBERT FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

American Concert Tour of
—AND—
H. U. MAXWELL
Brilliant Baritone
Ch. De HARRACK
EMINENT COURT PIANIST
Address, Howard Pew, care of Musical Courier, Manager of recent tour of Arthur Nikisch and London Symphony Orchestra; also A. F. Wands—Per. Mgr. Middle West, Cleveland, O.

THEODORE
SPIERING
CONDUCTOR—VIOLINIST In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Ave., New York

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE
Address: Care of Musical Courier

Heinrich Hensel
ROYAL COURT SINGER
THE FAMOUS WAGNER TENOR
Covent Garden Opera - London
Wagner Festivals - - Bayreuth
Opera House - - - Hamburg
Theatre de la Monnaie - Brussels
Metropolitan Opera House, New York
SEASON 1914-15
Grand Opera, Chicago
ADDRESS, CARE MUSICAL COURIER

WINNIFRED
BAMBRICK
Canadian Harpist
"—she has enormous virtuosity."
New York Herald
"—exhibits surprising vigor of style."
New York Times
"She aroused sincere enthusiasm."
Brooklyn Daily Eagle
Management: M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue -:- New York

FRANCIS MACMILLEN AT THE VILLA LANTE, AT ORTE, NEAR ROME, ITALY.
(1) Lady Matilda Lante, (2) Francis Macmillen, (3) The Duke Lante della Rovere, (4) The Duchess Lante della Rovere, (5) The Count Chalani.

Macmillen in Rome.

The accompanying photograph shows Francis Macmillen with the Duke and Duchess Lante della Rovere and their daughter, Lady Matilda Lante. It was taken on the occasion of a visit of the violinist at the Villa Lante, near Rome, where he has spent much of his vacation time in the past few years. The estate is one of the most ancient in Italy and is a favorite rendezvous of many great personages, including King Victor Emanuel, who has been a guest there on more than one occasion. The della Roveres and their cousins, the Orsinis, between them have given seven Popes to the world.

Christine Miller at Norwich.

The Bass Clef Club of Norwich, Conn., presented Christine Miller as soloist at the last concert of the season, and the club and press were enthusiastic in their praise of this young artist's work. The Norwich Bulletin stated the following: "Miss Miller's appearance was looked for with the keenest anticipation and her work was wonderfully pleasing. Her voice is rich, full and even, and her art mature. A brief explanation of her German group enabled the audience to heartily enjoy this number. Her English group was well chosen and showed her versatility in a very fortunate way. The "Agnus Dei" by Bizet, which she sang with Mr. Kronold, was beautifully given and showed her voice and art to the best advantage. She was recalled at every appearance and received a lovely bouquet of flowers."

Miss Miller, who has been spending the summer abroad, has secured passage on the steamship Potsdam, which will sail from Rotterdam for America, October 10.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
Studios: Holland House, 143 Maida Vale - London

The most eminent Composers, best Songs and Song Cycles are to be found in the Catalogue of BOOSEY & CO. NEW YORK and LONDON
FREE on request. THEMATICS of latest important additions
9 East 17th Street New York

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Mercedes Devries-Schmit a Red Cross Nurse in Paris.

The accompanying snapshot shows Mercedes Devries-Schmit, wife of Hubert Schmit, who is now serving in the MERCEDES DEVRIES-SCHMIT AS A RED CROSS NURSE.

French army at the general's headquarters under General Gallieni.

Mme. Schmit, who is the daughter of Herman Devries, the Chicago vocal teacher, is shown in her Red Cross uniform. She is an active member of the Red Cross nurses. Mme. Schmit, who is well known in Chicago, where she made her home for many years, was previously an American citizen, her father, Herman Devries, being an American by birth.

New Orleans plans to open its opera season on November 12.

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

PATERSON FESTIVAL CHORUS REHEARSALS.

Large Increase in Number of Members—Record Season Expected—Director Wiske Negotiating with Noted Soloists—Orpheus Club Combined with Symphony Orchestra to Give Five Concerts—Gertrude Fozard to Give Recital.

Paterson, N. J., October 4, 1914.

The Paterson Music Festival Association has started upon its thirteenth season with a record chorus. There are already registered 150 more singers than at this time a year ago. Applicants are applying daily for membership cards, and if the present increase continues very long, Paterson will have a remarkably large group of singers.

C. Mortimer Wiske, the director, is arranging several new novelties for the festival programs. There will be many new and unusually attractive features for the concerts. Too, Mr. Wiske is negotiating with many of the world's best known soloists for this occasion.

GERTRUDE FOZARD TO GIVE RECITAL.

"Little Gertrude Fozard," the young singer of Paterson who created such a sensation last spring when she won the competition for local soloists at the annual Paterson Festival, will give a song recital in the high school auditorium, on Wednesday night, October 7. Following this appearance she will leave for Cincinnati to take up her studies at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. It will be remembered that the Paterson Festival Association had arranged for her to continue her musical education at the Royal Conservatory in London. On account of the war, however, this became impossible, and instead, Miss Fozard will go west. In Cincinnati she will take up all of the branches of music necessary to make of her a full fledged artist. All of her expenses are to be borne by the Paterson Festival Association. T. W. ALLEN.

JERSEY CITY ITEMS.

17 Brinkerhoff Street,
Jersey City, N. J., September 26, 1914.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Wilson, who have been for several years in the choir of the Emory Methodist Church, have returned from a vacation spent at Ocean Grove. Mr. Wilson goes to a New York church as tenor soloist, while Mrs. Wilson will remain with the Jersey City choir.

Karl Krieg, a young violinist, an exponent of the Heermann-Sevcik school of instruction, and who has been studying for several years with Michel Sciapiro, has opened his studio at 117 Fairview avenue, this city. Mr. Krieg has made a good use of his years of study, acquiring a correct technic, and this, augmented by natural talent, insures him a bright future.

The following is a program given by the young violinist, assisted by Daniel Lieberfeld, pianist: Concerto in G major, No. 7 (De Beriot); nocturno (Sciapiro), "Frühlingsrauschen" (Sinding), legende (Wieniawski), minuet in G major (Beethoven), "Souvenir" (Drdla), "Chanson Sans Parole" (Sciapiro), gavotte (Sciapiro), Karl Krieg; prelude (Rachmaninoff) and valse scherzo (Moskowski), Daniel Lieberfeld; "Dance de Tziganes" (Nachez), Karl Krieg. JESSIE BRUCE LOCKHART.

Praise for Palestrina.

Palestrina, the oldest of all composers whose works are still likely to be heard in concert halls, was until recently believed to have been born in 1524 or 1526, says the New York Evening Post. Riemann accepts the latter date, for which Haberl pleads. But more recent researches seem to indicate that Palestrina was born in 1514. In view of this discovery, preparations have already begun in Italy for worthily celebrating its one hundredth birthday of the master who marks the climax of Catholic church music as Bach does that of the Protestant Church. Wagner was a great admirer of Palestrina, and Saint-Saëns thinks that the beginnings of modern musical expression must be sought in the "Stabat Mater" of that old master.

Where We Got It.

There is reason to regard the Hindus and the Chinese as in possession of some form of musical notation. The Greeks had a system of writing music, but its comprehension evades us. The Latin notation was, like that of the Greeks in this one particular, alphabetic. A generally accepted tradition credits St. Gregory with the reduction of the scale to the octave and the naming of the seven notes, a service which has commonly won for him the credit of the invention of the art of writing music.—New York Sun.

Germaine Schnitzer Praised.

Boston and New York critics have extolled Germaine Schnitzer's pianistic ability in no reserved manner. The following press notices show their unqualified and unanimous praise of the pianist:

To say that Miss Schnitzer achieved success is to put it all too mildly; hers was a blazing triumph, a complete conquest of the hardened and the inveterate among concert goers. This girl is, without question, the greatest and most important new voice in piano playing that has sounded upon us for a decade at least. Miss Schnitzer has the soul and temperament of a genius.—Boston Journal.

. . . In the course of fifeeen or twenty minutes, Miss Schnitzer provided the patrons of these concerts with more sensations than they had experienced probably in as many months. Only one performance of the Liszt E flat concerto, out of the dozens which have been given in this city of late years is to be ranked at all with the performance of yesterday. This was in 1906, when Dr. Muck and Moriz Rosenthal played the concerto together. That sensation was, if anything, eclipsed by the effect of yesterday. With Dr. Muck's enthusiastic assistance, she simply overwhelmed her auditors. . . . From here on the performance was really incredible. Miss Schnitzer played like a demon! And this is the way the concerto ought to be played; the way in which not three performers have been heard to play it in this city.—Boston Post.

. . . There is more to be said. She is a musician in the narrow meaning of the word; she is also a poet. Such women and men are very rare, and it is not extravagant to say that Miss Schnitzer is indeed an extraordinary apparition in the world of pianists. Seldom does any pianist display both strength and tenderness, both marked mechanical proficiency and sentiment that is charged with womanly feeling and arises to imaginative heights.—Boston Herald.

Miss Schnitzer, who is not yet twenty-five, indubitably is on the high road to achievement that should place her in the front rank among the pianists of the period. Hers is an individuality that has grown to know the worth of poise and restraint as well as exuberance and warmth of feeling, and it is in this command over her emotional and intellectual forces that makes her performance attain the significance it does.—New York Journal.

Miss Schnitzer actually humanized her recital. . . . If one piano piece more than another is hackneyed it is Schumann's "Carnaval." Yet it came as newly to Miss Schnitzer's audience as it seemed to come to her. They heard and she felt it not as a minute tour de force, but as the swift procession of romantic fancies that unrolled itself before Schumann's eyes and ears. Once more the fitful pageant had the glamour that is its fluid life. . . . No wonder Miss Schnitzer humanized the recital. Imagination and poetry were in play in it.—New York Evening Sun.

GERMAINE SCHNITZER.

(Advertisement.)

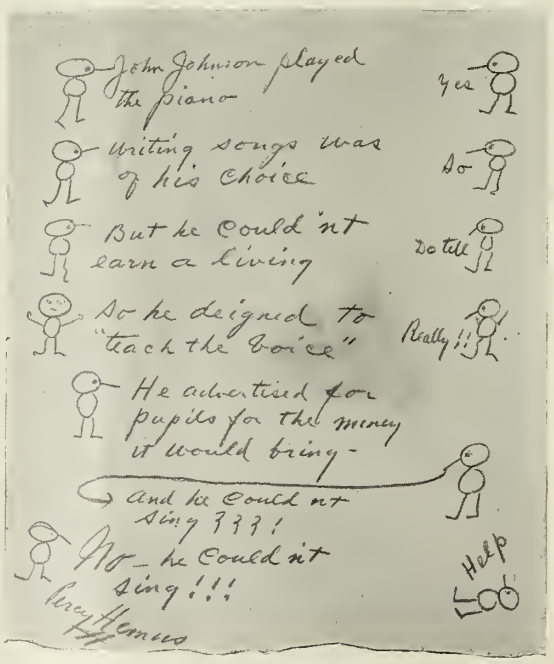
An Interview with Frances Ingram.

"How is it," Frances Ingram was asked in a recent interview, "that you meet with such tremendous and unfailing success in singing the 'Cry of Rachel'? I hear it from every side. In fact, only the other day I was told of a lesson in sympathy conveyed to one heart through your wonderful interpretation of this song."

"How do I do it?" replied Miss Ingram. "Why, I don't know unless it's because I don't try to make an impression. In my delivery I know that I have either a message to give, a picture to paint, or a story to tell, all depending upon the character of the song. Now my only effort is to make it clear to my listeners. Using the 'Cry of Rachel' as an example—you remember that it is merely a character sketch, so to speak. Therefore I see before me the mother who is half crazed with grief at the loss of her only child, her bough of the almond tree fair. I see her beating on the great barrier between her and her loved one, stretching out her arms to the unknown Power which has so cruelly robbed her life of its reason for existence. So keenly do I feel her sense of darkness and her prayer for the dawn of light to open again, that for the moment the audience is entirely lost to me. In its place there is nothing left but the great black abyss of the mother's despair. Many times I have been startled by the tremendous applause which the song has evoked. I invariably have to repeat it once and several times twice. Upon return engagements, requests come in for me to please sing the 'Cry of Rachel.' I must admit that it is a success. Sometimes I wonder if it is not the sentiment in the song, for I am sure that the only effort I put forth is to feel every word. I am so happy and pleased if it has touched the heart of anyone and helped them ever so little, for by this I know that the message has been received—the greatest commendation an artist may hope for."

FRANCES INGRAM.

Percy Hemus "Draws."



New York, October 1, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Being a baritone I have no cause for jealousy so far as Caruso's singing is concerned—but I did envy his power to "draw." So after "years of study" I send you my talking pictures—a story without words—using only the expressive faces of Art (ist) and Pub (lic) which your art editor will be able to interpret for you at a glance.

Sincerely, PERCY HEMUS.

ART(IST) AND PUB(LIC)

Georgia Kober Relates Experiences.

A MUSICAL COURIER representative called at the Sherwood School, Chicago, Wednesday afternoon, September 30, to meet Georgia Kober, president of the school, upon her return from Europe. The Sherwood School now occupies all the third floor in the Fine Arts Building Annex and these new accommodations are far superior to those found in its former home. The rooms are more spacious, more numerous and the atmosphere generally speaking, is more school-like, and frankly speaking, the reporter told Miss Kober that he expected big things hereafter from the Sherwood School. When asked by the president as to the object of his visit, the reported told Miss Kober that he had been directed to secure an interview for the MUSICAL COURIER from her.

"First of all, how often have you been to Europe?" was the first question ventured.

"This was my first trip to Europe. I was in Berlin only ten days before war was declared, and I did not see any evidence of anything of a disturbing nature in Berlin up to the time of the mobilization of troops, after which there was excitement everywhere, train service was crippled at first and finally within a very few days there was no train service at all. Not speaking German very well I was greatly handicapped and in several instances was followed to my pension and questioned closely, was arrested six times as a Russian spy, four times as an English spy, but my passports saved me from going to jail. I was given less than two hours' notice to leave Berlin, but was fortunate enough to leave on the special train provided for Americans for Holland and from Holland I went to London.

Photo by Matzene, Chicago, Ill.
GEORGIA KOBER.

"I toured England in a motor car and before leaving London had the pleasure of meeting Lord Northcliffe at a tea and we had a most delightful and interesting hour together, as I found him a most courteous and charming gentleman and I cherish very much an autographed photograph of himself which he was kind enough to send to my hotel."

When asked if she had witnessed any interesting scenes of the war, Miss Kober replied: "I saw thousands and thousands of soldiers in Germany, Holland and England, but I saw only two trains full of wounded, and the view was enough to make any heart bleed for those poor fellows and their families. I have seen Europe under trying conditions, but hope to enjoy another vacation after peace is restored in that beautiful country."

Miss Kober will appear again this year as soloist in concert and recital all over the country and head the piano department at the Sherwood School, where for five years she has been the energetic and popular president.

Singing Department

INCLUDES

Alfred Ilma
THE OPERATIC BARITONE

Henri La Bonte
THE EMINENT TENOR

Beatrice McCue
THE AMERICAN CONTRALTO

Adrienne Remenyi
THE SINGING AUTHORITY

With the free supplementary classes offering the most thorough and practical course for singers preparing for church, concert, opera or teaching.

For Catalogue, write to Sec'y, Box 7
The von Ende School of Music
44 West 85th Street, New York

MME. BLOOMFIELD ZEISLER INTERVIEWED.

Noted Musicians Visited by the Pianist During Her Summer Trip Abroad—Enjoys Long Tramping Journey.

Last Wednesday afternoon, September 30, a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER called at the residence of Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, in Woodlawn, Ill., in order to secure an interview from the brilliant pianist on her return from Europe. He was ushered into the sumptuous drawing room of Mme. Zeisler's home, in which can be seen autographed photographs, from the world's most celebrated composers, singers, pianists, violinists, and conductors, and while he was looking over the innumerable trophies won by Mme. Zeisler in her career, the hostess came in. Being told the object of the MUSICAL COURIER man's visit, she invited him to take a pad and pencil and the interview developed itself in regular dictation. Unfortunately for the readers of the MUSICAL COURIER the caller was not a proficient shorthand writer, and many of Mme. Zeisler's piquant remarks will necessarily have to be omitted.

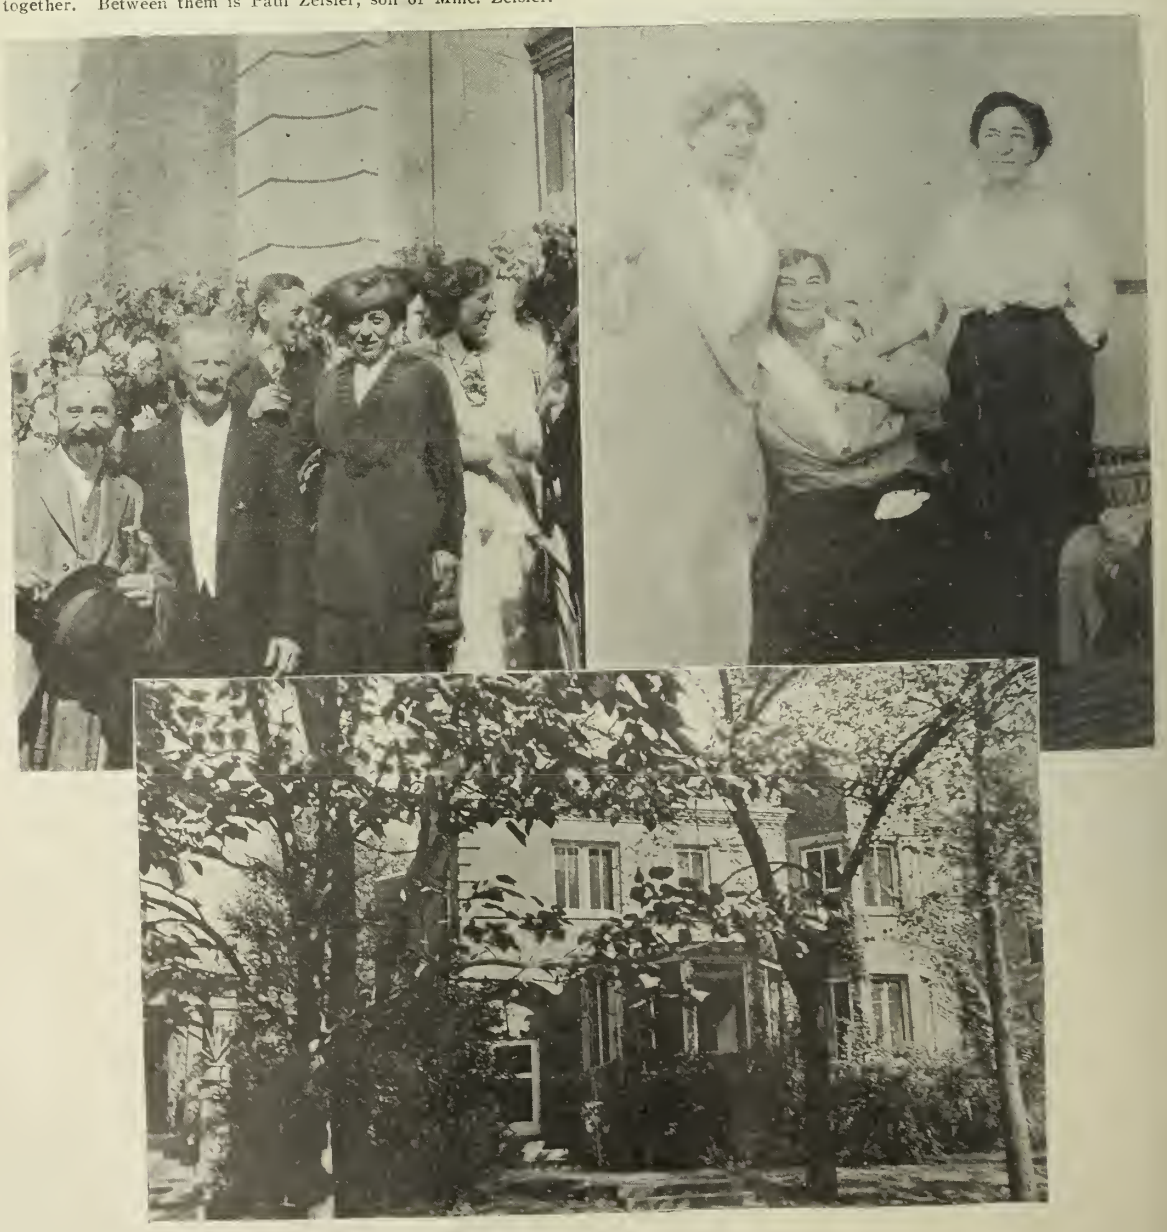
"As you know, we left for Europe on the steamship La France, one of the greatest hotels afloat. I have often traveled on the French line boats, yet their other steamers do not compare in any way with this remarkably comfortable La France. It has been beautifully designed, one full floor being given to parlors, smoking room, lounging room and library. While on La France I again had the pleasure of meeting Captain Poncellet, one of the most refined gentlemen I ever have met. Beside, he is an excellent musician and speaks English fluently. You cannot tell enough in your paper about Captain Poncellet to express Mr. Zeisler's and my gratitude for this wonderful skipper. While on La France I played for the orchestra and Anna Case, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who was on the same boat, and who, by the way, is the possessor of a beautiful voice, sang several arias.

"When we reached Paris, Moszkowski and his son called on us. By the way, Moszkowski's son now is at the front in the French army. As you know, Moszkowski married the sister of Chaminade and though he is a German by birth he was naturalized a Frenchman and his son took the adopted country of his father for his nationality. Mr. Zeisler and I for the last ten years wanted to take a trip to Europe and tramp through villages instead of going to fashionable resorts. For ten years we have been unable to accomplish this desire; once Mr. Zeisler was sick, another time something else happened and so on until this year we made up our minds that nothing would stop us from taking a long tramp across Switzerland. Equipped with our knapsacks strapped over our shoulders, our walking stick in hand, shod with heavy boots, we reached Lausanne, where we were met at the depot by a machine sent by Josef Hofmann and we enjoyed a drive to Mt. Pelerin, where Hofmann has his summer residence. This is very close to Vevey. We spent a most charming afternoon and evening in that very interesting house, which was built on plans drawn by Hofmann, who, as you may know, is an inventive genius. The automobile in which we drove had been built by Hofmann, who has secured many patent rights on different parts of automobiles. His automobile workshop is even more remarkable than his music room, and his beautiful wife has made their home a place of industry, rest and culture. We expected the next day to go and see composer Poldini, but he was in Pest, staging his new opera. Now, on account of the war I wonder what happened to Poldini and his opera.

On the following day we were invited to the home of Paderewski, at Morges, near Lucerne. Before dinner the Paderewskis took us to their chicken farm, which is noted the world over, as many new specimens are being bred solely on that farm. All over the walls of the chicken coops are hung diplomas won by the Paderewski chickens at different fowl exhibitions all over the world. Paderewski has also one of the best known collections of Chinese art of all kinds and Chinese masterpieces are to be seen all over the house. The Paderewskis have that Polish hospitality for which that country is famed, and people are dropping in on the Paderewskis daily from every part of the world during the summer season. While we were entertained by them we met eighteen or twenty pople and many of them from different countries.

"After leaving the Paderewskis we went to Les Avant, near Montrey, and when reaching that little town Mr. Zeisler at the station wished to buy tickets for Interlaken and wanted to pay for the transportations with paper money. He was informed that only coin would be acceptable and for the first time then we knew that something was wrong. We had been tramping for a week or so in the mountains and were far from realizing that one of the big dramas in the civilized world was being enacted beyond out sight. From the stationmaster we got the information that Russia and Germany and Austria were at war. From the station Mr. Zeisler went to the hotel, which was closed, yet he met several friends who were able to exchange some of Mr. Zeisler's paper money for gold. Then the tickets were purchased and we reached Interlaken the same day, where we found matters still worse, as there were many Americans nearly stranded in that locality. A committee for American relief was started at once and Mr. Zeisler was elected chairman of the committee.

"While at Interlaken we were told that mobilization of the Swiss army had taken place, and to think that such a small nation brought together 450,000 men at the expense of forty million francs a month is enough to make one shudder. Mobilization stopped all traffic for a long while and the American committee was very much put out, not knowing how they could reach the frontier. However, Mr. Zeisler and the other men on the committee chartered a special train made up for Americans and by Americans. We had on that train very good accommodations, yet it took fifty-seven hours from Luzerne to Rotterdam. Most of the trip was made through German territory, and we were beautifully treated all through the journey, the inhabitants of the places where we stopped, cheering 'Hoch America.' The burgomaster of one of the large towns asked us when we would return to America to tell the truth about the manner in which we were treated on our journey and really the truth is that we were treated gallantly everywhere.



"We came back on the steamship Rotterdam, where we had the pleasure of meeting several musical celebrities, Johanna Gadski, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Max Zach and Lura Abell, the assistant to the Berlin representative of the MUSICAL COURIER. The Rotterdam, on which we had three rooms, was packed, and it was only due to one of my sons that Max Zach was able to return by that boat to America, as he shared his room with the distinguished conductor of the St. Louis Orchestra."

The interview then was near a close, but the reporter could not help but ask about Mrs. Zeisler's sons. "Well, here are a few snapshots," said Mrs. Zeisler, "which were taken by my son Ernest. My baby boy is shown on the picture taken at the Paderewski home. He is a nice boy, my Paul," said Mrs. Zeisler. "He is only sixteen years old and has entered as a student of Harvard University this year. He could have entered last year, when fifteen years old, having graduated from high school when only fourteen, but his father would not let so young a boy enter Harvard. I am very proud of my boys and I have reason to be."

Mrs. Zeisler then was kind enough to give the reporter the accompanying pictures, one showing the brilliant pianist with Johanna Gadski and Ernestine Schumann-Heink on board the steamship Rotterdam. The other picture shows the Zeisler residence in Chicago, and the group picture shows Mme. Zeisler standing next to Mme. Paderewski, Paderewski, Sigmund Zeisler and his son. At the entrance door Mrs. Zeisler was asked if she would be very busy giving concerts this year and her answer was "More so than I expected. I am glad to be back home and will be even happier when the war will be over and peace once more restored in the world."

AT HOME OF PADEREWSKI.
Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler and the Polish pianist are standing together. Between them is Paul Zeisler, son of Mme. Zeisler.

ON THE SS. ROTTERDAM EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK.
Left to right: Johanna Gadski, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.

THE ZEISLER RESIDENCE IN CHICAGO.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

HARRISON WALL JOHNSON
CONCERT PIANIST
Minneapolis

Miss NINA MORGANA
Coloratura Soprano
From La Scala in Milan
Season 1914-15
Available for Concerts—Musicales
Address: AEOLIAN HALL, Rooms 1626-27, N. Y. City

JACQUES KASNER VIOLINIST
120 East 85th Street :: :: New York
Phone 2768 Lenox

WILFRIED KLAMROTH TEACHER of SINGING
NEW STUDIO: 124 EAST 39th STREET
Tel. 4421 Murray Hill

Alice Sovereign
MANAGEMENT:
ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Myrna Sharlow's Opportunity.

Myrna Sharlow's first real chance on the operatic stage came last March, when Mme. Melba's sudden indisposition just before a scheduled performance of "La Boheme," at the Boston Opera House, gave the young American girl the opportunity to sing Mimi. She was born in Jamestown, N. Dak., July 19, 1893. Her first appearance in public was made in the Otis Skinner production of "Kismet," in which she sang during the autumn of 1911. The following season she was engaged by Henry Russell for the Boston Opera Company. Small parts at first, and then more important ones fell to her share. At the close of the season she undertook a concert tour of New England with several members of the Boston Opera Company, winning considerable success, while the following summer she spent in study with the vocal teacher, Frederick E. Bristol. The quality of her work steadily won her admirers during the winter of 1913-1914, but her greatest opportunity presented itself at the close of the season, when, virtually at the twelfth hour, she was called upon by Mr. Russell to substitute for Mme. Melba as Mimi in "La Boheme" without opportunity for as much as a single rehearsal. With perfect assurance and the self posession of a veteran, Miss Sharlow interpreted the role in so finished a fashion as to win the heartiest approbation of the most exacting critics.

Her triumph at this performance led to an engagement at the Covent Garden Opera House, in London, where, on July 16 last, she had the honor of creating the role of Samaritana in the first production of Zandonai's "Francesca da Rimini." The London newspapers were enthusiastic about her work. The music critic of the London Globe wrote: "Another individual success was won by Myrna Sharlow, who sang Samaritana. Miss Sharlow sang with an amount of charm that proved her to be a very valuable acquisition"; while the London Times stated: "A special word of praise seems due Myrna Sharlow, who, as Samaritana, sang with an appealing freshness of voice in the duet with Mme. Edvina in the first act."

At the close of the Covent Garden season Miss Sharlow returned to America and the illness of Helen Stanley gave her another opportunity. With but one rehearsal the young soprano sang Micaela in the New York Century Opera Company's recent production of "Carmen," revealing herself to discriminating musicians as an artist of the truest stamp by the beauty of her voice and the deftness of her impersonation of the Spanish peasant maid. Miss Sharlow was engaged to sing at the first Sunday night concert at the Century Opera House and won new laurels by her rendition of the "Bird Song" from "Pagliacci." She will spend the remainder of this season in concert work.

Photo copyright by the Dover Street Studios, London.
MYRNA SHARLOW AS MIMI IN "LA BOHEME."

D'Aubigné at Nice.

D'Aubigné, the voice teacher, who makes his home at the Villa D'Aubigné at Sevres on the outskirts of Paris, and who has also a permanent home on the Rue de Lepante, Nice, has decided to remain in France throughout the war. He has turned over his Sevres villa to the Red Cross Society as a convalescent home for wounded French soldiers, and it may be added that no place could be better suited for this purpose, as this villa is a very spacious one and is situated high up on the hillside just adjacent to the famous park of St. Cloud.

Mr. D'Aubigné has taken all of his pupils with him to Nice. As he had a home there, there seemed to be no reason for fleeing France on account of the war, Nice being far removed from the seat of hostilities. It has been for some years Mr. D'Aubigné's custom to close his Sevres villa during the winter and take his entire class to Nice during January, February and March, so that his departure this year was only necessarily a little earlier than usual, but his plans were otherwise unchanged.

David Bispham Begins Season Early.

David Bispham has hardly known where his last season ended and his present one began. He sang very late into the summer and began early in September, when he appeared at Mount Kisco in the great Red Cross benefit that was given by some of the most prominent members of the dramatic profession in Miss Leonard's Open Air Theatre. Mr. Bispham was in excellent voice and sang "Where'er You Walk," the "Prologue" to "Pagliacci" and, by especial request, the ever popular "Danny Deever," which he has made one of the most widely known songs of present day literature.

September 26, Mr. Bispham appeared for the benefit of the Presser Home of Aged Musicians founded by Theodore Presser. A delicate compliment was paid Mr. Bispham when one of his records was placed in the corner stone of the building. It is evident that there was pride in the fact that Mr. Bispham was a Philadelphian.

Mr. Bispham also sang before the members of the Tokeneke Club, of which he was formerly president. This is one of the foremost of the clubs of Connecticut, near the baritone's country home. Besides singing many well known selections, he recited and acted "King Robert of Sicily."

Among his early engagements are appearances at Columbia University, New York, and in Philadelphia, for the third time under the auspices of the Pennsylvania University.

The Carlsruhe Conservatory had 901 students last season.

Minneapolis School of Music.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 2, 1914.

Signor Fabbrini, Harrison Wall Johnson and George Riecks are announced to give illustrated talks on the Beethoven Cycle—six concerts offered by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. They will be assisted by Karl Scheurer, violinist; Esther Jones Guyer, contralto; Ebba Sundstrom, violinist; Sudworth Frazier, tenor, and Mrs. Pendleton. The dates for these events will occur on Saturday mornings, preceding the orchestral concerts, at 11 o'clock, in the school recital hall, and will be open to the general public without charge.

Helen Elken, soprano, of North Dakota, and Ruth James, soprano, of Tracy, Minn., returned during the week to continue their vocal studies with William H. Pontius.

An informal reception and tea was given on Friday afternoon, September 25, with Signa C. Olson as hostess of the occasion, assisted by Louise Harrison Adams, of the faculty.

Mrs. Herbert Pendleton, pianist, and Ebba Sundstrom, violinist, will give the regular Saturday morning faculty recital, October 10.

Alma Shirley, soprano, pupil of William H. Pontius, and Olga Hesse, pianist, pupil of Signor Fabbrini, gave a concert in Rice Lake, Wis., Friday evening, September 25.

Charles M. Holt will direct the University of Minnesota Dramatic Club (The Masquers) again this year. Trials for new members were held last week, and over a hundred prospective Thespians appeared. A strong modern drama will be presented at a downtown theatre some time before the holidays. Plays by Bjornson, Shaw, Giacosa and Bennett are under consideration.

Mary G. Kellett gave a pleasing recital of several of Browning's poems recently. The program included "Count Gismond," "Andrea del Sarto," "My Lost Duchess," "A Tale" and "Prospice."

Alice O'Connell will direct the plays for the University Farm School again this year. Harriet Hetland has begun her classes with the St. Paul Y. W. C. A. Hazel Bartlett has charge of the expression work for the St. Paul Institute this year, and Miss Bartlett and Beulah Brown each teach two evenings a week for the institute extension work.

John McCormack Due Very Soon.

John McCormack, the tenor, is booked to return to America on the steamship Mauretania, which is due in New York, October 16.

Mr. McCormack will open his season in Fort Wayne, Ind., Monday, October 26. His first concert in New York will be given in Carnegie Hall, Saturday evening, October 31.

All of the tenor's European engagements, excepting those in London, Paris and Ostend, were cancelled following the outbreak of the war, and he has been resting quietly at his home in Hampstead since August 1.

"This unfortunate war," John McCormack wrote to Charles L. Wagner, his manager, "is not without its good side. It has enabled me to enjoy the first real rest I have had in almost four years."

Fremstad Triumphs at Seattle.

Word has been received at the Foster & David offices, New York, that Mme. Fremstad's first concert of the season, at Seattle, October 1, was a splendid triumph. Mme. Fremstad was greeted by a large and enthusiastic audience and she was obliged to respond to many encores. Her New York recital will be given at Carnegie Hall on the afternoon of December 16.

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

KIDD KEY CONSERVATORY SHERMAN TEXAS

Hans Richard has been made Director in the Conservatory and is assisted by an able corps of teachers. Bendetson Netzorg has also been added to the Conservatory faculty. For catalog address

MRS. L. A. KIDD KEY

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Engaged for Maine Festivals, with Boston Symphony Orchestra; Aeolian Hall Recital, December 3; Norwich Monday Musical Club, etc.

Address THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., N. Y. Phone, Murray Hill, 2239.

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street, Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER

SOPRANO

Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY

Soprano

Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales

IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY

Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

DRAMATIC MEZZO SOPRANO

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals, also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

3671 Broadway - - New York City

WITHERSPOON

BASS Metropolitan Opera

Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct. 1st. to Jan. 15th

Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau 1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER

Distinguished Russian Pianist

FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

MME. ROSA OLITZKA

CELEBRATED RUSSIAN CONTRALTO

Engaged as Soloist, Great Texas Saengerfest, May 11 to 14, 1914

AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIOS and MUSICALES

Manager R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.

Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

CHARLES W. CLARK MAKES HOME IN AMERICA.

American Baritone Returns to His Native Land—Interesting Incidents of His Career—M. H. Hanson Will Be Clark's Manager.

Charles W. Clark, the American baritone, who has just completed arrangements to be managed by M. H. Hanson during this season, is almost too well known to the musical public of the world for his work to require any special comment, but it may be worth while to recall some of the incidents of his early career and of his later appearances.

As has already been told in the columns of the MUSICAL COURIER, Mr. Clark was the son of a miller, and was himself, as a boy, a miller. Even during the time when he was busy at the mill he was always singing, and during those early years he also received some instruction, which must have been of an excellent kind. He sang in public off and on, but, of course, he did not consider himself a musician, or, at least, not professionally, for he was a professional miller, and if it had not been for an accident he probably would have gone on to the end of his days being a professional miller instead of a professional musician, for it is well known that there are many great talents buried in regular commercial lines, talents which some accident might have brought forward, but which have never been subjected to the necessary impetus or the indispensable shock or influence. This accident (and the incident has also been recorded in these columns) was the breaking of a mill stone and the flying of a bit of grit into one of Mr. Clark's eyes. It was thought for a while that he would be rendered blind. His work at the mill had perforce to stop, and so it was that he took up music professionally. His talents had always been recognized in his home community and the surrounding territory, and when he began to put his mind entirely upon the problem of music, the scope of his work soon broadened until he became a well known figure in the Middle West where he lived. But he was still very young and very ambitious, and he believed that he could conquer the world and win a high position in what he now recognized as his chosen art; and subsequent events have proven that he was right.

After advancing as far as he saw his way clear in his restricted home surroundings, he decided to go to England, and his success in London was immediate and sincere. His later travels, too extensive to be given here in detail, have taken him to all the great capitals of Europe, and he has been uniformly successful everywhere. He has had the honor of being decorated by the French Government and has been presented with medals by both the Beaux Arts and the Conservatoire. He was the first American singer ever to appear with the famous Conservatoire Orchestra of Paris, the oldest and generally considered to be the best symphony orchestra in France, and one of the leading orchestras of the world. In Paris, where he made his home for some years, he was recognized as being one of the leading resident artists, and his services were in frequent demand by conductors of the prominent symphony orchestras for solo work, both alone and in cantatas and oratorios.

The press of the principal European cities has spoken of Mr. Clark's art in the very highest terms.

Although Mr. Clark lived abroad for some years he has not been a stranger to America during that time. He has made occasional short tours in this country, and his fame has gradually grown, so that he remained here throughout last season. He was booked this season for an extended tour in England, which would have lasted until Christmas time, after which it was his intention to come to America. This tournee had, of necessity, to be canceled, and his American tour will begin immediately.

During his years abroad Mr. Clark's style grew in breadth and in depth, so that he is now recognized as one of the world's best lieder singers and interpreters of modern song. He possesses a poise and a dignity, together with an immense wealth of personality that are irresistible, and his thorough musicianship, his perfect enunciation and the natural beauty of his voice give his performances a charm rarely equaled.

Mr. Clark has definitely given up his residence abroad and has disposed of his house on the Rue Leonardo di Vinci in Paris. He has brought his family home to America, and it is understood that he will make his headquarters permanently in this country.

Mrs. McConnell Returns.

Minnie M. McConnell, teacher of voice culture, and second soprano of the McConnell Vocal Trio, opened her studio at 204 Cathedral Parkway (West 110th street), New York City, on Monday, September 14.

In an interview with a MUSICAL COURIER representative, Mrs. McConnell said: "I am well pleased with the prospects this season. Among my new pupils, one is from Chicago, several applications have been received from Seattle, Wash., and one from Montreal, Canada."

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET

Dutch Cellist

2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO

WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.

Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York

Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE

America's Distinguished HARPIST

Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON

SOPRANO

In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE

ORGANIST

Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau 1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE

MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.

Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales

EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig

CONDUCTOR

Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO

CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO

NOW IN AMERICA

CONCERT ORATORIO

Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA, HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager

AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULL

Teacher of Carmen Melis, Cla Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmar Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammar Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini a other well-known singers of Grand Op or Concerts. Musical Director of t Labor Temple Choir, New York. Tea ing during summer, Monday, Wedn day and Saturday only. Special ter

VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway Metropolitan Opera House Building, New Yo (Phone, 2762 Bryant)

Public Recitals throughout season advanced pupils. Write for Circular

JAN SICKESZ DUTCH PIANIST

American Tour Begin October, 1914

Management ANTONIA SAWYE 1425 Broadway, New York

MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Management; The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

SLEZAK
The Great Dramatic Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St. :: :: :: :: New York City

FREDERIC C. FREEMANTEL Teacher of Singing
89 South Tenth Street Minneapols, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN Season 1914-15 Begins Sept. 21, 1914.
STUDIO: 70 CARNEGIE HALL
Telephone Columbus 5946

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

MABEL GARRISON
SOPRANO
Metropolitan Opera Company
Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway : : New York City

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE."
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

S. Constantino Yon Returns.

S. Constantino Yon, the vocal teacher of New York, returned from Italy, September 15, on the steamship Re d'Italia. Mr. Yon left for Europe June 11, accompanied by several students.

Mrs. H. G. Mitchell, one of these students, the possessor of a beautiful mezzo soprano voice, deserves special mention. Her artistic singing captivated those who heard her at all musicales given in "Villa Yon" during the past summer.

Mr. Yon was to give a piano recital for the Dowager Queen Margherita of Italy, but owing to the death of Marchesa Villamarina (lady-in-waiting to her majesty), this recital was cancelled.

When about to return to the United States, Mr. Yon had a most trying experience. By some mistake, he was still on the army reserve list, and, although an American citizen, could not secure passage from Italy. After considerable trouble with an American consular passport, Mr. Yon finally secured passage on the Re d'Italia from Genoa, but on arriving at Naples was arrested by the inspector of immigration for not having his birth certificate, also because it was thought that Yon was not an Italian name, and in consequence he was detained four hours until a satisfactory answer came to a telegram sent by the authorities inquiring into this matter. The answer came just in time to permit Mr. Yon to sail, as the mayor of Settimo Vittone stated that Yon's family name was Italian and could be traced back to 1465, also that S. Constantino Yon is thirty-nine years old and, for this reason, free from service in the army.

S. CONSTANTINO YON IN THE ALPS, NEAR HIS HOME.

He has now resumed teaching at his studio, 853 Carnegie Hall, New York, and will, as heretofore, give a number of students' recitals during this season.

A Harrison-Irvine Announcement.

Jessamine Harrison-Irvine announces that her classes in sight-singing and reading are about to begin. These classes are for the benefit of young singers and are heartily endorsed by some of New York's most eminent vocal teachers and musicians, including Charlotte Babcock, Adele Laeis Baldwin, Walter L. Bogert, Dudley Buck, Emma Thursby, Earl Gulick, Clara Kalisher, Joseph Baernstein-Regneas, Oscar Saenger, Frederick Weld, etc.

Mme. Harrison-Irvine has found it necessary to move to more commodious quarters. She may now be found at No. 1013, Carnegie Hall, New York, where her new studio is indeed attractive. In addition to her duties as teacher, pianist, accompanist, her classes above mentioned, and her work as a coach, Mme. Harrison-Irvine is director of the piano department at St. Margaret's School, Waterbury, Conn.

Cadman at Michigan Convention.

Charles Wakefield Cadman and the Princess Tsianina Redfeather will appear at a concert to be given at the Michigan State Teachers' Association Convention at Kalamazoo, Thursday and Friday, October 29 and 30.

It is estimated that from the Grand Rapids public schools alone three hundred instructors will be present.

STEINWAY PIANOS

Built By Masters for Four Generations

"Excellence" in a piano is more than case, action, strings and pedals.

"Excellence" in a piano is that something, over and above all these, which the genius of the builder puts into it. The Steinway Pianos are the creation of genius.

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
STEINWAY HALL
107 and 109 East 14th Street :: :: New York

SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Seul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care Paris Office, Musical Courier)

VON STEEGE VOICE PLACEMENT
6, Chaussée de la Muette | Opera, Repertoire
Director, Compagnie Internationale Lyrique

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
LECTURE—RECITALS
French and English Readings
America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter, 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS
During European War, 7 Rue de Lépante, Nice

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

MR. ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
whose season was to commence February 20th, next, having escaped from Paris, is Available Now for his famous song recitals, playing his own accompaniments (Steinway Piano)
Management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

LOS ANGELES CONDUCTOR TELLS OF EUROPEAN VISIT.

Relates Some Interesting Experiences to Musical Courier Correspondent—He Is Pleased at Prospects for Approaching Symphony Season—Pasadena Musician Writes from Abroad—Manager Behymer Returns from Eastern Trip—Gamut Club Dinner.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., September 12, 1914.

The MUSICAL COURIER correspondent enjoyed a little visit last week with Adolph Tandler, conductor of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Tandler's return was a source of great relief as well as pleasure to his numerous friends, as there had been some fear expressed that he would be detained by the war conditions in Europe; for as is well known, he is an Austrian officer and liable to be called to military duty, but through the influence of friends in both military and political bodies, he was able to prove that he had served his time and would, this fall, become an American citizen.

It was quite thrilling to hear him tell of several narrow escapes, in fact, on more than one occasion ten minutes' delay might have cost him his freedom. As is usual in many such cases verging on tragedy, the comedy element was not lacking. Take, for instance, the matter of getting enough money; his experience was but similar to every other alien trying to escape from the belligerent countries. In Chicago it was Mr. Tandler's good friend Carrie Jacobs Bond who came to his rescue and after various vicissitudes, he reached Los Angeles safely. He says it was as if his good angel had guided him every step of the way, and he is radiantly happy to be at home again with his family and among more friends than he ever dreamed he possessed.

Mr. Tandler was full of enthusiasm over his musical experiences while abroad. He went first to London, where he spent about three weeks, meeting many artists and composers. He regretted much that the orchestra season had closed; however, he heard one concert by the London Symphony Orchestra. Among the interesting people he mentioned were Richard Epstein and Mrs. Dellibar, whose home is the rendezvous of many celebrities. In Vienna his old friends welcomed him with open arms and made a great ado about his return. Among the noted people he mentions were his old master, Ferdinand Loewe, Dr. Botztieber, Adolf Kriehl, F. Schmidt, Leopold Reiter, Robert Fuchs, and Director Herzka of the Universal Edition Publishing Company, with whom he arranged for the purchase of several works of Richard Strauss and Bruckner.

Mr. Tandler is very happy over the prospects for the symphony orchestra this season. His epigrammatic summing up of the situation was in the following sentence: "Last year my men played—I worked—this year I will play (on my instrument, the symphony orchestra), and my men will work."

MARIE ELLIOT HEARD FROM.

The past week brings me a quantity of delayed mail as well as some recent word from Marie Elliot, lecturer and musician, of Pasadena. Her interesting experiences this summer would fill a volume and her description of her escape from Bayreuth when war was announced and her journey via the Hook of Holland to England and Canada is nothing short of thrilling.

It was a word from Mme. Schumann-Heink spoken under the stars, when she went out between the second and third acts of "Parsifal," that gave her warning, and she and her party spent that night packing, paying bills and attending to a hundred necessary arrangements previous to a sudden departure. They left on the special train at 4.25 the following morning.

Miss Elliot gave a number of successful lectures during the summer in London. She had a splendid visit with the Bertram Shapleighs, of whose works she speaks most enthusiastically. His wife writes his librettos and she says the two geniuses work like one mind. In Florence she gave the lecture on Brahms and Signora Braggioti assisted, singing Brahms lieder. In Paris the list of her patronesses included a host of titled and influential people and she made an instant success—was even approached concerning two lectures to be given next March at the Sorbonne, but of course war ends all this.

One of her most wonderful experiences was the giving of her lecture on "Parsifal" at the Palazzo Vendremin, Venice, which was the last home of Wagner, and in which he died. Miss Elliot writes: "All visitors to Venice are shown the beautiful front of the Palazzo Vendremin on the Grand Canal—but not many know the interior—that charming suite of rooms opening one from another all around the building, each window framing a picture. To still fewer are shown the corner where on an easel are placed the three best portraits of Wagner. The present Chatelaine, who has lived here since the Wagner family left, keeps one corner sacred to the composer's memory. It was a happy thought to take 'Parsifal' as a subject, for it is the most interesting and revealing of the master's work."

It is easy to imagine the inspiration Miss Elliot would receive from such surroundings and that with an audience composed of the best and most cosmopolitan residents of Venice, as well as a large group of American visitors, that she would skillfully unfold the deeper meaning of "Parsifal" and link its loveliest passages with Wagner's happy, peaceful life in Italy. From all reports, her audiences abroad, as those here, appreciated her contagious ardor and the profound study which her lectures show. Signor Tromboni ably assisted at the lecture on "Parsifal" by playing passages in illustration, and though he understood only Italian and Miss Elliot does not speak that language, they nevertheless seemed able to converse; possibly in music, the universal language.

Miss Elliot will return to California October 1, to resume her lectures and classes in music. At present she is doing some lecturing in the vicinity of Ottawa, Canada.

L. E. BEHYMER RETURNS FROM THE EAST.

Mr. Behymer's many friends and those who know him best say that it would be a miracle that would cause him to take a rest, for his cognomen "Busy Bee" is deserved. It was not a miracle this time, but a serious illness while in New York, the recovery from which might seem to border on the miraculous, that gave him an enforced rest this summer. He was under the care of two doctors and a trained nurse for two weeks or more, and following this went into the Northern woods and journeyed home by easy stages via the Northwest. With his usual cheerfulness, Mr. Behymer admits that it was in the long run perhaps a good thing and that he never knew he had so many friends, for numerous noted men of New York were indefatigable in their devoted attentions.

Mr. Behymer feels that while the present conditions in Europe may work some hardship, it will not seriously affect the coming musical season. He himself has been very fortunate in the fact that most of his artists are accounted for and safe. He may have some interesting announcements later.

THE GAMUT CLUB DINES.

The September dinner of the Gamut Club was well attended and a most happy occasion. In the absence of Pres-

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
124 West 82d St., New York. Phone, Schuyler 7511.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatoire)

OSCAR SEAGLE
In America Season 1914-1915
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

ident Blanchard and Vice President Behymer, Seward A. Simons presided as toastmaster. Mr. Simons is well known as a witty and eloquent orator and he made a most happy toastmaster.

Mabel Strock, of New York City, a brilliant young singer, was the guest from out of town and delighted the club with her beautiful voice. Those from the city enjoying the hospitality of the club on this occasion were Mme. Budrow, a Castilian (whose home in Mexico City was broken up by the recent war), the possessor of a beautiful voice, who sang several songs. Viola Ellis, the possessor of a fine contralto voice and who is a recent addition to local circles, also sang. Mrs. Frank Colby and Mrs. Fred Dorn, well known favorites of the city, also contributed numbers.

ALMA VOEDISCH, THE CHICAGO IMPRESARIA, LISTENING TO ONE OF MRS. CATHERWOOD'S BEST STORIES WHILE HER GUEST IN LOS ANGELES.

Mrs. Williams, a dramatic reader of brilliant attainments, gave a theme from the "Lady of Lyons," and Lillian Ammalee Smith, who is one of the most welcome guests the club ever entertains, played a number of piano selections.

Lorna Gregg was another guest, playing the accompaniments of Miss Strock. Altogether it was a most enjoyable affair.

GERTRUDE ROSS, COMPOSER.

Gertrude Ross, composer and accompanist, is rejoicing over the first edition of her "Three Songs of the Desert," fresh from the press of the White-Smith Music Publishing Company. One of these, "The Dawn in the Desert," has been sung by Mme. Schumann-Heink for the last season or two and she pronounces it one of her great successes. Also Mme. Gerville-Reache has used this as well as others of Mrs. Ross' songs. The artists who have seen these works, and the publishing company as well as Mrs. Ross' friends, predict a brilliant success for these three really notable songs. "A Japanese Cycle," by Mrs. Ross, will be out shortly. The Japanese Lullaby is already published. This was written on a theme secured from a little Japanese woman who could not speak a word of English but played it on the samisen. Three others of this cycle are the "Ode to Fujiyama," "Old Samurai Prayer" and the "Butterfly." These are all beautiful and interesting contributions written with an understanding of the modern trend, while still retaining the characteristic Japanese features, all idealized into most melodious and lyrical song literature.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Later Los Angeles News.

Los Angeles, Cal., September 19, 1914.

One of the comparative newcomers to Los Angeles who has made her presence felt is Emma Porter Makinson, who is a singer of distinction and experience. Mrs. Makinson came to Los Angeles from Pittsburgh, where she was a prominent figure in musical circles for a number of years. She sang there in the Third Presbyterian Church and in other prominent churches, and was much in demand for concerts. During the later years of her stay she was the impresaria of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Makinson is a Southern woman with the characteristic grace and cordiality, as well as personal attraction, that mark the woman of the South. Previous to her residence in Pittsburgh, she was for three years in Chicago, where she was soloist in Dr. Thomas' church and also soloist in the synagogue of Rabbi Hirsch. During these years she appeared as soloist with the Thomas Orchestra and with many other prominent organizations.

Since coming to Los Angeles, Mrs. Makinson has made a large number of friends and has done a great deal of singing. She is also establishing a very good class at her home studio on North Rampart Boulevard.

It was while Mrs. Makinson was in Pittsburgh that she met Charles Wakefield Cadman, then a young and struggling composer, and largely through her influence his compositions were brought to the notice of other artists, Mrs. Makinson being in a position to introduce his works successfully and to make him acquainted with many noted musicians. It was she who sang his Indian songs first. She now possesses the original manucript to "The Moon Drops Low." Only the other day Mr. Cadman mailed to Mrs. Makinson the original manuscript of "Sayonara," his Japanese Cycle. It was this cycle that Nordica loved and sang so much and she always desired the manuscript. In a letter to Mrs. Makinson accompanying this manuscript, Mr. Cadman said he had always intended that Nordica should have it, but as the latter had passed away, he knew of no one to whom he would rather give it than Mrs. Makinson. It is needless to say that it is a gift prized beyond words by the recipient.

During Mr. Cadman's stay in Los Angeles last year, they appeared many times together and she was the first one here to sing his new Indian songs. Besides giving the program in her home, they appeared before the Music Teachers' State Association, the Ebell Club and on several private occasions, as well as in San Bernardino and other places near. One of Mrs. Makinson's recent and most successful appearances was before the Music Teachers' State Association in annual convention at San Diego this summer, where she again made it clear why Mr. Cadman considers her one of the most successful interpreters of his songs.

EMMA PORTER MACKINSON.

MR. BLANCHARD RETURNS.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Blanchard have been greeting them with much pleasure during the last week and congratulating them on escaping much of the disagreeable experience of most European travelers this siummer. They had already reached northern Norway when war was announced so that it was a simple matter to get a boat home, although it necessitated cancelling the Russian trip.

Mr. Blanchard is the genial president of the Gamut Club, known by all musicians the country over for his kindly courtesy and pleasant smile. He is also the president of the American Operatic Association, that has in hand the putting on of the great prize opera for 1915.

MUSIC AS A BUSINESS.

Much interest has been aroused in the work being done here by Henry J. Klahn, for it is a line entirely new and one much needed. He has established a Normal School for musicians which includes a series of eight lectures intended to help the music teacher place his work on a business basis. Mr. Klahn is convinced that there is a field for him, for it is well known that many excellent musicians and teachers are hampered by a lack of knowledge of business principles and management. Mr. Klahn is himself a thoroughly educated musician, being a graduate of both the University and the Conservatory of Leipsic, and after teaching a number of years, was obliged on account of his health to abandon his profession. He took up business and in the course of time became managing salesman for the Macmillan Publishing Company. It was during his work with this concern that the fact of this lack in many musicians was brought to his notice with great force, and he determined to put himself some day in a place to benefit the professional musician by his own knowledge. He is doing this successfully now and this will in time unquestionably become a valuable factor.

OWING TO THE WAR

MR. CHARLES W.
CLARK

has cancelled the extensive tour of Great Britain and Ireland booked for him by L. G. Sharpe of London

And Is Available for Recitals and Concerts

FOR THE WHOLE SEASON

Apply for dates to

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

MARY O'DONOGHUE RETURNS.

Another musical wanderer who came back the past week is Mary L. O'Donoghue, who returns after various interesting experiences. Miss O'Donoghue is one of the well known organists, accompanists and teachers in Los Angeles and a very interesting woman. Her experiences will be listened to with interest by her many friends.

ALMA VOEDISCH IN LOS ANGELES.

Alma Voedisch, the Chicago impresaria, has been greeting her many friends here the past week. Miss Voedisch's annual visits have given her a wide acquaintance out here and her sunny face is always welcome. She has been the guest of Mrs. Henley-Bussing in Pasadena part of the time; also of Mrs. Catherwood in Los Angeles. She is on the coast in the interest of Julia Claussen, the Swedish contralto, the MacDermids, Oberndorfers and other artists booked with her.

WILLIBALD LEHMANN VISITS LOS ANGELES.

Another visitor the past week was Willibald Lehmann, of San Diego. Mr. Lehmann came to California from Cincinnati about a year ago and already has established himself in the hearts of his fellow-citizens and proven his value as a musical acquisition. His latest movement is the organization of a chorus of three hundred members which he has organized in San Diego for the giving of oratorio and the larger choral works. It was something much needed and his success will be a gratification to every one.

EMMA PORTER MAKINSON AND CHARLES WAKEFIELD CADMAN.
Sunday, June 14, at the Boiling Spring, Arrowhead Hotel, San Bernardino, Cal.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

FRANKLIN RIKER
In America Season 1914-15
Personal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York
Phone, 3964 Riverside

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
624 9th AVE., MUNHALL, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON
AMERICAN PIANIST
Management: Robert P. Strine, Esley Hall, Philadelphia

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

TRINITY AUDITORIUM IS A CREDIT TO LOS ANGELES.

Magnificent Temple of Music Opened Its Doors September 28—It Is a Thoroughly Equipped Institution—Home of Symphony Orchestra.

Los Angeles, Cal., September 29, 1914.

For this season music, literature and art will have a home in Los Angeles of opalesque beauty, vying with the finest auditoriums in Europe or America, for Trinity Auditorium on Grand avenue, near Ninth, can boast of being the most modern structure of its kind west of Chicago.

Trinity Auditorium will house the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra for its six pairs of concerts, the Ellis Club for four events, the Orpheus Club for a similar number, and the Lyric Club's trio of concerts.

Many other events are scheduled, among them a series of ten musical and literary evenings to be known as the Trinity Popular Priced Lyceum Series. Organ concerts are to be given by Clarence Eddy and local organists, light opera will be featured, only the best educational pictures are to be shown, and the Philharmonic Courses, three in number, and their associate concerts will be given here.

The equipment of Trinity includes boxes and loges, large vestibules, waiting rooms, a green room which will seat 250, a stage that has been particularly arranged for chorus and concert events, seating 250. Four smaller auditoriums seating 350, 400 and 650 people, adjoin the larger room, and are to be used for recitals, receptions and rehearsal rooms. The entire building is furnished with such comforts and conveniences as to make it attractive and appealing—the Civic Forum for the Los Angeles public at reasonable prices for rentals and admissions.

The Philharmonic Series for the forthcoming season will be, if anything, superior, it is said, to those of the past, even with numerous artists at the front in the European wars.

The first series will be six events arranged for Tuesday evenings, opening October 20 with Olive Fremstad; Rudolf Ganz, the Swiss pianist, is scheduled for this series; John McCormack, the Irish tenor, comes early in January; Alma Gluck, soprano, makes her initial appearance in the West early in March. If Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist, now with his regiment, fails to arrive, Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, will furnish the violin programs.

A new departure in the second series is that each event will be given on Thursday nights, so that those who have rehearsals or concerts on Tuesday evening will have an opportunity to attend. The opening number is Marcella Craft, soprano of the Munich Royal Opera, coming November 12. Leo Slezak, the Czech tenor, is on this course. The violinist is Efrem Zimbalist.

The success of last year's Matinee Series means a bigger and better one this year, with a splendid choice of artists, the series opening with Olive Fremstad or Evan Williams, early in November. John McCormack will be featured, and Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist will be heard in joint recital. Josef Lhevinne is the matinee pianist, and Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer-pianist, with the Princess Tsianina in a program of Indian music, will close the series.

Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 1, 1914.

Anne Hughes, director of the public school music department, who returned this week from her vacation at Isle Royal, is organizing the work of six city schools, where she superintends this work from the primary grades through the high schools. Students of the department carry on the work under her direction.

At the regular faculty recital on Saturday morning, September 26, Ethel Alexander, for the last two years a pupil of Lhevinne in Berlin, gave the program. Miss Alexander was assisted by Robert Fullerton, tenor, head of the vocal department, who sang two groups of songs, John Jacob Beck accompanying. A large and enthusiastic audience, among whom were many of Miss Alexander's friends and former pupils, attended.

On Saturday morning, October 3, Miss Evers, president of the conservatory, will deliver an informal address before the faculty, students and their friends. Miss Evers will speak upon "Student Standards and Ideals."

The dramatic class, which is to meet for regular work the first week in October, held a preliminary meeting on Friday evening, September 25, to discuss plans for the coming year. John Seaman Garns, the director of the department, is in charge.

The third student recital was given Wednesday afternoon, September 23, by pupils of the piano, voice, violin and expression departments. Two original stories were read by members of Miss Holbrook's class in short story writing.

At the regular mid-week musicale at Stanley Hall, Tuesday, Ethel Alexander, of the conservatory piano department, and Maurice Nitke, violinist, well known in New York and Chicago, gave a program before an audience of students and invited guests.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
150 West 104th Street, New York
Phone 3832 Riverside
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
TEACHER OF SINGING
Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York
From the first rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall Professor of Choral Music Columbia University Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
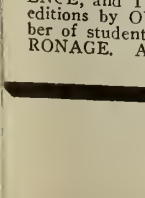
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York



FRANCIS ROGERS BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
115 E. 53rd St., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
STUDIO: 327 CENTRAL PARK WEST
Phone, Riverside 3170

GEORGE HAMLIN
The Celebrated Tenor
NOW IN AMERICA
Available for Entire Season
HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

MADAME MOLIÈRE
of the Berlin and Hamburg Operas
VOICE CULTURE
Voices tried free during October
Address: 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle or Metropolitan Opera House

MANUEL QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens
Hippodrome, Sunday Eve., October 18th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,

51 West 76th St., New York.

BALTIMORE CHOIR CHANGES.

213 Prospect Avenue, Roland Park,
Baltimore, Md., October 2, 1914.

Many changes have occurred in Baltimore choirs for this season. Some singers have left the city, others have exchanged places. The choir of the Madison Avenue Synagogue has undergone so many changes as to be almost a new organization. Charles H. Bochau, who has been its director for the past three or four years, has been succeeded by John A. Klein. Roberta Glanville was engaged to head the sopranos. Another soprano vacancy was filled by Ethel Kenny Mellor. Felix MacNally has resumed his former position of first tenor. Frank Mellor is also in the new tenor line. The bass choir is unchanged, and Edith Clark has been engaged for the alto line.

Clarence R. Tucker, who has made such a favorable impression the past two seasons as Alfredo in the Melamet Opera class production of "Traviata," has left the Vernon Methodist Church for the First Methodist Church, where he succeeds Oscar Lehmann, who has gone to New York to reside.

Anna G. Baugher, contralto, has resigned from the choir of the Madison Avenue Synagogue. She will continue her work at First Presbyterian Church.

Frank Mellor has been engaged for the quartet at Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Henry New, basso, who has for many years been at the Vernon Church, had a severe fall, seriously injuring his knee and causing him to be confined to the house for some time.

Mrs. Henry Franklin, contralto, has resigned from the choir of Grace and St. Peter's Church. August Hoen, basso of the same choir, is war-bound in Europe.

Christine Schutz, contralto, recently of Baltimore, but now of New York, has opened her season favorably with an appearance at the recent Worcester, Mass., Festival.

Wilbur Kinsey, manager of the Lyric, who has been seriously ill during the summer, is now convalescent, and soon will be in his office again. It is pleasant to hear that, although the Lyric will not be enlivened by an opera season, we will at least have the usual quota of symphony concerts.

The Melamet Opera Class will give a secular concert at Lehmann Hall on Tuesday evening, October 27. D. L. F.

American Contralto in Bavarian Alps.

Christine Miller, the American contralto, is easily recognized by her happy smile in the accompanying group. This was taken in the Bavarian Alps. Reading from left to right those in the group are: Frau Demme and Herr Demme, from Libau, Russia (Herr Demme is now a prisoner of war in Berlin in the Moabit prison), Herr Wagner and Fraulein Helmund of the Meiningen Hof-Theatre, and Christine Miller.

CHRISTINE MILLER AND AN INTERESTING GROUP IN THE BAVARIAN ALPS.

College of Music Engages Benham.

Victor Benham, highly regarded as a piano virtuoso both in this country and Europe, has been engaged by the directors of the New York College of Music as instructor of piano.

Arrangements have also been made with Sinaida Schafran, late of the Meisterschule at Vienna, a pupil and assistant of Godowsky, and highly recommended by him, to teach at the College of Music.

This institution and the affiliated German Conservatory of Music soon will begin their series of student and faculty recitals, when it is expected that both these pianists will be heard.

Quality Gave The Knabe Piano

its first position as an artistic creation, which has been steadfastly retained since 1837.

Had there been the slightest falling off from an admittedly high standard, critics would have quickly noted the decline.

A rigid insistence upon quality of tone, character of workmanship and beauty of case design has maintained Knabe Pre-Eminence for Seventy-Six years.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

combine all the beauties of Knabe tone with the highest possible efficiency of expression control—in every sense THE WORLD'S BEST.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

GRAND PRIX PARIS EXPOSITION 1900

ESTABLISHED BY MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY THE

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill

LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1914.

No. 1802

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohhs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
ST. LOUIS, MO.—
Ernest R. Kroeger, Musical Art Building, St. Louis, Mo.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 312 Menzies St.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, care of G. Schirmer, 18 Berners St., London W. In charge.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tidebŏhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Mark Hambourg, the pianist, has been engaged for an American tour this season. He will play the Knabe piano. Hambourg now is on his way to this country.

Word has just been received by cable from Paris that Eleonora de Cisneros will tour America this season under the management of Antonia Sawyer.

Felix Schreiber, formerly conductor of the Kiel Opera, fell at the battle of Metz. He was one of the first from the ranks of German musicians at the front to be killed.

Josef Stransky, conductor of the New York Philharmonic, is in New York and will begin rehearsals with his orchestra at once. He reached America by way of Christiania.

The Maine Music Festival closes tonight (Wednesday) at Portland, and a full report will appear in next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER. The Portland concerts are being attended by a representative of this paper.

The directors of the Schola Cantorum of New York announce that "during the absence on military duty in Europe of the musical director, Kurt Schindler, no rehearsals of the chorus will be held. Definite announcement will be made upon Mr. Schindler's return as to when the concerts and other public performances of the society will be given."

J. F. Delma Heide, formerly Paris correspondent of the MUSICAL COURIER, and since then a resident of that city, volunteered his services to the General Staff of the Red Cross Ambulances as an Interpreting Officer and will remain in France during the war. Frank Angold, MUSICAL COURIER representative from Vienna, is serving with the English forces.

Willy Burmester, the violinist, writes that his entire family will come with him to America and that he will take a house in the Connecticut suburbs not far from New York City. Burmester advises also that he is shipping his whole collection of eighteen valuable violins, by special permit, to Holland, and that he hopes to be able to take them with him to America.

The Theodore Presser Home for Retired Music Teachers was inaugurated recently in Philadelphia (Germantown). The donor made a speech whose keynote was this admirable sentiment: "In this home the music teacher will find a haven of rest, for there will be no caste or sect distinction. The humble teacher who has labored faithfully in a village is as welcome as the metropolitan teacher who once thrilled thousands in the concert room."

Chicago regards the prospects for the current musical season in an extremely favorable light, and the city's optimism is based in no small measure on the fact that over seventy-five per cent. of the regular subscriptions to the Chicago Symphony Orchestra already have been paid in, and it now is certain that the excellent box-office record of last season will be equalled and in all probability surpassed. Frederick J. Wessels, the manager, and Frederick Stock, conductor, of the Chicago organization, were in New York last week and reported to the MUSICAL COURIER that practically all the players of the C. S. O. are in Chicago now and the roster will be complete in another week or two. Mr. Stock stated also, that while he expects most of the advertised soloists to be on hand in spite of the war, he has been compelled to forego the production of some of the orchestral novelties he had planned, as he cannot procure the scores and parts from Europe. "However," concluded Mr. Stock, "that will leave more room on my programs for American compositions."

Boston Symphony Orchestra soloists announced in the regular season prospectus of the organization are Leonard Borwick, Julia Culp, Elena Gerhardt, Florence Hinkle, Pasquale Amato, Harold Bauer, Ferruccio Busoni, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Fritz Kreisler, Jacques Thibaud and Anton Witek. The Boston season of forty-eight concerts is planned to begin October 17 and to extend until March 20, 1915.

Andreas Dippel announces definitely that the opening of his season of opera comique at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre will take place October 1. The first production will be the adapted French operetta, "The Lilac Domino," by Charles Cuvillier, a young French composer, who finished the work just before going to the front. The Dippel rehearsals have started at the Metropolitan Opera House and the full list of principals will be published shortly.

Bayreuth had a deficit of four hundred thousand marks ($100,000) this summer. Notwithstanding the expiration of the copyright on Wagner's music dramas the performances were all sold out as in former years, and but for the war, Bayreuth would have had its usual profitable season. As has been told in the MUSICAL COURIER, the outbreak of hostilities terminated the performances suddenly, and the money paid in had to be refunded. This, together with the expenses, caused the large deficit.

At one of the Nordica will hearings last week her former secretary and accompanist, E. Romaine Simmons, testified that for eighteen years the singer's earnings were between $50,000 and $65,000 a year. The present contest before Leslie J. Tompkins, administrator, grows out of the circumstance that two wills were made by Nordica and both have been filed, one in this city, in which she did not leave anything to her husband, George W. Young, banker, and a prior testament, in which she left him practically her entire estate. The latter paper has been entered in New Jersey, where Mr. Young was a resident. Mr. Tompkins, appointed by Surrogate Cohalan as an administrator for the estate under the will filed here, is trying to get possession of certain assets in this jurisdiction, while some of the estate has been taken to New Jersey, including funds said to be worth about $15,000.

Confirming what the MUSICAL COURIER has written and reiterated since war broke out, the Metropolitan Opera Company emphatically contradicts the numerous unauthorized and unofficial statements appearing in the irresponsible part of the press from time to time, concerning certain of the artists, statements to the effect that these artists were doing military duty abroad, or that they had been drafted into the armies of the various countries, or that they had been killed, etc., and that they consequently, would not appear here this season. "This company," runs the official dementi, "is in receipt of advices from its general manager, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, who is in Milan, to the effect that he fully and confidently intends that the Metropolitan Opera Company's regular season will open on November 16, as originally scheduled, continuing for twenty-three weeks, as heretofore, and that the same high grade of opera as that to which the Metropolitan Opera patrons have become accustomed in the past will be maintained; that with the exception of but one or two of the German contingent, all the artists of last season will positively appear at the Metropolitan Opera House during the season about to commence, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding."

DIRECT NEWS FROM KREISLER.

Accompanying the remarkable and interesting eisler snapshots shown on this page, came a letter dressed (under date of September 13, 1914) by rs. Kreisler to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George es, of this city. It is extremely graphic and reads follows:

KREISLER AND HIS COMPANY BEFORE DEPARTURE FOR THE FRONT, AUGUST 19.

"My Dearest Papa and Mama—I hope by this ne that you are safe in America and not going rough the hard times Europe is having. Mar-ret, after about a month's time, finally got a letter rough to me, in which she says you telegraphed Berlin. She sent it after me to Austria, but as e wrote in English, it was all confiscated and con-quently I have had no news from you whatever. om Henny we get no news and are very much raid she is dead, as her home is in one of those ast Prussian villages where the Russian cossacks d so much mischief.

"And now about Fritz. I went through fearful nes about him. As I wrote you, he left for the ont on the 19th by way of Graz-Buda Pesth to a tle place in Galicia. There they were supposed remain two weeks, but upon their arrival found at the battle of Lemberg had begun, and there-ter the horrors proceeded. Up to the 23rd I ceived daily field postcards from him, but from en until midnight of September 9 not a sign of e, and none to be had anywhere. I didn't know at to do; the only thing that sustained me was nstant work, so that when midnight came each y I couldn't stand on my feet. The sounds rough the night also were fearful, the constant nging of ambulances bringing in the thousands wounded from the different stations to the ndreds of hospitals.

"Finally, at midnight of the 9th, I received a egram from Fritz saying he expected to be home e next afternoon in a hospital train. Of course, tween joy and anxiety, we none of us could sleep. ne next day at noon he arrived. When I finally w him limp off the train, my knees went from der me from shock. He had a three weeks' owth of beard, which was more gray than black, d was hollow-eyed and cheeked. He had lost out twenty pounds in weight, and limped from a uised nerve center in his leg. Well, I was so glad see him alive that I soon recovered my courage, r he was my first thought. Thank God, it is thing serious; it is really more soul and nerve ock than anything else. Such dirt you can't con-ive of. It seems he didn't get out of his clothes r over eighteen days, and in all that time slept nder the heavens, in the damp and marsh. On e 23rd of August through a night alarm all the officers' trunks were lost and have not up to date been found, so they had for the twenty-one days only what they carried on their backs and in the knapsacks. Sometimes it was two to three days before they had anything to eat.

KREISLER AFTER DOING ACTIVE SERVICE.
Taken on his return to Vienna. The violinist's face shows the effects of his severe trials.

"The accident to Fritz was the following: One night when the regiment was in trenches, in horrible dirt and mud, there was a sudden alarm and they were suddenly attacked by Cossacks. Fritz's only recollection is that of being suddenly overridden and of shooting the second horseman, when he lost consciousness from pain. It seems that he was missed by his military orderly and finally was found and carried to safety, although his orderly was shot in the back, but was saved by his knapsack. Fritz continued with his company two more days, but the pain in his leg was so bad that he was sent back. He was sent from field hospital to field hospital until finally, after a four days' journey, he arrived here. Now, thank God, he is getting along nicely. The leg bothers a lot, but we will go tomorrow for three weeks to some hot sulphur baths (Baden, near Vienna), where I hope he soon will recover.

"The day after Fritz was sent away another terrific battle took place, and every single officer was wounded; many died and Fritz's own particular company was almost depleted. They were simply mowed down by the Russian artillery. No one has an idea of the horrors of such war. But most extraordinary, the officers are all anxious to get back again.

"There has not been a single case of cruelty here, nor has a single foreigner—French, English or Russian—been molested, regardless of what foreign papers print. I personally last month have worked day and night, first with the American Commissioner, under Secretary Breckenridge and Major Ford, for the transportation of Americans. Also, I am a Red Cross nurse and have the entrance to every hospital where the wounded Russians are being treated, besides being one of the few active members of the 'Kriegshilfverein,' and expect in a few days to be in charge of a new hospital, so that I am in a position to judge impartially, and all detrimental reports you may have read are untrue.

"My one prayer and wish is that the United States will intervene and stop this horrible slaughter. Surely so humane a public as the Americans, who are so powerful, will raise their voices and call a halt. I do wish the powerful American press could know things as I do and would not let little personal matters keep them from raising a world cry against this awful loss of life. If you get an opportunity, read my letter to newspaper people, and all influential persons, and beg them to help stop this European war.

"I hope, dear folks, that you are both safe and well. Kindly give our best love to all near and dear, also to all friends, and you, dear Papa and Mamma, accept much love and kisses from Fritz and your very loving daughter, Hattie."

KREISLER PLAYING HIS LAST CONCERT (AT LEOBEN, STYRIA), ON THE EVENING BEFORE HIS DEPARTURE FOR WAR.
Note the military character of the audience.

FLESCH COMING SURELY.

It appears that Fitzhugh W. Haensel, of Haensel & Jones, takes exception to an item published in one of the MUSICAL COURIER's Berlin letters from Mr. Abell, to wit:

New York City, October 5, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Arthur M. Abell's statement, printed in last week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER that Carl Flesch is undecided concerning his plans for America and that he belongs to the Austrian Landsturm, is not in accordance with Mr. Flesch's personal letters to us. We have been in uninterrupted communication with Mr. Flesch ever since the beginning of the war, as Mr. Flesch has been living at Zandvoort, in Holland, since June. At no time has he ever expressed a doubt concerning his coming to America. On the contrary, he has written us that he can come at any time; furthermore, he cannot possibly belong to the Austrian Landsturm, as he has written us repeatedly that he is "vollständig militärfrei" (absolutely free from military duty).

As Mr. Abell's article may do Mr. Flesch considerable harm, you will confer a favor upon us by printing this letter in as conspicuous a position as possible.

Yours very truly,

FITZHUGH W. HAENSEL, for Haensel & Jones.

As Carl Flesch is in Holland, according to Mr. Haensel's knowledge, it is likely that Mr. Abell's news was based on hearsay rather than on first hand information. All the world knows how difficult it is for Germany to communicate with the outside world, or to receive intelligence from beyond her own borders, and therefore everything published from Berlin about other countries or persons therein always should be compared with the reports from the places and individuals concerned and accepted with reservations. It is the duty of the MUSICAL COURIER to publish all the news received from abroad at this time as events there are shifting constantly and the clogged conditions of the cable service make it impossible for this paper to confirm reports. They are printed for what they are worth.

It is a matter for sincere pleasure on the part of the American musical world to learn definitely on the authority of Carl Flesch's manager that the great violinist will be here this season again to delight our audiences with his virile and masterful art.

A DINNER MUSIC DEFI.

It appears that the hotels and restaurants of New York do not purpose to pay for the privilege of having their orchestras play certain copyrighted selections controlled by a recently organized society of composers, authors and publishers. The hotel and restaurant proprietors had been informed by the association that on and after October 1 they would have to make the payments in question and the sums asked were in proportion to the size of the establishments so taxed. Their owners, however, have a society of their own, and this society now declines to submit to the proposal of the other society. Instead, the hotel and restaurant orchestras at present are playing music not controlled by the composers', authors' and publishers' protective company.

One hotel man said: "Formerly we were paid to play certain pieces; now they wish us to pay Nothing doing."

What sort of a counter attack the copyright defenders intend to deliver as an answer to the "Nothing doing" slogan has not yet been revealed by them.

GLUCK ON "NATIONALISM."

What Gluck thought about "nationalism" in music, and how different were some of his ideas from those of Wagner (with whom he so often is compared absolutely) one may glean from a letter written by Gluck to the editor of the Mercure de France, in February, 1775: "I confess that I would have enjoyed writing 'Iphigenie' in Paris, partly because of the production there and partly because with the help of the celebrated Rousseau, of Geneva (with whom I would have advised) we might have combined in seeking a noble, expressive and natural system of melody, and fixed upon a model to set forth the prosody of the speech and the character of all nations, in the manner which is my ideal, namely, a music which shall appeal equally to all the nations, in order to do away with the ridiculous differences in 'national' music." As Wagner sought essentially for "Deutschtum" in his music, and Gluck endeavored to become musically international, their basic purpose was wholly dissimilar, even though both of the great men were accepted ultimately by all the world and their compositions now know no boundary of tongue or land.

LESCHETIZKY SAFE.

As much anxiety has been expressed by the friends of Leschetizky in this country regarding the safety of the venerable master, who was quite ill in Berlin just as war broke out, Howard Wells, the Chicago pianist, very courteously wrote to the MUSICAL COURIER office in that city:

"In response to the numerous inquiries regarding the welfare of Leschetizky, whose home in Vienna and summer villa at Ischl are in the war zone, I wish to say that he is in Berlin at the Grunewald Sanatorium, Hages Str. 45, Berlin, Grunewald. He was there when the war broke out at the time I left Berlin, and is no doubt still at this address. He had planned to go to Abbazia on the Austrian seacoast, and later to his villa at Ischl, but as that was impossible he is undoubtedly still in Berlin.

"He came to Berlin late in April to have a cataract removed from his left eye. The operation was successful, and in June plans were being made to celebrate his eighty-fourth birthday, June 22. On account of his recent illness, the guests were to be limited to his most intimate friends in Berlin. The party was to have consisted of Arthur Schnabel, Ignaz Friedman, Paul Goldschmidt, Richard Buhlig, Severin Eisenberg and myself (of his former pupils), Mme. Carreño, Signor Tagliapietra and Dr. Pollack, his physician. Shortly before that day, however, he was not feeling well, so the supper was given up and he simply received calls and his customary array of presents.

"In July, he was expecting to have some new eyeglasses fitted, and was staying with his wife at the Grunewald Sanatorium. I had dinner with them there on July 26 and found him in excellent spirits, and with his amazing vitality seemingly as remarkable as ever. It seems very fortunate that he is in Berlin instead of Vienna, Ischl or Abbazia."

IT WAS EVER THUS.

An English clergyman, the Rev. Richard Eastcott, of Exeter, wrote a letter in the year 1793 in which he expressed very forcibly his opinions on the music of his day.

That this clergyman was no mere dabbler in musical criticism is evident from the fact that he published several works on music and "six sonatas for the piano-forte," in addition to a volume of poetical essays.

Haydn's symphonies were the most highly esteemed orchestral works of that period, and it is probable that the Rev. Mr. Eastcott had them in mind when he wrote the following letter:

"The public taste in music, as the word is commonly applied, was perhaps never in a higher state at any period than at present. The beautiful symphonies, concertas, quartets, lately produced, are daily mounting on eagle wings to the sublime altitude of superior excellence. They divide the hearer's attention between pleasure and astonishment, and plainly evince what wonderful effects may be produced by men of knowledge and genius when patronized by a kind, liberal and indulgent public.

"As to vocal music, though many of our musicians have produced compositions of infinite merit, yet the art of commanding the attention by making the sound an echo to the sense, has not always been strictly attended to. This seems not altogether the fault of composers, but the natural consequence of the present thirst after execution and variety. A great deal of the music of the present day is calculated more to astonish than to please. Expression and simplicity are often sacrificed to execution, and where good poetry is employed, which is not always the case, it is so hacked and chopped to pieces that the images it contained are not unfrequently put to an ignominious death by the most cruel tortures.

"Mara and Billington often astonish the listening world by executing such rapid passages as were never but by them attempted; but in these moments of surprising exertion, they sacrifice their judgment and wonderful abilities to the corrupt taste of the times. It is greatly to be lamented that composers of the first eminence should be obliged to degrade themselves by making their principal singers turn rope dancers and fire eaters for the sad purpose of astonishing those whose attention can only be kept alive by common sense being delivered over to the public executioner to be tormented in a thousand ways."

And this criticism was written when Marie Antoinette was alive. Wake up, modern critics. Your criticisms have not advanced with the tremendous changes in music since 1793.

WHAT IS GENIUS?

Schopenhauer's definition of "inspiration" should be studied by all creative musicians:

"What is called the stirrings of genius, the hour of consecration, the moment of inspiration, is nothing but the liberation of the intellect, when the latter, for the time exempt from service to the will . . . is active all alone, of its own accord. . . . Then the intellect is of the greatest purity, and becomes the true mirror of the world. . . . In such moments, as it were, the soul of immortal works is begotten."

Ruskin declared that "there are no laws by which we can write Iliads."

Mozart explained his composition in this way: "What, you ask, is my method? . . . I do not myself know and can never find out. When I am in particularly good condition, perhaps riding in a carriage, or in a walk after a good meal, or in a sleepless night, then the thoughts come to me in a rush, and best of all. Whence and how—that I do not know and cannot learn. . . . All the finding and making only goes on in me as in a very vivid dream. . . . What now has thus come into being in this way, that I do not easily forget again, and is perhaps the best gift which the Lord God has given me."

Lavater's definition was: Who can produce what none can, has genius."

Stedman evolved the attached: "Genius lies in the doing of one thing, or many things, through power resulting from the unconscious action of the free intellect, in a manner unattainable by the conscious effort of ordinary men."

ELMAN, THE AMERICAN.

From the MUSICAL COURIER's San Francisco office comes an announcement of wide import, to the effect that Mischa Elman intends to make his home in America for the immediate future, as he sees no definite promise in time to come of cessation of war in Europe.

TRAINING THE MUSICAL MIND.

AN ambitious young woman who was anxious to come before the world as a song composer as surprised when her manuscripts were returned her on account of their many mistakes. She at ice set out to interview the publisher and to exhibit him all the theoretical orks she had read. The ublisher introduced her to ie examiner of manuscripts, who explained to the oung woman that the art of musical composition nnot be learned from the reading of theoretical ooks, but only by the long and tedious writing of ndreds of exercises to be corrected and explained a competent teacher.

It was this examiner of manuscripts who told us at in his opinion most of the compositions subitted to him showed more lack of musical educaon than lack of musical talent.

We can easily believe this statement, although we nnot think that many of the compositions show uch talent. Unless we are much mistaken, there e thousands of music students who believe that ie art of musical composition is almost entirely a atter of inspiration and genius. They recognize ie fact that even the greatest singers with the finest atural voices have to study many years. They now that Liszt, Rubinstein, Tausig, Lhevinne, auer, Gabrilowitsch, Samaroff, De Pachmann, odowsky and other pianists of world-wide fame ad to work like galley slaves to master their instruents. They have heard that Paganini nearly killed imself with incessant practice when a youth. Yet ey are content to rush into print with their own mmature work, trusting to their genius to supply hat their training has not given them. They seem o think the art of composition can be "picked up" y watching how other composers write. They do ot try to "pick up" the technic of Busoni, or of lesch, or of Kreisler, or of Thibaud, or of Burester by hearing those famous artists play.

Beethoven himself recognized that his preparation counterpoint had been none too thorough. In act, he was continually hampered by a lack of ease this apparently most mechanical branch of the omposer's art. Schubert, too, a composer of exraordinary natural facility, soon felt the limitations f his technical skill and was on the point of taking ssons from a contrapunist shortly before his death.

If Beethoven and Schubert felt the lack of thorugh training, why is it that so many lesser men do ot feel the same lack? The answer is, that the sser men have not the brains of a Beethoven and Schubert. Wordsworth has well expressed it in he lines:

> Minds that have nothing to confer
> Find little to perceive.

It is certain that minds which have no great usical message to deliver to the world are the last inds to perceive their own deficiencies. This is ot exactly the meaning that Wordsworth implied, ut it will serve our purpose for the present.

We do not care how much personal pride we hurt r how many patriotic corns we tread on, provided hat we can do some little good to the cause of merican music.

First of all, let us attack the school training of our oung people. It is not severe enough. There is oo much instruction and not enough education. We se those two words in their Latin sense—instruction meaning "to build in," or furnish, and education meaning "to draw out," to train the powers to action. The end and aim of some school teachers seems to be to find subjects of practical utility which can be learned as easily and as quickly as possible.

If a young man wanted to become an athlete he would find that the exertion of running a mile uphill and swimming across a swift stream would make him a stronger man than a Pullman ride to California or an ocean voyage to Bermuda. The man who says that running uphill and swimming swift rivers are of no use to him will never become an athlete. He may get more pleasure out of his comfortable trips, but he must pay the penalty of his luxury in flabby muscles and a short breath. When he attempts any physical exercise his puffing and his profuse perspiration tell him unmistakably that he is no athlete. The mind must likewise pay the penalty for its neglect of hard and long-continued study. We hear boys say that Latin and Greek are useless studies now. We reply that Latin and Greek always have been more or less useless, in the sense that the knowledge of them cannot be turned into cash. To the average boy their value lies only in the fact that they are difficult to learn. They are like the athlete's hill and stream, which require great exertion to make little progress.

Dr. J. Mortimer-Granville, in his little handbook on "Common Mind Troubles," says: "There is a marked tendency in modern education—and it increases each year—to neglect the training of minds. The subjects which were principally useful for purposes of mental development and exercise are being eliminated because they do not commend themselves to the commercial instinct of the day as producing marketable information. Greek, Latin, mathematics and the like are not possessed of a high value in the mart of commerce and they are therefore lightly estimated. . . . The young man bestows some thought on his muscular system—he trains his eye, cultivates his ear, and takes credit for prudence when he strives to develop the vigor and to foster the healthy growth of his body. Is it wise—nay, is it not rather the worst of folly and shortsightedness—to neglect the ordinary development of those higher powers which man possesses in a more exalted degree than any of the lower animals? Taking care of the body while the mind is neglected is the worst of failings—the most calamitous and the least excusable."

There are teachers who advocate the use of moving pictures in the schools because the pupils more easily remember what they see than what they read.

Of course we have no doubt that moving pictures of the right kind can be made of immense value to children and to adults as well. But they are a kind of mental candy which in no way strengthen the mind like the digestion of the strong meats of learning. And—worst of all—sometimes they load the memory without a corresponding exercise of the reasoning faculty. We find no fault with moving pictures, but we condemn the neglect of serious mental training.

In our opinion the musician ought to be particularly on his guard against the temptation to neglect hard study of subjects which have no relation to his art. It is easy for the composer to believe that logic and philosophy have no bearing on his art. They have no bearing on the art directly; but they have a powerful bearing on the mind that expresses itself through the art. We are not now writing for geniuses of the first class. They have their own peculiar systems. But we hope that we are writing for intelligent students who are anxious to improve. Let us remind them that though their minds are able to judge fairly accurately of their muscles, health and physical condition, they cannot accurately gauge their own capacity.

A scale cannot weigh itself and a mind can form but a vague estimate of its actual powers. It is reasonable, however, to believe that a long and careful training of the mind will work as many wonders as the training of the wrists and fingers works.

The weak logic, lame conclusions, haphazard thoughts without sequence, repetitions, omissions, inequalities in the workings of an untrained mind are as apparent to the trained thinker as the bungling finger and crude tone of the untrained pianist are to the expert master of the keyboard.

We are convinced that too many of our American composers fail more for the lack of proper mental training—both in technic and in logical thinking—than for the want of natural talent. If the jumble of styles, the juxtaposition of really fine and commonplace ideas, the irregularities of thematic development and the structural weaknesses of so many American compositions do not indicate inadequate mental training on the part of the composers, what do they indicate? Lack of talent? We cannot believe it.

"TOUTING FOR PUPILS."

UNDER the not over elegant heading of this article, London Musical News recently published its views on the subject of the various methods employed by teachers in order to secure pupils. After describing how much time and money are spent by the teacher in preparing himself by study for his future career, Musical News remarks aptly: "The problem is, how to make a start." The advice then follows that it is no good to sit down and wait for the pupils to troop into one's studio. "In one shape or another publicity is a necessity," continues Musical News; "the role of the modest violet is not likely to bring grist to the mill. It is necessary to advertise. This is expensive, but it must be borne, and what is more, it must be persevered with. Even if for a time the results seem incommensurate with the outlay, it is essential to keep on. Intermittent or timid advertising is simply a waste of money. If your financial results are limited, plan your advertising with a view to the longest possible continuance, for a small advertisement for a year is far better than a big one for a week or a month only."

Those are sensible words and echo what the MUSICAL COURIER so often has told musicians who find it difficult to understand why it is not sufficient merely to possess merit, in order to be brought to the front without any volition on one's own part. Such short-sighted folk seem always to forget that in order to apprise others of their merit they must in some way bring that merit to the attention of those they wish to apprise. This is not to be misconstrued into the suggestion that the meritorious one should advertise in the MUSICAL COURIER, "I have merit," but simply that he should notify students of his presence in the field and keep on notifying them so long and so continuously until they shall decide to give him a trial as a teacher. Should he gain notable results with any of his pupils, it would become part of his advertising to invite critical opinion on their performances and it would become the duty of the MUSICAL COURIER to send a representative to hear the pupils play and to make public report of the work accomplished by the teacher. That is the most legitimate form of advertising available for the teacher and the best in order to secure comparatively quick and profitable results.

Also, as Musical News points out, the teacher, if he is a player, may advertise himself by assisting at concerts or giving some of his own. The latter process usually is terrifyingly expensive, and if, through nervousness or inability on the part of the concert giver to encompass extraordinary performances, the concert should pass off without making any deep impression upon the audience and critics, the money will have been wasted and the enterprise more often than not result in doing the projector more harm than good. It should always be borne in mind that frequently because of temperamental or other reasons, a singer or player is not fitted to be a great public performer, but may, on the other hand, be an excellent and even a remarkable teacher.

"There is no loss of personal or professional dignity," adds Musical News, "in asking your friends to recommend you." Of course not. But the friends will find the task many degrees easier if the teacher is an advertiser in the MUSICAL COURIER, for the potent seed then will have been sown and a few warm words of supplementary personal recommendation oftentimes cause it to sprout into successful fruition. No pupil likes to be asked with whom he is studying and after giving his teacher's name, hear the interrogator say: "I've never heard of him." After that happens a few times the pupil loses confidence in the ability of his teacher to make a name for himself, and begins to wonder as to the reason for the obscurity. In many cases such wonder is followed by the transference of allegiance (and fees) to some other and better known pedagogue.

Not to be conceited, too reserved, bumptious, malicious toward colleagues, are some of the "Don'ts" set forth by Musical News, and they should be well considered by teachers who wish to succeed. Disparagement of the efforts of others is a poor foundation on which to attempt to build one's own success.

Teachers are urged to ask a good fee if they are convinced that they are worth it, for, strange as it may appear, too low a price often is a deterrent in the case of prospective pupils, who, like the rest of the world, are prone to take most mortals at their own valuation. Keep a fixed price; do not be guided in your estimate by what you think your patrons are able or likely to pay.

Purposely underselling other teachers, sending out or distributing publicly clap-trap circulars, and making lavish and unrealizable promises to parents, rightly are condemned as unethical and unprofitable, for "in the long run people find out the mean and underhand man who goes behind his brethren's back."

The old, narrow views regarding advertising on the part of members of the musical profession have died out nearly altogether, for where one teacher flourished before, fifty now must find existence, and in the stress of competition and the myriad distractions offered to a hurrying world, only those of the fifty are considered who stand forth from the rank and file by bringing themselves to the attention of the persons whom they desire to reach.

There is nothing unethical in advertising; if a Paderewski, Sembrich, Kreisler, Gerardy, Schumann-Heink, Ysaye, Godowsky and many others of exalted rank advertise their art, why should a teacher feel any compunction about advertising his pedagogy? Fortunately, very few feel that way nowadays in America.

A QUESTION OF NEUTRALITY.

Scores of letters have been received from musicians containing expressions of opinion on the European war and espousing the cause of one country or condemning that of another. The writers of the missives evidently expected them to be published and some of them are aggrieved because their communications were not given space in these columns. It must be obvious to impartially inclined persons that the MUSICAL COURIER has every reason to abide by President Wilson's proclamation of neutrality in word and deed, and that even under other circumstances this publication is a paper for the dissemination of musical news and not a medium for the propaganda of political matters of any description. Letters on such subjects belong in the daily papers, and it is to them that we advise self appointed statesmen to address their polemical—and oftentimes well put and interesting—arguments and criticisms. The MUSICAL COURIER has no axe to grind in the present turmoil, except, possibly, to hope that the current unfortunate conditions may assist actively in the furtherance of the cause of American music and the swelling of the profits of American musicians.

CENTURY OPERA FOR CHICAGO.

As originally announced exclusively in the MUSICAL COURIER, the Century Opera Company will give performances in Chicago this season, the run to begin there November 23, when the New York activity of the company will cease until next spring, according to the present published plans of the Century management. The stay in Chicago is to last eight weeks. Owing to the new schedule, there will be some changes in the present repertoire of the organization during the remainder of its stay in New York. "Madame Butterfly," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Aida," "Boheme" and "Jewels of the Madonna" will be given prior to November 21 instead of "Faust," "Trovatore" and "Pagliacci," which had been announced for the first half of this winter.

It is reported that the Chicago board of directors will be made up of the same gentlemen who formed the board of directors of the Chicago Grand Opera Company and they will be the backers of the Century Opera Company while in Chicago.

Sargent Aborn, one of the directors of the Century Opera Company, was in Chicago last week for the purpose of arranging definite plans for the season there. "William Tell" or "Carmen" probably will be the opening bill.

Later engagements for the Century Opera in Philadelphia and Boston also are in prospect.

PHILHARMONIC INTACT.

The New York Philharmonic Orchestra is practically intact, as it has been fortunate enough to escape almost entirely the draft which European conditions have made on many of the musical bodies in America. Two members of the orchestra are serving in the French army, but the management has been able to fill their positions satisfactorily through the dissolution of the Chicago Opera. The music for the novelties announced to be performed by the Philharmonic Orchestra during the coming season was received here before war was declared, so that hardly any changes will be necessary in the contemplated programs. Subscription tickets now are being taken up rapidly and there is every indication that the Philharmonic season soon to begin will be one of the most successful in its history.

ANTI-AMERICAN SPIRIT.

If it is true that some of our music clubs which last year paid $400 and $500 for an artist's services, this season are willing to give only $75 or $100 "on account of the war," then such clubs are acting in an anti-American spirit, and far from helping our native art and artists to gain advantage from the present conditions, are setting them back permanently and fatally into a position from which they never had a better chance to escape than just now. To aid them, however, before all things practical encouragement is required on the part of the musical clubs that have profitable patronage to bestow. American musical clubs should be American in more than empty proclamation.

CHARLTON IS OPTIMISTIC.

According to Loudon Charlton, the manager, musical booking throughout the country is well under way, and in many instances completed, and the war is likely to have but little effect on local conditions here. The Charlton bureau has every reason for optimism, as all of its artists originally scheduled have announced their early arrival from Europe. They include Felice Lyne, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Harold Bauer, who will make fifteen appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Tina Lerner, the Russian pianist; Ernest Hutcheson, pianist; Edmund Burke, baritone; Oscar Seagle, baritone; Mme. Hudson-Alexander, soprano; Marie Morrisey, contralto; Franc Rogers, baritone; Mme. Peroux-Williams, contralto; Jacques Thibaud, violinist; the Flonzale Quartet, and recitals by Mme. Gadski, Ethel Legiska, pianist, November 16; Paul Draper, tenor, November 17, and Victor Wittgenstein, pianist, November 20.

WITH US.

Some of the executants who are taking and wi take, an active part in the present musical season i America, and who returned safely to this countr within the past few weeks after escaping from th troublous lands of Europe, are: Leopold Stokowsk Olga Samaroff, Hannah Butler, Vida Llewellyr Louis Koemmenich, Rudolph Ganz, Morgan King ston, Kathleen Howard, Jan Sickesz, Johanna Gad ski, Eleanor Spencer, Alexander Bloch, Ernestin Schumann-Heink, Max Zach, Fannie Bloomfiel Zeisler, Alma Gluck, Adolf Tandler, Paul Stein dorff, Della Thal, Efrem Zimbalist, Victor Harris Henry Weldon, Wilhelm Middelschulte, Herber Sachs-Hirsch, Helen Stanley, Louis Siegel, Paul Alt house, Herbert Witherspoon, Karl Jörn, Dr. Wil liam C. Carl, Louise Gerard-Thiers, Theodore Spier ing, Anna Case, Frank Gittelson, Jeanne Jomelli Arthur Alexander, Arthur Hartmann, Joseph Gotsch, Oscar Seagle, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, and others of equal importance.

OPERATIC SETTINGS.

Answering a correspondent who wishes to know whether "The Tempest," "King Lear," and "Amy Robsart" have been composed as operas, we reply that we know of eight operatic settings of "The Tempest," four of "King Lear," and four of "Amy Robsart." Incidental music was written to "The Tempest" by five composers, including Arne (1710-1778), Purcell (1658-1695), and Sir Arthur Sullivan, all of them English. Tschaikowsky did an orchestral fantasy on the same subject. Halevy's was one of the operas. Another was by an Italian composer named Caruso (1754-1822). Berlioz wrote a "King Lear" concert overture. Isadore de Lara, English by birth, composed one of the quartet of "Amy Robsart" operas. The same heroine figures in an opera by the late Bruno Oscar Klein, which he called "Kenilworth." It was produced at Hamburg some ten years or more ago.

JULIA CULP COMING.

Julia Culp, the lieder singer, has cabled her manager, Antonia Sawyer, of New York, that she will sail for America, October 24, on the steamship Noordam.

Alas!

[From "The Parable of the Rose, and Other Poems."]

My heart is sad with waiting, Love,
Waiting for thee.
My eyes are dim with watching, Love,
Watching for thee.
The sunlight fades, the night draws nigh,
The stars come forth in the clear sky,
I sit alone, alone and sigh,
Sighing for thee.

My heart is faint with longing, Love,
Longing for thee.
My eyes are worn with weeping, Love,
Weeping for thee.
The night-winds murmur as they pass,
Trailing thy name through the long grass,
My soul cries out, alas! alas!
Alas for me.

—Lyman Whitney Allen.

We Blush.

From the New York Staats-Zeitung of October 3:

"Leonard Liebling, of the MUSICAL COURIER, is a militant gentleman—he has a sharp tongue and a sharper pen. As a good American he observes the President's wish and is strictly neutral, at least outwardly, but no Kaiser or President can dictate to one's heart. And therefore Leonard Liebling is a pro-German (Deutschfreundlich) neutral, because blood is thicker than water.

"A Mr. Streman, one of the justly popular 'dear readers,' objects to a two-page illustrated article in the MUSICAL COURIER because it deals with the Kaiser. The objector observes: 'I owe allegiance to none of the countries at war, but I do despise that self laudatory spirit which seems to be a characteristic of the majority of the Germans. Nothing shows refinement more decidedly than letting others sing one's praises.'

"To the foregoing Leonard Liebling makes answer: 'The MUSICAL COURIER is in the same position as Mr. Streman in that it owes no allegiance to any of the countries at war, and that is why we cannot discuss the other particularizations in his letter except to say that we have met among the representatives of all nations individuals who exploit their own merits and are self laudatory. With profound regret we feel it our duty to state that many of those persons were Americans.'

"In addition to this amusing self-defence, there is also much other readable matter in the MUSICAL COURIER. For instance, the news that Fritz Kreisler was neither killed nor wounded, but is alive and kicking, and that he will leave Europe in time to keep his American concert engagements; that Rudolf Berger is fighting at the front while his wife, Marie Rappold, is a nurse; that Max Bruch has given up his Cambridge honors; likewise Hans Richter. . . .

"And finally a few jests of the kind that only Leonard Liebling knows how to contrive."

Then follows quotation of a couple of pleasantries contained in "Variations" last week, about English and French horns, dum dum bullets, etc.

Why We Blush.

We blush at those praises of the Staats-Zeitung which we think well deserved, but in honesty we cannot accept them all. We are pro-German, but also we are pro-French, and pro-English. We admit that we are neither pro nor con so far as Russia is concerned, and that is the really strange part of the matter, for if "blood is thicker than water," we should incline to the land of the very Little Father, as that is the domain from which our ancestors sprang. Our very much alive paternal progenitor, who boasts of sixty-eight busy years, and is an enthusiastic New York resident, was born of a Russian father and a German mother, in the city of Posen, which had strong Polish affiliations in 1846. Our grandfather's name was Malakoff, but when for political reasons he moved to Posen, in Prussia, he changed his appellation to the German sounding one which his family now bears. Our revered mother was born in Warsaw and came of the clan of de Perkiewicz, a Polish-French Greek Catholic family there. Her parents and the parents of our father later settled in Berlin, and there the children grew up. In Posen, our father was the schoolmate of Moszkowski and the two Scharwenkas and the boyhood language of the quartet was Polish.

Now that the fever of confession is full upon us, we would add that early in life our father and mother came to America, and it was in New York that we were born, receiving training here in reading, writing and boxing, and later studying billiards, poker and music for some six years in Germany, England and France.

What Are We?

For the foregoing reasons we are at a loss to discover our true nationality, just as we are at a loss to determine our real religion, for in addition to the Greek Catholicism of our mother, our family boasts also Hebraic and Protestant strains on the paternal side. We never have been baptized, christened, ordained, or even invited into any sect or faith. We never have been to the Sunday school of any denomination and we cannot recite offhand any prayer in any language or religion. However, as a dilletante we have delved into the Bible and also into the Koran and the Talmud, and we respect them all.

Our lack of formal religion had practical exemplification in Berlin many years ago when, after a two years' stay, we were bidden to register there formally and to pay a church tax. "Religion, please?" asked the recorder. "None," we replied. "That is not accepted as an answer," was the dictum; "you must belong to one of the accepted denominations and pay a tax to the church you acknowledge." "Which is the cheapest?" we asked.

MUSICAL EARS.
1, Massenet; 2, Weingartner; 3, Hubay; 4, Debussy; 5, D'Albert; 6, Siegfried Wagner; 7, Saint-Saëns; 8, Richard Strauss.

(An ethnological student to whom we related the incident many years afterward insisted that our query showed the undeniable commercial influence of the Semitic line of our family.)

To make the confusion quite complete we wedded a Lutheran, and our daughter is entered in the records of the little ivy covered church at Larchmont, N. Y., as an Episcopalian. Can any one solve the puzzle? We can't.

Deutschfreundlich? Yes. But not unfreundlich to the others. We deplore the war. We believe that each of the belligerents has at least one good reason for fighting. And, furthermore, we do not think it important to find out who started the war. What we wish to know is, who will end it?

Last Stand.

The foregoing remarks were torn from us not only by the compliment of the Staats-Zeitung, but also because of many previous mistakes concerning our nationality. We wish to be called American, as we have the same basic right to be President as any other native citizen of this republic. We must be considered a rare bird, however, in that we belong to those few resident New Yorkers who were born in this city.

Mass Formations.

Triple Alliance—Bach, Beethoven, Brahms.
Triple Entente—Strauss, Schönberg, Stravinsky.

Where Are War's Horrors?

As we write, a steam calliope mounted on an auto truck, comes tearing and tootling down Fifth avenue, past the windows of our office sanctum. The contraption carries a sign advertising a deep sea diver who is appearing this week at a local vaudeville theatre. Every once in a while we are reminded that although we light our streets by electricity, build skyscrapers and now brew drinkable coffee, we are not so many years removed from being the country which Dickens described so feelingly in his American observations.

Disinterested Patriotism.

The following appeared recently in the London Times:

"To Preparatory School Masters.—Clergyman's daughter (A. R. C. M., Solo Piano) would gladly hold post (retaining only half fees) for able-bodied Music Master who will go and fight for his country; highest testimonials.—Marston, Icomb, Stow-on-the-Wold.

War Time Pleasantry.

From the London Globe is this:

Erratum :The headline "German Music Not Banned" should read "German Band Not Music."

Up to Date.

The Omaha, Neb., Conservatory of Music and Art sends out a prospectus in which we read that the institution has a department of theory that teaches, among other things, "Cannon and Fugue."

CARUSO AND ODOL.

Signor Enrico Caruso, the possessor of the finest voice in the world, has favoured the manufacturers of Odol with testimony of his appreciation of their preparation. Odol takes care of Caruso's teeth, mouth, and throat, and he is not averse to saying so. On a previous visit to London he wrote:—

"I have long known Odol, and always use it with delight, for I find it an excellent preservative for the teeth, and splendid for endowing the breath with delightful fragrance."

With this came a clever little sketch of himself by himself. What more can be said for the World's dentifrice than that by cleansing Caruso's mouth and refreshing his throat, it helps to produce and preserve the most exquisite tenor voice ever heard?

Caruso's Doing It.

On this page is the reproduction of an advertisement taken from the London Standard. If Mary Garden advertises perfume, Melba endorses a recipe for peaches, and Manuel Garcia, Wagner and Chopin lend their names to cigars, why should Caruso hesitate to express his honest opinion of a tooth wash?

Timely Reading.

Have you ever read "Two Friends," the little story by De Maupassant about the pair of chums who went fishing for gudgeon on a bright January morning before the Paris fortifications and never returned? It is a real thriller and peculiarly appropriate just now when the German guns are roaring on French soil and all the belligerent nations seem to have developed an insensate desire to discover and destroy hostile spies. Another hair-raising war story by De Maupassant is called "Saint Anthony," and deals with the surreptitious murder of a soldier carried out in fiendish fashion. As one of the tales pictures German barbarity and the other illustrates French cruelty, you may safely read them both without endangering your neutrality.

Mammoth Music.

The "largest organ in the world" pops up at various times in different places. Why does not some enterprising piano house build the largest piano in the world? What a splendid advertisement that would be. The largest violin in the world may be seen in any orchestra; it is a double bass.

An Ear for Music.

Dr. Birman-Bera, of London, for many years has been engaged in the laudable attempt to discover the connection between the outward shape of the ear and the musical talents of its possessor. Now the Doctor announces that there is no connection whatever; that, in fact, even persons with abnormally shaped ears may hope to be possessed of musical gifts. The only definite demarcations established by the scientist were that composers as a rule have almost vertical ear drums, while musicians who are not composers own ear drums that vary sharply from the vertical to the oblique. On this page are shown illustrations of the ears of six well known musical persons.

A Neutral Banquet.

For the banquets this season of the Musicians' Club and the Bohemians, which number among their members representatives of many nationalities, we submit the following compromise menu:

Caviar Astrakhan.
Bismarck Herring. Kieler Sprotten.
Purée Mongole.
English Sole, á la Marguéry. Sauce Tartare.
Bermuda Potatoes.
Spanish Onions. Brussels Sprouts.
Asparagus, Hollandaise.
English Mutton Chop with French Mushrooms.
Salade Romaine.
Ice Cream Napolitaine.
Camembert, Roquefort, Swiss Cheese,
Limburger.
Rhine Wine. Veuve Cliquot. Kümmel Russe.
Café Turque.
Havana Perfectos. Egyptian Cigarettes.

Only a Few of Us.

From the Music Student: "The really great writers on music in this country (or in any) are not a large body."

LEONARD LIEBLING.

Martha S. Steele at Asbury Park.

During the past summer Martha S. Steele, the Pittsburgh contralto, whose remarkable voice has won for her more than local fame, sang a number of times in Asbury Park. Visitors at the summer resort were much impressed by the beauty of her voice and the thoughtfulness of her interpretations, as is evinced by the following criticisms, taken from some of the newspapers there:

Martha Steele, the contralto, made a decided impression. It was her first appearance in Ocean Grove at a concert, but not her last. She has a deep, rich voice and a remarkable range.—Asbury Park Morning Press.

Martha Steele, contralto, who appeared last week at the Ocean Grove Auditorium, will sing her last concert at the Arcade in Asbury Park this evening. Mrs. Steele, who possesses a fine contralto voice, sang at the Auditorium last Tuesday and Friday nights, and on the latter evening at a reception given by Mrs. B. S. Keator, at her home in Asbury Park. Mrs. Steele was engaged after her successful appearances at the Ocean Grove Auditorium.—Ocean Grove Times.

After her appearance at the Arcade, where she was heard in the numbers, aria from "Nadeschda," "Oh! My Heart Is Weary," "At Dawning" by Cadman, and "The Eagle" by Frank Schaefer, the Asbury Park Press had the following to say of her work on this occasion:

Mrs. Martha Steele sang excellently, the orchestra furnishing good effect.

Among all the critiques of her work, Mrs. Steele is particularly proud of one by Charles Wakefield Cadman, the composer, who said:

Mrs. Steele has given eminent satisfaction in her interpretation of my compositions. She has a voice of rich quality and handles it in a musicianly way.

A Denver Girl Visits New York.

Grace McDonough, well known in musical circles of Denver, Col., is visiting relatives and friends in the East, and is at present the guest of Mrs. Frank E. Jago, 400 Convent avenue, New York City. Miss McDonough, her father, Frank McDonough, a well known Denver attorney, her mother and brother made the trip from the Rocky Mountain metropolis to the Atlantic coast in an automobile, taking in the White Mountains and other New England points en route to New York.

Miss McDonough will return home in November by rail, her parents and brother having already motored back.

Eleanor Painter in Operetta.

Andreas Dippel announces the engagement of Eleanor Painter as the prima donna for "The Lilac Domino," the French operetta, which will be produced at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre the week of October 19. Miss Painter recently terminated an engagement covering two seasons at the Charlottenburg Opera (Berlin), as MUSICAL COURIER readers know.

Florence Hardeman Here.

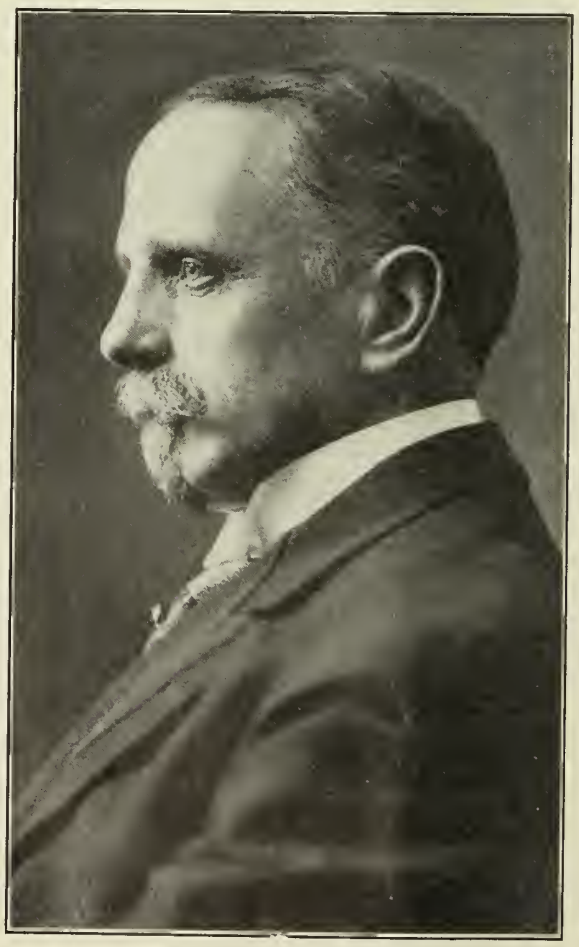
Florence Hardeman, the American violinist, has returned from Europe, and will remain in America this season, fulfilling concert engagements. Miss Hardeman was in Dresden, studying with Professor Auer, when the war broke out. At present she is visiting her home city, Cincinnati.

Loretta del Vallé Coming to America.

Loretta del Vallé, the coloratura soprano, who will be heard in America for the first time this season, will arrive in New York about the middle of this month. Mme. del Vallé will be under the management of Antonia Sawyer.

WALTER HENRY HALL TO CONDUCT NEW YORK MOZART SOCIETY.

This Organization Announces Dates of Concerts and Artists Who Will Appear.



Walter Henry Hall has been appointed director of the New York Mozart Society. Mr. Hall is already well known in this city, but a brief sketch of his career will, upon this occasion, not be out of place.

He was educated at the Royal Academy of Music at London, where he spent four years, at the time when

MRS. NOBLE McCONNELL,
President New York Mozart Society.

George MacFarren was dean. He founded two choral societies during his student years, and was so successful that when he left London there were one hundred and sixty applicants for membership in one of them. Mr. Hall was only twenty-one years old when he left England.

WALTER HENRY HALL.

For six years he held the position of organist and choir master at St. Luke's Church, Germantown (Philadelphia), Pa. From there he removed to St. Peter's Church, Albany, N. Y., which position he held for two years. He became known in New York through his position as organist and choirmaster at St. James' Church. He held this position for seventeen years, and resigned only when appointed to the chair of choral music in Columbia University.

Previous to this time he had already conducted the University Chorus for about five years, and his work there was so successful that the chair of choral music was founded and he entered upon his duties in the fall of 1913. Twenty-one years ago Mr. Hall founded the Brooklyn Oratorio Society and the success of this society under his baton is well known.

They gave the first production in America of Elgar's "King Olaf" and of Henschel's "Requiem," which was given two performances, one under the direction of Mr. Hall and the other under the direction of the composer. Among other great works that have been given by that society may be mentioned Liszt's "St. Elizabeth." Mr. Hall also held for nine years the position of conductor of the Musurgia, the famous male chorus, and held this position until the society discontinued its public concerts.

To Dr. James C. Egbert is due the idea of the present work which Mr. Hall is doing at Columbia. Dr. Egbert developed the summer school system at Columbia so that the attendance at this summer school has increased from five hundred to over five thousand. Under his capable management also, the extension work of the university has developed, and this extension work makes it possible for students in nearby towns to receive their university education, at least in part, without coming to New York at all. The chorus was originally started in connection with the summer school work, and two concerts were given the first summer. Dr. Egbert then conceived the idea of having regular choral music at the university, and in connection with the university extension work, and it is now so arranged that choruses in small suburban districts around and about New York can be furnished with a conductor and music free of charge, thus being rid of the two principal expenses which an amateur chorus has to meet.

The Mozart Society's music season, which Mr. Hall will have in charge, includes six musicales to be given in the North and East ball rooms of the Hotel Astor on November 7, December 5, January 2, February 6, March 6 and April. Among the artists appearing at the afternoon musicales this season are: Frances Alda, Caryl Bensel, William Hinshaw, Gutia Casini, Frank La Forge, Anna Case, Christine Miller, Carl Flesch, Horatio Connell, Charles Gilbert Spross, Pasquale Amato. Three evening concerts will be given in the grand ball room on December 16, February 24, and April 21. Among the artists appearing at the evening concerts are Emmy Destinn, Frieda Hempel and Alice Nielsen.

COLUMBUS NOTES.

Columbus, Ohio, September 24, 1914.

The reports read at the first meeting of the active members of the Women's Music Club last Tuesday show that the list of associate members for this season will equal that of last year, when every available seat was sold. The club offers the following artists: Olive Fremstad, Julia Culp, Coenraad V. Bos, Katharine Goodson, Jenny Dufau, Francis Ingram, Marcian Thalberg, Leopold Kramer, Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Minneapolis Symphony and the Philharmonic Society of New York. The usual six matinee concerts by active members of the club, assisted by a guest artist, will be given, the guests being Lena Palmer, pianist, representing the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; Georgianna Diffenbach, pianist, representing the Women's Music Club, of Dayton; Mrs. Clement Baxter, soprano, representing the Women's Music Club, of Lima, and the Trinity Boys' Choir, Karl Hoenig, director. "The Messiah" is to be given on the evening of December 29, by the Music Club Choir, Robert W. Roberts, director. Fourteen free organ recitals will be given to the public on Sunday afternoons during the winter by leading organists and vocalists of the city.

A very interesting series of concerts has been announced by Kate M. Lacey, a local manager, who offers the following attractions: Mme. Schumann-Heink, Alma Gluck, Alice Verlet, Helen Ware, Anna Pavlowa, John McCormack, Willy Burmester, Rudolph Ganz, and the New York Symphony Orchestra. The advance sale of seats for this course has been very gratifying.

EMILY CHURCH BENHAM.

Kasner to Appear with Anna Case.

Jacques Kasner, the violonist, will assist Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, in a recital at Summerville, N. J., on Friday evening, October 9.

Florence Austin's Success in Maine.

A telegram from Bangor tells of the brilliant success won last Saturday afternoon, October 3, by Florence Austin, the violinist, at the Maine Music Festival.

NEBRASKA CAPITAL RENEWS MUSICAL LIFE.

Various Musical Institutions Open Under Favorable Auspices—Innovation in State Fair Music.

Lincoln, Neb., September 23, 1914.

Judging from the appearance of the registration rooms of the various schools and universities of Lincoln, the season 1914-15 will be one of unusual importance from a musical standpoint. A number of new teachers will co-operate with the established teaching corps and all report splendid indications for a prosperous year. Many students are returning to school after an absence of a year or two. Crop conditions very materially affect the school attendance in Nebraska, which is the case everywhere, and this year's big crop is being felt decidedly this fall.

Music at the State Fair.

Some musicians were a little sceptical this year concerning the musical condition at the Nebraska State Fair, due to the change from Liberati's Band to Patrick Conway's organization, of New York. For years Liberati and his band have held full sway each fall, but the most sanguine hopes were realized from the very first appearance of Conway's Band. Regardless of weather huge crowds flocked to the grounds and the large auditorium was barely big enough to seat the people.

A number of bands from different sections of the State were also on the grounds and played in the various buildings.

University School of Music.

The twenty-first year of the University School of Music opened with a splendid registration of both old and new students. The faculty as it stands now is: Willard Kimball, director; piano, Sidney Silber, Mrs. Will Owen Jones, Lura Schuler Smith, J. Frank Frysinger, Marjorie Anderson, Arvid Samuelson, Louise Zumwinkel, Lucy Haywood, Hazel Kinscella, Ruth Pilcher, Katherine Kimball, Ruth Bagnell, Alleyne Archibald; piano for children (south branch at Twentieth and D streets), Carrie W. Pettis, Marguerite Klinker, Ruth Pilcher; pipe organ, J. Frank Frysinger, Helen Burns; voice, Howard Kirkpatrick, Charles F. H. Mills, Lillian Helms Polley, Edith Lucile Robbins, Vera A. Upton, Lulu Carnes, Jude Deyo, Elizabeth Bonnell; violin, Carl Frederick Steckelberg, A. Loeb, Charles Jiran; cello, A. Loeb; cornet and trombone, Stephen Jelinek; flute, clarinet and saxaphone, Rex Elton Fair; public school music, Charles H. Miller; theoretical department, John M. Rosborough, Howard Kirkpatrick, Charles F. H. Mills, Clare B. Cornell, Lucy Haywood; piano tuning, A. J. Morley; dramatic art, John T. Prince, Clauddie C. Townsend.

Professor Kimball has been playing the organ at the First Congregational Church this summer in the absence of Carrie Raymond.

Carl Frederick Steckelberg reports a large class of violin students for the fall term. A number of his pupils have "made good" during the summer months in concert and Chautauqua work.

An informal reception to all students will be given by the members of the faculty Thursday evening, September 24.

Molzer Violin School.

August Molzer, of the Molzer Violin School, reports a number of talented pupils who have enrolled for the coming year.

The success of his pupil, Lillian Cinberg, who has just returned from a tour of twelve weeks' Chautauqua work, has been most pronounced. She played throughout Montana, Wyoming, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas, and glowing reports of her playing are coming in from all sides.

Another pupil who has made a good record is Edith Hockerson, who played through a number of Western States in a concert tour.

Mrs. Molzer has been engaged to play on Sunday nights at the Lyric for Dr. Wharton's congregation in company with Miss Eiche, violoncello, and Miss Burlingham, piano. The playing of this trio last year proved a great attraction.

Mr. Molzer plays two solos each Sunday at All Soul's Church (Unitarian) and has been re-engaged for the coming year. He will play a fine program of violin numbers at the first meeting of the Matinee Musicale, October 5.

Cotner University School of Music.

Edward S. Luce, the new dean of music at Cotner, reports great interest manifested in every department. The orchestra has been organized and promises some good things soon. Mr. Luce will have charge of the church music and is planning for a large chorus choir capable of doing oratorio work.

Mrs. E. S. Luce entertained the members of the Eastern Star of East Lincoln with a musicale of English, Scotch and Irish ballads at the residence of Mrs. Campbell, September 15.

At the home of Chancellor Oeschger, the Women's Educational Council gave a reception and tea at which Mrs. Luce sang a group of songs by the American composers, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach and Dudley Buck. Miss Jeffers, the new teacher of expression, delighted all with her readings.

Charlotte Comerford, of Chicago, a pupil of Mr. and Mrs. Luce, has been giving a series of song recitals with marked success. In South Dakota she sang at Rapid City, Hot Springs, Sylvan Lake and Spearfish. She has a well developed contralto voice of much power and beauty and makes a most attractive stage appearance. She expects to come to Cotner for senior work in music.

Lincoln Musical College.

The slogan of this school of music is, "The artist's way, take a lesson every day."

President Rhine speaks enthusiastically of the prospects for the season, the enrollment being double that of last year. The faculty is the same as last year with the addition of the pianist, Earnest L. Harrison, who gave a brilliant recital last year at his graduation under Mr. Kremer.

A concert will be given early in October at Curtice Hall by members of this college.

Wesleyan Conservatory.

The attendance at Wesleyan is very gratifying, being considerably above that of last season. Mr. Movius has returned to his duties at the head of the vocal department after a year of singing and teaching in Germany.

Konrad Kriedemann, pianist, played a number of his own compositions at the chapel hour, Friday morning. Mr. Kriedemann is at the head of the piano department.

The personnel of the male quartet this year is Messrs. Gettys, Moore, Harper and Bartley, and they are planning a series of concerts for the near future. They constitute also an instrumental quartet playing cornets, alto and trombone. Mr. Gettys is business manager for this organization.

Clara Mills, of the piano department, spent the summer coaching at the American Conservatory, Chicago.

Mr. Karns has charge of violin, orchestra and chorus, and Mr. McGrew, cornetist, directs the band

State University.

Carrie B. Raymond has returned from her summer's outing on Mandeline Island in Lake Superior, and has some interesting plans for the winter. As usual, they are of a high educational value, the principal feature being the presentation of the nine symphonies by Beethoven, one each month. "St. John's Eve," the Halloween cantata, is to be arranged for October 30, while at the Christmas season a program of carols will be sung. After Christmas the folksongs of all nations will be studied.

Lincoln Notes.

The Aller-Beach Concert Company toured the Western States for eleven weeks, having given concerts in Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and Montana Most flattering are the reports from this trip which ended in a journey through Yellowstone Park.

A reception was tendered Mme. Cosgrove by her students in Curtice Hall, September 18. It was a delightful affair—with autumn settings. The punch bowl was presided over by charming young ladies exquisitely gowned.

An impromptu program was presented and the Musical Courier correspondent was fortunate in hearing songs by Irene Fleming Thurn, Grace Greenwood Gore and the Misses Emery and Wagner.

The first meeting of the Matinee Musicale will be on the afternoon of October 5, when an artist's recital will be given by Bryde Wave Whitcomb, dramatic soprano, and August Molzer, violinist.

Hazel Kinscella will present a historical piano program in costume at the opening meeting of the Woman's Club next month. This promises to be one of the treats of the year.

A very interesting letter was recently received by Miss Kinscella from Helen Joseffy, daughter of the famous pianist, Rafael Joseffy, telling of the renewed health of this noted master. Miss Joseffy says her father will probably teach a little this season. This is indeed welcome news in the musical circles.

Elizabeth Eastwood Luce.

Frank King Clark Dead.

As the Musical Courier goes to press the cable brings the news of the death, in Berlin on October 5, of Frank King Clark, the American vocal teacher, who succumbed to an attack of cerebrospinal meningitis. Mr. Clark's serious illness at Lucerne, Switzerland, already had been reported in this paper.

Francis Rogers' New York Recital.

Francis Rogers, the baritone, assisted by Isidore Luckstone, will give a song recital at the Little Theatre, Thursday afternoon, November 12.

WASHINGTON EVENTS.

Musical Course on New School Curriculum—Managers Announce Attractions—Capital City Musicians Return from Vacations—College of Music Opens.

'Phone, North 935,
1619 R Street,
Washington, D. C., September 18, 1914.

Music will be one of the principal studies at the new Bonne Femme Seminary which has just opened here in Washington. The head of the musical department is no less a musician than Sam Fabian, assisted by Frank Norris Jones, pianist, and Helen Howe, who will be in charge of the vocal department.

Attractions for Season Announced.

Katie Wilson-Greene, manageress, announces a long list of attractions for this winter, which includes the Boston Symphony Orchestra booked for November 20, with a well known soloist. Pasquale Amato, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Ada Sassoli, Josef Hofmann, Louise Homer, Alma Gluck, Efrem Zimbalist, and many others will appear also.

T. Arthur Smith, Washington's other local manager, also has a prospective list of notables, the Flonzaley Quartet leading the list.

New President for Local College.

S. M. Fabian, the new president of the Washington College of Music, has taken charge this week, the school opening with a somewhat augmented list of advanced pupils. Mr. Fabian's artist-pupil, Frank Norris Jones, is the new vice president and assistant piano teacher.

Musicians Return Home.

Mme. Josef Kaspar with her son, Henry Kaspar, and the large party Mme. Kaspar was chaperoning in Europe, have returned home without any undue accident, due to the large acquaintanceship and many friends she has abroad. Mme. Kaspar is now resting at the summer home of the Kaspars, Mt. Salvat, near Bluemont, Va., while Henry Kaspar is busy preparing for his opening recital at Forest Glen Seminary. This past summer Mr. Kaspar has been coaching under Tobias Mathay, of London. In writing of the Kaspar family one must pause and give special stress to given names, for they are numerous, and each and every one talented in his or her own particular way.

The many friends of that young and serious piano student, Katherine McNeal, will be glad to hear of her safe arrival in Washington from Berlin, after seemingly being lost for some weeks on the other side.

Susanne Oldberg will return from New York this week where she has been with friends for some time. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Oldberg will resume her classes in her Belasco studio, as well as the charming series of Sunday afternoon musicales which proved popular last year.

Helen Donohue DeYo, soprano of St. Margaret's Church, who has been spending her vacation in New York and the seashore, has returned home, and last Sunday evening gave a program of song at the Tent Church service.

It is next to impossible to report all those coming home from day to day from delightful vacations, but note should be made of the return of Otto Torney Simon and Mrs. Simon, and Felix Garziglia and Mrs. Garziglia, from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Garziglia have, as usual, spent their summer at the home of Mr. Garziglia's parents, at Nice, France, while Mr. and Mrs. Simon devoted the greater part of their time to completing programs for the season of the Motet Choral Society, of which Mr. Simon is director.

Marie von Unschuld, pianist and head of the University of Music, has returned from a midsummer tour of the West with a pocketful of intensely interesting and enthusiastic press notices of the work accomplished. Mme. von Unschuld will be busy for some weeks here in Washington with the opening of the winter classes at the University of Music.

Mrs. Henry White, organist, and her daughter, Margaret White, who have been on a visit to Minneapolis, are among the many musicians returning to their homes for the winter. Others who returned to Washington last week are Marguerite Howard, a former soloist at St. Stephen's Catholic Church; Francis Somerville, organist at the Rhode Island Avenue M. P. Church, and Marie Hansen, who has been under the instruction of Ernest Hutcheson during July and August, at Chautauqua, N. Y. Dick Root.

Lhevinne Coming.

A telegram received by Loudon Charlton, manager of Josef Lhevinne, the pianist, reads as follows:

"Am safe in Wannsee. Germans most kind. Am free to leave the country.

"(Signed) Josef Lhevinne."

Lhevinne's American tour will begin in December.

CHICAGO WOMEN'S MUSICAL CLUB HOLDS OPENING RECEPTION.

Five Hundred Invitations Issued—Addresses and Music Make Up Interesting Program—Announcements for the Season in Middle West Metropolis.

Chicago, Ill., October 3, 1914.

A new chapter was added to the musical history of Chicago on Thursday, October 1, when the Chicago Women's Musical Club held its opening reception in the Francis I room of the Congress Hotel. This new club was organized at the close of last spring and already has a membership numbering 175. Its mission is to satisfy a long felt need in this vast city—a club in which musicians and music lovers may come together in closer affiliation. There are three separate memberships, making the field of action large and unlimited—active, associate and student membership—the latter a long neglected necessity in the music world, whereby a student may be assisted and protected in this big community.

The opening reception, to which five hundred invitations were extended, was in charge of Mrs. Edwin Peifer and Mrs. Fred Meadows. The program was prepared by Mrs. Louis Yager, chairman. Following the reception a number of prominent Chicago women gave addresses appropriate to the occasion, and the musical program was rendered by Georgia Kober, pianist; Mabel Corlew Smidt, soprano, and Marie Ludwig, pianist. The officers in whose able hands this club has been slowly but surely shaping a promising destiny are Eleanore Capps-Hostler, president; Mrs. Harrison Wells, first vice-president; Mrs. Louis Yager, second vice-president; Mrs. A. G. Ireland, recording secreary; Ruby Babler, corresponding secreary; Mrs. Fred L. Rossbach, treasurer.

HARRY WEISBACH WITH JEANETTE LOUDON STUDIOS.

Harry Weisbach, concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, has been engaged by Jeanette Loudon to head an ensemble class at the Jeanette Loudon Studios in the Fine Arts Building. The name of Mr. Weisbach added to the list of prominent musicians already secured for the Jeanette Loudon Studios presages well for a most successful season at the studios, so well directed by Miss Loudon, who, as ever heads the piano department.

PAUL ALTHOUSE AND THEODORE HARRISON WITH APOLLOS.

Paul Althouse, tenor, and Theodore Harrison, bass, of New York, have been engaged as soloists for the forthcoming performance of Elgar's choral work, "Caractacus," to be given by the Apollo Musical Club, Sunday afternoon, October 18, at the Auditorium Theatre. Mr. Althouse will be remembered as having sung at the Evanston Festival two years ago and this will be Mr. Harrison's first appearance in Chicago, although he has appeared in nearly all the other principal cities of the country.

CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE SATURDAY MORNING RECITALS.

The first Saturday morning recitals of the season under the auspices of the Chicago Musical College took place on Saturday morning, October 3 in the Ziegfeld Theatre. Karl Reckzeh, a member of the piano department of the faculty, played a recital program of special interest. Immediately preceding Mr. Reckzeh's recital, Felix Borowski, the well known instructor and critic on the Chicago Herald, began his series of history of music lectures with a talk on "Primitive Music." At the next recital on Saturday morning, October 10, Mr. Borowski will lecture on "Music of Ancient Egypt."

GREETINGS FROM ALMA VOEDISCH.

This office acknowledges post card greetings mailed from Juarez, Mexico, by Alma Voedisch, who will return to Chicago very shortly after having had a pleasant and successful trip.

GADSKI TO OPEN F. WIGHT NEUMANN'S SEASON.

Johanna Gadski, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, who will open the concert season of F. Wight Neumann at the Illinois Theatre, Sunday afternoon, October 18, passed through Chicago this week on her way to the Pacific Coast. Her program for the Chicago recital will comprise songs by Schumann, Schubert, Franz, Wagner, Brahms, Taubert, Strauss, and a group of songs by English composers.

RACHEL BUSEY KINSOLVING'S SERIES.

Rachel Busey Kinsolving announces a series of musical mornings at the Woman's Club of Evanston, Ill. The series will be opened on Tuesday morning, October 20, by Florence Hinkle, soprano, and Reinald Werrenrath, baritone. The next musicale will take place on Tuesday, November 17, when Helen Stanley, soprano, will give a song recital. The third program, on Tuesday morning, December 15, will be furnished by Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, and the last one will take place on Tuesday morning, January 19, when Josef Lhevinne, pianist, and Lambert Murphy, tenor, will be heard.

GRABEL'S BAND OPENS SEASON.

Grabel's Orchestral Band, under the direction of V. J. Grabel and assisted by Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, officially opened the 1914 season with a concert given at Orchestra Hall on Friday evening, October 2. A review of this concert is deferred until the next issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

ARTHUR MIDDLETON SINGS AT OAK PARK.

Arthur Middleton, basso, of New York, gave a song recital in Oak Park last week. The recital was well attended and the singer, as ever, won the approval of a large and appreciative audience.

BRIGGS BUREAU OF UNIVERSITY EXTENSION.

The business which has been conducted under the name of the Briggs Musical Bureau has been reorganized on a more extensive scale and the name to be used in the future is the Briggs Bureau of University Extension. There will be no curtailment of concert, recital and oratorio bookings, but additional work will be undertaken for the purpose of booking complete courses and courses in large cities, requiring lecturers of international renown and literary celebrities. This will widen the sphere and scope of the work in booking by creating more opportunities of high grade musical artists, and while lyceum work will not be undertaken by the Briggs Bureau of University Extension, the lyceum companies of the lesser class will be displaced by many of the soloists of the Briggs Bureau.

The feature artists will be more limited and will appear under the name "Concert Direction Ernest Briggs," and at the head of the list will appear the Chicago Sunday Evening Club with its fine quartet, consisting of Mabel Sharp Herdien, soprano; Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto; John Miller, tenor, and Gustav Holmquist, baritone, and Edgar Nelson, pianist and organist. The organization consists of one hundred members and it will arrange to fill concert engagements during the coming season.

The offices of the Briggs Bureau of University Extension will be, as before, at Steinway Hall, and headquarters for the Ernest Briggs Concert Direction have been established on the tenth floor of the Auditorium Building.

The Metropolitan Artists' Series will be under the management of the Briggs Bureau of University Extension.

METROPOLITAN ARTISTS' SERIES.

The Metropolitan Artists' Series will open at the Fine Arts Theatre, on October 18 with Virginia Thomson, contralto, and George Riecks, pianist. Miss Thomson has made a success in New York, Baltimore and other Eastern points in opera and recital, and Mr. Riecks has achieved his greatest success in the Northwest as a solo pianist. On November 15 Helen Bright Bengel, the Chicago contralto, who is a member of the Brahms Quartet, will give a recital, assisted by Ethel B. Russell, pianist. The dates in December will be notable for the appearance of Willard Flint, basso, who has established a brilliant record by receiving ten consecutive engagements from the Handel and Haydn Society and Boston Symphony Orchestra, of Boston.

The first date in 1915 will be the Chicago debut of Alma Hays Reed, soprano. Mrs. Reed has toured extensively throughout the Central West, but has not yet made her Chicago appearance. In February, Ethelynde Smith, who made a success in the series last year, has been re-engaged and on this occasion she will not give her program of American women composers, which was presented last year, but will present a miscellaneous program of the best

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address: 4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
THE LARKIN-WEBER RECITALS
Are Creating a SENSATION
Engagements booked in all leading cities
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill
or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway : New York.

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
KENNETH M. BRADLEY, President

LEADING SCHOOL OF
Expression Public School Music MUSIC Languages Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:

Julie Rive-King	Harold von Mickwitz	Justine Wegener
Guy Herbert Woodard	Frank B. Webster	Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter	Eleanor Smith	Edward Dvorak
Mae Julia Riley	Emile Leclercq	Adelaide C. Lewis
Abigail Raymer	Ernest O. Todd	Robert Yale Smith
Roland Leach	Dr. Charles Allum	Anna McPherson

The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone. CHARLES W. CLARK and DAVID BAXTER, the famous Scotch baritone from the Royal College of London.
The Bush Conservatory is the only Conservatory in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
For catalogue and further information address EDWARD H. SCHWENKER, Secretary.

compositions by modern composers. In March, Irma Seydel, the young violinist who has attained the record of a successful series of orchestra appearances in Europe and America at the early age of eighteen will make her Chicago debut. With Miss Seydel there will appear in joint recital Edith Castle, contralto, of Boston.

Bush Conservatory Notes.

The fall term of the Bush Conservatory has opened with a larger enrollment than any previous year in the history of the institution. The many new additions to the faculty and also the new dormitory are a great acquisition to the school.

Harold von Mickwitz's artist-class will meet every Thursday at 3.30 p. m. This is an unusual advantage to students wishing to create a professional career, as they have the benefit of hearing technic discussed, as well as interpretation of the masters. The fact that Mr. von Mickwitz is an artist of international reputation, draws only a very serious class of students. Mr. von Mickwitz has developed many artists of repute who owe their success to careful training with him.

Earl Victor Prahl, a pupil of Julie Rive-King, is a very talented young pianist who is coming to the front rapidly. Mr. Prahl has just returned from a successful Chautauqua tour. He is now devoting most of his time to teaching.

The Expression Department of the Bush Conservatory continues to be in charge of Mae Julia Riley and has had a large increase in its enrollment, and the work has been made much more extensive, giving the student a number of additional subjects, which, heretofore, have not been included in the course.

Guy Herbert Woodard, who is at the head of the Violin Department, will conduct the Bush Conservatory Symphony Orchestra so that the students of the Conservatory will have many unusual advantages in the way of ensemble experience. The orchestra will give a number of concerts throughout the season.

New Quarters for Spry School.

The Walter Spry Music School moved October 1 from Suite 625 to Suite 712 Fine Arts Building. A reception will be held in the new and spacious quarters, Saturday afternoon, October 17, at 3 o'clock, when a program by members of the faculty will be given. Hugo Kortschak, the violinist, and his assistants have attracted such large violin classes that the school has decided to organize an orchestra under Mr. Kortschak's direction. The interpretation classes conducted by Walter Spry continue to be one of the most attractive features of the school. The first program in October will be given by James Whittaker and will be as follows: Sonata in F, Mozart; sonata, op. 14, No. 1, Beethoven; tone pictures, op. 85, Dvorák. Mr. Spry's program will include chaconne, in G major, Handel; fantasie from C minor sonata, Mozart; scherzo from the "Scotch Symphony," Mendelssohn; "Legende" and "Gavotte Fantastique," op. 54, Beach.

Mrs. Edwards Not Mrs. Eduard.

The likeness of Etta Edwards, well known vocal teacher, formerly of Boston, New York and Chicago, and now of St. Louis, was reproduced in last week's Musical Courier and graced the Chicago page. Mrs. Edwards' name was spelled "Eduard"—an error probably noticed only by those who were at fault, as Mrs. Edwards is so well known in the musical world as to make this correction unnecessary. Mrs. Edwards' picture was in company of her pupil, Louise le Baron, which was taken recently at Ravinia Park, where Miss le Baron appeared recently in grand opera.

New Officers of North Shore Festival Association.

Officers and an executive committee were elected and plans for the work of next year were completed at the annual meeting of the members of the Chicago-North Shore Music Festival Association yesterday afternoon at the residence of M. C. Armour, 1608 Ridge avenue, Evanston.

It is the plan of the association to hold five concerts next year in the gymnasium of Northwestern University. One of these will be especially for children and is to be held in the afternoon. The officers elected were: President, Frank S. Shaw; first vice-president, Harry B. Wyeth; second vice-president, Alexander O. Mason; secretary, Walter B. Smith; treasurer, John H. Hilton; historian, Charles W. Spofford. Executive committee—M. C. Armour, chairman; Dr. Abram W. Harris, Henry S. Henschen, John H. Hilton, William F. Hypes, C. L. Jenks, Alexander O. Mason, Walter B. Smith, Frank S. Shaw, Charles W. Spofford, Charles N. Stevens, George S. Montgomery, Frederic P. Vose, Harry B. Wyeth and James S. Ferris.

SHATTUCK ON SHAKESPEARE.

Arthur Shattuck, the pianist, wrote to a friend recently, who submits the epistle to the Musical Courier:

"Do you believe Bacon wrote the Shakespeare plays? I do not, although I used to live near the late Ignatius Donnelly and have often talked to him about the famous cryptograms which according to the Donnelly theory revealed the secret of authorship.

"I left Paris a couple of weeks ago owing to the war-like atmosphere of the French capital and am at present making an automobile tour through England. I am writing this from Stratford-on-Avon, the scene of the birth and death of William Shakespeare. It is nearly three hundred years since Shakespeare died—the three centuries will be complete a year from the 23d of April next. This is my tenth trip to Stratford, and if I live I hope to come here again as many more times. Ever since I was a small child I have been an admirer of Shakespeare and his plays—in fact, he was one of my boyhood heroes. My first visit to the theatre was to see Edwin Booth in 'Hamlet,' and I believe I have been to see all the great Shakespearian actors of the past twenty years.

"When Shakespeare was a boy there must have been two kinds of merchants, for his father is always spoken of as a respectable merchant. 'Father John' Shakespeare was a wool merchant, also a tanner and glover. His mother, Mary Arden, was the daughter of a wealthy farmer. The favored son was born April 23, 1564.

"So many stories are told of the early life of Shakespeare that it is hard to locate the exact truth. Baconians claim he was uneducated and therefore could not have written the plays bearing his name. The story accepted here is that he passed seven years in the local grammar school securing a thorough foundation in history, literature, Greek and Latin.

"The holidays of each summer were passed at the home of an uncle, who had a farm near Snitterfield—an hour and a half on foot from Stratford if you are a fast walker. My motor made it in much less time. Then, at times, young Shakespeare stayed with relatives who had farms much nearer his home, and it was while on these rural visits sharing the outdoor life and mixing in the games of the children that he drank in his ardent love of nature and the profound knowledge of country life, with which his plays are saturated.

"Shakespeare left school at fourteen and it is supposed he worked with his father in the wool business, also as a tanner and glovemaker. At nineteen he married Anne Hathaway and continued to live in his father's house until he was twenty-two years old. It was at this time that the famous poaching episode occurred which caused him to break home ties. He taught school a few months and then wandered off to London.

"Shakespeare took the first job London offered him—holding the horses of the men of fashion who came to the theatre of James Burbage on horseback. He soon enjoyed so much popularity that additional help was needed. Shakespeare hired extra grooms, who were known as 'Shakespeare's boys' long after the departure of their first master.

"Shakespeare's first job in Burbage's theatre was as call boy. His promotion was rapid, for at the age of twenty-eight he was playwright, actor, and manager. According to the records, Shakespeare acted in every play he wrote save two—'Titus Adronicus' and 'Henry VI.' Inasmuch as he was not only author, but proprietor and manager, it was fitting that he should play the Ghost in 'Hamlet,' and records proclaim his ability by saying he was 'an excellent actor.'

"Four years before his death, at the age of forty-eight, Shakespeare was able to realize the dream of his life—to retire to Stratford and enjoy in that quiet retreat the fortune he amassed by his labor.

"Shakespeare was for all time. His plays reach every man, because they are fundamentally true and human. His greatness defies all comparison. His works suited to charm the hearts of the young as well as the heads of the old, contain food for every mind; matter for amusement as well as reflection."

Grateful Klibansky Pupils.

Sergei Klibansky's summer session of vocal music has brought an aftermath of grateful letters from pupils from near and far. These thank him in heartiest fashion for their splendid progress.

SERGEI KLIBANSKY.

Quoting some of the letters, they are as follows:

My voice is better than it has been for a long time, but it seems to be getting higher. I practice every day and I thank you for teaching me how to work easily and intelligently.

I want to thank you for your kindness to me. You have been so painstaking and patient and I see the greatest difference now and in the way I used to sing and take tones. Your understanding is certainly marvelous. I shall work hard to show my gratitude and to live up to your expectations of my voice.

With deepest appreciation of you and what you have done for me, I am, Very sincerely,

Jean Vincent Cooper.

I appreciate what Mrs. Sicard used to say about voice placing. That you have the truth and have the most wonderful way of making it clear is certainly true when I could absorb it when not even exerting myself enough to be conscious of listening.

With best wishes for the coming season and deepest appreciation of all I learned from you as a teacher and musician, I remain, as always, Most sincerely, Ethlyn Bowman.

I realize you are the one and only teacher who can instruct in the real art of singing.

With my very best wishes, I am, Sincerely yours,

Nina Melville.

I am very enthusiastic about what you did for me and appreciate it beyond any means of expression. Your work is great and I am going to do more work with you because I like you immensely, as well as recognizing the efficiency and greatness of your teaching.

Yours sincerely,

H. Roger Naylor.

I can't express the pleasure that I feel in my work with you this past summer. It was marvelous work. When I think of what I accomplished, starting in as I did with my throat still raw from the doctor's knife and my voice all gone and finding it restored at the end of my four months' daily work with you, I congratulate myself heartily that I had such a wonderful teacher.

My work with you was an inspiration. I only hope that I may carry out your wonderful methods and accomplish the same results with my pupils.

I am looking forward to the end of the season, when I shall return to spend another summer studying with you. There is no need to go to Europe when you are in America. I only hope that I shall be able to spread your name and fame and help some students to choose the right teacher. With sincere gratitude, Tracy Jay Kingman.

Concert Direction: Piano Store
John Wanamaker
New York.

My Dear Mr. Klibansky: The unusual merit displayed by your pupils in your recital in the Auditorium some time ago prompts me to inform you that there will be a few open dates for a like purpose this year.

Should you care to avail yourself of one of these, I shall be glad to reserve an afternoon for you (subject to the management's O. K.) about April 1. Sincerely, Alexander Russell.

Permit us to thank you for the splendid song recital which you put on in our Auditorium this afternoon. It was one of the most finished concerts we have ever held and the audience showed an uncommon degree of appreciation.

We would be glad to arrange for another song recital by your pupils in the near future. Yours very truly,

Newark, N. J. L. Bamberger & Co.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Lisbet Hoffmann Piano Recital—Elizabeth K. Patterson Musicale—Elena de Olloqui Gives Three Recitals—Kriens' New Studios—Organist Noble's Sunday Evening Recitals—Arens' Reception—Notes.

New York, October 2, 1914.

Lisbet Hoffmann, the pianist, assisted by Frieda Klink, contralto, gave a combined recital at the Studio Club, New York, last week. Their interesting program brought forth enthusiastic approval from the large audience.

Her vacation period now over, Miss Hoffmann has returned to her duties at Miss Walker's School, Lakewood, N. J. She, however, spends two days weekly in the metropolis, where she has several talented pupils, some of whom began this summer. During her three months' absence at a seaside resort, she gave a course of lessons in modern piano technic, which included the established principles of the older school, with the modern development by Breithaupt, Dalcroze and others. She had an unusually interesting circle of pupils, finding much enjoyment in her work. Miss Hoffmann is not only an up to date teacher, but she is a first class solo and ensemble pianist, having been heard in both these capacities last season.

ELIZABETH KELSO PATTERSON'S MUSICALE.

Elizabeth Kelso Patterson gave her first musicale on September 23 at her residence-studio, 257 West 104th street. Geraldine Holland, soprano, an artist pupil of Miss Patterson, and Charlotte Moloney, the violinist, appeared as soloists. Katherine Mitchell was the accompanist. The three young ladies make a very attractive trio—voice, violin and piano. Last season they appeared in a number of musicales and are now being booked for the present season.

At the Patterson Home for Music and Art Students there are regular concerts and musicales given every month. Students who are qualified have an opportunity to appear before cultured audiences at the Patterson home. Inasmuch as many of these students are studying their specialties under the best private teachers of New York, these monthly affairs bear an artistic standard. The audiences are made up of people who are real judges of music, and who encourage these young artists by their presence and applause.

ELENA DE OLLOQUI RECITALS.

Elena de Olloqui, the New York pianist, gave a series of three recitals before the Onteora Field Club, Catskill Mountains, July 22, July 29 and August 12, under the patronage of Mesdames Coster, Perry and Satterthwaite. The pianist played works by the following composers: Chopin, Schumann, Mozart, Paderewski, Wagner, Scarlatti, Henselt, Schloezer, Debussy, Liszt, Schytte, Rubinstein, Sgambati and Moszkowski. Although Miss de Olloqui was on her vacation, she was kept busy preparing these elaborate programs. She had a most enjoyable summer at this "heavenly spot," as she calls it, and also gave some lessons. This season she is to be instructor of piano at the Ossining School.

CHRISTIAAN KRIENS' SUMMER.

That busy violinist, composer, teacher and conductor, Christiaan Kriens, spent the summer at St. Johns, N. B., where he gave a final concert September 22, assisted by Helen Wetmore Neuman, soprano; Mrs. S. Kent Scovil, pianist, and Mrs. J. M. Barnes, accompanist. This affair was under the patronage of His Honor the Honorable Josiah Wood, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, and His Worship Mayor Frink. The St. Johns Standard of September 23 speaks in terms of highest praise both of the Kriens playing and compositions. Mrs. Wetmore Neuman's singing also received many words of commendation. The following is a brief excerpt from that paper:

> Local people who are capable of passing a criticism on violin playing adjudged Mr. Kriens a master. His rendition of Chopin pieces and his own compositions was considered marvelous. The mellow sweetness of the notes from his master hand were entrancing and the audience was carried into ecstasies of delight. The expression in the notes was wonderful. "Dutch Lullaby," composed by himself, created a great impression, as, in fact, did all of his own pieces. Beethoven's minuet in G was also played among his selections and bowed with a master's touch.

Mr. Kriens' new studio is 864 Carnegie Hall, New York: residence-studio, The Raleigh, 7 West Ninety-second street, New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE'S SUNDAY EVENING RECITALS

An hour of music is given every Sunday evening on the splendid big organ at St. Thomas' Church, Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue, at 8 o'clock, by the organist, T. Tertius Noble. Programs are distributed containing descriptions of each of the pieces, together with a brief analysis of their musical content, etc. Last Sunday Mr. Noble played works by the following composers: Guilmant, Pleyel, Bach, Noble, Calkin, Schubert and Chopin.

ARENS' RECEPTION.

Friends of Mr. Arens have received announcement of a reception to Franz X. Arens, the well known conductor and vocal teacher of New York, given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Brodie, East Salmon street, Portland, Ore. Other friends have been much interested in a snapshot of Mr. Arens, in which he is depicted wearing workman's overalls, and energetically wielding a hoe in his garden, near Portland. Mr. Arens apparently gets as good results with his hoe as he does with his baton.

NOTES.

Clara E. Thomas, of Buffalo, has opened her season's teaching, following a fine visit with her son in the Middle West. Some of her "songbirds," as she calls them, are doing good work before the public. She heard a number of them sing in Indianapolis, and says: "I am so puffed up with pride and joy at their improvement and success that I shall have to get a new hat." Eva Tugby is to sing Marguerite and Lucia this season, while Olive de Coveny sings Santuzza and Gilda, in the performances given by Mme. Doree and Company, entitled, "Great Moments from Grand Opera." Clara Deuor, Viola Schummer, Marion Dohney Cole, and Esther Walker are each making their way.

Mme. Dohney-Cole is known as the "Irish Thrush." A long newspaper sketch of Mme. Cole praises her singing and handsome personality. Miss Thoms says: "My only trouble is that managers apply for so many singers that I cannot train them fast enough. It is rather significant of the trend of the times, when managers insist upon having 'placed voices.' I could get engagements for three times as many singers as I can offer."

Carl V. Lachmund, pianist and composer, after a year's stay on the Pacific Coast, has returned to New York City, where he may be found at Steinway Hall. Branch studios soon will be established. An opening concert will be given by the Lachmund family, introducing Arnaud, Marjorie, Glyre, and Anita Lachmund in a piano recital, assisted by the petite danseuse, Miss Anita, the "miniature Genee."

The Young Men's Symphony Orchestra of New York, an organization founded and endowed by the late Alfred Seligman for the gratuitous training of young musicians in orchestral playing, announces its thirteenth season under the direction of Arnold Volpe. Rehearsals will be held Sunday morning, beginning October 18, and two public concerts will be given during this season. Applicants for admission to the orchestra should present themselves for enrollment and examination at Terrace Garden, 155 East Fifty-eighth street, on Sunday morning, October 11, from 10.30 to 12. Further information regarding the society can be obtained from its secretary, Henry Walter, 100 Broadway.

Leonardi Uribi, the Italian vocal teacher and placer of voices, coaches for opera and oratorio, at his handsome studio, which is centrally located at 114 West Seventy-second street. Signor Uribi's splendid singing is a constant pattern to his pupils, who speak of his method with admiration and confidence.

Prof. Samuel A. Baldwin has resumed his regular organ recitals at 4 o'clock on Wednesday and Sunday afternoons and which will continue until May 26, 1915, at the College of the City of New York. Classic and modern works are found on his programs, which are an hour in length, and usually heard by audiences which fill the beautiful Tudor Hall to overflowing.

Eva Emmet Wycoff, the soprano, is head of the vocal department of Scudder School, West Ninety-sixth street. One of her early summer recitals was given at the Baptist Church, of Hoschton, Ga., when she had fine success. She is open for a church position, and is experienced and reliable.

JULIA CLAUSSEN
Available for Concerts
Entire Season 1914-15
Pacific Coast Tour Oct. 15th to Nov. 18th
MANAGEMENT:
ALMA VOEDISCH, 3941 Rokeby St., Chicago

News of Pilzer.

Maximilian Pilzer, the violinist, has opened a studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, 1425 Broadway, New York, where he will give instruction to pupils desirous of acquiring knowledge of his chosen instrument.

MAXIMILIAN PILZER.

On December 6 he will give a recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, where he will play a group of new compositions by American composers and also a group of his own compositions, forming a program that will doubtless be of interest to music lovers of the metropolis.

Philipp Mittell Opens Season.

The violin pedagogue and teacher of ensemble playing, Philipp Mittell, opened his studio on Thursday, October 1, for the season 1914-15, at 939 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Mr. Mittell, who is well known as a successful exponent of the highest branches of the violin art, has edited and revised old and almost forgotten violin works (published by G. Schirmer & Co.), consisting of seven volumes, about one hundred compositions. These works are used by violinists all over the world.

In an interview with a MUSICAL COURIER representative, Mr. Mittell said: "A number of my pupils are now filling important positions in large orchestras in various parts of the United States, and some have gained fame as soloists."

Nikolai Sokoloff's New York Recital.

Nikolai Sokoloff, the violinist, has returned from Mackinac Island, Mich., to his farm at Westport, Conn., where he will remain until his season opens in New York. He will give his first recital at Aeolian Hall on November 20, and will play a most interesting program, which will be published later on. Mr. Sokoloff's success, both here and abroad, in Paris, London and other European cities, assures him a warm welcome in this city.

Manuel Quirogo at Hippodrome.

Sam S. and Lee Shubert and R. E. Johnston will present Manuel Quirogo, the Spanish violinist, for the first time in America, Sunday evening, October 18, at the New York Hippodrome. Mr. Quirogo will be accompanied by an orchestra, and he will play the Mendelssohn concerto, No. 3, "Havanaise" by Saint-Saëns and Russian airs by Wieniawski.

Gardner Available.

The fact that Samuel Gardner, the American violinist, has been engaged as a member of the Kneisel Quartet will to a certain extent interfere with his solo engagements. He will, however, be available at certain times during the season.

Adela Bowne Concert.

Newark, N. J., papers of September 26 contain eulogistic accounts of the benefit concert in the beautiful music room of Adela Bowne (Mrs. Henry Philip Kirby) in her beautiful suburban home, Raymond avenue, South Orange, N. J. Some $200 was netted for the National Red Cross fund, and a most enjoyable evening of music was provided. Coöperating in the concert were Adela Bowne, soprano; Ellen Keller, violinist; Martha Gall and Ward Lewis, pianists. Katharine Farralley and Ralph Rehill, professional dancers, also appeared.

ADELA BOWNE'S MUSIC ROOM, SOUTH ORANGE, N. J.

Regarding Miss Bowne's singing, the Newark Evening News of September 26, says:

Finely controlled emotionality and polished vocalization marked her singing of the scena. In recognition of the applause it provoked she sang Del Riego's "Happy Day" with a jubilant spirit that again stirred her hearers.

After a group of lyrics, including Cowen's "A Birthday," Chadwick's "Allah" and "Before the Dawn," and Nevin's "The Nightingale's Song," in which her ability in interpreting mood and sentiment and voicing melody reinforced the charm in the songs, she sang, by request, the "Ritorno Vincitor" aria from Verdi's "Aida." In this she poured forth her tones so copiously, imparted to her phrasing such dramatic coloring and by her tonal nuancing showed such artistry in vocal technic as compelled hearty tribute from all understanding the worth of her effort. There were moments in her performance when the pure and carrying quality of her tones reminded one of those of Emma Eames. Nevin's "Rosary" and a lullaby, sung with searching tenderness, completed her offerings.

William Thorner in New York.

Among some of the well known people in the musical world who have been obliged to discontinue their activities in Europe is William Thorner, who recently arrived from Paris and decided to spend the winter in New York, devoting himself to preparing singers for grand opera, in which special line he has been most successful during the short time he has been giving lessons in Paris. Mr. Thorner has spent most of his life among the famous singers, especially those connected with opera. His studio is now established at 70 West Sixty-eighth street.

Among his successful pupils are Georgette Lablanck-Maeterlinck, who studied the role of Iphigenia in Gluck's "Iphigenia en Tauris," which she was to have sung at the Paris Opera this season; Anna Fitziu, of the Royal Opera, Madrid, and the San Carlo, Naples, at the latter opera house she being the first to sing the role of Fiora in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," under the direction of the composer, Montemezzi, himself; Galli Curci, whom the press of Madrid and St. Petersburg proclaimed greater than Patti; Ethel Harrington, who scored a big success in Venice, where she was heard twenty-four times in "Rigoletto"; Carl Cochems, basso of the Quinlan Opera Company, and other artists who are now prominent in various opera houses.

Spiering's Conducting.

One of the conspicuous achievements of Theodore Spiering in Berlin was that conductor-violinist's series of concerts with the Philharmonic Orchestra, at which he bravely produced beside the standard classics also the premieres of characteristic and difficult works by contemporary composers. The Berlin press and the audiences there responded warmly to the Spiering concerts and through his generous catholicism in the making of his programs and his splendid leadership in their presentation, several modern compositions hitherto unknown sprang into instant favor and brought added renown to their creators.

One of the concerts which impressed Berlin particularly was that at which Spiering gave E. N. von Reznicek's "Der Sieger" ("The Conqueror"), a symphonic poem lasting fifty minutes, and invited Mrs. H. H. A. Beach to play her own piano concerto. More than thirty Berlin daily and weekly papers commented on this concert in terms of lavish praise. Von Reznicek, although importuned by Dr. Muck for the score of "Der Sieger," had requested Spiering to lead the premiere, as the composer wished to be present at its initial performance. He expressed himself as delighted immeasurably at the reading given his opus.

The Vossissche Zeitung, after dwelling on the inordinate difficulty of "Der Sieger," spoke of the "unexcelled effects" gained by Spiering and the "deep emotional impulse" his conducting revealed. The Reichsanzeiger dubbed the concert "a signal success," and announced that Spiering "had grown to full stature as a conductor," showing "unforeseen greatness and real eminence." The Allgemeine Musik Zeitung pointed out in Spiering's leading its "decision, temperament, skill and reliability," and adds "he yields in none of those particulars to our most distinguished directors." The Rheinische Musik Zeitung describes the "tempestuous enthusiasm and inexhaustible zest" with which Spiering was applauded after "interpreting exquisitely and with thorough mastery a score which embodies all that is most complicated in modern musical literature."

It is to be hoped that Theodore Spiering, who substituted Gustav Mahler as conductor of the New York Philharmonic during that leader's last illness, will be given a chance soon again to wield the baton in this, his native country, to which he has returned unexpectedly because of the present disturbed atmosphere of Berlin, which made it advisable for all foreigners to leave that city.

Eleanor Hazzard Peocock's Versatility.

One of the most remarkable features of Eleanor Hazzard Peocock's art is its versatility. After witnessing her performance of her fairy songs, it is hard to believe that she could give an equally perfect performance of the works of the classic masters, and having heard her do these works, it is equally hard to imagine her in the "Land of Make Believe." Yet she is equally at home in both, as the following excerpts from Detroit papers show:

Eleanor Hazzard Peocock gave a concert in the Church of Our Father yesterday, which, without reserve, may be mentioned among the best which we have heard here this season.

The program was arranged with the finest artistic intent, and the purpose was completely attained. It gave the artist opportunity to show her versatility in song and style, and one may say unreservedly that Mrs. Peocock has proved herself in every respect to be a fine, warm blooded artist, with a beautiful organ. In Beethoven's "Wonne der Wehmut" she displayed a deep understanding for the greatest among the great masters, even if she presented the work a bit too reverentially. In the old French song, "Charmant Papillon," one could but admire the easy, pearling colorature of the artist, and in "Se tu m'ami," Pergolesi, and "Amarilli," Caccini (1558-1615) she proved herself to be completely equal to the demands of the old Italian art of song.

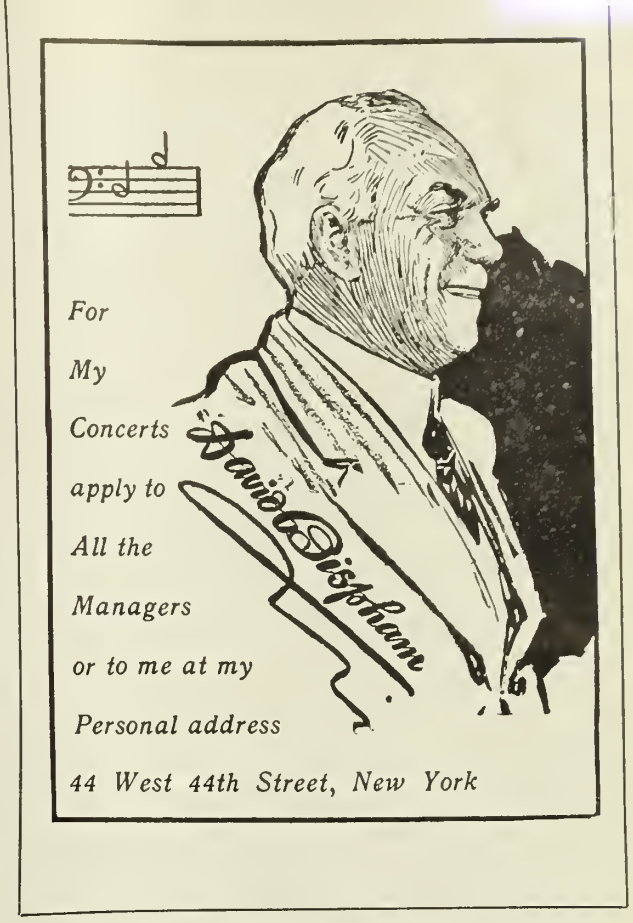
In the "Zigeunerlieder" (Brahms), Mrs. Peocock developed an art and enthusiasm which called for the greatest admiration. By far the most beautiful performance of the evening, real pearls of the art of presentation and mood, were the three songs by Peter Cornelius, and a Hamburg folksong by Brahms; the last of which was presented with such a mingling of the greatest artistic fineness and such effective, drastic humor that the audience stormily demanded an encore.

It must not go unmentioned that the artist proved herself to be a mistress of language also. She sang in Italian, French, Dutch, English, low and high German, equally well and beautifully. We do not hesitate to say that in language and song culture Mrs. Peocock need in no way fear comparison with the greatest of her profession.

The audience followed the numbers with tense attention and bestowed enthusiastic applause, together with beautiful floral tributes, upon the concert giver.—(Translation) Detroit (Mich.) Abend-Post, March 21, 1912.

Eleanor Hazzard Peocock, the prima donna soprano, gave a concert last evening which she had announced to be a short hour in the land of the "make believe." A cozy hour in the land of the beautiful make believe. And when it was over one felt tempted to cry out to the cozy hour, as to that moment of Goethe's "Faust": "Tarry still, thou art so beautiful!" The artist could not have brought about a more absolute proof of her complete control over the reserved audience than that at the conclusion of her recital when her listeners remained quietly and patiently in their places to see if the mistress of her art, who had conjured up the beautiful "make believe land" before us, might not be willing to give an encore.

Under the title, "An Hour in the Make Believe," Mrs. Peocock sings and recites the experiences of a small girl. The songs and poems are endued with a rare atmosphere of poetic fineness. But it was not only what she presented, but the manner of presentation which formed the artistic eye and ear delight of the concert.



. . . After the first introductory words, after the introductory chords, one saw the necessity of the costume, forgot the outward appearance and was soon led along willingly and inspired into the ever old, still ever new realm of the blessed, happy childhood.

Yesterday the singer was obliged to struggle against a slight indisposition. In spite of that, one was obliged to admire her signal art of song; in spite of that, one had to take pleasure in her tones, pure as a bell, and in the carrying power of her voice, even in the softest pianissimo. One finds in Mrs. Peocock not only a marked singer, but just as talented an actress. She has every muscle of her face, every gesture of the hand completely in her power, and when she imitates with her hands the flapping of the wings of a young owl one can see the owl hopping along, sees him with the awkwardness of youth beat his undeveloped wings.

Delightfully did the artist relate the story of the young mushrooms with white heads, which, under the warming rays of the sun, developed into toad stools after all. With sympathetic freshness she painted the boyish hauteur of the small cousin from the country, and the most to be admired is the song of the small doll which died of an illness in her sawdust body. The song is full of odd humor and has an almost tragic effect when the singer in the last stanza pictures with fine mood fancy how the doll goes to its dolls' heaven as a consequence of the "pain in my sawdust."

What Mrs. Peocock offered to her audience yesterday was complete art and her listeners remained from the first to the last minute under the almost hypnotic spell of this art.

Wide praise should be given the accompanist, Lillje More Gulbranson.—(Translation) Detroit Abend-Post, April 7, 1914.

ELEANOR HAZZARD PEOCOCK.

Granberry School Opens.

On Monday, September 28, the Granberry Piano School, which is located in Carnegie Hall, New York, opened its doors for the 1914-1915 season, which gives every promise of being a busy one. George Folsom Granberry, director of the school, spent his leisure moments this past summer at his charming place in the Blue Ridge Mountains. This habitation is called "Friendly Mount," and is certainly well named, for it simply radiates hospitality.

A Correction.

In the September 23 issue of the MUSICAL COURIER appeared an interesting communication from Caroll Badham Preyer, the New York vocal teacher, on "War's Effect on Music History." Through some inadvertence the last sentence became changed. It should read as follows: "Let us then establish a confidence in our ability to found a national independence in music." The MUSICAL COURIER gladly makes the correction.

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Pasquale Amato, Paolo Ananian, Frances Alda, Arthur Aldridge, Adriano Ariani.

B

Mrs. A. M. Blair, Clarence Bird, Alice L. Bryant, Norah Brandt, Jessie Baskerville, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Edmund Burke, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Helen Blain, Lillian Blauvelt, Carlo Buonamici, Rudolf Berger, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, George Barrere, Grace Burnap, Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Wilhelm Bachaus, Pauline Bachmann.

C

Enrico Caruso, Cleofonte Campanini, Shanna Cumming, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Mrs. Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Francis Coppicus, Jacques Coini, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani.

D

Adamo Didur, Charles Dalmores, Norah Drewett, J. F. Delma-Heide, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel, Camille Decreus.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Anna Fitziu, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia, Carl Friedberg, Adelin Fermin.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Archer Gibson, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Hedwig Glomb, Emily Gresser, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, William J. Guard, A. J. Goodrich, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Mrs. Warner Gibbs.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, George Harris, Jr., Sue Harvard, Edwin Hughes, Carl Hillman, William Hinshaw, Edward Hargrave, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Allen Hinckley, Genevieve Houghton, Alfred Hertz, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann.

J

Sascha Jacobson, Anna Taylor Jones, Clayton Johns, Edward Johnson.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Earle G. Killeen, Sergei Kotlarsky, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Walter Kirschbaum, Frank King-Clark, Mrs. Frank King-Clark.

L

Felice Lyne, Hans Letz, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Cordelia Lee, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Frank la Forge, Theodor Lattermann, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Florence Macbeth, Zitella Martin, Marguerite Melville, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Pietro Minetti, Isolde Menges, Otillie Metzger, Lucian Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, Elisabeth Mack, Hans Merx, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Victor Maurel.

N

Hildegarde Nash, Arthur Newstead.

O

Hendrikje Ohlsen, H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober.

P

Paul Petri, Louis Persinger, Dolly Patterson, A. Buzzi-Peccia, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Alfred Piccaver, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, Anna Pavlowa.

R

Titta Ruffo, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

Bruno Steindel, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Sigismund Stojowski, Albert Stoessel, Andrea de Segurola, Carlos Salzedo, Katharine Loyal, Phillips Shaw, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Arrigo Scrato, Sevcik Quartet, Max Smith, Giulio Setti, Ann Swinburne, Rudolph E. Schirmer, Arthur P. Schmidt, Umberto Sorrentino.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tremonti, Elizabeth Topping, Isadore Troostwyck, André Tourret.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Luisa Villani, Constantin von Sternberg.

W

Felix Weingartner, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, G. C. Weitzel, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Wheeler, Herman Weil, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams, Frederic Warren, Mrs. Warren.

Z

Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

BLANCHE GOODE PIANIST
AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS
Address: JOSEPH JOINER, 439 Fifth Avenue, New York

MYRNA SHARLOW
SOPRANO
Boston Opera Company, Boston.
Royal Opera Co., Covent Garden, London.
Anglo-American Grand Opera Co., Paris.
Under the management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

DRAMATIC COSTUME SONG RECITAL

HENRIETTA FOSTER
WESCOTT
SOPRANO
AMERICAN INDIAN SONGS
OLDE SONGS
CLASSICS - ORATORIO
TEACHER OF VOICE PLACEMENT
100 CARNEGIE HALL - - NEW YORK

Returned and Returning.

Enid Brandt, the pianist, arrived from Europe recently on the steamship St. Paul.

John McCormack, the tenor, has booked passage on the steamship Mauretania, which will leave Liverpool, October 10, and is due to arrive in New York, October 16.

Loretta del Vallé sailed from Liverpool, September 30.

Marie Hertenstein, the American pianist, has booked passage for this country on the steamship Potsdam, which will sail from Rotterdam, October 10.

Julia Culp expects to sail for America on the steamship Noordam, from Rotterdam, October 24.

Oscar Saenger has returned to New York from abroad.

Paolo Gallico is en route to America on the steamship Noordam.

Emma Trentini, the Italian soprano, was one of the passengers on the Italian liner Tomasso di Savoia, which arrived in New York, Thursday, October 1, from Genoa and Naples.

Jennie Dufau, the soprano, returned from Europe on the steamship Tomasso di Savoia, of the Lloyd Sabando Line, Thursday, October 1, and arrived in Chicago on Sunday evening, October 4.

Georgia Kober, president of the Sherwood School, Chicago, has returned from Europe.

Daniel Visanska, the Philadelphia and New York violinist and teacher, returned on the steamship Santa Anna, Tuesday, September 29.

Daniel Maquarre, first flutist of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, has returned to America.

Gustaf Bergman, the Swedish tenor of the Century Opera Company, expected to sail from Stockholm, October 3.

Christine Miller, the contralto, has secured passage on the steamship Potsdam, which leaves Rotterdam, October 10.

Ellis Clark Hammond, the Philadelphia pianist, is back from Europe.

Karl Schneider, the chorus conductor and vocal teacher, returned to Philadelphia recently.

Edwin Evans, the Philadelphia baritone-teacher, has returned to that city from Europe.

Agnes Quinlan, the vocal teacher, arrived in Philadelphia from abroad recently.

William Thorner, the vocal teacher, has returned to New York from Paris.

Francis Macmillan, the violinist, is expected to arrive in New York October 10.

Alice Verlet, the soprano, is due to arrive in New York October 8 on the steamship Celtic.

Thuel Burnham, the pianist, arrived in New York Friday, October 2, from England.

Josef Stransky, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Society, returned here last week on the steamship Kristianiasjord.

Leopold Kramer, concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic Society, is due here this week from Europe.

Burmester's Ante-War Program.

The last recital which Willy Burmester played in Germany was given in Berlin, when he performed the following program:

Sonata, D major ..... Schubert
Concerto, D major ..... Paganini
(Transcribed and arranged by Willy Burmester.)
Menuett (1770-1827) ..... Beethoven
Gavotte (1763-1817) ..... Mehul
Menuett (1732-1809) ..... Haydn
Walzer (1752-1832) ..... Clementi
Walzer (1778-1837) ..... Hummel
Walzer (1786-1826) ..... Weber
Berceuse ..... Järnefelt-Burmester
Rondo capriccioso ..... Saint-Saëns

Miller-Van Der Veer Engagements.

Reed Miller, the tenor, and his wife, Nevada van der Veer, contralto, united in a song recital at the beautiful mansion of Mrs. Stephen Clark, Cooperstown, N. Y., a fortnight ago. This was for the benefit of the National Red Cross and netted the splendid sum of $1,000. Both artists are now going on a short tour and doubtless will be heard in and near New York frequently during this season.

Rothwell Here.

Walter Rothwell, conductor of the former St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, was in New York last week for a visit of a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Rothwell are about to begin their recital tour in the West.

Marcella Craft's Success in Maine.

Word has been received from Bangor, Me., that Marcella Craft, the soprano, scored a tremendous success at the opening of the Maine Festival last week.

Marcella Craft's Great Success.

It is twelve years since Marcella Craft, the American soprano, left her native country. In that time she has acquired experience and established an operatic career of exemplary brilliancy, gained the undivided approbation of Germany and Italy, and established herself permanently in the affection of layman and connoisseur, of populace and aristocracy. Reports of her achievements, her varied and exceptional powers, have emanated from numerous musical centers and have aroused curiosity, which was first satisfied in Maine when she appeared at the Maine Music Festivals, held in Bangor on October 1st, 2d, 3d, and in Portland on October 5th, 6th and 7th.

While Marcella Craft's operatic capabilities have not as yet been witnessed in America, she gave evidence before going abroad of her exceptional musical gifts and qualifications. From Indianapolis (where she was born) her family removed to Riverside, Cal., while Marcella was still very young. Due attention was given to her musical education and in the course of time she filled a number of church positions, and her manifestly musical nature inevitably claimed attention. At various times she has sung in the Congress Square Church at Portland, Me.; in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston (the Christian Science Mother Church), and in several others. Concert work likewise occupied a part of her time, and she was endorsed both on the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts. In passing it may be noted that Miss Craft, besides winning pre-eminent success in opera, also has shown herself to be a rarely gifted oratorio singer. Her oratorio repertoire includes "The Messiah," "Elijah," "Creation." "Redemption," "Gallia," "Stabat Mater," "Golden Legend," "Hymn of Praise,' and Gaul's "Holy City."

On her arrival abroad twelve years ago, Miss Craft set herself industriously to work to study singing and acting in Italy. Under Alessandro Guagni she acquired remarkable mastery of bel canto, while her dramatic training was achieved at the hands of the famous Francesco Mottino. Mottino's efforts would have, however, counted for relatively little in themselves had not the artist been innately gifted with exceptional dramatic instincts, vividness of imagination, and a fine sense of balance. These qualities have combined to make her the forceful and compelling dramatic artist that she is.

MARCELLA CRAFT.

As Miss Craft believed that German discipline and routine are necessary to those artists who would succeed in the dramatic style of latter day music drama and who desire to cultivate versatility and latitude of style, she sought this discipline in the opera houses of Mayence and Kiel, where she remained for two years the leading lyric soprano and built up a repertoire of some forty operas. Her fame spread, and her services were extensively sought for guest appearances in her special roles. Her success led to a five year contract with the Royal Opera in Munich.

Triumph succeeded triumph in Munich. Her lovely voice, her artistry, her dramatic skill, all so splendidly combined, established her as a favorite. There was no difference of opinion as to her worth, the beauty and individuality of her characterizations, her originality, her versatility. Each of her roles was built up with fine consistency and finish in detail; each was wholly different from the other. Her Butterfly is truly Japanese, her Salome barbarously Oriental; her Mimi, which she sang to the Rudolfo of Caruso, redolent of the Latin Quarter; her Marta in "Tiefland" a true peasant. She also conquered as Antonia in "The Tales of Hoffmann," in Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini," in "Faust," in "The Secret of Suzanne," and others. So delighted was Richard Strauss with her talents that he willingly transposed parts of "Salome" to suit her voice.

Royalty has honored Miss Craft at various times, and only recently she was summoned to Berlin to sing for the Kaiserin at the Royal Palace. The honor conferred was all the more significant, as the occasion was entirely unofficial, only Her Majesty, Prince Adelbert, Prince August Wilhelm, Prince Oscar and a few friends being present. This is said to be the only time that such a distinction has been conferred upon an American singer. Her Majesty was charmed with Miss Craft's lovely voice and artistic interpretation, and she presented her with a magnificent jeweled brooch with the imperial monogram on a lyre.

Leoncavallo is working at a new opera to be called "Ave Maria."

"TRAVIATA" AT THE CENTURY.

Verdi's Popular Opera Alternates with "William Tell."

"Traviata" was given at the Century Opera House, New York, on Tuesday evening, September 29, and will be continued on alternate nights for two weeks, following the system that has been adopted by that theatre for this year. The work alternated with "William Tell."

"Traviata" had a fairly good performance. Lois Ewell was attractive in the role of Violetta and sang the coloratura parts with ease and a good deal of accuracy. As Alfred, Morgan Kingston was altogether at his best. Mr. Kingston's appearance and stage presence are particularly well suited to a role of this character and he played it with undeniable dignity and charm. His singing of the music was refined and often impassioned, and his diction and enunciation were excellent.

An equal amount of praise is due to Thomas Chalmers in the role of Germont, senior. Mr. Chalmers is developing genuine power as an actor and possesses a voice of great sonority and beauty.

The smaller roles were filled acceptably. The chorus and ballet were good and the stage management of Jacques Coini was in grateful evidence. The opera was conducted by Agide Jacchia.

Spooner Returns from West.

Philip Spooner, the tenor, has returned from the West, to fill Eastern engagements in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. His program at the Ogontz School, Ogontz, Pa., October 14, will open that school's recital series.

While on his recent Western trip, Mr. Spooner sang at Racine and Kenosha, Wis., where he was greeted by large and enthusiastic audiences.

Other engagements await Mr. Spooner "out West" in November. He will include among these a concert with the daughter of Clara Bowen-Shepard, the impresaria. This young girl has an unusual soprano voice, according to Mr. Spooner, and all the requisites for success in the musical field.

These were Mr. Spooner's numbers at his recent Western appearances: "Come to the Garden, Love," Salter; "At Dawning," Cadman; "The Clang of the Wooden Shoon," Molloy; "Im Volkston" (folksong), Hildach; "Si les fleurs," Massenet; "Siciliana," from "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; "Let Her Believe" or "Johnson's Aria," from "The Girl of the Golden West," Puccini; "La Donna e Mobile," from "Rigoletto," Verdi; "My Lovely Nancy," Herzberg; "A Night in June," Herzberg; "A Sky of Roses," Salter; "I Hear You Calling Me" (by request), Marshall.

Enid Brandt Returns to America.

Enid Brandt, the young American pianist, who has made a number of successful appearances with the London Philharmonic Society, has returned to America.

Rachmaninoff's opera, "The Miserly Knight," will not be performed in Berlin, as had been planned.

KATHARINE GOODSON

Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.

"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"

In America January to April 1915

TOUR NOW BOOKING

KNABE PIANO

HELEN
WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

PAUL
DRAPER
LIEDER SINGER
TEACHER OF VOICE
Personal address: 18 West 8th Street
For concerts, recitals, etc., address:
LOUDON CHARLTON,
Carnegie Hall New York

ELEANORA de CISNEROS
In America the Entire Season
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway :: New York City

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
COLORATURA SOPRANO, Grand Opera Prima Donna
Now in America Season 1914-15 Booking
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
New York Recital, Aeolian Hall, Afternoon, Nov. 6
Brooklyn Recital, Brooklyn Institute, Evening, Nov. 4
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Charlotte Babcock Supplies Instructors.

Charlotte Babcock, the manager of teachers and artists, has been busy supplying various colleges, schools and other institutions of learning with capable instructors for the year 1914-1915 as the following partial list will show:

Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y., piano instructor, Raymond S. Wilson; St. Mary's Hall, Burlington, N. J., piano instructor, Mary B. Wilson; Westover School, Waterbury, Conn., piano instructor, Dorothy Judson; Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., piano instructor, Alma M. Holm; Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., piano and voice, Cora S. Anthony; Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., voice instructor, Janet Thompson; Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., violin instructor, Helen A. Boynton; Meredith College, Raleigh, N. C., director of piano department, Albert Mildenberg; Troy Conference Academy, Poultney, Vt., piano instructor, Grace Gunnison; Queen's College, Charlotte, N. C., voice instructor, Coral H. Baker; Utica Conservatory of Music, Utica, N. Y., voice instructor, B. W. Breneman; The Birmingham School, Birmingham, Pa., voice instructor, Mabel Davis Rockwell; Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa., piano instructor, Enola M. Lewis; Mary Baldwin Seminary, Staunton, Va., voice instructor, Maryon Martin; Mary Baldwin Seminary, Staunton, Va., piano instructor, Catherine Bell; All Saints School, Sioux Falls, S. D., voice instructor, T. Austin Ball; Halifax Ladies' College, Halifax, N. S., voice instructor, Remo Cortesi; Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., violin instructor, Marjorie Newell; St. Margaret's School, Waterbury, Conn., piano instructor, Mrs. J. Harrison-Irvine; Mount Allison Ladies College, Sackville, N. B., director of music department, Fritz Read; Brunot Hall, Spokane, Wash., voice instructor, Marion Ballon; Science Hill School, Shelbyville, Ky., voice instructor, Martha Miner Richards; Holy Name Academy, Albany, N. Y., voice instructor, A. Y. Cornell; Colgate-Pickett School of Music, New York city, piano instructor, Ellmer Zoller; Durham School of Music, Durham, N. C., voice instructor, Margaret Bathgate.

Blanche Hamilton Fox's Opera Season.

Some time ago Foster & David were looking for a contralto. Among others they heard Blanche Hamilton Fox, of Boston. Her work was of such an unusual character that a contract was immediately closed. Their plans, however, for an extensive concert season have been upset, for the Bevani Opera Company, of Boston, has engaged her for a three months' season at the Boston Theatre, where she opens on October 5, singing Amneris in "Aida." Miss Fox has had much experience in opera in Italy, Mexico City, and with the Academy of Music Opera Company, of New York. She has had many appearances with the leading singers of the day. Her managers hope that she will be available for concerts after the first of the year. She will have several appearances in and around New York City, under the direction of Foster & David.

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX.

Season 1914-1915
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
Has the Honor to Present the Violinist
SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Florence Macbeth
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera
DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBER

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts —— January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

In Praise of Florence Hinkle's Work.

Florence Hinkle, the soprano, was one of the soloists at the production of Mendelssohn's "Elijah," given at the first concert at the Worcester (Mass.) Music Festival on September 23. Miss Hinkle may well be proud of the splendid criticism, which she justly deserves, her work ever being on a high plane and replete with careful thought and thorough musicianship:

Of an appreciation for this vitalizing, recreating quality of interpretation which looks behind and beyond printed notes to find the spirit of them, yet without doing them discourtesy or violence, it is the duty and the pleasure of the recorder of musical affairs to give thanks for such singing as that afforded last night by Miss Hinkle as often as he may find it.

There will be those who will say, "Yes, it is a beautiful voice, but not dramatic enough." The appeal of a voice and a singer is and must be wholly a personal thing, and always will occasion varying judgments. To me, Miss Hinkle did some of the most beautiful, most satisfying singing it has been my good fortune to hear.

There are no adverse things to be said about such a delivery as hers of the widow's recitative and the air already referred to, or in greater measure still of the "Hear Ye." It is true that both of these excerpts might well enlist a larger voice, but in so doing would they enlist Miss Hinkle's art?

Still a young woman, Miss Hinkle has learned to draw wisely that boundary line about her proposed attempt of a vocal task beyond which she might trust herself in making a thing emotionally intense, but will not. She knows what she can do, and does it with the quiet authority and conviction of one who has learned well the mechanical and the expressive demands of good singing. . . . She has built her voice so that upon any vowel, in any part of it, high or low, she can produce a tone which would seem to have the maximum of overtone, the greatest possible intensity of that resonance which by its presence or absence in a voice, gives it the power to express emotion poignantly, to go to the heart.

Added to this is a knowledge first of all of the school, of that dignity and perception with which this music should be sung, of the continence with which something is withheld rather than a fear lest the remotest sitter in the house should not see the inner palpitation of the singer's heart.

Compare, for example, the compelling manner in which Miss Hinkle took the closing phrase of the "Hear Ye" that ascending to the high "A" at first quietly, but as a rhapsody, something not to be proclaimed from the housetops, with the way it is usually shouted. In all, singing to be remembered by all and by some to be emulated.—Worcester Daily Telegram, September 24, 1914.

Miss Hinkle easily led the soloists, her technical equipment being perfect. Her singing of "Hear Ye, Israel," was rewarded with fervid applause.—Boston Evening Record.

In this regard Miss Hinkle was the most successful. There was in her interpretation of the music of the widow a discretion, a sobriety, a suggestion of reserve and latent forces, not prodigally spread out in display, and yet, withal, a poignant intensity of feeling that lifted this recitative and aria, and in a greater degree the "Hear Ye" to a very high level of that rare expression through song which overtakes and reveals the simplicity of beauty.

Possessed now of a technic well nigh flawless, of a use of the voice which has discovered and is preserving an uncommonly emotional quality of tone, and possessed also of a musicianship that has inquired into the subtler, more telling and enduring ways to quietly yet surely project the inner thought and feeling of text and music, Miss Hinkle occupies an imposing, an enviable position as a concert soprano. The audience made no mistake in rewarding her "Hear Ye" with the eager fervor that always follows vital and unblemished singing.—The Boston Globe.

FLORENCE HINKLE.

Florence Hinkle, the soprano, is also a great favorite in Worcester, and she added many new admirers last night by her beautiful singing. Her work was uniformly good, but in her big aria, "Hear Ye, Israel," which is one of the most tremendous arias ever written, she rose to unexpected heights and thrilled her audience immensely. In the fine duet with Elijah, she was quite at her best, and indeed all she sang was greatly to be enjoyed.—Worcester Evening Gazette, September 24, 1914.

Florence Hinkle, the soprano, has a voice of pure quality, whose technical training has been admirable. The artist gave a strongly emotional interpretation to the extended aria with which the second part of the oratorio opens.—Worcester Evening Post, September 24, 1914.

The Hultman-McQuaid School of Music.

Worcester, Mass., is fortunate in being in the city selected by Paul Hultman in which to found a school of music. Since its foundation the Hultman-McQuaid School of Music has grown with such rapid strides that at the present time there is a faculty of fourteen teachers, of whom each is well known in the concert field and efficient in the art of imparting his knowledge and experience to those desirous of becoming public performers in their especial lines of endeavor. There are eight departments of music, so that each pupil may receive from capable teachers instruction in that branch of music for which he feels himself best fitted. These eight departments include piano, violin, cello, elocution, theory, orchestra and ensemble playing.

Mr. Hultman, who is the head of the piano department, received his musical training from such noted teachers as Emil Liebling, Arthur Foote, Robert Lortat and Prof. Xaver Scharwenka, and became familiar to the music world as a concert pianist of merit.

The head of the violin department is Margarite McQuaid, who received her musical education under César Thomson and Professor Sevcik.

Robert Morosini, of Boston, formerly of London, is the head of the vocal department. Mr. Morosini is a teacher of international reputation.

The cello department is in charge of Rudolf Nagel. Mr. Nagel, who is a graduate of the Conservatory of Weimar, PAUL HULTMAN.

Germany, and a pupil of Julius Klengel, of Leipsic, has been solo cellist of the Musik Forening of Christiania, Norway, and also with orchestras whose conductors were Felix Mottl, Emil Paur and Richard Strauss. For twenty years Mr. Nagel was cellist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

That the Hultman-McQuaid School of Music is making itself felt as a musical factor in the life of Worcester may be seen from the fact that through the instrumentality of Mr. Hultman, Worcester is to have a symphony orchestra of its own. This orchestra is to be conducted by Gustav Strube, formerly associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and will be known as the Gustav Strube Symphony Orchestra. It has long been Mr. Hultman's desire to establish a permanent orchestra in Worcester, and with such an enthusiastic backer as Mr. Hultman and so able a leader as Mr. Strube, it must needs become an institution that is a necessity to the musical life of this Massachusetts city.

Eleanor Spencer Ready for Season.

Eleanor Spencer, the pianist, was one of the passengers on the steamship Rotterdam, which reached New York, September 7.

Miss Spencer spent the greater part of her vacation in Berlin, working with Leschetizky, who was in the German capital at that time for an operation on his eyes.

"Despite the physical trials he underwent," says Miss Spencer, "he was in excellent condition, showing his usual remarkable preservation of mind and youthful[illegible] spirit."

Other places visited by the pianist were Bad Nauheim, where, besides riding, the pianist sat for a bas relief done of Miss Spencer by a professor of Giessen University.

Like many other musicians, Miss Spencer was obliged to give up autumn concert engagements in England and Austria, due to the disturbed conditions abroad.

Various orchestral engagements are already booked for the pianist, including appearances with the New York

ELEANOR SPENCER ON VACATION AT BAD NAUHEIM.

Philharmonic Society, the Cincinnati Symphony, St. Louis Symphony and Minneapolis Symphony orchestras.

A San Diegan's War Time Experience.

San Diego, Cal., September 15, 1914.

Very interesting indeed has been the experience of Edna Darch, one of the leading singers here, who has just arrived home after a strenuous and exciting voyage. Mme. Darch, who had gone to Germany for the summer, was visiting friends at Oliva near Danzig on the Baltic. Two days before war was declared, the Crown Prince and members of his staff were guests of Mme. Darch's friends, and at the request of the prince an entire evening was devoted to songs of Schumann, Schubert, Brahms, all sung by Edna Darch. The following day while many of the ladies were still in a light humor and were having much fun playing at being soldiers, the Crown Prince suddenly requested Tosti's "Good-bye." Instantly there was a change to seriousness and Mme. Darch began to look for this piece. It was not to be found. No one in the house possessed a copy of it. The Crown Prince gave orders to have an adjutant hunt the neighborhood.

In about an hour the adjutant returned in triumph, producing a perfectly new copy in the correct key. The number was sung. Very much moved the prince requested it should be sung again. A deep silence fell on the audience, which began to realize the emotion that was thought of now by all. Once more the young soldier asked Mme. Darch to repeat this really great song, and once more she ventured to sing it, though by this time the deep meaning it was conveying to all was hard to escape from. The song was sung for the third time. Then the prince hurriedly thanked her, with tears stealing down his cheeks and with trembling lips. Among many things he said which will always be remembered by this singer was the saying: "War evens all men—the prince becomes the peasant—the peasant the prince."

The next day Mme. Darch began her long journey home; sixty-eight hours in a train with soldiers began it; there was no water and only black bread, which the soldiers offered her from their stores. One hour in Berlin and on again to Copenhagen, where a steerage passage was secured.

The description of this journey includes such details as hundreds cooped up with much sickness and no one to clean up; the vilest of stenches, and children being born. It is pleasant to record that this singer was always willing to help—to cook, to sing—whichever was wanted. When she left Danzig the Crown Prince bet her she could not reach New York by August 28, but Mme. Darch having promised her husband she would do so was sport enough to take the bet, and as events proved she made good. Mme. Darch is in perfect condition and says she would not have missed the experience for anything.

TYNDALL GRAY.

National Opera Club of America.

Baroness Katherine Evans von Klenner has organized a club, to be entitled the National Opera Club of America, of which this gifted woman is not only founder, but president. In a printed prospectus, which is being largely circulated among all who may be interested in this undertaking, the following is given as the object of this society: "This organization has for its object the consideration and discussion of operatic and other musical and kindred subjects for the purpose of propaganda and the furthering of educational work in music. Women interested in the purposes for which this club is organized may become active, distant or subscribing members. Men may be admitted as associate, distant or subscribing members." Men cannot be admitted into the active membership of this organization because it is to be associated with the National Federation of Women's Clubs, to the membership of which men are not admitted.

BARONESS KATHERINE EVANS VON KLENNER.

The first regular meeting of this society for this season will be in the assembly room of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Thursday, October 8, at 2 p. m., and members as well as guests are invited to be present. There will be throughout the year a series of lectures and musicales in line with the proposed educational work of the society, the dates and the subjects of which are as follows:

October 8—Early Italian Opera.
November 12—Modern Italian Opera.
November 19 (evening)—Italian evening.
December 10—Early French Opera.
January 14—Modern French Opera.
January 22 (evening)—French evening.
February 11—Early German opera.
March 11—Modern German Opera.
April 8—The Libretti.
April 15 (evening)—German evening.
May 13—Grand Opera in English.

The object of this society is, no doubt, a worthy one. It is believed by the enthusiastic and resourceful founder that the absence of popular grand opera in America is due to the lack of education of the people, and it is with the object of furnishing this education that Mme. von Klenner is undertaking this philanthropic work. It is her intention to found branches of this society throughout the United States so that the same educational work may go on all over the country simultaneously. In this way it is hoped that a knowledge of and desire for grand opera will be built up in the hearts and minds of the American people.

As Mme. von Klenner says: "No one can gainsay the fact that this would be a decided advance in American musical progress, for whatever the value of the symphony orchestra or the classical recital may be, it is sure that opera will always be nearest to the hearts of the general public taken as a whole, because there in that in opera which renders it acceptable even to those who cannot feel enjoyment in a merely abstract musical entertainment."

One of the thoughts that Mme. von Klenner expressed was that these various branches "could teach the public upon occasion the stories of the operas which they were about to hear." She believes that "one of the things that prevents opera from becoming genuine popular in this country is the fact that the people will not take the trouble to inform themselves of even an outline of the story and therefore get no pleasure from the opera beyond what is purely visual and oral. Of course, the society will not encourage the star system, and whatever operas are utilized will be of necessity made in the nature of the Century Opera undertaking, rather than in the way of the greater operas where the star system and also the social function idea are absolutely in vogue and permeate the policy of the management."

Century Opera Sunday Concert.

The Sunday night concert, October 4, at the Century Opera House, was attended by a large audience and the offering was greatly enjoyed. Maude Santley revealed the beautiful quality of her voice and her fine vocal control in two French songs, "Chanson de l'Adieu" and "Pensee D'Automne." Louis Kreidler made a tremendous hit with his singing of the "Prologue" from Pagliacci." Bettina Freeman sang an aria from "Cavalleria Rusticana" with a warmth and beauty of tone hardly to be expected after her unfortunate debut in "William Tell" a few nights ago. Kathleen Howard gave a powerful interpretation of Schubert's "Die Allmacht," and the "Evocation of the Nuns" (Meyerbeer) was sung in a masterly manner by Henry Welden.

Other artists on the program were Hardy Williamson, Lois Ewell and Graham Marr, who gave selections from Gounod, Saint-Saëns, and Puccini. Their work was warmly welcomed.

A number of orchestral pieces were given under the direction of Josef Pasternack and Hugo Riesenfeld.

How to Like "Falstaff."

It is absurd to say you can see nothing in "Falstaff," says the London Academy; "why, it is one of the most enchanting operas in the world!"

Its very wealth of sparkle and melody and gaiety and humor was, no doubt, against it in earlier days. Verdi's fertility of invention was so prodigal, like Mozart's, that he ran on from one delicious phrase to another, and kept on giving the hearer something new all the time. He never stopped to say, "This is a 'telling' melody; I will repeat and repeat it till my hearers get it well into their heads." He did not say, "Now is the time for me to introduce some longer solo founded upon a catchy tune." He let Shakespeare's characters express themselves naturally, without repeating themselves. But the audiences of twenty years ago had grown accustomed to the Wagnerian system of perpetual repetition of a few striking themes. They could continually praise themselves for recognizing a "motif." This comfortable pleasure was denied them in "Falstaff." If they were to find a passage delightful, they must find it so at once, while it was going on, for, hey presto! they were listening to something different.

Katharine Alexander Gives Recital.

At the Ovide Musin Virtuoso School of Violin, New York, Katharine Alexander gave a recital on Sunday afternoon, October 4, which called forth the general approbation of the large company assembled—approbation of the talent of the young lady and for the method of instruction which she represented. Musin artist-pupils both in this country and abroad have long been showing their musicianly training acquired at this school, and Miss Alexander, who has recently joined the ranks of concert givers, will unquestionably likewise win laurels for herself and her school.

The program was chosen with good taste. It included the Paganini Romance in B minor, "Variation Serieuses on a Gavotte of Corelli," Tartini; the Bruch concerto, in G minor; Funeral March, Fiorelli; rondo in G major, Mozart; Hugo's "Swan," Burleigh's "Wigwam," and "Nightingale," Musin. These showed a wide versatility in comprehensive interpretation and a fully adequate technic. Particularly marked was the Musin easy, graceful bowing; a tone production, varying from the most delicate pianissimo to one broad deep and rich, produced with assurance, and a temperament decidedly poetic.

Miss Alexander is the fortunate possessor of an attractive personality and is absolutely at ease before the public.

Edna Rothwell's accompaniments should be especially noted because of their excellency.

Opera Talks at the Century.

The first of the Hubbard Opera Talks, a series of which are to be given at the Century Opera House, New York, this season by Havrah Hubbard, assisted by Floyd M. Baxter at the piano, was given on Sunday afternoon, October 4, the subject being "Lohengrin." Mr. Hubbard speaks entertainingly with excellent diction and much power, and his explanation of "Lohengrin" was clear and terse, and should be of considerable benefit and add materially to the enjoyment of those who are about to hear this masterpiece. The music was excellently illustrated at the piano by Mr. Baxter. Mr. Hubbard prefaced his remarks with a strong plea for opera in English, which was loudly applauded by the large audience present.

Fremstad Acclaimed in Spokane.

A telegram received on Monday of this week by Foster & David, Mme. Fremstad's managers, reads as follows:

Spokane, Wash., October 3, 1914.

Foster & David,
500 Fifth avenue, New York, N. Y.:

Big reception accorded Fremstad in Hotel Davenport at Spokane by twenty-seven clubs of city. Speeches were by made by prominent citizens and visitors. Fremstad was presented with golden floral key to the city by mayor and she replied with short but beautiful little speech, the second of her life. Received many flowers. She is delighted with experiences so far and sends you best greetings. Letter full of details of trip tomorrow.

(Signed) WATKINS.

Leopold Kramer En Route to America.

Leopold Kramer, concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic Society, is en route here from Europe, much to the relief of the officers of that organization, who were unable to establish communications with him, but which was accomplished by Conductor Josef Stransky just before sailing for New York. Mr. Stransky engaged passage to America for Mr. Kramer, who is due here this week.

OVIDE MUSIN'S RECITAL HALL.

BUSY SEASON AHEAD FOR NEWARK MUSICIANS.

Newark Symphony Orchestra Opens Season—Festival Chorus Rapidly Nearing the Thousand Mark—To Begin Rehearsals This Month—Musical Societies and Clubs Busy—Many Noted Artists to Be Heard—Music Notes.

Newark, N. J., October 5, 1914.

There are a few persons who believe Newark is to have a very dull season. However, there are a still larger number, so large in fact that it would be useless to try to count them, who believe this city is to have the greatest year musically that Newark has ever known. With the latter group the writer thoroughly agrees, for it is doubtful if ever in the past there were as many musical events planned, or as large a number of musicians and music lovers so enthusiastic. With a music festival under way, which promises to be the greatest event of its kind in this part of the country, with the Newark Symphony Orchestra now a permanent affair, with as large, if not larger, number of noted artists booked for concerts here than ever in the past, with the formation of a Newark Musicians' Club now actually accomplished and monthly concerts arranged for, with musical societies and clubs all reporting an increased membership, and last of all, teachers all over the city, receiving a record number of pupils for this period of the year, there is every reason to believe Newark is to have a remarkable season.

NEWARK SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA REHEARSALS.

A week ago tonight, September 28, the Newark Symphony Orchestra, Louis Ehrke, conductor, opened its second season. Several additions to the orchestra have been made, and Mr. Ehrke predicts a record year. The orchestra will continue its weekly rehearsals every Monday night.

NEWARK MUSIC FESTIVAL CHORUS GROWING FAST.

Every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday (10 a. m. until 9 p. m.) C. Mortimer Wiske and his assistants have been receiving applicants at the Lauter Building for the three day music festival which is to be given May 4, 5 and 6, 1915. The number has already reached into the hundreds and so rapidly have the names been received that Director Wiske intends beginning rehearsals the latter part of this month. The question of soloists is still being seriously considered, and negotiations are being made with some of the world's greatest artists.

Ninety thousand envelopes have been ordered by Mr. Wiske for the purpose of sending out the prospectus of the festival now being prepared. Last year, Mr. Wiske was the second largest buyer of stamps in the city of Paterson, and it is expected he will rank well among the first this year in Newark.

In next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, it is expected, the names of several of the soloists to be heard at the festival concerts next May will be announced. It is believed, too, that the place of rehearsal will also be made known.

The accompanying poster is a facsimile of the thousands of cards which have been distributed throughout Newark and the suburbs to store and factory proprietors for display in windows and on counters. Thousands of circulars of a smaller size have also been sent out in the mails.

NEWARK MUSICIANS' CLUB MEETING.

The Newark Musicians' Club will hold the first regular meeting of the season on Wednesday evening, October 14, at 41 Spruce street. An attractive program has been arranged for this occasion, and in addition to many new members, a large number of guests are expected to be present. The names of those who are to take part on the program will be published in next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Woman's Club, of Orange, announces four afternoons of music this season under the direction of the music committee, Mrs. Robert Simmon, chairman. The program will range from chamber music to an afternoon devoted to public school music.

Not quite 250 members of the police bands of Newark, Jersey City, New York and Philadelphia gave an interesting concert at Wiedenmayer's Park, Saturday, October 3.

Frances Alda, soprano, assisted by Gutia Casini, cellist, and Frank La Forge, pianist, will be the soloist at the benefit concert for the Eighth Avenue Day Nursery, at Krueger Auditorium, on Tuesday evening, October 20.

The pupils of Tom Daniel will give a vocal recital at Wallace Hall on Thursday evening, October 8.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink will be heard at a benefit concert for the Scholarship Fund of the College Women's Club of Essex County, on Wednesday evening, November 11, at Krueger Auditorium. The public sale of seats will open at Lauter's on November 1. Mrs. L. H. Robbins, 269 Ridge street, has charge of mail orders.

On October 17, Florence Mulford Hunt and Evan Williams will give a joint recital at Morristown, N. J. A full announcement of this concert will be made in next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

The Music Study Club will hold its first meeting of the season on October 22, when a miscellaneous program will be rendered.

T. W. ALLEN.

War and Music.

The Ernest Gamble Concert Party is one of the busiest touring companies. It gave one hundred and twenty concerts the past summer and the entire summer of 1915 is booked. The Gamble Concert Party will open its twelfth transcontinental tour on October 12 in New York and it will go West as far as Texas prior to the holidays.

A fourth voyage to the West Indies is contemplated after New Year's and the annual visit to the Pacific Coast will be made in March and April. The immediate line of march includes New York City, October 12; Warwick, N. Y., October 14; Grove City College, Pa., October 16; Edinboro, Pa., State Normal, October 17; Conneaut, Ohio, October 19; Gallion, Ohio, October 20; Bluffton, Ind., October 21; Whitewater, Wis., Normal School, October 23; Abingdon, Ill., October 26; Penn College, Oskaloosa, Ia., October 27; Ponca, Neb., October 29; Beatrice, Neb., October 29; Manhattan, Kan., State College, October 30.

Beethoven Society's Season.

The Beethoven Society of New York announces its season for 1914-1915. There will be five musicales, which will be given at the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf Hotel at 2 o'clock, on Saturday afternoons, November 14, December 12, January 9, February 13 and March 13. The usual regulations regarding membership and attendance are in force. There will be two evening concerts, January 22 and April 9, in the grand ballroom. The musical director is Dr. J. Christopher Marks, and the accompanist is Harry Gilbert. The soloists for this season will be Jeanne Gerville-Reache and Evan Williams.

The annual breakfast will be held in the grand ballroom, Saturday, April 24, at noon.

Carl Fique's Lecture-Recitals.

The musical season of the Brooklyn Institute was inaugurated recently by Carl Fiqué, who, in the first of a series of lecture-recitals on "The Works of Richard Strauss," presented that composer's new musical comedy, "The Rose Cavalier," in a dramatic and musical analysis.

Mr. Fiqué in his lecture said that although founded on the leading motive principle of Richard Wagner, the opera is highly melodious, and the composer presents bright Vienna waltzes with the true "Strauss' temperament.

The drama by Hoffmanstal is full of convincing logic and furnishes fine opportunity for a composer's display of genius.

The various musical phases were well illustrated by Mr. Fiqué's playing, and under his skilled hands the intricacies of the Strauss score sounded both clear-cut and orchestral, while his discourse was a happy blending of entertainment and instruction.

The "Rose Cavalier" will be followed by two symphonic poems, "Thus Spake Zarathustra" and "The Merry Pranks of Till Eulenspiegel."

SINGERS

OF NEWARK AND VICINITY

are invited to join the Chorus of 1000 Voices to be organized for the Music Festival

under the direction of

C. Mortimer Wiske

... Organization Committee ...

FOREST F. DRYDEN
HON. FRANKLIN MURPHY
MRS. JAY TEN EYCK
ALFRED L. DENNIS FRANKLIN CONKLIN
PETER CAMPBELL
DANIEL E. HERVEY
LOUIS PLAUT
THORNTON W. ALLEN
LOUISE WESTWOOD
WALLACE M. SCUDDER
REV. LYMAN WHITNEY ALLEN
JAMES S. HIGBIE
ALBERT H. ATHA
FLORENCE MURPHY
EDWARD FLANNAGAN
MISS ISABELLA SIMS
FRANK MINDNICH
ALEKANDER BERNE
FREDERICK FRELINGHUYSEN
CHARLES GRANT SHAFFER
MRS. SPAULDING FRAZER
C. W. FEIGENSPAN
GENERAL EDWIN M. HINE
MAJOR WILLIAM BRYANT
LOUIS BAMBERGER
EDWIN WICKENHOEFFER
GEORGE KUHN

Application for membership can be made at Lauter's, 593 Broad St., Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 10 A. M. until 10 P. M.

Membership Dues Are Only 10c. a Week

YVONNE DE TREVILLE PICKING THE JAPANESE FLOWERS. "NOT DOGS IN CLOVER, BUT PRETTY NEAR IT." THE AUTUMN FLOWERS ARE VERY BEAUTIFUL IN YVONNE DE TREVILLE'S GARDEN.

In a Garden.

Yvonne de Tréville's garden is furnishing the coloratura soprano with an abundant supply of autumn cheer these days. Mlle. de Tréville is a great lover of the Japanese beauties, which the camera caught her in the act of picking. This artist says that the one picture with the dog shows not "dogs in clover, but pretty near it."

Mlle. de Tréville's New York recital occurs at Aeolian Hall, Friday afternoon, November 6.

Mlle. de Tréville, herself a Southern woman, in order to be of as much aid as she can in these critical times, will, together with her accompanist, wear cotton gowns at her costume recitals. These home product costumes will be particularly in evidence at her New York, Brooklyn and Washington recitals, as well as on her Southern tour, which will follow her Northern appearances.

Deverell School in New York This Season.

The Deverell School for Girls, which is situated at 9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, just next door to the American Embassy, has necessarily had to be closed on account of the unsettled conditions abroad. Frances E. Deverell, the principal, returned to America some time ago, and found that her pupils were by no means willing to lose their winter's study and association with their gifted teacher on account of the European war, and Miss Deverell has been induced to take back a number of her older pupils. She writes that she has returned all registration fees paid in by younger pupils, before the war was declared and advised these younger pupils to go into a good American school for this winter and to come to her next winter in Paris.

During this season Miss Deverell will settle in New York and have with her only pupils who specialize in music and the arts. She has engaged a Parisian French Institutrice and chaperon, who will live in the school. As was the custom in the Paris school, French will be spoken at all times in the home, and the students will attend the production of the French classics and also the modern French plays which the French Dramatic Society puts out every season. The exact location of this home has not been decided upon, but it will be central and will be announced in the near future.

Miss Deverell will also have a studio in Carnegie Hall for outside pupils residing in New York and vicinity. She already has several pupils for this class who studied with her in Paris last season and are anxious to continue along the lines which Philipp, the famous teacher of Miss Deverell, advocates.

FRANCES E. DEVERELL.

Miss Deverell has a testimonial from Philipp which reads as follows:

Paris, September 2, 1914.

Frances E. Deverell, who has been teaching under my direction, is an artist of talent and a teacher very distinguished. I therefore recommend her most highly, I. PHILIPP,
Professor au Conservatoire du Paris;
Membre du Conseil superior d'enseignement;
Chevalier de la Legion d'honneur.

Reuben Davies' Many Bookings.

Reuben Davies, the young American concert pianist, has secured a number of engagements, and will appear in Florence, Kan., October 9; Hiawatha, Kan., October 21; Horton, Kan., October 23; Falls City, Neb., October 30, and Everest, Kan., January 8 1915. Other engagements without settled dates are in St. Joseph, Mo.; Kansas City, Mo.; Mound City, Mo.; King City, Mo.; Marshall, Mo.; Alexander, Ia.; Alburn, Neb.; Newton, Kan.; Valley Falls, Kan.; Hiawatha, Kan. (return engagement); Falls City (return engagement) and Corning, Kan.

Cincinnati College of Music.

The College of Music will present its usual series of concerts by the college chorus and orchestra, and rehearsals have already begun for the first of these events. The orchestra has a number of new members and the material is being praised by Johannes Miersch, director. Not only have the violins been considerably strengthened, but there is also a good section of cellos and wind instruments. The rehearsals will continue to be held on Thursday afternoons. The chorus, under the direction of Louis Victor Saar, held its first meeting last Wednesday. Many of the former members of the chorus were present and a number of new applicants enrolled in the voice department of the college were also accepted, and Mr. Saar intends to present several interesting works at the first concert.

Walter Vaughan, tenor, is preparing for several recitals to be given in Ohio very shortly. On October 16 Mr. Vaughan sings at Columbus and at Defiance on October 7. The success of this young singer is another tribute to the training and development of latent talent in this vicinity and reflects proper credit upon those responsible for such accomplishments. Last spring he was in much demand for oratorio and received warm praise wherever he was heard, even though associated in most instances with artists of international renown. Mr. Vaughan's development already has exceeded the expectations of his most sanguine advisers at the College of Music, and many expectantly await his next appearance with the Springer Opera Club, where he may show his histrionic as well as his vocal attainments.

Visanska Returns.

Daniel Visanska, the New York and Philadelphia violinist and teacher, sailed from Naples on September 14 on the steamship Santa Anna, which arrived in this country Tuesday, September 29. Mr. Visanska writes that he has had a very pleasant sojourn in Italy, but is glad to be back in America and is ready to resume his duties as a pedagogue in Philadelphia and New York, which bid fair to fill his entire time.

Thuel Burnham Arrives from Europe.

Thuel Burnham, the pianist, arrived in New York, on the steamship Vaderland of the Red Star Line, on October 2. Mr. Burnham will remain for a few days in New York and will then leave for the Middle West, which he is to tour this season under the management of Harry Culbertson. He will also be heard in the Far West, and a comprehensive tour of the South is being booked for January. The date of Mr. Burnham's New York recital has not yet been fixed.

Waghalter a German.

Ignatz Waghalter, the Polish conductor at the Berlin-Charlottenburg Opera, is reported to have become a German subject.

FELIX FOX PIANIST
WESLEYAN BUILDING
581 Boylston Street - - Boston

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address, THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

ALBERTINA RASCH

Première Danseuse Century Opera Company

PRESS OPINIONS:

One other figure to stand forth was Albertina Rasch, whose dancing and pantomime were marvels of witchery and grace. —Evening Mail.

The dancing of the prima ballerina, Albertina Rasch, was worthy of special words of praise.—New York Tribune.

With her gracefulness and fairy-like agility of her toe dancing and her power of mimicry Albertina Rasch, the Century Opera première danseuse, exercised a magnetic power over her audience.—New Yorker Staats-Zeitung.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Jeffrey C. Harris is at the head of the music department t the Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa. With Mr. Harris re associated Ingeborg Svendsen Tune, teacher of voice nd organ, director of the girls' glee club, and Selma Plagge, a pupil of Rudolph Ganz.

V. Mudrock, director of the Mudrock School of Music, Nashville, Tenn., will open a branch course of study at Adams, Tenn. The course will include piano, voice, violin nd theoretical subjects.

Emanuel D. King, of New York, will fill the place left acant by Joseph Maerz, in the College of Fine Arts, Syrause University, Syracuse, N. Y. Raymond S. Wilson, formerly head of the piano department of the Skidmore School of Arts at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., is also a new ddition to the faculty of the same college.

Louis Gerhardt is to become head of the voice department of Des Moines College. He is an alumnus of the college, having graduated under Dr. M. L. Bartlett. Mr. Gerhardt will direct the music of the First Baptist Church, Des Moines, as last season.

William S. Merrihew is now at the head of the vocal department at St. Joseph's Seminary, Troy, N. Y. He will continue his classes on his usual days in Schenectady, N. Y.

Frances Wright, for several years supervisor of music in the Des Moines, Iowa, public schools, has resigned. She will, it is reported, take up similar work in Los Angeles, Cal. William C. White will succeed Miss Wright. Mr. White comes from the Northwestern University, where he was director of the public school music department.

Mary Goode Royal, of Dayton, Ohio, has opened new studios in the Bimm Building, of that city.

Under the direction of Miriam H. Weaver, the regular weekly recital of the Wittenberg Conservatory and Springfield School of Music, Springfield, Ohio, was given recently. Catherine Bauer, Marie Hance, Hazel Inskeep and Rachel Milligan, pupils, furnished the program.

Wm. B. Downing, of Ottumwa, Iowa, has been appointed head of the vocal department of the University of Kansas at Lawrence, to fill the position made vacant by C. Edward Hubach, who has become dean of the School of Music at Redlands College, Cal. Mr. Downing, who is a graduate of Drake University School of Music, is a pupil of De Reszke, Oscar Seagle and J. Watkins Mills.

Dayton, Ohio, teachers who have resumed teaching are: Charles Kalman Holstein, violin; Ella Houghtelin and Marie Hammer, piano; John Finley Williamson, vocal.

Marie Hughes, harpist, and Helen Hughes, violinist, of Salt Lake City, are on an Eastern trip.

Alice G. Sutherland has opened a studio in Buffalo, N. Y. She was a pupil of Leschetizky in Vienna. Other pupils of the Vienna maestro, who are teaching in Buffalo, are Warren Case and Ethel Newcomb (Leschetizky's assistant for many years). Miss Newcomb is to appear with the Hambourg Trio, in its series of Buffalo concerts.

Theodore Beresina, an Austrian violinist, was the assisting soloist at the request program given in the Salt Lake City Mormon Tabernacle recently. J. J. McClellan rendered popular and classical music on the organ.

Arthur Leroy Tebbs has returned to Dayton, Ohio, where he has opened a studio. Mr. Tebbs will have charge of the music in Steele and Stivers high schools and is looking forward to holding a music festival at the close of the school year.

Susan Tomkins, violinist, and Grace Hoffman, soprano, were soloists with Sousa's Band at the recent Pittsburgh Exposition.

Dora Kummerfeldt, a pupil of Adolph Liesegang, of Cleveland, Ohio, is said to have signed a three-year contract with the Shuberts.

Marguerite Kortlander has returned to Grand Rapids, Mich., from New York, where she was a pupil at the Virgil Conservatory. Miss Kortlander is to be at the head of the children's piano department in the Malek School of Music, Grand Rapids.

Charles Percy Hall has been engaged as organist at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Hall was formerly choirmaster of St. Martin's Church, Ashton-on-Mersey, England.

Gaylord Yost, violinist-composer, of the Conservatory of Music, Indianapolis, Ind., wrote a number of compositions for voice and violin during the summer. Of his three violin numbers, "Farfalle," "Negro Dance" and "Poem Erotique," which are to appear soon, one is said to be dedicated to Arthur Hartmann and another to Albert Spalding.

German singers were present from every part of the State of New Jersey, when the singing festival of the New Jersey Saengerbund was held in Trenton recently.

George Klass, formerly second concert master of the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra, has accepted a similar position in the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. He will continue to live and teach in St. Paul.

Emil R. Keuchen, teacher of piano and organ, has begun his fall classes in Buffalo, N. Y.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

H. T. Fagerstrom, a St. Paul pianist, has been made a member of the faculty of the St. Paul branch of Minnesota College. He is at the head of the piano department.

Klotz-Hoyle Canadian Tour Canceled.

Maude Klotz, soprano, and Dorothy Hoyle, violinist, are two American artists whose plans have been directly interfered with by the present war in Europe.

DOROTHY HOYLE.

MAUDE KLOTZ.

Miss Klotz and Miss Hoyle, with their accompanist, Walter Kicsewether, were engaged last spring by Albert E. Davies, the Toronto manager, for a Canadian tour that embraced the cities of Toronto, Hamilton, London, Galt, Stratford, Oshawa, Woodstock, Peterborough, Lindsay, Guelph, St. Thomas, Chatham, Collingwood, Owen Sound, Kingston, Brockville, Ottawa, etc. The tour was to open in Galt on October 17, but despite the fact that Mr. Davies holds contracts with local societies and clubs in the various cities, the Canadian conditions are such that all concerned feel that a tour would prove disastrous at this time, and it has been postponed until spring.

In writing of Canadian conditions at the present time, Mr. Davies states that in the provincial towns the "air is full" of benefit performances of every description by local volunteer talent, and as the loyal Canadians are going deep in their pockets to support and subscribe to them, it will take a few months for things to become normal again and to revive their interest in visiting attractions.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Caroll Badham Preyer Reopens Studio.

Caroll Badham Preyer, the vocal authority known to the musical public of Berlin, Paris and New York, reopened her New York studio on October 1. Mme. Preyer returned from Europe recently and in a letter written to the MUSICAL COURIER shortly after her arrival, she says:

I arrived on the Noordam from Holland, very thankful to be in this country. I had started to Lugano, Switzerland, having several important engagements there, and expected to go from there to Tremezzo, Lake Como, for the season which begins the 15th of August; but alas, no trains left Holland! And no boats left Rotterdam that week! It was impossible to hear from friends and pupils who were expecting me in Lugano and Tremezzo, so completely were we cut off from the outside world during that week in which Holland feared an attack from Germany or England.

Upon her arrival in the United States, Mme. Preyer went at once to Kent, Conn., where she enjoyed a well earned rest before returning to New York.

Presser Home Opening.

On Saturday, September 26, occurred the opening of the Presser Home for retired music teachers. This institution, which is situated on Johnson and Jefferson streets, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., fills a long felt need, as can readily be understood from its name. The board of directors includes Charles Heber Clark, Hugh A. Clarke, James Francis Cooke, Herman L. Duhring, H. Louis Duhring, Jr., William E. Hetzell, Francis S. McIlhenny, Theodore Presser and John T. Windrim. The home will be in charge of a capable superintendent, Mrs. L. B. Pierce having been chosen to fill this office.

The musical numbers rendered at the opening of this home were by David Bispham and Henri Scott, and with two such able exponents of the vocal art, it is needless to say that their portion of the program proved most enjoyable.

Clarence Eddy to Play in Kansas City.

Leading organists of Kansas City have formed themselves into an organization known as the Kansas City Association of Organists.

Aside from a series of recitals by local organists, one is also to be given by outside talent.

Clarence Eddy will be the first to appear in the latter series, which will open October 16, in the Grand Avenue Auditorium. Mr. Eddy also heads the list of honorary members.

Lawrence W. Robbins is the president of the association.

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Jenny Dufau Works Amid the Sound of Rifles.

From Alsatia, near the French border, where fighting has been going on all around her native village of Saulxures, Jenny Dufau sent to her manager in Chicago, Harry Culbertson, a most interesting letter relating her experiences and containing this remarkable passage:

You will think me hardhearted and selfish when I tell you that in the midst of the grief which surrounds me I am studying and preparing my programs! And yet, if you were here, shut up from the world, without any news from your brothers in the army, without news from the world, only knowing that terrible things are going on around you, and that it is impossible to bring the slightest relief to those who suffer, you would understand that in this painful seclusion only work—one's dear and beloved work—can help one to endure and prevent one from indulging in maddening thoughts. So, in spite of all, I will be able to present something new in the line of ancient French songs, Italian popular chansons and unedited American songs. If nothing happens, I shall sail on the Noordam and be there in time to begin my work. May it help me to forget all the sufferings I have seen!

A few weeks ago, at sunset, I was singing with open windows; all was quiet and peaceful in the village down in the valley. The women (you know the men are almost all in the army) were going about their work much as usual; everything seemed to breathe peace. I felt somewhat relieved and sang, indulging in the happy dream that the old world was going to sleep and forget under the great wings of peace, just like the hamlet lying before my eyes. Suddenly a peculiar rattling noise mingled with the notes of my piano; I tried not to be afraid, not to believe, to sing on; but it became stronger, quicker and threatening! I couldn't mistake the voice of the rifles, which, unhappily, I know now so well; rushed to the window; the wooded hill opposite our house was all alive with rattling shots and with ill-looking small clouds of smoke! For quite a time I didn't touch my piano again; I had not the courage, and we were all so busy helping the poor people whose houses had been damaged and wrecked. When, after days and days, I went back to my piano room, the window was still open; the wind had scattered my poor music all around, and the room looked like a battlefield. My heart failed me; I sat down on the scattered sheets and cried like a child. But since then we have been enjoying comparative quiet and safety, and I have gone to work again. . .

Miss Dufau's manager is happy over the news that she has arrived in America, having booked her for a concert tour all over the country, covering almost the entire season.

NEVADA VAN der VEER Mezzo Contralto REED MILLER Tenor

Oratorio :: Concerts :: Recitals

Individually and Jointly

Address, 749 West End Avenue New York City Or Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone

A. CARBONE

MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING

(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)

Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"

School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application

Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References. AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Madame OTTILIE METZGER

THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)

and THEODOR LATTERMANN

THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)

Who are now singing in the Hamburg Opera will arrive in America early in February

Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio

Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates

GODOWSKY

Will be in America this Season

Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

KNABE PIANO USED

Douglas Powell Opens New York Studio.

Douglas Powell, the baritone, has opened a studio in New York at 448 Madison avenue. For the past six years Mr. Powell has been a member of the faculty of the College of Music, Cincinnati, Ohio, but wishing to enlarge his field of activity, has come to open a studio in the metropolitan city.

The following communication shows the esteem in which Mr. Powell was held at the Cincinnati college:

New London, Conn., August 8, 1914.

Douglas Powell, 30 West Fifty-first Street, New York City:

My Dear Mr. Powell: As president of the Cincinnati College of Music, I desire to express my sincere regret of your having severed your connection with the college. However, as you have decided to pursue your work in a larger field, I want to wish you a continuance of the success which was yours as a member of the faculty of the college.

With kindest regards, I remain, Sincerely,

(Signed) Julius Fleischmann.

Below are given the names of a few of Mr. Powell's pupils, who are making a name for themselves in the vocal field:

James Harrod, leading tenor with Dippel; Cecelia Hoffman, in "High Jinks"; Clara Loring, in "The Only Girl"; Laura Radcliff, in "Lady of Luxury"; Elizabeth Reynolds in incidental music in "The Dragon's Claw"; Ed. Grimes in "Oh! Oh! Delphine"; Vernon Fitzpatrick, in "Dancing Around"; William Adams and Leo Ullrich, in vaudeville.

New Composition by T. Tertius Noble.

"Rejoice Today With One Accord," an unaccompanied anthem for Thanksgiving Day or general use; words by the Rev. Sir H. W. Baker, Bart.; music by T. Tertius Noble, has just been published by the H. W. Gray Company, of New York.

This is a work which demands the power and breadth of tone of a full chorus for its success, and it is also impossible for a quartet of voices to sing it, as there are several passages in which the sopranos, the altos, the tenors, and the basses are divided to make five, six, and seven part harmony. It is a composition, moreover, which cannot be rashly attempted by any but the properly trained choir that are accustomed to counterpoint and chromatic harmony. The range demanded of the voices is also extensive. But when this most musicianly and brilliantly written anthem is sung with proper spirit and with breadth its effect cannot but be imposing, dignified, and elevating.

T. Tertius Noble has happily combined the modern harmonic style with the polyphony of the old masters. The upper voice is invariably a melody, and the contrapuntal writing is employed only to enrich the accompanying vocal parts.

George Sweet Is Busy.

George Sweet's time is being rapidly filled up with new as well as old pupils. Mabel Beddoe, one of Canada's favorite contraltos, has just returned from her native home where she has been busy in concert and recital work throughout the summer. Paul Parks, of Ohio, the possessor of a fine baritone voice, began lessons some time ago with Mr. Sweet, who predicts for him a great future.

Visitors to Mr. Sweet's studio are always welcome. He is glad to have any one come in and hear his pupils' lessons at any time, believing that this is a good thing for the pupils as it gives them the confidence necessary for their future public work.

George Hamlin Will Locate in New York.

George Hamlin, the tenor, who, as has already been stated in these columns, returned to America recently, announces his intention of settling in New York this winter. He will be busy as usual singing in concert, oratorio, and opera, but will also find time for coaching, with which work he is eminently successful.

At the fifty-nine concerts given during the past summer in the various Portland, Ore., parks, 112,650 persons are reported to have been in attendance at a cost of about eight cents a person.

RUDOLF BERGER

FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company

Available for Concerts May and June, 1915

Management: R. E. JOHNSTON

1451 Broadway - - New York

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

New music recently received from the Oliver Ditson Company, of Boston, includes a great quantity of compositions of all kinds for various voices and instruments. The vocal numbers are: "Mass in F," by Joseph Concone; "Sabbath Morning Service for the Synagogue, According to the Union Prayer Book," by James H. Rogers; "Hakon the Strong," ballad for men's voices, by Gustave Lazarus; "Why Does the Azure Deck the Sky?" song by F. Morris Class; two songs, "Didst Thou Not Love Me?" and "When the Last Day Is Ended," by Arthur H. Ryder; "The Song of the Timber Trail," by Stanley R. Avery; three songs, "Foreboding," "The Land Immortal." "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes," by William T. Miller; nine songs, "Greeting," "Hills o' Skye," "In the Garden," "Just as It Used to Do," "Kerry," "Love in Spring," "On the Sea," "A Rose of Yester Eve," "Summer of the Heart," by Victor Harris; five songs, "A Sigh," "Allah," "Come to Me," "I Dreamed and Wept a-Dreaming," "In Dreams," by A. Walter Kramer; eight songs, "A Wish," "Could I Forget," "The Heart o' Ye," "My Day,' "Such a Li'l Fellow," "Thinking of You," "Together," "To You," by William Dichmont; five songs, "Blue Are Her Eyes," "The Boat of My Lover," "Green Branches," "Hushing Song," "Once Only, Love," by Winter Watts; three songs, "Love and Life," "Enchanted," "Longing," by Egon Pütz; four songs, "A Sweetheart in Every Port" (sailors' song), "A Token," "Entreaty," "Elusive Love," by Clarence C. Robinson; three songs, "A Sea Song," "Expectancy," "Thoughts of You," by William Stickles; "Heart of Hearts" (cor cordium), song by Charles Fonteyn Manney; "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes," song by William Arms Fisher; five songs, "The Little Day Star," "The Moon and the Star," "A Petition," "To One I Love," "Rose Immortal," by Louis Victor Saar; "Mistress Rosebud," song by George Chapman; "I Know a Little Rose," song by Frank Howard Warner; three songs, "A Road Tune," "Even Song," "From Oversea," by William Spencer Johnson; eleven songs, "Another Day," "Bend Low, O Dusky Night," "How Shall I Love You?" "Icelandic Love Song," "Lullaby," "O Violet, Sweet Violet," "The Primrose," "A Rose Song," "Sweetest Things," "When I Am Dead, My Dearest," by Ernest R. Kroeger; "Sing a Song of Roses," song by Fay Foster; "Springtime of Youth," waltz song by Charles Eggett; "Where the Purple Heather Blooms," song by Frederic Knight Logan; three songs, "Hush Thee, Baby," "If I Could Be a Child Again," "While Thou Art Mine," by W. H. Peterhans; "Oh, That Summer Smiled for Aye," song by William Davies; "Lullaby," song by Ed. Jakobowski; six sacred songs, "Faith," "Jesus, Shepherd of the Sheep," "More Love to Thee, O Christ," "Rest," "Something for Thee," "The Ninety and Nine," by Lillian Taitt Sheldon; "Sylvelin," song by Christian Sinding; thirty-one songs in the First Series of Sacred Songs, each song published separately in sheet form; twenty songs in the Second Series of Sacred Songs, each song published separately in sheet form; five sacred songs, "Abide With Me," "As Christ Upon the Cross," "Jesus Calls Us," "O Jesu Crucified for Man," "There Is One Way, and Only One," by Frederic Field Bullard; thirteen sacred songs, "At the Gate," "Before the Throne of Glory," "The Comforting Christ," "The Eternal City," "The Heavenly Voice," "Here I See Thee Face to Face," "The Hills of God," "Jesus, Word of God Incarnate," "O Son of the Carpenter," "Rejoice, Jerusalem, and Sing," "The Song of Eternity," "The Strength of the Hills," "The Wondrous Cross," by George B. Nevin; twenty-four songs in the First Series of Arias from Oratorios and Cantatas; several series of opera songs, including all the most famous and popular arias, romances, songs, from the great operatic composers of all schools; an extended list of French songs; twenty-eight sacred songs by Charles Gounod; twenty-two opera songs by Charles Gounod; a very long list of songs by the composers of England, with a distinctive title page marked English Songs; eighteen songs by Franz Liszt; eighteen songs by Tschaikowsky, invariably with English words and an alternative version of either French, German or Italian; twenty-six songs by Robert Schumann, with English and German texts; five series of lists of vocal duets of all schools and periods.

For the organ there is a generous supply of original works as well as of numerous arrangements by James H. Rogers, A. Guilmant, R. G. Custard, Dr. C. W. [illegible], Harvey B. Gaul, and others. The first series contains Prelude and fugue in E minor, by J. S. Bach; "Cradle Song," by Reginald Barrett; Communion in G, by Edouard Batiste; minuet in G, by Beethoven; arioso, by Léo Delibes; melody in E, by William Faulkes; berceuse in A flat, by J. F. Frysinger; air a la bourée, by Handel; "Wiegenlied," by F. Flaxington Harker; andante commodo, by Fini Henriques; canzonetta in G minor, and melody in E flat, by Tschaikowsky; "Sunset," by Alfred Tofft; prelude

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. —— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street. - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used in C sharp minor, by Anton Vodorinski; pastorella in A flat, by Herbert W. Wareing; meditation in C, by John A. West; postlude in C, by Carl Paige Wood.

The second series of organ works consists of: Romance, by Claude Debussy; "Humoreske," by Anton Dvorák; berceuse in G, intermezzo in C, pastorale in E, postlude in A, and scherzo in D minor, by William Faulkes; andantino in G minor, verset in F minor, by César Franck; "Liebeslied," nocturne in G minor, serenade in A, by F. Flaxington Harker; "Morning Song," by A. Walter Kramer; "Elegie," by Jules Massenet; lamento in B minor, postlude in C, by Carl C. Müller; "The Swan," by Saint-Saëns; melody in A flat, by Sigismund Stojowski; nocturne, by R. Spaulding Stoughton; reverie, by Richard Strauss; andante cantabile, from fifth symphony, and song without words in F, by Tschaikowsky; pastorale in G, by Paul Wachs; "Cradle Song," and "Dreams," by Wagner.

Another collection of organ compositions and arrangements consists of the following: "Hymn of Nuns," offertories in C, E flat, F, G, by Lefébvre-Wély; adoration in F, fanfare in D, finale in D, four offertories, by J. Lemmens; larghetto in A flat, offertory in C, by Alexandre Leprévost; adagio in D flat, andante religioso in C, by Franz Liszt; fantasie de concert, "O Sanctissima," by Friedrich Lux; adagio from first organ sonata, andante, finale from sixth organ sonata, andante and religioso from fourth organ sonata, notturno from "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Song Without Words," third organ sonata, by Mendelssohn; allegretto in A, andantino in F, andante in A flat, canon in F sharp, "Chant du Berger," "Christmas" pastorale in G, idylle in B flat, postludium in D, prelude in A minor, prelude in F, by Gustav Merkel; "Marche du Sacre," from "Le Prophète," by Meyerbeer; solemn march in F, by Mozart; "Loreley," by Jos. Nesvadba; grand study in C, by S. Neukomm; andante in A flat, by F. I. Pachaly; "The Star Spangled Banner," concert variations, by J. K. Paine; fantasia in C, processional march in G, by C. E. Reed; entr'acte from "King Manfred," by Carl Reinecke; four studies in sustained notes, by C. H. Rink; "Air du Dauphin," by J. Roeckel, paraphrased by W. T. Best; offertory in G, by G. Saint-George; verset in G, by Théo Salomé; præludium in E flat, by C. Schaab; gavotte from suite, op. 41, by Xaver Scharwenka; exercises in pedal playing, by F. Schneider; adagio in E flat, air from "Lazarus," by Schubert; "Alla Marcia," canon in B minor, prelude from op. 56, by Schumann; andante in G, by W. Schütze; festival postlude in G, by Fredk. N. Shackley; mélodrame de "Piccolino," by E. Guiraud, transcribed by Oliver T. Sherwood; triumphal march in F, by A. M. Shuey; choral variations in E flat, march in G, twenty-four short and easy pieces in two volumes, by Henry Smart; "Old Folks at Home," concert variations, by Wenham Smith; adagio espressivo, easy prelude for soft stops, "Jerusalem the Golden" variations, by William Spark; larghetto in A, by L. Spohr; andante and variations, fugue on "God Save the Queen," grande offertoire de concert in C, "La Meditation" offertory for vox humana, "La Prière," sonata in F, three offertories, variations on "Adeste Fideles," variations on "Auld Lang Syne," variations on "Nuremberg," variations on "Pleyel's Hymn," variations on "Russian Hymn," variations on "Sicilian Hymn," by Eugene Thayer; posthumous variations in C, by Louis Thiele; pastorale in G, prelude and fugue in D, service prelude in D, by J. Eliot Trowbridge; canon in G flat, finale in G, five short preludes, melody in G, by Everett E. Truette; "Night Song," by Jean Vogt; adagio in B flat, adagio in G, andante con moto, andante in A, "Fest Intrade" in D, by Dr. Wilh. Volckmar; wedding processional from "Lohengrin," by Wagner; installation march in F, by Frank E. Ward; barcarolle from "Oberon," by Weber, transcribed by Batiste; march from third organ symphony, by C. M. Widor; scene militaire in C, by H. D. Wilkins.

Novelties at Bloch's New York Recital.

Alexander Bloch, the violinist, who has just returned from Germany, will give his second annual New York recital at Aeolian Hall, on the evening of Wednesday, October 28. Mr. Bloch's program will contain many numbers entirely new to New York. On October 16 Mr. Bloch and Frederic Martin will give a joint recital at Wellesley College.

OBITUARY.

David M. Levett.

David M. Levett, a well known New York music teacher, died here last week at his home, 112 East Eighty-fourth street, aged seventy years. He studied music in this country and in France and Germany, and graduated from the Leipsic Conservatory in 1871. Thereafter he taught in New Brunswick, Chicago, New York, Berlin (Stern's Conservatory), etc. He also composed, among his works being "Harlequinade," "Memories," "Romance" and "Serenade." He is survived by his wife, who was Kate de Jonge, of Paris.

The Volks Opera of Budapest now is under joint management with the Royal Opera of that city.

FOR SALE

WILL SELL genuine Italian violin (Albani). Especially adapted for solos. Month trial. Expert examination invited. Paul Dirks, 311 E. Eighty-sixth street, New York.

WANTED

ORGANIST WANTED—By prominent New York department store, for the winter season; state terms and references. Address "B," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

TO LET

TO SUBLET—Beautifully furnished studio for half days or evenings. Best central location. Reference required. Address "PROFESSIONAL," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

CENTURY OPERA HOUSE
Central Park West, at 62d & 63d Sts., New York City
'Phone Columbus 8800
SEASON 1914-15 — Grand Opera in English and Original Languages. SEATS ON SALE TEN WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
CENTURY LYCEUM AND CONCERT HALL (In the Century Opera House) — Available on Rentals for CONCERTS, RECITALS, THEATRICALS, ETC.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

JOHN B. MILLER, TENOR
624 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Emily Church BENHAM Pianist
Concerts Recitals Lessons
Studio: 1299 Bryden Road, Columbus, Ohio

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone Ravenswood 2319 849 Lakeside Place Chicago

SUSANNAH MACAULAY
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
Composer of "Allah Is Great," "The Butterfly," "Ave Maria"

CARL BERNTHALER

Conductor
PITTSBURGH FESTIVAL ORCHESTRA

Rita RICARDI PIANIST
Accompanist & Teacher
230 RIVERSIDE DRIVE, N. Y.
Phone 3790 Riverside. Interviews only by Appointment

THADDEUS RICH
Concertmaster Philadelphia Orchestra

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID HARPIST
THE FOREMOST WOMAN HARPIST IN AMERICA
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX
CONTRALTO BOSTON THEATRE OPERA COMPANY,
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Ave., New York

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa

FRANZ KOHLER
VIOLINIST—TEACHER
Conductor Erie Symphony Orchestra

MORRIS GABRIEL WILLIAMS
BARITONE
Director
Apollo Club and Erie Festival Chorus

DIRECTORS OF KOHLER-WILLIAMS SCHOOL OF MUSIC AND ART
Majestic Theatre Building :: :: :: :: Erie, Pa.

TEACHERS' LOOSE LEAF JOURNAL-LEDGER
A handy Account Book (pocket size) for teachers. The plan provides for the entry of a lesson any day of any month of any year. It provides for the posting of lesson terms; the entry of term payments for either private or class lessons; the charging of music or books and credits for payments. A complete journal and ledger all on one leaf. Packages of 50 sheets, 20c.; 100 sheets, 40c. The Binders are furnished in full morocco or imitation leather, and are equipped with six rings.
Price in full morocco, $1.10 Price in imitation leather (Texoderm) .85
CLAYTON F. SUMMY COMPANY, Publishers 64 E. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

"You'll Like Gambleized Music"
IT'S "BOUND" TO GIVE SATISFACTION —— IT "COSTS" NO MORE

We supply Hinged, any octavo or sheet music published
Music sent on selection without any guarantee as to the amount to be kept.
Write for our liberal On Sale plan.
GAMBLE HINGED MUSIC CO.,
General Music Dealers. 65-67 E. Van Buren St., Chicago.

LEEFSON-HILLE
CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
MAURITS LEEFSON, Director — PHILADELPHIA, PA.

HENIOT LEVY PIANIST
Kimball Hall, CHICAGO

Mrs. HALL McALLISTER
TEACHER OF SINGING
Musical Management
407 Pierce Building - - Boston

Mrs. MINNIE M. McCONNELL
Voice Culture and Coach
McConnell Vocal Trio
204 Cathedral Parkway, (W. 110th St.) New York
Phone: River 6439

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 9517

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

OLIVE KLINE
SOPRANO
Management: Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

MME. KARWESKA
ITALIAN GRAND OPERA
M. Southern Russia. Concerts de la Grande Noblisse, St. Petersburg
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.

EDWARD H.
FREEMAN
SOLO PIANIST
Director of the Conservatory, Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
19 OCT 1914

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 15 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1803

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
19 OCT 1914

Conductor and Some of the Soloists at the Maine Music Festival, Held at Bangor, October 1, 2, 3 and Portland, October 5, 6, 7

1—ARTHA WILLISTON, SOPRANO. 2—FLORENCE AUSTIN, VIOLINIST. 3—MARCELLA CRAFT, SOPRANO. 4—CUYLER BLACK, TENOR. 5—WILLIAM R. CHAPMAN, ORGANIZER AND DIRECTOR OF THE MAINE MUSIC FESTIVAL. 6—SALVATORE GIORDANO, TENOR. 7—FLORENCE OTIS, SOPRANO (Photo by Brandenburg Studio). 8—NINA MORGANA, COLORATURA SOPRANO. 9—HELENA TARDIVEL, PIANIST.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK MISS SUSAN S.
B O I C E.
VOCAL STUDIOS.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

E. PRESSON MILLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

HATTIE CLAPPER MORRIS,
TEACHER OF SINGING IN ALL BRANCHES.
1730 Broadway, Cor. 55th St.
Telephone, 4117 Columbus.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN,
Studio: 70 Carnegie Hall.
Telephone, Columbus 5946.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coacb for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE-PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction Telephone
Theory of Music 7280 Scbuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham s son 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring W Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New Yo
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLEI
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City.

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th S

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FO
VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AN
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Stre
Complete musical education given to studen from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MRS. J. HARRISON-IRVINE,
PIANISTE—ACCOMPANISTE.
Instruction in Piano, Teaching, Accompanyin Coaching of Operatic Roles. Concert, Oratori Sight Singing and Reading Classes, Harmony.
1013 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Phone, Columbus 135

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza.

DOUGLAS POWELL
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Special attention paid to
Concert Breathing and Tone Placement.
Studio: 448 Madison Ave., Phone Plaza 5722.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 15. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1803.

LONDON BENT ON SUPPORTING MUSIC SEASON.

Every Effort Being Made in English Capital to Maintain Tonal Activity—Orchestras and Choral Societies to Give Their Regular Series—Brighton Festival Will Be Held

London, England, September 25, 1914.

One cannot express the present musical situation in London better than in the words of a writer in last Sunday's Observer, who says: "There is evidently going to be a definite attempt to establish a musical season in the coming autumn. Of course, the many concerts that are principally concerned with advertising the concert giver and are of no artistic significance are not likely to be a feature of the season, but well established societies and orchestras are showing an inclination to resume their activities and it is to be hoped that the response will be adequate."

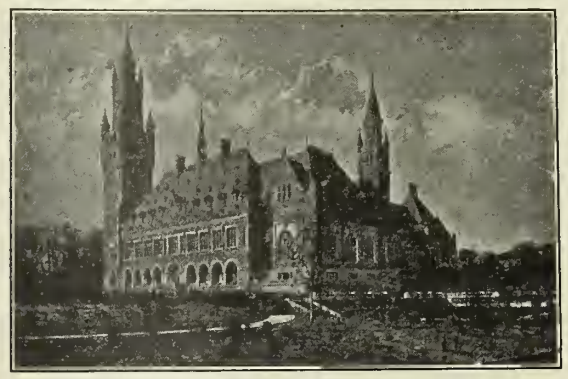
There is the kernel of the whole matter, "It is to be hoped that the response will be adequate." On that, of course, will depend the success of the efforts which are to be made.

Orchestral Prospects.

The London Symphony Orchestra intends to carry out its season as far as possible, although the war has compelled it to change the program of conductors as first announced. The present arrangements are that the Russian, Wassili Safonoff, shall conduct the first three concerts (the season begins on October 26); the Belgian conductor, Henri Verbeugghen, one concert in December; Emil Mlynarski one in January, and Thomas Beecham one in February. Soloists announced so far are a violinist named Albert Sammons, who will oblige with the Elgar concerto—we are very patriotic, even in our music nowadays—Vera Brock, Arthur Rubenstein and Percy Grainger, pianists, the latter of whom will play the concerto by Frederic Delius.

At Queen's Hall, Sir Henry Wood will begin his annual series of symphony concerts on October 17, even before the Promenades are finished, as these extend until October 24. I understand that Landon Ronald and his new symphony orchestra are to be in the field as well, but have not happened to see one of their announcements.

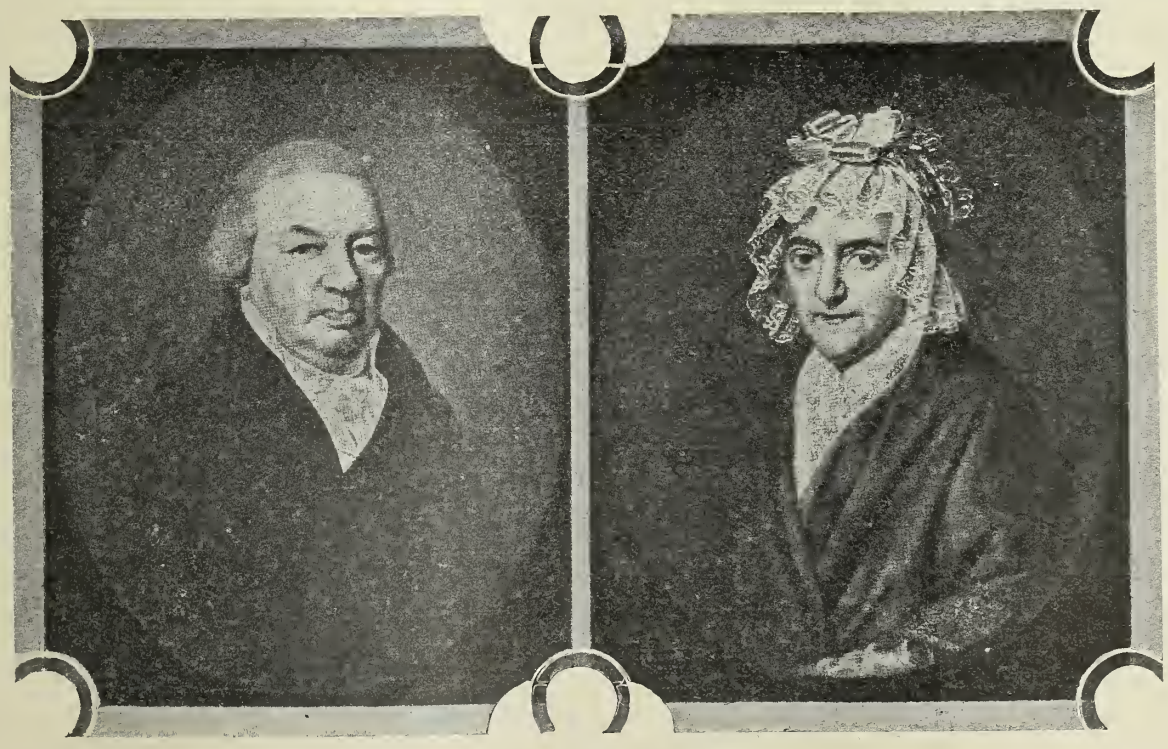
Choral Music.



The choral societies — that mainstay of British music—will not be idle in the metropolis either. The Royal Choral Society—as Philip Hale once said in speaking of Boston's sacred "Handel and Haydn Society"—will now buckle down to the tremendous task of preparing the umpty-umpth performance of "Elijah." On November 26 we are promised the Verdi "Requiem," and the rest of the season will bring forth "The Messiah," "Hiawatha," "The Dream of Gerontius" and Bach's B minor mass, with an extra concert of Christmas carols and other Yuletide music in December.

The Bach Choir, Dr. Hugh P. Allen, conductor, intends to carry out its season, which will include performances of Vaugh Williams' "A Sea Symphony," the Verdi "Stabat Mater" and probably Bach's "Passion Music"—presumably the "St. Matthew Passion."

Arthur Fagge's London Choral Society also intends to carry out its season, though the program is not announced at yet.



At Brighton.

One very encouraging fact is that the Brighton authorities have had the courage to decide to hold their great festival, which begins November 10. As I have already noted in these letters, practically all the Provincial festivals were called off immediately after the outbreak of the war, thus taking away from the professional singers and orchestra players a tremendous amount of work on which they depended for their living. If the Brighton festival meets with success, it may induce some of the other festival managers to resume their plans, which would be a great help to the musical profession in general. How unfortunate a thing it is for musicians that music is and must remain a "luxury"—something to be dispensed with first of all when any kind of a pinch comes.

THE PEACE BUILDING AT THE HAGUE.

The Brighton festival will be participated in by the Municipal Choir and Orchestra of 350 performers, under Lyell-Taylor. Seven concerts will be given. "Elijah," "The Messiah" and the first and second acts of "Parsifal" will occupy three evenings. A characteristic program, including works by Debussy, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Stravinsky and Delius will be conducted by Thomas Beecham; Sir Henry J. Wood will conduct a Wagner program, and Sir Frederick Bridge, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Hubert Parry, Sir Charles Stanford, Landon Ronald and Lyell-Tayler are also included in the list of conductors.

BEETHOVEN'S FATHER AND MOTHER.
(Original portraits in possession of Walter Jagenberg, in Cologne.)

Refugees.

Quite to my surprise I discovered that a number of musical refugees from Paris had settled down for a short stay in the same part of London as myself. There were May Esther Peterson, the soprano, with her sister, Clara Peterson (a pupil of Arthur Alexander), and their mother. Mrs. Peterson and Miss Clara will soon go to America, but May Peterson will remain for study work with Sir Henry Wood. Another Alexander pupil who is here for a time is Richard Bunn, baritone, and with him is Fred Protheroe, tenor, a Von Steege pupil.

The De Reszkes in Paris.

Contrary to earlier information, which came from a pupil of Edouard de Reszke, and ought to have been correct, I learn now that Jean de Reszke—and presumably Eduoard as well—returned to Paris at the outbreak of the war, and are there now, not at their Polish estate, as first reported. It is reported that Jean de Reszke's son and his accompanist are both fighting for France.

Chaliapin in Russia.

A note in the papers the other day spoke of the famous Russian singer Chaliapin as organizing some hospital of his own for the wounded soldiers. This shows that Chaliapin is safe in Russia, but he had quite a time getting there. When the war broke out he and some Russian musical friends were in the south of France having a most pleasant vacation, as is their annual custom at the end of the season. Anxious to get home they tried various routes, and finally succeeded in getting a Japanese steamer, which happened to touch at Marseilles, and brought them around to London, where, after some delay, they were able to leave for Russia by a roundabout route via Scandinavia.

John McCormack Sings.

John McCormack, the famous tenor, was the principal artist at a large concert given at the Coliseum last Sunday evening under the auspices of the National Orchestral Association in aid of their fund to assist orchestral players in distress owing to the war. Mr. McCormack is a tremendous favorite in London, where he makes his home when not on tour. Another concert, in which he will also participate, will take place next Sunday evening, Sir Frederick Cowen conducting.

Hermann Klein Resumes Teaching.

Hermann Klein has returned to his London residence and resumed teaching, after a rest on the Isle of Wight from the fatigue incident to a trip back to England from Italy, in which he was compelled to spend four days on the road from Turin to Havre. Mr. Klein's vacation trip happened to take him right into the very middle of things, and he was in turn in Belgium, Germany (Alsace, Switzerland and Italy just as all four of these countries were mobilizing. Notwithstanding the earliness of the season and the general musical laxity already occasioned by the war, Mr. Klein is busy with a large vocal class.

Notes.

Herbert Fryer, the distinguished English pianist and composer, will occupy an important pedagogical position in New York this winter and do considerable concert work as well.

Edward Lowry, press agent of the Boston Opera Company, is homeward bound. George Macdonald, business manager of that company, had already received his commission in the British army—he is a British subject—and was going to the front as interpreter, but was asked by the directors to take charge of the Boston Opera House itself this winter and was allowed by the War Office to resign in order to do so. Mr. Macdonald appears to be the lucky man of the Boston Opera Company—the only member who will appear on its stage this winter, and that only by way of showing it to any prospective hirers.

Arthur Shattuck, the pianist, has come over from Paris, and I understand he is to give one or two recitals here later in the season.

There are abbreviations and abbreviations, but one of the best I have seen is that for "Mademoiselle" on a poster announcing a concert by Belgian artists in aid of the Belgian Relief Fund. It is thus produced by the ingenious printer: "Madlle."

H. O. Osgood.

LATER LONDON NEWS.

London, England, October 2, 1914.

Daniel Mayer, the well known concert manager, has a splendid home at Bexhill, a little town on the south coast of England, near Eastbourne, and for the last three years has been mayor of that town. Though Mr. Mayer has been in England ever since he was a boy and is thoroughly English in feeling, having been naturalized a great many years ago, he is a German by birth, and in resigning said that he recognized and respected the feeling that at this crisis Bexhill should have an Englishborn subject at its head, adding: "There is no more loyal or patriotic British subject in the town than I am, and in making this decision I bear not the slightest ill will to any one." It may safely be said, too, that none of Mr. Mayer's fellow citizens bear the slightest ill feeling toward him. He is certainly to be praised for the nicety of feeling which induced him to take this step at this particular moment.

Ballad Concerts.

That unique feature of London musical life, the Ballad Concerts, will begin tomorrow afternoon. The Chappell Series at Queen's Hall and the Boosey Series (their forty-ninth season) at the Royal Albert Hall. Among the artists appearing at the Boosey concert is Felice Lyne. Jacques Thibaud, who was announced as a solo violinist, fully expected to be there and to play, but discovered at the last moment that he could not leave Paris in time.

Orchestral War.

Last Wednesday afternoon there was a meeting at Pagani's restaurant which was attended by about fifty representative musicians and teachers of London, including Landon Ronald, Edward German, Sidney Jones, James Glover, Robert Radford, Howard Talbot, Hubert Bath, Frank Broadbent and Henry Stanly. The object of the meeting was a free discussion of a matter which has rankled in the minds of British musicians for a good many years, namely, the presence, especially in the orchestras, of so many foreign musicians, filling positions for which there are many thoroughly capable English musicians at hand. Excellent speeches were made by James Glover, a well known theatre conductor, and Landon Ronald, director of the Guildhall School of Music and conductor of the New Symphony Orchestra. A committee consisting of Sir Frederick Cowen, who acted as chairman of the meeting; Sir Edward Elgar, Landon Ronald and James Glover were appointed to determine what steps are best to take toward practical attainment of this object and to report to another meeting which will shortly be convened.

"Jewels" in English.

As a matter of musical history let us record that the first performance in English in London of Wolf-Ferrari's "Jewels of the Madonna" took place at the Marlborough Theatre on Friday, September 25. It was presented by the Carl Rosa Opera Company.

Shattuck Plays Boyle.

It is interesting to know that that excellent pianist, Arthur Shattuck, will present a new American work on large lines, Boyle's piano concerto, for the first time in England at Harrogate, October 14, and will repeat the same work with the municipal orchestra at Bournemouth on November 19. Mr. Shattuck will remain here until sailing to fulfill his American engagements.

Goodson Starts Season.

Katharine Goodson will begin her season on Sunday next at the Royal Albert Hall, playing the Grieg concerto with Landon Ronald's New Symphony Orchestra.

H. O. Osgood.

KANSAS CITY EXPECTS A PROSPEROUS SEASON.

Noted Artists Booked for Western City—Symphony Concerts Soon to Begin—Schubert Club Makes Announcement.

Kansas City, Mo., September 25, 1914.

Slowly musical matters are assuming form for the year's work and entertainment. Every year the beginning of musical events here occur a little later. There was a time when September 1 was the beginning of studio work and preparation for concerts and recitals. Now, Kansas City musicians are becoming more Easternlike and are looking to October 1 for the awakening of the season's musical life.

Orchestral Association Concerts.

The Kansas City Orchestral Association will begin its fourth season of symphony concerts November 2. Carl Busch will conduct these concerts. Soloists who have been engaged already to appear during the season are Margarete Matzenauer, Florence Hinkle, Katharine Goodson and Lambert Murphy.

Fritschy Concert Direction Artists.

The Fritschy Concert Direction has sold the entire house in advance subscriptions for its series of nine concerts to be given Tuesday afternoons in the Shubert Theatre. The series will be opened October 27 by Emmy Destinn and Dinh Gilly.

Miss Mitchell's Series.

Myrtle Irene Mitchell will present an attractive series this year at the Shubert Theatre, Friday afternoons, and at Convention Hall. Busoni is on her list, which has caused great rejoicing among local pianists. The series will open October 22, when Alice Nielsen and Rudolph Ganz will appear in joint recital. This initial concert is sure to be a great success, for Kansas City claims Alice Nielsen as her very own, as she lived here many years. Mr. Ganz has many pupils here, who, like his friends, fall under the spell of his charming personality as well as his fine art.

Schubert Club Announcement.

Our male chorus, the Schubert Club, has made its announcement for the year. It will give three concerts, assisted by Maud Powell, violinist, among others. These concerts will also be given at the Shubert Theatre. Clarence D. Sears, whose splendid work as conductor has brought the singing of the club to a high standard of excellence, will conduct this season's concerts.

Geneve Lichtenwalter.

LATER KANSAS CITY NEWS.

Kansas City, Mo., September 30, 1914.

The Kansas City Conservatory of Music has opened its eighth season auspiciously in its new home on 1515 Linwood boulevard. Moses Boguslawski began his sixth year as head of the piano department. With him are associated Mrs. Boguslawski, Sol Alberti, Mrs. Sol Alberti, Ethelynne Wilson and Mrs. Francois Boucher.

This is Ottley Cranston's fifth season as head of the vocal department. With the valuable assistance of his wife, Louie Collier-Cranston, he has built up an opera school which ranks very high.

Francois Boucher, who has been the head of the violin department since the school opened, will have the assistance of Margaret Fowler-Forbes, Gladys Baldwin and Louise Kinley.

The conservatory orchestra will resume its practice at once, preparatory to a series of concerts.

The string quartet, of which Margaret Fowler-Forbes is the founder and inspiration, will give a series of concerts also.

Hoener Institute of Fine Arts.

Kansas City welcomes another school, the Hoener Institute of Fine Arts, which opened its first season September 7, in its quarters at 3560 Broadway. The high artistic standard of all the teachers of the departments is a matter of congratulation.

Earl Rosenberg comes direct from Lindsborg, Kan., where "Messiah" festivals under his direction the last five years have achieved wide recognition. Mr. Rosenberg has had the best advantages of study at home and abroad, and with his experience in his own individual development is sure to be a great asset to the musical profession here.

Floyd Robbins, with years of study in Berlin under Vernon Spencer, will head the piano department.

Alfred Houghton Clark, who has had years of study in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and practical experience as painter and teacher, will unquestionably make a splendid success of the School of Art.

School of Art in Studio Building.

Jorgen C. Dreyer, sculptor, has opened a school of art in the Studio Building. Mr. Dreyer has achieved success in his particular line of art, notably in his busts of Carl Busch and Professor Phillips. He has been selected to do the memorial bust of Dr. Frank Marvin at Kansas University.

Recitals Begin.

Social recitals are already beginning. The first of the season was that of Jack Lloyd Crouch, violinist, pupil of Phebe Brooks. He played the entire Dvorak sonata, op. 100, creditably for a mere boy. He was assisted by Grace Nelson, soprano, pupil of Edna Forsythe.

Dorothy Sublette gave an exhibition of what is called "good piano playing" in her recital Tuesday evening. The playing of the Haydn sonata was especially pleasing and reflected credit upon her teacher, S. Ellen Barnes. Miss Sublette is going to Boston to study with Helen Hopkirk. Miss Sublette first came into public notice some years ago by her fine work as accompanist for her uncle, Frederick Wallis, whose beautiful singing was much missed here last year. Word comes that he is more in love with Tacoma than ever, so he is not likely to return to us.

Geneve Lichtenwalter.

A Remarkable Record.

Charles W. Clark, the American baritone, established an extraordinary record last year, when he spent part of the season in America, having sung in Paris and London before coming over to this country.

Mr. Clark, in addition to the long list of engagements herewith reproduced, sang at many schools and private musicales, both here and in Chicago, which, however, are not mentioned in the list.

Mr. Clark has now definitely declined to fulfill the engagements which the London manager, L. G. Sharpe, secured for him, although Mr. Sharpe, in a letter received this week by the baritone, states that the fees will all be promptly paid by the managers and societies who have engaged him.

This is the list: Iowa City, Ia.; Topeka, Kan.; Wellington, Kan.; Wichita, Kan.; Columbia, Mo.; Burlington, Ia.; Houston, Tex.; Oak Park, Ill.; Chicago, recital; Richmond, Ky.; Georgetown, Ky.; Clarksville, Tenn.; Fayette, Mo.; Evanston, Ill.; Mt. Sterling, Ky.; Murfresboro, Tenn.; Chicago, recital; Danville, Ky.; Columbia, Ga.; Americus, Ga.; Brunswick, Ga.; Ft. Dodge, Ia.; Sioux City, Ia.; Aurora, Ill.; Elgin, Ill.; Mt. Vernon, Ill.; Greeneville, S. C.; Spartansburg, S. C.; Chatham, Ont.; Stratford, Ont.; St. Thomas, Ont.; Woodstock, Ont.; Gault, Ont.; Berlin, Ont.; Richland Centre, Wis.; Evanston North Shore Festival; Women's Biennial Convention, Chicago; Faribault, Minn.; Northfield, Minn.; Helena, Mont.; Eau Claire, Wis.; Duluth, Minn.; Brett, Ia.; Omaha, Neb.; Lincoln, Neb.; Minneapolis, Minn.; St. Paul, Minn.; Kansas City, Mo.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Denver, Col.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Los Angeles, Cal.; Long Beach, Cal.; San Diego, Cal.; Sacramento, Cal.; San Francisco, Cal.; Fresno, Cal.; Eugene, Ore.; Albany, Ore.; Salem, Ore.; North Yakima, Wash.; Pullman, Wash.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Holland, Mich.; Muskegon, Mich.; Coldwater, Mich.; Cleveland, Ohio.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
Studios: Holland House, 143 Malda Vale - London

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Emily Gresser Returns from Berlin.

Emily Gresser, the young violinist—and young is no comparative term in this instance, as she has not yet reached her twentieth birthday—returned from Europe on the steamship Cedric, October 2. Miss Gresser's return was unexpected, as she was booked for many concerts throughout Germany and in Holland during this season. In view, however, of the present conditions abroad, it was deemed best by those most interested in the young American girl, for her to return to her own country until matters reached a more settled condition in Germany.

Miss Gresser is already well known to Berlin, as well as German musicians as a whole. She is a Brooklyn girl, who went abroad four years ago to study with Sam Franko. She had appeared previously in a successful recital at Mendelssohn Hall, New York, and has concertized extensively in Germany. She has had orchestral appearances in Berlin, Dresden, Leipsic, Hamburg, Breslau, Hanover, Munich, Cologne, Waldenburg, Tilsit, etc., also in Amsterdam, The Hague, Prague, etc. Her present season bookings were for the most part return engagements, certainly one of the best of tributes to the ability of the young artist.

Miss Gresser's talent is happily combined with a pleasing personality. Both have won for her not only an admiring public, but many friends as well, particularly among royalty. She refers with great pleasure to a visit of three weeks at the home of the Princess Schönaich-Carolath; also to the time when she was guest of the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, also of the Duchess of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt and Princess Tecla, etc.

The hereditary Prince of Meiningen has shown great interest in the work of the young violinist, this being of especial note, as he is himself a musician and pianist of ability.

She cherishes particularly a letter from the Crown Princess Cecelie of Germany, wherein the princess asks Miss Gresser to play at a hospital benefit for the wounded soldiers. Her hastened trip to America, however, made this impossible.

The young violinist will now be available for concerts in America until conditions in Europe become settled.

Mrs. Foster-Wescott's Costume Concerts.

Henrietta Foster-Wescott's "Costume Concerts" are attracting much favorable comment. They are unique, new and original, and offer pleasing variety. Grace and coquetry of action characterize her group of "Olde Songs," while her dramatic instinct is well brought out in her rendition of American Indian songs.

Mrs. Wescott can furnish an entire evening's program, or she can arrange any part of the work to fit in with other performers.

The following notices give an apt estimate of Mrs. Wescott's ability to please:

Mrs. Wescott appeared in three groups of songs, wearing costumes of the periods in which the songs were written. The first group was a selection from the classics, and under the general title of "Spring Songs." The second group included all old-time songs, and the third, Zuni Indian songs. Her final number was a part of the Great Tribal Ghost Dance of the Zuni Indians. In this she was clad in the Indian maiden's costume, and performed the weird movements of the dance with great skill.

Her voice was of penetrating sweetness, expressive and compelling. It was rich in beauty and clarity of tone and diction. She seemed to grip her audience from the start, and a long wave of applause followed her performance in each group. She was particularly pleasing in the final group.—Hudson Observer, Hoboken, N. J.

It proved to be one of the best entertainments of its kind ever given here. . . . The feature of the evening was the singing of

HENRIETTA FOSTER-WESCOTT,
As she appears in her American Indian songs.

Henrietta Foster-Wescott. Her "Ye Olde Time Songs," in costume, were carried through with a naturalness and simplicity that added much to her sweet toned singing.—The Sun, Nutley, N. J.

A Fanning and Turpin Encomium.

Word of Cecil Fanning's renewed concert activities inaugurating the present season already has arrived from the front, or rather from the frontier, as one might say, for the following article, taken from the Sheridan Enterprise dated September 22, tells a very flattering story about the baritone's success in that far away Wyoming city. A letter received in the meantime narrates experiences encountered during an interesting three day visit at the "Crow Agency" in Montana, and would lead one to believe that Fanning and his accompanist, H. B. [illegible] are veritable rivals to the whole copper colored [illegible] the noble art of horsemanship and various other [illegible] Any way, it only goes to prove further the remarkable versatility which marks these two artists throughout the whole concert world. The article follows:

The recital of Cecil Fanning at the Orpheum last evening was, without a doubt, the most artistic ever presented to a local audience. . . . The audience present was genuinely enthusiastic and hearty appreciation was evident throughout. . . . His is a personality of attractive appeal, weaving an exceptional musical intelligence with his glorious voice. He creates an intimacy with his audience that make his concerts a genuine delight. His appearance here was marked by that artistry, which make him the favorite among concert baritones, and no singer has ever appeared before a local audience with more emphatic success. His entire program, most happily selected, was thoroughly enjoyed and repeated encores were demanded. Nothing new can be said of his voice, but a generous tribute is due his absolute mastery of the art of singing. His program bespeaks in itself his high ideals and true musicianship. Culture, ease and style were pre-eminent attributes. He grasps alike the intensity of dramatic interpretation and the happy enjoyment of comic recitation. His ability as an actor is combined with a faultless diction, unusual in singers off the dramatic stage. . . . "Der Erlkönig," by Loewe, hitherto unknown to local singers, was a veritable gem, and Mr. Fanning's singing of "Edward," by the same author, was most effective. The delicious pantomime of the two old French numbers made them intelligible to the listeners, and his remarkable versatility was shown in such contrasting numbers as Liza Lehmann's "The Mad Dog" and two Schubert songs. The singer was able to put a new thought in Carrie Jacob Bond's "Perfect Day," and as another encore he sang Ellen Wright's "A Dream" with evident approval. Mr. Fanning is to be congratulated with H. B. Turpin as an accompanist, for this truly splendid artist made his musicianly intelligence discernible at once. . . ."

(Advertisement.)

Henriette Weber's Success as a Lecturer.

Quite by accident Henriette Weber, who had already made a name for herself as a pianist and a writer on musical subjects, invaded the lecture field. Miss Weber has the rare faculty of making an unusually dry subject one of absorbing interest, and her entertaining and informal presentation of a subject has so endeared her to the public that she has become a very popular lecturer, with almost more demands upon her time than can be filled.

Following are some comments regarding Miss Weber's share of the six opera lecture-recitals which she gave with Anne Irene Larkin, the reader, at Lake Chautauqua in August:

In the rendition of this play and opera ("Pelleas and Melisande") both artists evidenced their experience and ability, and a large audience greatly enjoyed the reading hour. Miss Weber is an accomplished musician and appeared to great advantage both in the lecture and at the piano, contributing much to the effectiveness of the reading by her finished playing. . . .

Miss Weber in her lecture ("Adriane and Blue-Beard") made the hour most enjoyable by pointing out the outstanding characteristics of the music and the play, and by her performance at the piano contributed much to the success of the hour. . . .

In the evening the program was made up of a series of clever readings. Two of the musical settings are Miss Weber's own compositions and are evidences of her musical ability. . . . At the piano Miss Weber contributed her full share to the success of the evening's entertainment. She was sympathetic in her playing and her music set off and added color to the several readings. Her explanatory remarks on the readings and concerning the music enabled one to listen more intelligently to the program.—The Chautauquan Daily, Chautauqua, N. Y.

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson begs to announce that information has been received from

WILLY

BURMESTER

INDICATING THAT

He will sail for America on October 17th as arranged.

This in reply to many inquiries.

We are still booking dates for Mr. Burmester whose tour will continue until late spring. The Steinway Piano will be used on the tour.

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

Belle Gottschalk in America.

One of the American artists, who has recently returned from abroad on account of the European war, is the young operatic lyric soprano, Belle Gottschalk.

After five years of study in Germany and one on the operatic stage in Russia, she has returned to America a year or two earlier than she had expected.

Miss Gottschalk, who sang last season in Lodz, Russia, a city of 500,000 inhabitants, at present one of the centers of war operations, had a successful season, singing leading roles in "Trovatore," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Carmen," "The Pious Beggar" and other smaller roles.

Later in the season the young soprano sang in Breslau, at the home of Baron von Schilling, the Russian consul, and Baroness von Schilling, at which the President of Silesia, of which Breslau is the capital; the commandant of all the forces there, and all the representative people were present.

The singer was received with so much enthusiasm that several influential persons determined that she must be secured for the Breslau Opera, where she was to sing in 1915-16.

She was booked for another recital in Breslau for this season and also was to sing the soprano part in Beethoven's ninth symphony with one of the orchestra in Vienna.

Miss Gottschalk, who was born in Westfield, N. J., and has sung since earliest childhood, often laughingly says that she made her first public appearance at the age of four in the "Queen Esther" cantata.

After finishing a course at the Westfield High School, she entered Mt. Holyoke College and graduated from that institution. During her college course she was prominent in all musical affairs, doing much solo work and giving a recital at the end of the course. In the autumn following her graduation, she was taken abroad by a relative and began her musical studies in Berlin under Etelka Gerster, the famous opera singer of former years, remaining under her instruction for a little over two years. During her period of study with Mme. Gerster, Miss Gottschalk sang at two of her student recitals, singing on the first occasion the aria from "Undine" and on the second "The King of Thule" and the "Jewel" aria from "Faust," as well as the part of Feldmarschallin in the difficult trio from Strauss' "Rosenkavalier" before the opera had ever been given in Berlin. Much to her surprise, Miss Gottschalk was one of three out of a total of eighteen singers to receive very flattering criticisms from the music critics of most of the Berlin journals, predicting a brilliant future.

This talented singer then became a pupil of the late Frank King Clark, who did much to develop her voice, of which he had a very high opinion, prophesying a brilliant future for her.

Miss Gottschalk now returns to her native land full of enthusiasm for the musical development of her country and will join the force of concert singers here, hoping when the present unsettled condition of affairs is past there may also be more opportunities in the opera field.

BELLE GOTTSCHALK.

Hamlin's Valuable Music Left Behind.

George Hamlin, who was compelled to forego his European season because of the war, and who has just returned to America, stopped in New York for a few days after landing and was approached by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER.

"We chanced unexpectedly to be in Italy when the news came that Germany had declared war," remarked the tenor, "and instantly the populace was in a frenzy. No one knew, of course, just how Italy would be affected, and feeling ran high. The American tourists were in a panic, as all the German steamers were immediately taken off service, and it was impossible to say how long travelers might be detained. Many of these were American school teachers with limited funds, and, naturally, they were panicstricken at the thought of being marooned penniless in a foreign land and unable to be back at their posts when school should begin. They were willing to come home steerage or without any definite accommodation whatever, just so they were not left behind.

"People who were in no hurry and who had sufficient currency on hand to last a while had no difficulty in obtaining comfortable passage when more regular sailings were established. My family and self stayed placidly in Milan for a month—I continuing to work on some new operatic roles and the others diligently studying Italian.

"We had no trouble in getting back to America, although we had little more than hand luggage with us. Our trunks are in Berlin, but I hope we will receive them safely in good time. My chief anxiety is for the trunk containing my collection of operatic scores, program music and some rare and valuable first editions and manuscript copies. Most of these could not be replaced, if lost."

"I hear that the suffragettes are extending their activity to opera."

"In what way?"

"They intend to have the old time titles changed to 'Juliet and Romeo,' 'Isolde and Tristan,' 'Melisande and Pelleas,' and 'Gretel and Haensel.'"

"LOHENGRIN" AT THE CENTURY.

Wagner's Popular Opera Given a Good Performance.

"Lohengrin" was given at the Century Opera House, New York, on Tuesday evening, October 6, and showed much improvement over the performances of the same opera which took place just a year ago. The whole cast was better and the ensemble, chorus, stage management and orchestra were incomparably superior.

Lohengrin was beautifully sung by Morgan Kingston, who makes a fine appearance and whose acting is dignified and effective. Louis Kreidler is a really splendid Telramund. His dramatic power is undeniable, and his passionate expression lends great force to this tragic figure. The Elsa was Bettina Freeman, who possesses a small voice of pleasing quality, but who shows little knowledge of the exigencies of the stage and seemed to be under a certain restraint, possibly due to nervousness. Augusta Lenska played the part of Ortrud without originality or genuine passion, and her singing of the music was ineffective and dull.

The difficult role of the Herald, which is generally uninspiring, was made to live and to appear of genuine importance by a newcomer to the ranks of the Century forces, Graham Marr, whose splendid stage presence and excellent singing assure him a distinctive position in this cast. Henry Weldon, although still somewhat indisposed, sang the part of Henry with great beauty of tone, authority and charm.

The opera was conducted by Ernest Knoch, the new German conductor at the Century, who has had a long German experience, and who showed knowledge of the score.

Burmester in Hungary.

When Willy Burmester plays in Hungary, his audiences include large elements of Zingaros. The gipsy loves the violin; the gipsy is a discriminating judge of the violin, and it is the greatest possible compliment which could be paid to the violinist by Hungarian audiences to find that the galleries and back of the hall are literally packed by these wandering musicians, who otherwise are rarely seen within concert houses.

In May last Mr. Burmester made his annual appearance at the Budapest Volksoper, and the critic of the Pester-Lloyd commented on this event in the following language:

The star of the season's last opera concert was Willy Burmester, heard here so often, but by no means too often. He has for a large number of years administered his art to an audience which, for its size and faithfulness, stands without equal in our musical life.

Recently Burmester has given much attention to the creation of musical miniatures. To the playing of these musical titbits the same faultless musicianship is applied, which we have been accustomed to in his rendering of the greater works. These titbits now seem to have become his and the people's favorites.

Yesterday's program brought, besides the Paganini concerto, old dances by Haydn, Hummel, Dietersdorf, Dussek and Weber.

The packed house rose to the great pitch of excitement usual at Burmester's appearances—the many encores, of course, included the air by Bach, which is ever looked for and demanded from him whether on the program or not. (Advertisement.)

FLORENCE HARDEMAN
American Violinist Just returned from Europe In America Season 1914-15
Present address: 3514 Washington Avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio

FLORENCE LARRABEE
PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

Miss NINA MORGANA
Coloratura Soprano
From La Scala in Milan
Available for Concerts—Musicales Season 1914-15
Address: AEOLIAN HALL, Rooms 1626-27, N. Y. City

JACQUES KASNER VIOLINIST
120 East 85th Street :: :: New York
Phone 2768 Lenox

Mme. GUERCIAS
OPERATIC SOPRANO
Spanish, Russian, French, German, Italian
AT PRESENT IN EUROPE
SEASON 1914-1915 IN AMERICA

"Dawn in the Desert"
By GERTRUDE ROSS
Sung with great success by Mme. Schumann-Heink
WHITE-SMITH COMPANY

REBARER
420 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

THEODORE SPIERING
CONDUCTOR—VIOLINIST In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Avs., New York

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.
The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET
Tour 1914-15 Now Booking
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF THE RUSSIAN VIOLINIST In America 1914-15
Personal Representative: Johanna Sherrick, 200 Fifth Ave., N.Y.
Daniel Mayer, London

HERBERT FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
(Mason & Hamlin Piano Used)
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

MYRNA SHARLOW
SOPRANO
Boston Opera Company, Boston.
Royal Opera Co., Covent Garden, London.
Anglo-American Grand Opera Co., Paris.
Under the management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Helen Stanley as Violetta.

Helen Stanley made her first appearance this season at the Century Opera House, New York, on Monday evening, October 5, in the role of Violetta in "Traviata." Her appearance at the Century was somewhat delayed by illness, but she had evidently entirely recovered on Monday evening of last week and her success was immediate and complete. She is a popular favorite with Century Opera audiences, as her art warrants that she should be, and the role of Violetta is unusually well suited to her. She sang the music with much beauty of tone and delicacy of expression. The coloratura passages were well defined and sharp, and her acting throughout of the highest order.

HELEN STANLEY.

The rest of the cast was the same as during the week previous, with the exception of the role of Alfred Germont, which was taken by Orville Harrold instead of Morgan Kingston. Mr. Harrold was an attractive figure in this role and sang the music with great brilliancy.

The opera was given in Italian and was conducted by Agide Jacchia.

Minneapolis School of Music.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 6, 1914.

The regular Saturday morning recital was given by Sudworth Frasier, tenor, and Leo Nadon, baritone, pupils of William H. Pontius. The voices of these young singers give unusual promise for the future, and their singing was enthusiastically received by a large audience of friends and pupils. Ebba Sundstrom, of the faculty, played an effective violin obligato for Schubert's "Serenade," sung by Mr. Frasier. Mr. Nadon's principal number was "Love's Loyalty," a new song by Margaret Hicks, of the piano department.

Esther Jones-Guyer, the new teacher of the vocal department, has just arrived from her home in South Carolina and has begun work with her classes.

Edith Aus, a graduate of the public school music department, has accepted the position of supervisor at Worthing, S. Dak.

Catherine Brotherton Hughes, soprano, pupil of William H. Pontius, has opened a studio in Aberdeen, S. Dak. She has become an active member of the Monday Musicale and will sing "A Dream of Thee," by William H. Pontius, at the first meeting.

The faculty recital for Saturday morning, October 10, at 11 o'clock, will be given by Mrs. Herbert Pendleton, pianist, and Ebba Sundstrom, violinist, which will be open to the public without charge.

Harriet Hetland, of the elocution department, and Esther Jones-Guyer, of the vocal department, are devoting part of their teaching time to classes in the branch studio in St. Paul, Room 503 Shiffman Building.

Grace Gunderson, class of 1913-14, and pupil of William H. Pontius, spent the past two weeks at the school, preparatory to taking up her work as vocal and piano instructor with the Northwest branch of the State University, at Crookston, Minn.

Another forward step has been taken by the Minneapolis School of Music in the engagement of Karl Scheurer, of the Symphony Orchestra, as principal teacher in the violin department. Mr. Scheurer has just returned from a trip to Europe and has already assumed his duties in the school. His great ability as an artist and instructor is well known in this city and throughout the Northwest. He was one of the principal soloists with the orchestra on the spring tour and won high encomiums from the press for his brilliant technic and interpretations. Ebba Sundstrom, his most advanced pupil, will be his principal assistant. Several concerts and recitals already are announced to be given by Mr. Scheurer during the season in the school hall.

Pupils of the school who are preparing themselves for the teaching of voice or instruments should avail themselves of the opportunity to take up a special series of class lessons in methods with Mrs. Ford. These lessons will be planned in a course of forty, to be given twice weekly, Monday and Thursday, at 2 o'clock.

The Celebrated American Baritone

WILLIAM

HINSHAW

(Metropolitan Opera Company)

Specially engaged to sing Wotan and Wanderer in the Berlin Wagner Ring Festival June 23rd to August 21st, 1914

In America December to June

Concert Direction R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

Alma Voedisch Back in Chicago.

Alma Voedisch, the Chicago impresaria, has just returned to Chicago for a few days after a successful booking tour for her artists. Miss Voedisch has booked Julia Claussen, who will open her concert tour in Denver with the Philharmonic Orchestra on October 15, and will fill the following dates: Pueblo, Col., October 17; Colorado Springs, October 19; Portland, Ore., October 24; Everett, Wash., October 27; Seattle, October 30; Tacoma, November 1; Los Angeles, Cal., November 3; San Francisco, November 5 and 8; Salt Lake City, November 10 and 11, and Milwaukee, November 19. Other bookings later are for New York, January 10; Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Decatur, Kansas City, Lafayette, Godfrey, Aberdeen, etc.

Sibyl Sammis MacDermid and James G. MacDermid will make their second Pacific Coast tour the latter part of January and February.

Anne Faulkner Oberndorfer and Marx E. Oberndorfer will be in the West the latter part of April, presenting the opera musicale, and will be on the Pacific Coast all summer.

Leon Sametini will fill his concert engagements in the Central States.

Miss Voedisch has added the Brahms Quintet to her list of artists for next season. She will also have Henly Bussing and George Schoenfeldt in harpsichord recitals.

Thuel Burnham in America.

Thuel Burnham, the American piano virtuoso, who has been residing for some years in Paris, arrived in his native country recently, as has already been announced in these columns. While in Europe, Mr. Burnham was frequently heard in London, Paris, Munich, Vienna, and other important musical centers, and was everywhere the recipient of the highest praise from the press, and was no less popular with the general public. He has been particularly commended for his complete mastery of the greater works of the classic masters, and his equal mastery of the works of such modern composers as MacDowell and Grieg. He excels equally in compositions which call for weight of touch and great sonority of tone, and, in compositions which necessitates the lightest kind of ethereal touch and delicacy and rapidity of handling. Burnham's interpretations are above all things esthetic. That he feels and feels deeply is evident in everything that he does. He seems to be in unusually close touch with the mind of the composer, especially such composers as Schumann, Chopin and Schubert, whose talent was deeply imbued with sentiment, but lacking in sentimentality.

Mr. Burnham will leave for the West early this month to open his tour under the management of Harry Culbertson. He is being booked for the West and Middle West immediately, and will make an extended Southern tour during the month of January. He will be heard in the East probably during the latter part of the season, although the date of his New York recital has not yet been announced.

THUEL BURNHAM.

SCHUMANN-HEINK

TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKING

Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York

STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON

Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.

"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"

In America January to April 1915

TOUR NOW BOOKING

KNABE PIANO

SAN FRANCISCO WILL HAVE ACTIVE SEASON.

Standardization of Music Teachers Discussed—Symphony Programs—Chamber Music—Notes and Personal Mention.

San Francisco, Cal., September 26, 1914.

Now that the musical season has begun again it will no doubt be of interest to the readers of the MUSICAL COURIER to hear about the activities of San Francisco and the Bay cities. The summer has been unusually quiet as far as public performances were concerned, although teachers have been more busy than in former "off seasons." The summer school at the University of California again was successful and the annual convention of the Music Teachers' Association of California was recorded at length in the columns of the MUSICAL COURIER. Although the question of the standardization of music teachers was not definitely adjusted at the convention, the various local associations now are endeavoring to find a way to bring this matter to the attention of the State Legislature and thus have laws enacted by which a competent teacher may be distinguished from an incompetent one. The writer does not believe that this question can be settled by law. On the contrary such a law would only strengthen the position of an incompetent teacher who, in the possession of a license, may contend that the government guarantees his efficiency.

The only way in which the competency of a teacher can be assured is by having young people trained to become teachers. For instance public school, high school and university teachers have to go through a certain normal school or university course which is expected to prepare them to become efficient teachers. Now if a music department that is a music department could be added to these institutions and thus prospective music teachers be enabled to secure training by the foremost musical educators of the country, in the same manner as public school teachers are now being trained, I believe that in time our young people would be so well educated that the question of efficiency in music teaching would be just as natural as that of other teachers is at the present time. The issuance of a license or the answering of a set of questions does not necessarily imply that one who has conformed with these rules is an efficient teacher. Unless one is by training fitted to impart musical knowledge his efficiency is always problematical. If it should be considered expedient that specially qualified music teachers should be authorized to issue teachers' diplomas in their private studios, no objection should be offered, nor should it be objectionable if certain private music schools, if properly equipped, should receive the privilege of bestowing teachers' diplomas. But the point I wish to make is that it requires the right kind of training to become an efficient teacher, or adaptability and natural genius in that direction. But laws that compel teachers to appear before a political commission, answer certain questions and then pay for a license, would in no way guarantee the efficiency of such a musician as a teacher.

ARTISTS TO VISIT THE COAST.

The various managers of the Pacific Coast territory are now announcing their plans for the season. Each one, however, qualifies his announcements by references to delays or changes that might be necessary on account of the war.

So far nothing definite has reached me regarding a grand opera season for San Francisco. There is talk about the Lambardi Company or the National Opera Company, as it is now called, appearing here for two weeks, but the delay of official announcements seems to make even this venture rather a doubtful one.

PEOPLE'S PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA.

The People's Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Herman Perlet, has given several concerts during the summer. Indeed there has been one concert a month. Three thousand people have attended each of these concerts. The admission prices are fifty and twenty-five cents, and there are people attending who are never seen at public musical events other than these people's symphony concerts. The fourth of these concerts took place at Pavilion Rink on Thursday evening, September 3, and the fifth will occur next Thursday evening, October 1. The soloists on the last occasion were Victor de Gomez, cellist, and Henry L. Perry, baritone. Both artists scored a decided success, the audience demanding encores enthusiastically. Viewed at from the outside these events seem to have taken a firm hold of the general public and apparently are successful financially as well as artistically.

SAN FRANCISCO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The following announcement has been sent to the press by the San Francisco Musical Association. No doubt further particulars will appear later: "Definite announcement comes of the first concert to be given by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra on the afternoon of October 23, at the Cort Theatre. Conductor Hadley returned last week to begin rehearsals. During the season the performance of several new works will add attraction to the programs. The orchestra will be noticeably strengthened, several new musicians having been secured from some of the leading organizations of Europe and this country. A number of prominent solo artists will make their appearance during the series of symphony concerts between now and next March."

The programs of the first five concerts are given as follows:

OCTOBER 23.

Overture, Euryanthe ..... Weber
Symphony No. 1, G minor ..... Kalinnikow
(First time in San Francisco.)
Variations on a theme by Haydn, op. 56 ..... Brahms
Overture, Sakuntala, op. 13 ..... Goldmark

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, NOVEMBER 6.

Marcella Craft, soloist.
Symphony No. 3, Rhenish, E flat, op. 97 .....
Arias ..... To be announced later
Miss Craft.
Le Ruet d'Omphale (symphonic poem) ..... Saint-Saëns

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, NOVEMBER 20.

Overture—The Flying Dutchman.
Lohengrin—Introduction to Act III, prelude to Act I.
Tannhäuser—Introduction to Act II, bacchanale and finale from overture.
Das Rheingold—Finale.
Die Walküre—Ride of the Valkyries.
Siegfried—Voices of the Forest, Siegfried's Ascent of Brünnhilde's Rock.
Die Götterdämmerung—Finale.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 4.

Tina Lerner, solo pianist.
Symphony after Byron's Manfred, op. 58 ..... Tschaikowsky
Concerto for piano and orchestra, No. 1, B flat minor ..... Tschaikowsky
Miss Lerner.
Iberia ..... Ippolitoff-Iwanoff

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 11.

Tina Lerner, solo pianist.
Concerto for piano and orchestra, A minor, op. 16 ..... Grieg
Miss Lerner.
Symphonic poem, Francesca di Rimini ..... Tschaikowsky

CHAMBER MUSIC RECITALS.

As usual San Francisco will have an opportunity to listen to a series of excellent chamber music recitals. There is above all a new organization known as the San Francisco Quintet Club founded by Elias M. Hecht, one of San Francisco's most energetic music patrons. Mr. Hecht is an excellent ensemble player himself, having devoted his time to flute playing and one of his favorite endeavors has been the introduction of new works to this city. Mr. Hecht organized this ensemble club some time ago and it has appeared before clubs and in private frequently with splendid results. This year, however, the organization will make a bid for public favor and I think it will be very successful. The members include: Louis W. Ford, violin; C. B. Evans, viola and violin; Victor de Gomez, violoncello; Gyula Ormay, piano, and E. M. Hecht, flute. At two of the concerts Nathan Firestone, viola, will assist. In addition to this ensemble club the Hughes-Wismer-Riley Trio will continue its excellent concerts of last season, the Minetti Quartet will give a series of recitals at private homes, the McIntyre Trio of Berkeley will give a series of recitals at the University of California and at private homes, the California Trio of Alameda will continue its former triumphs, and the Wetmore-Nash concerts will no doubt be resumed. John C. Manning, William F. X. Laraia and Mr. Lavatelli will give a number of trio concerts, Pierre Douillet, Nathan Landsberger and Karl Greinauer will also give several chamber music recitals. There may be other organizations of which the writer has not heard as yet.

PAUL STEINDORFF RETURNS FROM EUROPE.

Paul Steindorff has returned from Europe, being just in time to escape the strenuousness imposed by the war situation. He has resumed his duties as "choragus" of the University of California, where he trains a chorus and an orchestra. He also has resumed his leadership of the Berkeley Oratorio Society, the Treble Clef Club and San Francisco Choral Society and the choral section of the Ebell Club of Oakland. In addition to all these duties Mr. Steindorff conducts Sunday concerts at a public park in Oakland. His duties during the season will be many and his various choral activities will be welcome. Among the choral performances will be several to be presented at the Greek Theatre, one of them to be a Gluck festival.

ADDITIONAL NOTES OF INTEREST.

Hermann Genss, who formerly resided in San Francisco but who more recently was successful as operatic composer in Germany, has returned as a consequence of war conditions and has decided again to locate in this city until the air in Europe has been purified. He is welcomed by a large number of friends and pupils who will be glad to take advantage of his presence and induce him to add his share to local musical activities.

Mischa Elman passed through San Francisco last week on his way to New York. He says he expects to locate in America now, believing Europe not exactly the quietest spot on earth these days.

LATEST PHOTO SHOWING THE PROGRESS BEING MADE ON TH

Harold Bauer is due here next week on his return from Australia and Honolulu, where he gave successful concerts. According to a private letter Mr. Bauer made an unusually big impression in Honolulu, where his houses were completely sold out and one or two extra concerts became necessary.

Julius Gold, formerly professor of musical science at Drake University, has located in San Francisco and has associated himself with the Manning School of Music. He has been very successful since his arrival here and gives the impression of being a conscientious and energetic musician.

L. E. Behymer, the Los Angeles impresario, was here this week to make arrangements for some of the artists he handles. Mr. Behymer is busy as ever and does not think that the war will have much effect upon the concert season. He looks forward to one of the busiest years he has ever had.

The Tivoli Opera House, as stated before, now is devoted to moving pictures, and it is a striking sign of the times that the houses are crowded every evening, while during the comic opera regime many vacant seats were noted.

De Wolf Hopper and the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company filled a two weeks' engagement at the Cort Theatre ending last Sunday. They also gave "Trial by Jury" and a concert program at the Greek Theatre yesterday (Friday). The attendance was not satisfactory, proving the deplorable conditions which the theatrical people are now experiencing. I believe, however, that our concert season will be unusually successful this year.

Charles Mallory Dutton, of Berkeley, gave a delightful reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Strauss, at Twentieth Century Club Hall, of that city, last week. The event was attended by nearly five hundred people prominent in musical and social circles of the bay cities. During the evening Mr. Strauss rendered a vocal program during which he proved himself to be a competent artist who possesses a very excellent tenor voice, which he uses with fine taste and musical judgment.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Mansfeldt are giving a series of four piano recitals in which the classics of the old masters as well as some of the modern composers are well represented. So far two of these recitals have been given and they both were well attended, the last one being almost sold out. The composers represented on the programs include: Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Liszt, Chopin, Tschaikowsky, Saint-Saëns, Brahms, Bach, Mendelssohn, etc. ALFRED METZGER.

Music of the Spheres.

The ancients were of the opinion that the planets in their movement through space produced severally the seven notes of the gamut. This music, it was contended, was imperceptible to human ears on account of the fact that it was too powerful for our hearing. Others held that men did not hear it simply because they were so used to it, just as we do not notice the roar of the city from our constant familiarity with it. The real "music of the spheres" is purely intellectual, lying in the great and splendid fact of the universe of law and order.—Asheville (N. C.) Gazette-News.

ST. PAUL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Schubert Club Will Present Noted Artists—Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra to Give Series of Concerts—Notes.

St. Paul, Minn., October 3, 1914.

The Schubert Club will open the season here with the first really important concert. Emilio de Gogorza will be presented on the evening of October 22 in recital. He will be followed by Julia Culp in December, and later by Katharine Goodson, all of whom will appear under the auspices of the club. The lecture-recitals which the Schubert Club also will offer will be headed by Constance Purdy, who will speak upon Russian music. The club prospectus announces some minor events of attractive interest.

EIGHT SYMPHONY CONCERTS.

The eight symphony concerts to be given at the Auditorium here by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Emil Oberhoffer, conductor, under the auspices of the St. Paul Institute, offer some very important and highly interesting programs. A Wagner and a Tschaikowsky night will constitute two features that promise well. The list of assisting soloists is a notable one and includes Mildred Potter, Aliee Verlet, John McCormack, Helen Stanley, Ferruccio Busoni, Rudolph Ganz, Richard Czerwonky and Julia Claussen. The sale of season tickets for the series opens October 12. Already great interest is being manifested here and it is expected that the attendance at all the concerts will be large.

ST. PAUL NOTES.

The embryo People's Orchestra Association is hustling with admirable energy to obtain enough subscriptions to warrant its existence for the season of 1914-15. Sixteen popular concerts are planned to be given by an orchestra of fifty under a local conductor as yet to be chosen. Twelve thousand dollars are needed to actuate the scheme. Of this amount some two or three thousand dollars have been subscribed. If the balance is not raised by the middle or last of this month, it is understood that the plan will be abandoned for the present.

Among the well known teachers who have returned to town and have opened their studios are Jessica DeWolf, Lewis Shawe, Paolo Le Villa, George Fairclough, George Thornton, Leopold Bruenner, Carl Heilmaier and E. C. Murdock. J. MCCLURE BELLOWS.

Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 6, 1914.

Edward Brimmer, graduate of the Conservatory Dramatic School, 1913, is playing with William Faversham in "The Hawk," the productions with which the Shuberts are opening their new theatre in New York City. Mr. Brimmer, whose stage name is Robert Dix, is playing the role of the Prince. He has also been appointed assistant stage manager to Mr. Faversham, and in that capacity last week responded in place of Mr. Faversham in making a curtain speech for the manager. The New York papers comment very favorably on Mr. Brimmer's work.

John Seaman Garns, director of the school of expression and dramatic art, gave the first of a series of talk on stage deportment before the graduating class of the different departments on Wednesday. It is planned to make this work in this line a feature of the school by means of recital rehearsals which will begin in the near future.

The conservatory choral club under the direction of Robert Fullerton is to meet on Tuesday and Friday evenings in Conservatory Hall. The organization will present an opera late in the winter, besides lighter works.

Duchess Goodenough, graduate of the artist course of the Conservatory piano department, who went to Berlin in June to study with Lhevinne, arrived in New York on Sunday, September 20. Miss Goodenough has been appointed as assistant in the piano department at the Women's College in Nevada, Mo.

At the faculty hour, October 3, Miss Evers, president of the Conservatory, addressed the faculty and students on the subject of "Student Standards and Ideals." Miss Evers' experience as head of the Minneapolis City Training School for Teachers, together with her experience as lecturer before teachers' institutes and educational associations, give special weight to her addresses to young people who are fitting themselves for the profession of education, of which there were many in her audience.

Robert Fullerton, head of the Conservatory voice department, is devoting two half days a week to the voice department of Stanley Hall, where he has a goodly number of private pupils. Mr. Fullerton has organized a Stanley chorus made up of Stanley high school and college departments. Later, he will organiz a Glee Club, selecting the members from the chorus. The training which will be given twice each week, began last Tuesday morning.

Luyster's Sight Singing Classes.

Wilbur A. Luyster, specialist in the teaching of sight singing, for years the instructor of the People's (Chevé) Singing Classes, opened his seventeenth season, Monday, October 5, at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn. The classes are to meet in the Art Building, 174 Montague street, Brooklyn, two evenings a week, the beginner's class meeting on Tuesday evenings and the advanced classes on Friday.

Mr. Luyster has been engaged to teach sight singing in leading musical institutions in the country, among which are the Metropolitan Opera Company (eight years); Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences; New York College and the German Conservatory of Music. Many of the opera and concert artists, also church singers, now before the public have been taught by Mr. Luyster.

At the Chevé Sight Singing School, 64 East Thirty-fourth street, scholarships are to be awarded to gifted singers. No trials or examinations will be given unless by appointment, and not later than October 20.

A new beginner's class is now forming to meet on Tuesday and Friday afternoons.

Success of a Bacheller Pupil.

Dorothea Edwards, a pupil of Mrs. W. E. Bacheller, who was called upon unexpectedly to sing at a concert on Tuesday, September 15, at Lexington Opera House, New York City, scored an immediate success. Miss Edwards possesses a particularly well trained, full, rich contralto voice, and her singing of Tosti's "Serenata di Praga" was well received. She was compelled to respond to an encore.

ILDINGS AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Dan Beddoe at Erie.

Following the Erie (Pa.) Festival last June, Dan Beddoe, who was one of the soloists, received the following laudatory comments upon his work as the tenor soloist. The first two notices refer to his singing in Rossini's "Stabat Mater"; the second two to his work at the symphony concert, and the remaining notices refer to his interpretation of the tenor solos in Handel's "Messiah":

Beddoe in splendid voice gives notable interpretation. Rossini's great and inspiring work, the "Stabat Mater," was given an interpretation that was very gratifying. The tremendous force and fire of the opening chorus was followed by the beautiful and noble solo by Dan Beddoe. This singer possesses one of the few genuine tenor voices of note of the present day. Beddoe's voice is pure tenor, and wonderful in power and sweetness. Added to the singularly fine quality of voice is a sincere artistic finish and interpretation.

His first solo, the "Cujus Animam," was a moment of great beauty. He gave to the music a quality the composer failed to infuse into its lines and sang with a fervor and a perfection that would of itself place him among the artists of sincere rank. Every opportunity given Mr. Beddoe during the program was awaited with genuine pleasure. His singing was received with tremendous enthusiasm.—Erie Daily Times.

After the impressive introductory chorus, Mr. Beddoe's charming rendition of the "Cujus Animam" showed the quality of the interpretation to be expected. His voice has the mellowness and prayerful quality to make this beautiful solo particularly effective. The prayer was delightfully given.—Erie Evening Herald.

Mr. Beddoe sang with his beautiful artistry the prize song from the "Meistersinger," and in response to a triple encore gave the "Vesti la giubba," from "Pagliacci." At the close of the program, he sang a group of songs, each loveliest in melody and in interpretation. "I Hear a Thrush," by Cadman; "Dearest," by Homer; "Call Me No More," by Cadman. As an encore he gave Taylor's "Eleanore."—Erie Daily Times.

The orchestra in the accompaniment to the "Meistersinger's Prize Song," Dan Beddoe's first solo, had a difficult Wagnerian number to interpret. This he did to perfection under the brilliant leadership of Director Kohler.

Mr. Beddoe has a tenor voice of rare sweetness and power. His hearers were kindled to a veritable flame of enthusiasm following his first solo, and made demands for an encore number. To the delight of all, Mr. Beddoe responded with the "Vesti la giubba," from "Pagliacci," also given with superb effect, and followed by more demands for encores.—Erie Evening Herald.

Dan Beddoe was in excellent voice and maintained the high reputation he won the night before in his singing of leading parts in "Stabat Mater."—Erie Evening Herald.

Dan Beddoe not only possesses a most beautiful tenor voice of great power, and such smoothness and perfection in all his range that his hearers seldom question the breadth of his range, so satisfying is its every note, highest and lowest and all between, but his method is equally flawless, and his mastery of oratorio style is absolute. He sang last evening with all the beauty of tone and interpretation which characterized his singing in the first two concerts, and his coming to Erie records another triumph for this singer who has done so much to keep the standards of music at their highest.

Mr. Beddoe is utterly without any of the affectations of today's stars. He is glad to sing, and feels the poetry and the majesty of his theme, and sings it with effortless perfection. It was good to hear this singer whose luscious notes are so rare, singing as one of them, with the great chorus. The other soloists later joined their voices to the work and gave pleasure in doing so.—Erie Daily Times.

Wolfsohn Musical Bureau News.

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, who has won distinguished recognition among male recital singers heard here every season, announces his sixth New York recital in Aeolian Hall for Monday evening, October 26.

Alma Gluck, the soprano, will be heard in a New York recital this winter. The extensive concert tour which Miss Gluck will undertake this season necessitated the selection of an earlier date than it is customary for her to sing a recital in this city, so Carnegie Hall has been engaged for Saturday afternoon, October 31.

Florence Hinkle, soprano, is to sing five concerts during the winter with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, two of which will be given in Boston on December 18 and 19. Miss Hinkle's most important New York engagement in the near future will be her song recital in Aeolian Hall on Monday afternoon, November 2.

Leonard Borwick, the English pianist, who at once established himself as a player of remarkable equipment on the occasion of the one recital given in this city three years ago, when en route to Europe from a trip around the world, is announced for a series of three recitals in Carnegie Hall, the first to be given on Thursday afternoon, November 5. Mr. Borwick has spent the summer in Australia, where he had a remarkably successful tour.

Mme. Schumann-Heink opened her season with a song recital in Sioux Falls, S. D., on Monday evening of last week, and after four weeks' touring in the Middle West will come East for her first song recital here in several years, which will be given in Carnegie Hall, Tuesday afternoon, November 17.

Efrem Zimbalist, the Russian violinist, who is now making his third tour of the United States under the management of the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, opens his Eastern tour in conjunction with the New York Symphony Orchestra. The combination will play in Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, etc. On October 23 and 25 they will be heard in New York. Mr. Zimbalist will give his first New York recital in Carnegie Hall, on Saturday afternoon, November 14.

Frank Gittelson, the young American violinist, has returned to this country after several years abroad, and will make his debut with the Philadelphia Orchestra in Philadelphia on October 30 and 31. His first New York appearance will be with the New York Symphony Orchestra in Aeolian Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 8. He has also been engaged to play at the Metropolitan Opera House in the first popular concert and on the afternoon of November 23 will give a recital in Aeolian Hall.

Olga Samaroff, the pianist, will be one of the busiest artist touring here this winter. Texas, her home State, is eagerly looking forward to her visit there, for it will be the first opportunity of hearing her since her rise to fame. Her first recital in New York will be in Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, November 28.

From Vaudeville to Legitimate.

Belle Story, erstwhile "headliner" in vaudeville, made her initial bow on the legitimate stage in Philadelphia on September 30. Miss Story had been singing in vaudeville for some years and had attained to the position of one of the highest salaried singers in that line of work. She was ambitious, however, and during this summer studied with Joseph Baernstein Regneas, the vocal instructor and operatic coach, to whom many prominent artists now be-for the public owe their success, and achieved the most gratifying results at her debut in Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia press has expressed itself as follows:

Belle Story had several successes in song, her coloratura soprano lending itself beautifully to the requirements of each song and showing to fine advantage to the accompaniment of the flute.—The Philadelphia Record, October 1, 1914.

Belle Story, making her initial appearance on the professional stage, disclosed a voice of striking quality and facility of execution and expression, together with a sweet, girlish presence that had a refreshing non-professional stamp.—Philadelphia Inquirer, October 1, 1914.

Belle Story, as the Goddess of the Lamp, was given opportunities for some delightful coloratura singing which evoked general and long sustained applause.—Philadelphia Press, October 1, 1914.

The singing is excellent throughout, vocal honors going to Belle Story, a soprano of real merit.—Philadelphia North American, October 1, 1914.

Belle Story's excellent coloratura soprano is heard to advantage in the role of the Spirit of the Lamp.—Philadelphia Public Ledger, October 1, 1914.

VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone

A. CARBONE MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References. AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates
GODOWSKY
Will be in America this Season
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.
KNABE PIANO USED

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Cincinnati College of Music Notes.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 9, 1914.

The excellent results achieved in the performance of grand opera in English by local singers such as those given by the Springer Opera Club, has given impetus to the proposed plan of several years ago to continue this useful work along the same efficient lines as heretofore. Patrons of the College of Music operas have been unanimous in their approval of the general excellence of performance as well as of the seleetion of works given in the last and look expectantly to the announcement of this year's production. Well established in the professional ranks at this time are former members of the Springer Opera Club who received their training and experience in public performance in local productions of "The Mock Doctor," "The Doll of Nuremberg," "Bon Soir M. Pantalon," "Merry Wives of Windsor," "The Golden Cross," "The Marriage of Jeannette," scenes from "Freischütz," "Don Giovanni," "Traviata," "La Gioconda," "Aida," "Carmen," "Martha," "Mephistopheles," "Madame Butterfly," "Trovatore," "Faust," "Hänsel and Gretel," and of late years "L'Amico Fritz," "Cosi fan Tutte," "Mirella," "LeVille," "Lakme," "Marriage of Figaro," and "Tales of Hoffmann." The last named opera was given with such finish that its performance is still fresh in the memory of those who attended. In the above mentioned list of works which the College of Music opera forces gave, were many notable productions and from the various casts were selected singers whose vocal, histrionic and personal gifts were of such merit as to entitle them to professional consideration. Such graduates of the Springer school of training experienced little difficulty in making successful careers; so many did so that individual mention would be rather difficult.

Students aspiring for operatic training are fortunate in having not only able and experienced professional directors for the exhibition of their talents when properly developed, but also in having the most skilled specialist in the art of vocal training to give them the necessary foundation. In addition to the notable work in this regard that has been done in the past by Lino Mattioli, Mme. Louise Dotti and Giacinto Gorno, the vocal department has been further strengthened by the addition of Hans Schroeder.

An event of special importance will be the premier of Hans Schroeder, baritone, in a recital at the Odeon, October 20. Mr. Schroeder's recital is included in the subscription series and music lovers may enjoy an evening of German lieder singing such as has not been afforded them for some time. In programs of this kind Mr. Schroeder has been highly praised for his interpretations. Assisting at the piano will be Louis Victor Saar, than whom there is no greater authority of the requirements of the works to be presented on this occasion.

Another recital of unusual interest will be that of Walter Gilewicz, the young pianist of the College of Music faculty, who will be heard at the Odeon, October 27. Mr. Gilewicz is at present busily engaged in the preparation of his program, and since his repertoire is extensive, he is not quite prepared to announce his numbers.

Seagle at Wells College.

The following program was given by Oscar Seagle at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., on October 1, Frank Bibb at the piano:

Promesse de mon avenir (Le Roi de Lahore)	Massenet
Musette	Old French
Tambourin	Old French
Lamento	Duparc
Enfant si j'étais roi	Cui
Zwei Zigeunerlieder	Dvorák
Ständchen	Schumann
Alte Liebe	Brahms
Botschaft	Brahms
Serenade Italienne	Chausson
Rencontre	Fauré
Chanson Triste	Duparc
Vision Fugitive (Herodiade)	Massenet
Would to God I Were the Tender Apple Blossom	Ballynure ballad
Ah, Love, but a Day	Mrs. Beach
Smuggler's Song	Kernochan
Indian Elegy	Bibb

Bedford Music Club Opens Season.

The Matinee Musicale Club, of Bedford, Ind., opened its season Thursday night, October 1, with a chamber music concert by the Zoellner Quartet, of Brussels. This is the first of the artist concerts arranged for this season. The other attractions arranged for are Robert Armbruster, pianist; Mrs. William Calvin Chilton, the interpretative reader, and Jenny Dufau, the coloratura soprano of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company, assisted by Charles Lurvey, pianist.

A large audience greeted the Zoellners, who gave a scholarly reading of the Beethoven quartet, op. 18, No. 2; the new Iwanow quartet, and several other modern works. The present season promises to be the most successful in the history of the Matinee Musicale.

Mrs. J. R. Voris is president of the club.

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
STEINWAY PIANO USED
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

FLORENCE MULFORD
CONTRALTO
Of the Metropolitan Opera Company
HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street NEW YORK
Personal Address:
1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Phone, 525 W-Market

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
115 E. 53rd St., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management,
Iris Pendleton,
Philharmony Hall,
Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
STUDIO: 327 CENTRAL PARK WEST
Phone, Riverside 3170

GEORGE HAMLIN
The Celebrated Tenor
NOW IN AMERICA
Available for Entire Season
HAENSEL & JONES. AEOLIAN HALL. NEW YORK

MADAME MOLIÈRE
Grand Opera Prima Donna
Vocal Culture. Special attention to voice placing. Voices tried free during October. Address, 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N. Y. Phone, 3900 New Rochelle, N. Y. Studio also in N. Y.

MANUEL QUIROGO
THE WONDERFUL SPANISH VIOLINIST
American Tour Opens
Hippodrome, Sunday Eve., October 18th
Direction Sam S. and Lee Shubert
MANAGEMENT, R. E. JOHNSTON,
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK CITY

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and how control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,

51 West 76th St., New York.

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Concerts of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra are to be given this season in the Detroit Opera House the third Thursday afternoon in each month. The first concert will take place on November 19, and the other dates are December 17, January 21, February 18, March 18 and April 15. The programs for the series are as follows:

Thursday, November 19—
Symphony, C major.....Beethoven
Siegfried Idyll.....Wagner
Invitation to the Dance.....Weber-Weingartner
Thursday, December 17—
Symphony, C minor.....Brahms
Valse Triste.....Sibelius
Hänsel und Gretel Vorspiel.....Humperdinck
Thursday, January 21—
The Marriage of Figaro, overture.....Mozart
Symphony, E minor.....Dvorák
L'Arlesienne, Suite No. 1.....Bizet
Thursday, February 18—
Prelude, choral and fugue.....Bach-Abert
Concerto for piano, A minor.....Grieg
Marche Slav.....Tschaikowsky
Soloist, Katharine Goodson.
Thursday, March 18—
Symphony, in E flat, No. 39.....Mozart
Tristan and Isolde Vorspiel.....Wagner

WESTON GALES,
Conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Lohengrin, Introduction to third act.....Wagner
Meistersinger Vorspiel.....Wagner
Thursday, April 15—
Iphigenia in Aulis, overture.....Gluck
Symphony, B minor (unfinished).....Schubert
Capriccio Espagnole.....Rimsky-Korsakoff

This series of six concerts is the result of a movement on the part of Detroit to have a symphony orchestra, which was found to be possible after the successful concert of February 26 of last year. As a result of this success a guarantee fund of $15,000 was secured for this season and the society incorporated under the laws of the State of Michigan with a board of twenty directors and executive committee, president, Otto N. Kirschner. The orchestra is made up of seventy men, all local musicians. The idea is to develop in Detroit an orchestra of local musicians more or less (as was done in the case of the Minneapolis Orchestra) and not import foreign musicians. The orchestra shall give opportunity to Detroit musicians to show what they can do.

Within a short time after the sale of seats began last spring nearly $1,000 worth of seats were disposed of, and the sale of seats this fall shows real demand for them. The situation, therefore, is very promising, indeed.

Hartford's Concert Series.

Manager George Kelley announces another list of important attractions for Hartford, Conn., this season. On Tuesday, January 26, Francis Macmillen and Tina Lerner will open the series, to be followed during the winter by Evan Williams, Herbert Witherspoon, Arrigo Serato, Carl Friedberg, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Edward McNamara, Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist. Mr. Kelley soon will make known his plans in other cities of New England.

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
150 West 104th Street, New York
Phone 3832 Riverside
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 112

George CARRE
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Joseph Baernstein Regneas
TEACHER OF SINGING
Telephone Schuyler 3786 Studio, 133 W. 80th St., New York
From the first rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for Concert, Oratorio and Opera

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1451 Broadway, New York

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN 1451 Broadway, New York

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, New York

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Menegement: The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St., New York City Phone, Madison Square 3789

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL:
64 East 34th St.
NEW YORK CITY.

SLEZAK
The Great Dramatic Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

DENVER CONCERTS.

2735 East Colfax Avenue,
Denver, Col., October 5, 1914.

The first concert of the season by the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, Horace Tureman, conductor, will be given at the Auditorium, Thursday evening, October 15, when Julia Claussen, contralto, will make her first appearance here in concert. This series of concerts, six in number, will be under the management of Robert Slack, and will be given at popular prices.

Other artists to be presented during the year will be Rudolph Ganz, pianist, November 3; Arrigo Serato, violinist, December 1; John McCormack, tenor, January 21; Elena Gerhardt, lieder singer, February 1, and Alma Gluck on March 17. Each artist will be heard several times on the program with orchestral accompaniment for one number. The officers of the Denver Philharmonic Association are: E. B. Field, president; H. M. Porter, vice-president; Mrs. Roblin H. Davis, secretary, and Roblin H. Davis, treasurer. The Board of Directors comprises Mrs. E. W. Collins, Ella Hayt, Mrs. W. E. Porter, Mrs. H. S. Walker, C. D. Hayt, and Roger Wolcott.

Mrs. Blanche Dingley Mathews will give an informal talk at the Wilcox Studios on Friday evening, October 9, on "Music Education."

An event of interest in musical circles during the past month was the marriage of David Abramowitz, violinist, and Florence Lamont, accompanist and contralto, both well known musicians of this city.

An organization has been formed by some of the best women amateurs of the city to give a series of concerts of chamber music during the winter. Two quintets have been organized; the first group is made up of Eleanor Young, leader, with Della Hoover, Mrs. Pierpont Fuller, Mary Joslin and Lola Carrier Worrell at the piano. The second group of strings is Frankie Nast, leader, with Mrs. George Cramner, Mrs. Fuller, Mary Joslin and Mrs. Worrell. The concerts will be given in the drawing rooms of some of the largest residences in the city and will be invitation affairs.

Ben Pobercsky, a talented young violinist pupil of the late Morris Bezman, gave a benefit concert at the Central Presbyterian Church, September 24. The proceeds of the concert will be used by Mr. Poberesky for further study in New York City this winter. He was assisted by Bertie Berlin, soprano; Simon Breyn, pianist, and Larry Whipp, accompanist.

DOLORES REEDY MAXWELL.

Tina Lerner with San Francisco Orchestra.

Among the engagements to be filled by Tina Lerner on her forthcoming Pacific Coast tour are two appearances with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Henry K. Hadley, conductor, on December 4 and 11. "It is for the first time in the history of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra that an artist is to appear as soloist at two regular concerts, and Tina Lerner happens to be the artist," writes Frank Healy, manager of the orchestra. Miss Lerner will play at the first concert the Tschaikowsky concerto, by request, and at the second the Saint-Saëns G minor concerto. She is also engaged for two recitals in the same city.

TINA LERNER
At Ilfracombe, Devonshire, England, June, July, 1914, before the outbreak of the war.

Tina Lerner scored a tremendous success on the Pacific Coast two years ago, on the strength of which she is now booked for a large number of important concerts in California and the Northwest.

"What do they mean by the European concert?"

"They mean that the bullets are whistling, the shells are humming, and the cannon are playing."

STEINWAY

MASTER musicians, past and present, have achieved their greatest successes upon Steinway Pianos.

The Steinway of half a century ago was the preferred instrument of the "maestro," because of its mechanical perfection and its melodious sweetness, sonority and power of tone.

The Steinway of today is an even greater musical marvel—and every Steinway Piano is a Steinway in all the attributes implied by that name.

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
STEINWAY HALL
107-109 East 14th Street, New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Florence Macbeth
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera
DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBER

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

McCormack's Ready Wit.

One of those indescribable bonds of humor exists between John McCormack and Charles L. Wagner. In the accompanying snapshot Mr. McCormack is caught laughing over a recent witticism of Mr. Wagner. There is a bare possibility that his smile may be the broader at the thought of how his manager will receive his own answer to the same.

Mr. Wagner wrote Mr. McCormack asking the tenor to fill a few extra dates as he (Wagner) needed a new barn on his farm, to which the tenor replied with characteristic Celtic humor, "Season looks good and I will fill the extra dates, but I am not keen enough about it to cable."

JOHN McCORMACK IN A HAPPY MOOD.

John Prindle Scott at the Waldorf-Astoria.

John Prindle Scott, the baritone composer, has been secured by the Women's Press Club, New York, for an open meeting to be held in the Astor Gallery, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, Saturday afternoon, October 31.

On this occasion the program, which will be composed entirely of Scott songs, will be presented by Charles Floyd, tenor, and L. R. Boals, baritone, with the composer at the piano.

Songs from the pen of this gifted young composer are becoming more and more in demand, likewise the request for a program of Scott songs, with the composer at the piano, is steadily on the increase.

Arrigo Serato Dates.

Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, is booked for the following appearances:

October 23, Pittsburgh, Pa.; October 27, North Adams, Mass.; October 28, Pittsfield, Mass.; November 8, Boston, Mass.; November 11, Farmington; November 12, Waterbury, Conn.; November 15 and 25. New York; November 26 and 27, Cincinnati, Ohio; December 1, Denver, Col.; December 2-17, Pueblo, California tour; December 18 and 19, St. Louis, Mo.; December 27, New York; January 3, Chicago, Ill.; January 6, Boston, Mass.; January 8, Washington, D. C.

Carl Friedberg's Bookings.

Carl Friedberg, the pianist, is booked for the following dates:

October 23, Pittsburgh, Pa.; October 27, North Adams, Mass.; October 28, Pittsfield, Mass.; November 2, New York; November 6 and 7, Cincinnati, Ohio; November 12, Waterbury, Conn.; November 20 and 21, St. Louis, Mo.; November 30, Boston, Mass.; December 6, New York; December 13, Chicago, Ill.; January 3, 1915, New York Philharmonic.

Quirogo at Hippodrome
Sunday Night, October 18

The Messrs. Shubert announce that the first New York appearance of Manuel Quirogo, the young Spanish violinist, will be made at the Hippodrome, Sunday night, October 18. This will also be the first Hippodrome concert of the season.

Lee Shubert heard Quirogo at a concert in Naples and immediately secured him for an American tour. Quirogo is a native of Madrid.

Helen von Doenhoff Begins Her Season.

Helen von Doenhoff, the opera contralto, has returned from her vacation, which she spent in the mountains. Mme. von Doenhoff, whose success as a vocal teacher has been demonstrated since she gave up her operatic career, has reopened her studio for the season at 1186 Madison avenue, New York, where she is busy with her teaching and coaching.

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

PAUL
DRAPER
LIEDER SINGER
TEACHER OF VOICE
Personal address: 18 West 8th Street
For concerts, recitals, etc., address:
LOUDON CHARLTON,
Carnegie Hall New York

...BELLE...
GOTTSCHALK
Lyric Soprano
ORATORIO :: CONCERT :: RECITAL
In America Entire Season
MANAGEMENT
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
COLORATURA SOPRANO, Grand Opera Prima Donna
Now in America Season 1914-15 Booking
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
New York Recital, Aeolian Hall, Afternoon, Nov. 6
Brooklyn Recital, Brooklyn Institute, Evening, Nov. 4
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

LORETTA del VALLÉ

SOPRANO COLORATURA

First Time in America
Season 1914-15

OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM

AMERICAN ENGAGEMENTS
Management ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

The Sensation of the Year

CARL
FLESCH

The Great Hungarian Violinist

Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915

Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York

KNABE PIANO

MARCELLA
CRAFT

Five years Prima Donna Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS

SOLOIST
Maine Festivals, Portland & Bangor, Oct. 1-5, 1914.
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 6, 1914.
San Francisco Recital, Nov. 8, 1914.
Riverside, Cal., Recital, Nov. 10, 1914.
Los Angeles, Cal., Recital, Nov. 12, 1914.
San Diego, Cal., Recital, Nov. 13, 1914, etc.

Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Mabel McKinley

SOPRANO

Pupil of
ISADORE LUCKSTONE

Concert Recital
Oratorio

For open dates and other information, address
The Musical Courier, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

Matzenauer at Covent Garden.

London music critics wrote in high praise of Margarete Matzenauer's appearances as Ortrud in "Lohengrin" and Kundry in "Parsifal" at Covent Garden last season. The Daily Telegraph, February 5, 1914, gave this estimate of the Metropolitan Opera Company's contralto's work: "Many a year is past since so magnificent an impersonation of the feline, evil Ortrud as Mme. Matzenauer has appeared here." The Sunday Times, May 3, 1914, referred to her Kundry in this manner: "In many ways it is perhaps the most vocally finished impersonation that has so far been presented, . . . her art was unfailingly attractive, and of the numerous singers who have essayed this impersonation, hers ranks without doubt among the most conspicuously attractive."

A more comprehensive appreciation follows in the following excerpts from the London press:

The chief honors of the evening fell to Mme. Matzenauer, for her portrayal of the treacherous character of Ortrud.—Evening Standard, February 5, 1914.

Mme. Matzenauer made ber first appearance in England at the opera a week ago. She took the part of the sinister Ortrud in "Lohengrin," and displayed a gloriously full and resonant voice, wide in range and thrilling in power and variety. Not for a long time has Ortrud's music in the second act been better sung.—Daily News and Leader, London, April 5, 1914.

A new singer, Mme. Matzenauer, made a favorable impression as Ortrud. She has a mezzo-soprano voice of considerable volume and good tone quality, and her singing is of genuine dramatic value. Her scenes in Act I had a fine intensity.—Daily Chronicle, London, May 2, 1914.

The newcomer to the cast and to the forces at the Royal Opera in the shape of Mme. Matzenauer is entitled to special attention. She had no difficulty in proving herself an artist of the highest rank. Her Ortrud was deeply impressive. . . . She is not only a fine dramatic singer, but she has a voice of great compass, musical on every note.—Morning Post, London.

In Lohengrin on Friday the most noteworthy feature of the performance was, perhaps, the splendid Ortrud of Frau Matzenauer.—Truth, London, June 5, 1914.

The most notable debut as yet at Covent Garden this season has been that of Mme. Matzenauer. . . . It would be impossible to speak of the newcomer in other than superlative terms. Endowed with a mezzo-soprano voice of fine range and resonance, and of a rich and beautiful timbre, she uses it to the highest possible advantage.—Lady's Pictorial, June 5, 1914.

On Saturday, when "Parsifal" was repeated for about the twentieth time, we saw one of the most dramatic Kundrys of the many that bave appeared as the strange creature who assumed at will the role of a savage, a courtesan and a penitent. In fact, Frau Matzenauer's Kundry is one of the best in every way.—Daily Express, London, May 4, 1914.

The Ortrud of Mme. Matzenauer, who is another of this season's many newcomers, was a striking performance. Her voice is rich and powerful, and she has a strong sense of dramatic effect.—Daily Graphic, London, May 4, 1914.

The newcomer, Mme. Matzenauer, is probably the greatest of German contraltos. Naturally, a contralto voice cannot give the scenes in Act II the same trenchant effect. The compensation on Saturday was singing of wondrously rich and voluptuous quality.—Daily Mail, May 4, 1914.

And though expectations are not always realized, there is an additional pleasure and gratification when a singer of this stamp makes her appearance. There are many other parts in which the public would like to see her, and it is to be hoped that their wishes will be considered. Mme. Matzenauer is too great an artist to be abruptly banished.—Morning Post, London, May 4, 1914.

The feature of the evening was the appearance of Frau Matzenauer, the successful Ortrud of the night before, in the part of Kundry. Her convincing style in "Lohengrin" had helped to stimulate curiosity, which turned out to be amply justified, for her rendering of the part gives her high rank among Wagnerian singers.—The Pall Mall Gazette, London, May 4, 1914.

Mme. Matzenauer will appear in concert before and after her opera engagements under the management of Haensel & Jones. (Advertisement.)

Unmusical Sausalito.

Evidently the neighbors did not think much of the singing of Antonio, a Sausalito (Cal.) fisherman, for he was arrested and fined on a charge of disturbing the peace. "Dees town she no lika da moos'," said Antonio sadly, in speaking of his vocal excursion. "Dees peop' no on'erstan.' New York she geeva da Carus' $2,500 for seeng one song. Me I seeng da Sausalit' for not'ing and da judge say twent'-fi' dollar l"

The latest thing in program music is a couple of puns. The name of the piece containing them is "The Herring." It is, of course, pitched in the key of C. There are loud thumpings in the lower tones and a number of brilliant runs above. Asked for an explanation of these, the composer, whose name is withheld for obvious reasons, replied: "The thumpings express the booming of the sea, and the runs are, of course, the scales on the herring."—Lincoln (Neb.) Journal.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY OF NEW YORK

Founded 1842
1914—Seventy-third Season—1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

Subscription Series

Twelve Thursday Evening, Sixteen Friday Afternoon, Twelve Sunday Afternoon and Four Saturday Evening Concerts at Carnegie Hall, New York; Two Concerts for Young People at Aeolian Hall; Five Sunday Afternoon Concerts in the Brooklyn Academy of Music; and series in Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS
New England New York State
Middle West

SOLOISTS

LUCREZIA BORI, Soprano
ALMA GLUCK, Soprano
LUCILLE WEINGARTNER-MARCEL, Soprano
JULIA CULP, Soprano
JOHANNA GADSKI, Soprano
ELENA GERHARDT, Soprano
PASQUALE AMATO, Baritone

FRITZ KREISLER, Violinist
EFREM ZIMBALIST, Violinist
ARRIGO SERATO, Violinist
JACQUES THIBAUD, Violinist
LEOPOLD KRAMER, Violinist

LEO SCHULZ, Violoncellist
F. DeANGELIS, Oboe

FERRUCCIO BUSONI, Pianist
OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH, Pianist
CARL FRIEDBERG, Pianist
ELEANOR SPENCER, Pianist
GERMAINE SCHNITZER, Pianist

KITTY CHEATHAM will be the soloist at the Two Concerts for Young People.

Prospectus containing detailed information may be had on application to:

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager
Carnegie Hall New York

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
NOW IN AMERICA
CONCERT ORATORIO
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO. 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Jerome Uhl to Enter Concert Field.

Jerome Uhl is entering the concert field this season under the management of R. E. Johnston, and a brief outline of this artist's career may prove of interest. His father, S. Jerome Uhl, the famous American portrait painter, gave him his art education under the best masters in painting both here and abroad. After ten years of success as an illustrator and painter, in which time he contributed to nearly all the leading magazines of America, the call of music proved so alluring that, to put it in his own words, "I could not see the canvas before my eyes when music tingled in my ears." Accordingly in 1907, having finished the last of a series of drawings for the New York Herald, entitled "How They Look When They Sing," in which were shown characteristic pictures of Plancon, Farrar, Bonci, Vigna and many others, he threw down his brush, went abroad to study, and afterward sang in concert and opera in France, Germany and Italy. At first, he made a series of discouraging failures, due to inability to bring out in the theatre the good impression made on the foreign impresarios in the smaller halls, however, in the end the prophets were right, for an artist must pass through various vicissitudes in the molding. Today Jerome Uhl stands as one of the most finished and magnetic personalities on the concert, oratorio and opera stage—the finished product from the University of Patience, sincerity, hard work, joys and tears, and good schooling.

JEROME UHL.

During his career at home and abroad, Mr. Uhl has been the recipient of many valuable press notices and individual compliments, a few of which are appended:

Jerome Uhl, a member of the Century Opera Company in New York, gave a recital last night.

His voice is of that timbre and range which has been termed bass-baritone. It is of exceptionally fine quality and full of power and resonance from the lowest to the highest register. Moreover, the training which Mr. Uhl has received seems to have been of the best, judging by the control which he exhibited over his vocal organs last night in a program which surely was a good test in this direction. That Mr. Uhl is, in the first place, an operatic singer was at all times evident from his manner on the stage and from the delivery of his songs. However, instead of weakening the favorable impression created, his performance was made rather the more interesting thereby.

As an opening number Mr. Uhl sang an aria from "Salvator Rosa," by Gomes, which was followed by one of the two famous bass arias from Mozart's "Magic Flute." Then came a group of songs sung in French, several of which had to be repeated, and all of which were finely done, as was also the group which was sung in German, and which followed the above. A number of American songs closed the program, which had served to introduce to Cincinnati a singer with fine equipment and of evident seriousness of purpose. It is to be hoped that this was not the last time that we will have the occasion to enjoy Mr. Uhl's vocal efforts.—Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer.

I never heard of him before, but it is simply gorgeous singing; that's all.—Oscar Hammerstein.

It is his unusual intelligence, which is of a very keen order, that counts with me and it is this quality that is sure to place him in the front rank.—Milton Aborn.

Exceptional ability—especially beautiful are his high tones.—Dr. Ernst Kunwald.

I ask you, where is his equal among the bass-baritones?—Dr. Alfred Robyn.

The most finished artist and the finest voice at the Century in all the casts I attended.—Sig. E. Marsialls.

"La Marseillaise," sung by Mr. Uhl, was an exhibition of patriotic singing probably never excelled in Toronto. This popular

SOUSA AND HIS BAND
"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"
Office: 1 West 34th Street
Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH
CONCERT VIOLINIST
Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New Yo

WILFRIED KLAMROTH TEACHER SINGING
NEW STUDIO: 124 EAST 39th STREET
Tel. 4421 Murray Hill

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO
Concert-Recital-Orato
Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New Yo

FLORENCE AUSTIN
America's Violinist
Season 1914-1915 Now Bookin
Engaged for Maine Festivals, with B ton Symphony Orchestra; Aeolian Hall R cital, December 3; Norwich Monday Mu cal Club, etc.
Address THOMAS McGRATH, 133 E 34th St., N. Y. Phone, Murray Hill, 2239.

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRA and TEACH
Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street
Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 205

MARIE KAISER
SOPRANO
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New Yo

MARGARET SHIRLEY
Soprano
Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales
IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY
Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New Y

FRANCES ALDA SOPRAN OF THE METROPOLITA OPERA CO.
Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist
SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Menegement for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York Ci
Baldwin Piano Used

DRAMATIC MEZZO SOPRANO
SARA HEINEMAN
Concerts and Recitals, also Southern Folk Songs in Costume
3671 Broadway - - New York City

WITHERSPOON
BASS Metropolitan Opera
Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct. 1st. to Jan. 15th
Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER
Distinguished Russian Pianist
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

Mme. KATE ROLLA
Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.
PUPIL OF MARCHESI
Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.
JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE
Studio, 251 West 81st Street, N. Y. Phone, Schuyler, 396

Baroness Evans
Von KLENNER
America's Representative of the
GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD
Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.
Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

FRANKLIN RIKER
In America Season 1914-15
rsonal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York
Phone, 3964 Riverside

IME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
3 Mathilda St., Apt. 5 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
nagement, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
ocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

DELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
structor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON
AMERICAN PIANIST
anagement: Robert P. Strine, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

MIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
ldress: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
rection: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15
LOUIS SIEGEL
Violin Virtuoso
FIRST AMERICAN TOUR
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
om the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing r concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of mous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
ne. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel rrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, rano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville rrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss a Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen ward, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, ntralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis eidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, sso.
EL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

baritone is deserving of the epithet Great; his splendid ringing voice and the fervor of his work winning him a spontaneous and hearty recall.—Toronto World.

A convincing artist, such singing is a delight to hear.—New York Herald.

Jerome Uhl as the Count Monterone was picturesque and sang with fine dramatic effect.—Brooklyn Eagle.

One of the distinct surprises of the season—before an audience which was highly enthusiastic.—Cincinnati Times Star.

Jerome Uhl, Jr., sang some charming songs in his strong, fresh bass-baritone, several of which he had to repeat.—Philadelphia Press.

. . . and Jerome Uhl, the latter having a voice that is well worth hearing as he evidently understands how to use it.—New York Times.

Among the many patriotic songs on the program, the most stirring performance was the singing of "La Marseillaise," by Jerome Uhl, the possessor of a fine ringing baritone. He sang the fiery French national song with a sweep of feeling that made it one of the features of the evening. It might almost be said to have established Mr. Uhl as the outstanding member of the quartet. It might be added that Miss Garrison (the Metropolitan soprano) and Mr. Uhl gave the duet from "Don Giovanni" with a finish and lightness that were delightful.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Jerome Uhl, fresh from a season of European successes, was especially pleasing, as the great applause which greeted his "Why Do the Nations So Furiously Rage Together?" evinced. Mr. Uhl will be a welcome addition to artistic visitors in the local concert world.—Detroit, Mich., News.

The tale of the witches and the rural superstition was made conspicuously good by the rich voice and spirit of Jerome Uhl as the father in the opera, "Hansel and Gretel."—Washington Post.

(Advertisement.)

Captain and Mme. Julia Claussen En Route.

The accompanying picture shows Captain and Julia Claussen on board the steamship New York en route from Liverpool to New York.

The Claussens have reached Chicago, and the contralto is enjoying a few days' rest before starting on her extensive concert tour, which has been booked by Alma Voedisch, of Chicago.

CAPTAIN AND JULIA CLAUSSEN ABOARD S.S. NEW YORK EN ROUTE FROM LIVERPOOL TO NEW YORK.

Miller Vocal Art Science.

Adelaide Gescheidt, who teaches the Miller vocal art science, tells briefly in a few words just what this means.

Quoting from the circular, she says as follows:

Miller Vocal Art Science is based on natural laws that govern normal voice emission.

The latter is dependent upon perfect co-ordination of every muscle of the body, extrinsically and intrinsically, together with its combined prismatic action and correlation of all the autonomies or centres of force throughout the nervous system.

The instrument of voice may then become the perfect mechanism that nature intended for singing. Through definite training by the teacher of this new science all this becomes automatic with the singer and is entirely under his intelligent mental control finally.

He is then able to sing entirely from the aesthetic side and is not hampered by an unbalanced or imperfect mechanism.

The latter shows conclusively the reason why one laboring with the physical side of voice can never truly sing or express that which he is endeavoring to sing, while another singer will sing and feel his song, and depict the picture in words and music with ease. Voice analysis is made possible through its pitch, resonance, and power, by our God-given guide, the hearing, and makes voice a fact, with the definite procedures that this vocal art science has established in its system.

Mme. Soder-Hueck Returns.

Ada Soder-Hueck, the German contralto and voice trainer, wishes to announce her safe return from Europe and will gladly welcome her many pupils, patrons and friends on and after October 11.

An opening reception was held in Mme. Soder-Hueck's studio, Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York, on Sunday afternoon, October 11.

THE musician who reviews in his mind the many appeals of many piano-makers instinctively connects the word "Chickering" with the word "quality." If it were simply a tradition of the past without any present significance, this universal acknowledgment of the Chickering's superiority would mean but little.

But the musicians of this country are thinking in the present tense when they associate Chickering and quality. They are thinking of today's products enriched by glorious yesterdays of artistic development. They are thinking of the honors that the Chickering has won in the past, of the honors it is today winning and they know that the makers of the Chickering will continue to produce for future generations an instrument well worthy of its distinguished predecessors.

Chickering
Piano

Chickering & Sons
Boston
Established 1823 Pianos and Players
Division of American Piano Co.

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND THE ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill

LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1914.

No. 1803

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeb, Box 79.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 312 Menzies St.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, care of G. Schirmer, 18 Berners St., London W. In charge.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

The public aims at the "stars."

Vienna has decided to keep its Royal Opera closed until after the war.

It is worthy of mention that the Century Opera has placed to its credit an excellent production of "Lohengrin," now being sung at that institution.

No theatrical, operatic or musical performances are taking place in Paris, according to news just received from J. F. Delma-Heide (one time MUSICAL COURIER representative), who is assisting the French capital in its ambulance service.

The new Pope's attitude regarding Gregorian music in the churches has not yet been made public. Many singers are hoping for a return to the mixed choirs and freer music in vogue before the late Pontiff promulgated his restraining edict.

The Metropolitan Opera Company announces that "through the intercession of the French Ambassador in Washington, the French Government has consented to set free Albert Reiss, the tenor, who has been a prisoner of war, and to permit him to come to America."

A fair operatic exchange is no musical robbery. Formerly the Philadelphia Opera used to give Tuesday evening performances at the Metropolitan in New York. This winter the Metropolitan will give nine Tuesday evening performances in Philadelphia, beginning November 24.

Our London office informs us as follows: "Lancelot, in the Referee, is authority for the statement that Joseph Holbrooke, the English composer, has been commissioned to write the music of a ballet, 'The Enchanted Garden' (scenario by Mr. Mallock), for Mme. Pavlowa, the premiere to take place this winter in America."

Harold Bauer has arrived in San Francisco from Honolulu and now is beginning his American tour. He will remain in this country indefinitely, having been compelled to cancel his European dates for next year owing to the war. Many students and professionals have been inquiring whether Harold Bauer will do any teaching in America this season. It is to be presumed that he may do so after his concerts are over late in the winter.

Rumors bring information that the Boston Opera House is to be used this winter as an auditorium for moving pictures. At the same time reports reach the MUSICAL COURIER that the orchestra and singers at Oscar Hammerstein's Lexington Avenue Opera House have received two weeks' notice of the cancellation of their contracts. An entertainment had been running there in which grand opera and moving pictures moved side by side or end by end in true artistic fraternalism.

In London Music mention is made of the fact that when a Highland regiment marched through the Strand the other day its band played "Marching Through Georgia." The report continues: "That stirring tune, which puts quickness into the most laggard feet, has long been a favorite in the British army. It has been sung in India to cheer a weary march, and is called for both in the messroom and at the camp fire. The Germans know it, and when the Japanese entered Port Arthur in 1905 their bands played 'Marching Through Georgia.'" As the German bands play Sousa marches in preference to their own, it is good to know that if America is not permitted to carry grain and coal to the belligerents, at least it is allowed to supply them with music.

At Carnegie Hall, Sunday afternoon, October 18, will occur the New York piano recital of that splendid artist, Rudolph Ganz, who is to play the Bach-Busoni chaconne, Haydn's D major sonata, Chopin's sonata in B minor, and a group of smaller numbers by Blanchet, Rudolph Ganz, Korngold and Liszt.

At a matinee given recently in London by Isidore de Lara (composer of "Messalina," etc.) in aid of the fund for the relief of the destitute wives and children of the Frenchmen in England called to the front, among those who assisted were Mme. Edvina, Namara Toye, Mme. Kirkby-Lunn, Gertie Millar, Gaby Deslys, Sir Herbert Tree, Isidore de Lara and Thomas Beecham.

Chicago's hearings of the Century Opera Company will begin Monday evening, November 23, with "Aida," which will alternate with "Madame Butterfly" as the bill for the opening week. The casts for these operas are to be identical with those heard in New York. The rest of the eight weeks' repertoire will be "Romeo and Juliet," "The Jewels of the Madonna," "Samson and Delilah," "Tales of Hoffmann," "William Tell," "Trovatore," "Carmen," "Faust," "Lohengrin," "Lucia," "Louise," "Boheme," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci" and "Thais."

Opera's real advance guard—this is no jest—arrived here this week in the person of William J. Guard, the popular and able press representative of the Metropolitan. Mr. Guard really serves there in many more capacities than that of press sponsor, and his many sidedness never was more in evidence than at Paris this summer, when he made himself of incalculable use to the Metropolitan and to Giulio Gatti-Casazza by keeping in touch with the singers of the organization who were in difficulties because of the war stress and aiding their passage to places of safety. Among the works to be heard this winter at the Metropolitan, says Mr. Guard, are Borodin's "Prince Igor," Giordano's "Madam Sans Gene," Weber's "Euryanthe," "Fidelio," "Carmen," and the usual Wagner repertoire.

Sworn Statement Made Under Postal Law.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION ETC., required by the Act of August 24, 1912, of Musical Courier, published weekly at New York, N. Y., for October 1, 1914.

Name of	Post Office Address
Editor, Leonard Liebling	437 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City
Managing Editor, H. I. Bennett	437 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City
Business Manager, Alvin L. Schmoeger	437 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City
Publisher, Musical Courier Company	437 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City

Owners: (If a corporation, give its name and the names and addresses of stockholders holding 1 per cent. or more of total amount of stock. If not a corporation, give names and addresses of individual owners.)

Musical Courier Company	437 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City
Estate of Marc A. Blumenberg	437 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City

Known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders, holding 1 per cent. or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities: (If there are none, so state.)

.....

.....

None .....

(If additional space is needed, a sheet of paper may be attached to this form.)

Average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above. (This information is required from daily newspapers only.)

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY,
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER,
Treasurer and Business Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this fourteenth day of September, 1914.
[SEAL]
PETER W. SCHLEICHER,
Notary Public, No. 3792, N. Y. C.
(My commission expires March 30, 1915.)

THE CENTURY OPERA CRISIS.

The committee on popular opera of the City Club (founders and later in charge of the Century Opera enterprises) last week sent out an appeal to the public, asking it to become stockholders and guarantors of the Century Opera Company, in order to take the financial support of the institution away from the hands of the few wealthy men who support it and to place it under the direct monetary sponsorship of music lovers in general. The circular is too lengthy for complete quotation in the MUSICAL COURIER, but the chief arguments which it contains may be enumerated:

The Century Opera fulfills a worthy and important cultural and public spirited function in the attempt to establish opera in English, giving employment to American artists and enabling masses of music loving people who cannot afford to pay grand opera prices to listen to the great works of operatic art and undergo their stimulating and uplifting influence. . . . It has, furthermore, opened operatic classes, which, from the start, have been very largely attended. . . . The Century Opera may justly claim that within the short space of one year it has amply justified its existence and has demonstrated its title to the support of public spirited and art loving citizens; that it has brought joy and inspiration into the lives of thousands of people of moderate or small means who have heretofore been denied the opportunity of visiting the opera and to whom the discontinuance of the Century performances would mean a great disappointment and deprivation.

Following the setting forth of the foregoing and other reasons is the urgent appeal to "all friends of the movement for which the Century Opera stands." The recipient of the circular is invited either to become a stockholder or to join a guarantee fund to meet any deficit which may arise in the season of 1914-1915. The stockholders are to have all the usual rights in the conduct and control of the affairs of the institution, and are entitled to dividends, if earned, not exceeding 5 per cent. per annum. Participants in the guarantee fund are not to be called upon until one-third of the capital shall have been lost. Those whose names are signed to the appeal as members of the committee on popular opera are Edmund L. Baylies, James A. Burden, William C. Cornwell, Lincoln Cromwell, Edward R. Finch, Norman Hapgood, Frank S. Hastings, Roland Holt, Otto H. Kahn, Alvin W. Krech, Thomas W. Lamont, William C. Le Gendre, Dr. Henry M. Lydig, Clarence H. Mackay, Paul W. Sachs, Isaac N. Seligman, A. E. Stahlschmidt, Frank A. Vanderlip, Paul M. Warburg, Harry Payne Whitney, Winthrop Ames, Ernest T. Carter, and Gardner Lamson.

As was announced in the MUSICAL COURIER of last week, the Century Opera intends to give up its New York winter season on November 21 and open a course of performances in Chicago and other cities. When the news became known, cynical persons said that the step meant the complete abandonment of the Century Opera project, and such opinions were expressed even more freely after the sending out of the circular just quoted. Whether or not the present crisis marks the end of the Century Opera so far as its permanency in the metropolis is concerned, the fact remains that up to this moment the project has not been a paying one, and it will be remembered that at the inception of the undertaking the MUSICAL COURIER pointed out the great risk which the projectors were courting. As some of the most influential members of the Century Opera committee are also connected with the financial direction of the Metropolitan Opera, it was understood that they regarded the establishment of a cheap opera house as a means of education for the public, and a stimulus to engender in it a love for grand opera as the basis of a taste for the more expensive brand. It was overlooked, however, that the middle and poorer classes of our population fill the balconies, galleries and standing room space at the Metropolitan at practically the same prices for which they obtain orchestra seats at the Century Opera. As long as the Metropolitan was emphasizing and advertising the fact that it is the best opera house in the world, the general public saw no reason why it should patronize an inferior institution. Logic seemed to make certain the proposition that the average person would prefer to sit in the gallery and hear the best opera rather than to sit in an orchestra chair and hear something less desirable. While the company at the Century Opera was a good one, it contained no recognized "stars" of the sensational kind, and as the public was familiar with the names of such luminaries, it knew the difference between them and the Century Opera singers so far as salaries and newspaper prominence were concerned. Furthermore, as it was generally understood that rich men were backing the Century Opera, the public therefore felt no particular patriotic impulse to take the burden off their hands.

Whether they will feel such an impulse at the present time remains to be seen, especially in view of the fact that the lack of profitable patronage at the Century Opera has become an open secret. The MUSICAL COURIER is inclined to think that the appeal of the Century Opera committee is being made a trifle too late in the proceedings. If the organization had from the first been an institution created by public need and popular demand and grown out of such conditions, the story to be told today might have been a different one. While the public has no intrinsic objection to being educated, it does not like to be told that it is being educated, and it rather resents the patronage of rich men in trying to educate it. Such a condition has nothing to do with class prejudice, but is based on far deeper psychological motives, which must be obvious to any one who has ever given the subject serious thought.

The experience of the Century Theatre Association, which was an attempt by rich men to found a national and educational dramatic movement, should have served as a potent warning. It is significant that the scheme came to grief in the same edifice which now houses the Century Opera.

While the MUSICAL COURIER sincerely hopes that the public will answer to the appeal of the committee on popular opera, chiefly for the sake of the excellent soloists, chorus and orchestra which now form the fine ensemble of the Century Opera, we must admit that we are not any too hopeful of a favorable result. The day has not yet come when an operatic institution can find continued existence without a subvention of some kind. If our public will give that subvention, so much the better for the cause of opera in America.

Regarding the question of opera in English, the Century scheme proved nothing, for the public stayed away from some of the performances in the vernacular just as strikingly as it stayed away from the representations in Italian and German.

The Messrs. Aborn, managers of the Century Opera, come in for no censure or even criticism in their conduct of the company. They have been conscientious workers and have done the best and the most that could be accomplished with the means placed at their disposal.

St. Louis was asked by its symphony orchestra to subscribe an additional $16,000 for its maintenance. The Republic comments editorially on the meeting held to raise the amount and says that it was presided over by a railroad president and addressed by the City Superintendent of Schools, the vice-president of a great bank and the national secretary of the Federation of Musicians. "No city," says the Republic, "is more acutely conscious at the present moment of the meaning of the words 'community strength' than the metropolis of the Mississippi Valley."

A CHEERFUL OUTLOOK.

What is monkeydom? The word is not in the dictionary. If the newspapers report truly, a certain Dr. B. C. Keister, of Roanoke, Va., recently said in Philadelphia, at the annual meeting of the American Society for the Study of Alcohol and Narcotics, that this nation, meaning the United States, "will degenerate into something worse than monkeydom" if we do not give up our morphine. The worthy doctor may have been led into his philological indiscretion by his contemplation of the prospective anthropological retrogression resulting from morphine and other narcotics and nepenthes derived from opium.

But why should the doctor worry? If monkeydom is not in the dictionary, how can we ever go to it? We cannot degenerate into something that does not exist, can we?

If Dr. Keister means that we are becoming monkeys we see a number of interesting problems solved. For instance: We will discover what the missing link really is, for it is reasonable to believe that our backward march will be over the same ground we recently left behind us.

We recall a remark of the man who said he did not care if he had descended from a monkey or not, provided he had descended far enough. This is where the shoe pinches. How far have we descended? A morphine fiend may be able to show us. Science has only to record his gradual declension from an American into a gorilla, a chimpanzee, an orang, a gibbon or other specimen of the anthropoid primates. In this case the word primate must have the finale syllable pronounced, tee, in order to distinguish the humble individual from an archbishop.

Once upon a time an Englishman was a Gibbon. He wrote the history of "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." But that happened some time ago, before the advent of Dr. Keister, though not before the formation of societies for the study of alcohol. Alcohol is frequently studied in assembly rooms set apart for that very purpose on the corners of prominent streets and elsewhere.

But, to return to monkeydom. We have a recollection of a musician who once was called a Chopinzee. We hardly think that he became it by the use of opium, however. (N. B.—In music op. does not stand for opium.)

Monkeys have tails, prehensile tails, by means of which they swing and gambol and take up the study of trees in all its branches. At what stage of the morphine development does the tail begin to sprout?

When will the poet sing: "Man hath his tail; Manhattan its cocktail?"

According to Dr. Keister, "the United States is now second to China and ahead of every other country in the world in the use of opium and the narcotics derived from it." Well, why should not China and the U. S. A. be ahead of the rest of the world? Are they not both republics? This is not an earldom, or a kingdom, but the land of freedom on the way to monkeydom. Why should we play second fiddle to China, even if China is a republic? Wake up, America, and take morphine. China is easily broken. Of course, we know that morphine will make us sleep; but wake up, anyhow.

If we become monkeys there will be a slump in operas in English. Recitative secco will be the order of the day and part of the night.

WHAT EUROPE MUST EXPECT.

When this war is over, perhaps before it is over, it is probable that the United States will be invaded by an army of semi-destitute musicians from all the impoverished countries of Europe. It matters not which flag flies victorious at the end of the fray. Artists, scientists, scholars, musicians must always be the losers whatever the military gains or reverses are. Music is said to be a necessity to modern civilization. That is a peace valuation of the art. When the gaunt spectre of famine stalks through the land, and the vacant chairs in the broken family circle tell the tale of nameless and unhallowed graves in trenches over the frontiers, there will be many a heavy heart and aching head that cannot find delight or consolation in music. In such times music is a luxury, even when it is not a mockery. Thousands of little children in Europe in a year or two will take no music lessons. Their anxious faces, reflecting the dismay in the features of their mothers and their elders, will show too plainly what the price of battle is. Ten thousand little lips in a dozen different languages will whisper the awful chorus: "Daddy's dead."

No more music lessons, no luxuries, a dearth of comforts, a lack of the bare necessities of life, the pinch of poverty, uneducated boys and girls too early sent away from home as laborers and servants—these are the first fruits of the accursed seeds sown by the iron hand of war.

Even among the wealthy there will be a depression of spirits and a lack of interest that operas and symphony concerts cannot overcome for many months. After such a tremendous emotional unheaval it will take time for the tides to subside and flow again in their accustomed channel. In fact, it is doubtful if those of us who are mature enough to grasp the tremendous significance of this present conflict of arms will ever be the same emotional beings we were a year ago. Will not all the old masters seem a little older and the composers of our day a little faded? Our experience shall have changed us somewhat.

We may be treading on uncertain ground and peering through a mist. But whether we are right or wrong on this point, it is certain that thousands of European music teachers and concert artists will soon find Europe denuded of ready money for art and education. South Africa, Australia, Brazil, Canada and the United States cannot avoid the great influx of music teachers. No doubt we shall get by far the greatest number of them. And if they could be distributed among the towns and villages where they are most needed their influence might do the cause of music a great deal of good, even if they interferred a little with the regular work of the local music teachers. The trouble is, however, that many of them will crowd in where they are not needed and where the chances of making a comfortable living are slender. Some of them may even suffer as many privations as if they had remained at home.

How are we American musicians going to meet this wholesale competition? Some of us may find our incomes materially lessened by this uninvited invasion. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that a great portion of our population is distinctly provincial with regard to matters musical. In the United States there still are thousands who believe a worthy education in music can be obtained only in Europe. Unless Berlin or Leipsic, Vienna or Paris, Milan or Brussels has set its foreign seal on the diploma, the American public, like the English, is inclined to look askance on a homemade music teacher. The foreigner, with his peculiarities and broken dialect, can often command respect and claim attention where a normal native of equal or superior merit is not regarded. This is an inheritance from the old colonial days when we were obliged to look to Europe for our luxuries and imported our Clementi pianos from London. It has been fostered by the rich, who have made it fashionable to go across the ocean for a holiday or a course of music. This exaggerated respect for the foreigner in music still exists, and it is likely to be a menace to us later on when the tide of immigration sets in and all the States in the Union get a surplus of music teachers. We must make up our minds to a harder struggle for existence during the next few years. It is impossible to believe that the slaughter of so many thousand men and the billions of dollars wasted in a carnage that stops the wheels of commerce will leave Europe as prosperous as it was. It is the same as if we had receded to an earlier age in the history of the world. Music, for the nonce, is relegated abroad to the menial rank it held in the feudal times. The arts of peace, of course, are not lost or forgotten and will soon be reinstated in a chastened Europe. But the derelicts of the strife—the aftermath of the storm—will be left as mementos of the terrible time of the world's greatest war.

If Europe already suffers from the interruption of commerce, what is yet to come for them? Nothing but penury or exile faces many an erstwhile prosperous musician of Europe. However great our sympathy may be for them we must nevertheless hope that not too many of them will flock to our charitable shores. Even a lifeboat can be overloaded.

But even if they come to us they will not be satisfied. It is human nature the whole world over to see a foreign country with eyes that have been trained at home. James Russell Lowell wrote an essay on "A Certain Condescension in Foreigners," in which he humorously sketches a characteristic trait of nearly all our European visitors:

"Perhaps one reason why the average Briton spreads himself here with such an easy air of superiority may be owing to the fact that he meets with so many bad imitations as to conclude himself the only real thing in a world of shams. He fancies himself moving through an endless Bloomsbury, where his mere apparition confers honor as an avatar of the court end of the universe. Not a Bull of them all but is persuaded he bears Europe upon his back. This is the sort of fellow whose patronage is so divertingly insufferable. Thank Heaven he is not the only specimen of cater cousinship from the dear old Mother Island that is shown to us! Among genuine things, I know nothing more genuine than the better men whose limbs were made in England.

"But it is not merely the Englishman; every European candidly admits in himself some right of primogeniture in respect to us, and pats this shaggy continent on the back with a lively sense of generous unbending. The German who plays the bass viol has a well founded contempt, which he is not always nice in concealing, for a country so few of whose children ever take that noble instrument between their knees. His cousin, the Ph. D. from Göttingen, cannot help despising a people who do not grow loud and red over Aryans and Turanians, and are indifferent about their descent from either. The Frenchman feels an easy mastery in speaking his mother tongue, and attributes it to some native superiority of parts that lifts him high above us barbarians of the West. The Italian prima donna sweeps a courtesy of careless pity to the overfacile pit. All without exception make no secret of regarding us as the goose bound to deliver them a golden egg in return for their cackle."

Those who are familiar with the average American tourist in Europe know that we have the reputation abroad of always boasting of American superiority. The late Marc A. Blumenberg once wrote about an American woman from the Middle West who found no beauty in any of the European cities to be compared with the loveliness of her home town, until at last she stood upon the hills of Fiesole and saw the glorious panorama of Florence under the blue of an Italian sky. "Thank God I've found a place as fine as East Liverpool, Ohio," was all she had to say.

We must therefore expect to hear our visitors and newly metamorphosed citizens recount the beauties and attractions of the lands they have left behind them. Imagination will enhance the loveliness a hundredfold, while the stern facts of life reveal the actual conditions of the land they live in.

Let that sympathy which we now feel for them extend as a mantle of charity for their feelings when they come to live among us; for we would be no better than they are in a foreign land if our beloved country should be blasted by the horrors of war and our nation impoverished by the struggle. While we pity our European brothers in music, we cannot help feeling a thrill of satisfaction that war and all its horrors are far away across the sea. In America we still are free to go about our work and to take our pleasures as we see fit without the fear of shells and bombs, and with only a temporary dislocation of a part of our trade.

LHEVINNE FREE TO COME.

The first direct word received from Josef Lhevinne, the pianist, came to Loudon Charlton in a cablegram from Wannsee, a suburb of Berlin, where Lhevinne has made his home for a number of years. It confirms beyond a doubt messages recently brought by several of the pianist's pupils to the effect that he would surely make his American tour this season. The dispatch to Mr. Charlton, which reached the MUSICAL COURIER just in time for its last issue, read: "Am safe in Wannsee. Germans most kind. Am free to leave the country. Josef Lhevinne." This sets at rest various rumors afloat shortly after the outbreak of the war to the effect that Lhevinne, being a Russian (though an expatriated one) was held a virtual prisoner in his own home. As a matter of fact, he was permitted to continue his teaching, but was not allowed to communicate with other countries until his status was definitely settled. Now that permission has been granted him to leave Germany for his visit to America, it is to be assumed that all restrictions have been removed. Lhevinne's tour is scheduled to begin the latter part of December, his first appearance being a recital to be given in Boston. The pianist will be heard in concert and recital throughout the country, including an extended tour of the Northwest and the Pacific Coast.

OPERA IN ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis and Chicago take the lead this year, so far as Western cities are concerned, in opera. The former place has arranged a November season to be given there by the San Carlo Opera Company, and the Lake Michigan metropolis will have the much heralded visit of the Century Opera.

The St. Louis project is of especial interest because it seeks to demonstrate to its public and its municipality that a permanent operatic institution is an artistic and cultural need of the city. There is a grand opera committee which has in hand the enterprise of erecting an opera house in St. Louis, and if the San Carlo season proves to be a success, public interest undoubtedly would stimulate subscriptions to the building fund.

The performances, lasting from November 9 to November 21, are to be given at the Odeon, at prices ranging from fifty cents to $2.50. The repertoire is to include "Aida," "Barber of Seville," "Carmen," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Faust," "Pagliacci," "Boheme," "Lucia," "Sonnambula," "Manon," "Martha," "Masked Ball," "Rigoletto," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Traviata," "Trovatore."

TELLING ON THE DAILIES.

A conspicuous dramatic critic on one of the New York morning papers resigned his position recently, giving as his reason the fact that the journal in question "has become too commercial."

It is rather surprising to hear such a statement from a newspaper man with such long experience as the critic in question. No one ever has doubted that daily newspapers are commercial and they have not sought within recent times to make any secret of the object for which they are in business, the earning of money. What the critic possibly has reference to is the circumstance that his newspaper has of late been accepting quarter page, half page and even whole page feature advertising relating to plays previously condemned unmercifully by the critic. Several such plays became financial successes and drew large public patronage after they had been made the subject of special advertising following upon unfriendly reviews from the critic in question and most of his colleagues. It is likely that the journalistic policy which permits the acceptance of feature advertising and so helps to minimize the importance of critical opinion, offended the writer who has just resigned. He wielded a particularly severe and very personal pen and for many years the managers and the actors and actresses stood in decided fear of him.

Perhaps the concert managers will take a hint from the course of the theatrical managers and make a direct appeal to the public to hear an artist for itself before accepting the critical opinions of a few reviewers who represent only individual opinion. It would be interesting to see whether the feature advertising system could be made effective in the concert world here. It has been tried successfully in London, where the front pages of the dailies long have been selling space for such exploitation of musical artists.

Apropos, in a review of a new book called "The Clarion," which deals with American daily newspaper conditions, Franklin P. Adams writes in the New York Tribune: "This book shows some of the bad things about newspapers. Also, some of the fine and inspiring things about newspapers. . . . Newspapers—not all, but many of them—do suppress and distort news; and the policies of some newspapers are determined by the advertisers and the business office."

EXPLAINED AT LAST.

Here is the explanation at last. The International says: "Leading us from the sweetness of expectation to the delight of deception, converting the future into past, holding our attention on the slippery edge of the fleeting, entrusting to our memory the imponderable matter of its flowing essence—music, between the two abysses of past and future, is the living vibration of the present moment." And we always had imagined that music was just melody, rhythm, harmony and counterpoint formed into compositions with pen and ink and sometimes lead pencil.

IN THE SAME OLD WAY.

And through it all, England and Germany continue to sing their national anthem to the same melody, whose origin has been attributed variously to the Englishman Carey, to the Belgian monk Hucbald, and to the early Germanic bards.

HAMMERSTEIN WAS RIGHT.

It is not that America has no singers able to perform grand opera; it is that most of them have had insufficient experience; and the reason they cannot get opportunities for more is because we have no opera houses. Oscar Hammerstein was right when he diagnosed as the fundamental need of American operatic conditions the erection of a chain of opera houses, preferably organized and maintained by municipal subvention.

HOW WAR HELPED.

How war may help an inferior musical work to popularity is illustrated in the case of Humperdinck's "Die Marketenderin," which had been tried at several German opera houses last season and found wanting. It was condemned unanimously by the critics as lacking literary or dramatic interest and as being sadly deficient in musical power. Along comes the war, however, and suddenly it is remembered that the text and story of "Die Marketenderin" are of martial character and deal patriotically with incidents in the history of the Teutonic Fatherland. Quickly the Humperdinck opera is dragged down from the shelves where it threatened to rest indefinitely, and the public acclaims it enthusiastically at the sight of the military uniforms and because of some war songs interpolated shrewdly before the hurried revival of the work. Operatic stages all over Germany now are giving performances of "Die Marketenderin," and Berlin heard it too last month at the Charlottenburg Opera. This should be a good suggestion for Franchetti. Perhaps his "Germania" could be dragged from oblivion in the same fashion as the Humperdinck composition.

THE CHAPMANS IN MAINE.

There is no doubt that the cities of Bangor and Portland, as well as the entire State of Maine, have much to be thankful for because of the fact that William Rogers Chapman felt it his duty to interest himself in music there. Under his direction the combination Maine festival, held in Bangor and Portland, has achieved importance, and this result is due to his whole hearted zeal as well as to the efficient co-operation of Mrs. Chapman, practically the business manager of the festivals. These now are an integral part of community life in Portland and Bangor, and the proof of it is that in each city a chorus of eight hundred voices has placed itself at the disposal of the Chapmans. When it is taken into consideration that these choruses have but one rehearsal with Mr. Chapman before each concert, their work assumes even added significance in view of the results achieved. Eighteen years of activity constitute the work of the Chapmans in Maine, and it is generally recognized there that the State received its first real impetus in music through their untiring artistic efforts and exceptional talents for organization.

PHILHARMONIC PLANS.

It is significant that among the greatest successes on tour of the New York Philharmonic have been its appearances in Boston, where Symphony Hall invariably has been sold out for the visitors' concerts. This year the Philharmonic will give its concert in Boston, November 1, and then devote the week following to a tour of New England. Also there will be tours of New York State and the Middle West, besides three subscription concerts as in former years in Baltimore and Washington. The first of these is to take place November 23 and 24 with Mme. Gadski as soloist.

The forty concerts which comprise the Philharmonic season in New York promise to be exceptionally well patronized, for the management reports that the new subscription list is the largest in the history of the organization. The opening concert here is set for October 29.

PATTI'S DENIAL.

Now Mme. Patti comes along and denies that she was stoned and hissed at by an Austrian mob in Carlsbad. If the press agents would agree to keep their hands off the war peace might follow quickly.

CONFIDENCE.

Appended is a notice taken from London Musical News and represents an expression of a truth as applicable to America at this time as to England:

Business as usual! A great meeting of traders was held at Cannon Street Hotel on August 25, Gordon Selfridge in the chair. It had been convened by a circular, which said "the war has created opportunities for new business, and the new opportunities require to be advertised."

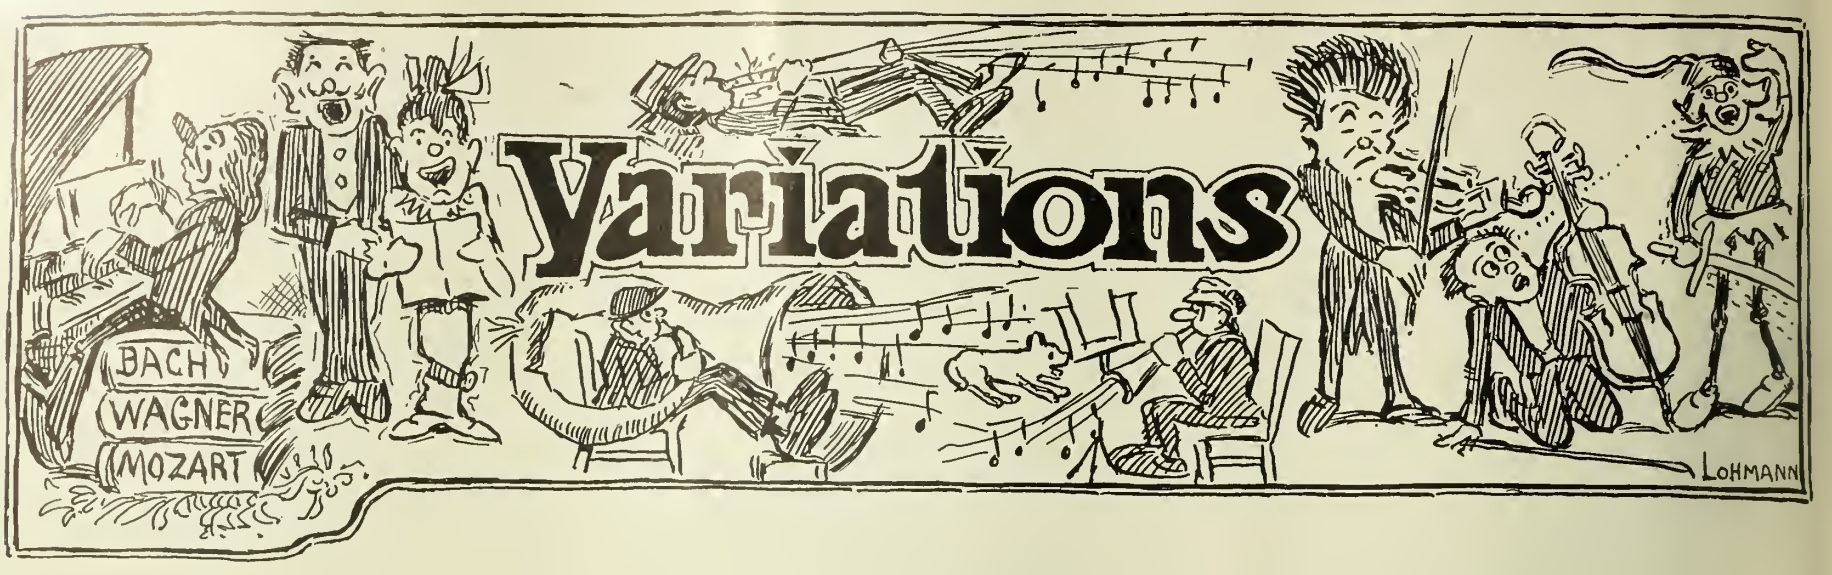
The chairman said that they were present to urge that business should be carried on as usual, and that the great motive power of advertising should be kept, if possible, above normal pressure. War required two forces to be successful—risk of life and an energy at home which kept the life-blood of the nation moving. Efficiency could only be maintained by the wonderful motive power of advertising. Let this country "carry on," and prove that men of commerce were men of courage and of action.

Thomas Russell said it would be a poor thing for the advertising community at this moment to fly into a fright and stop the advertising of its goods. They were suffering from a want of confidence. German competition had for years been one of the greatest hindrances to British commerce. Now was the time to get our own back, but that could not be done without advertising. This was the time to tell the people the facts, and advertising was the method of doing it. The Board of Trade had pointed out to them the way to new markets; let them point the way to those new markets by the medium of advertising.

A resolution was passed urging on manufacturers of "branded" articles especially the desirability of keeping the public constantly informed of the merits of their goods by means of advertising.

As the article says, efficiency can be maintained only by the wonderful motive power of advertising, and this applies to the musical world of America more at this time than it ever did before. There has been talk of hard times and countertalk of the great future that this European war will make for American industrial conditions. Meantime there are a certain number of sceptical managers and musicians in some parts of this country who still have their doubts about this season. It must be added, however, that the best class of managers and musicians predict the most striking and profitable musical season that America ever has had. The way to realize the prediction fully is to keep up your confidence and to inspire others by your own optimism.

IT ALL DEPENDS.



It is expected by the London Musical Times that the expiration of the war will mark a great uplift in European musical composition as a result of the mental shock and the deeply stirred emotions of the music writers of today. It all depends. The American Revolution brought us no Beethoven in this country, the Napoleonic wars gave no outstandingly great composer to France, and the Franco-Prussian war failed to present Germany with any epoch making musical genius traceable to that conflict.

THE EFFECTS OF WAR.

Some of the music papers abroad are feeling the effects of war to the utmost. Le Guide Musical, of Brussels, and Le Menestrel, of Paris, have stopped publication. In Germany, however, the Allgemeine Musik Zeitung and the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik continue to appear albeit in somewhat shrunken form and with greatly diminished news content. At the present moment Europe's chief source of supply in the way of musical information is represented by the MUSICAL COURIER.

NEW BOSTON REPRESENTATIVE.

Victor C. Winton has taken charge of the Boston office of the MUSICAL COURIER. Blanche Freedman, who represented this paper in Boston for the past two years, resigned her post owing to plans made by her in another line of activity. Mr. Winton formerly was in the Vienna office of the MUSICAL COURIER. The permanent address of this paper in Boston is 11 Boylston Road, Fenway, Suite 3r.

Foreword.

Today let us look over the musical war literature.

Kreisler's Own War Story.

Fritz Kreisler, upon his return from the front to Vienna, was interviewed by one of the big dailies in that city, and gave out the following interesting details of his experiences and feelings:

"The artist is known to live in his own world and to have his individual soul states and mental moods and tenses, but I can indeed say that as I hastened to the standard of my regiment, a storm of emotion came over me, which drove away the artist entirely. I had scarcely donned the Emperor's uniform when I felt myself completely the soldier, inspired by the same warlike spirit as that which actuated my comrades and my whole regiment. . . . Our people displayed this spirit of self sacrificing heroic courage at their very first task, when in the midst of the hostile artillery fire, they threw up rifle pits with the greatest calmness. Before us was a broad marsh, over which a single bridge led, which our infantry fire easily could have captured. We were obliged to remain inactive in the rifle pits in order to entice the Russians over that bridge. Behind us was our artillery, under fire from the Russians, who for their part were trying to find out our position. The Russians fired over the whole field in order to unmask us. Shrapnel howled, whizzed, and sang in the air. In the beginning this music made an uncanny impression, but we quickly became accustomed to it. So I lay in the rifle pit, now and then listening, chatting with my companions, and longingly waiting for night. Every night—they were moonlight nights—the beasts of burden came to the rifle pits with the mess, and we received excellent warm food.

"No sumptuous repast has ever tasted so good to me as this simple, healthful food! Such good spirits prevailed that the soldiers in my company even played cards by moonlight in the rifle pits. Each day I had ample opportunity to watch through my field glasses the Russian infantry as well as the artillery of the enemy. We made, at the same time, the observation that the Russian artillery was excellent in aim, but that about twenty-five per cent. of their shells did not burst. This condition had the effect of making the troops anxious to force the officers to lead them onward in their zeal for battle. We had difficulty in convincing them that our inactivity was absolutely necessary.

"We ascertained also that most of the wounds from the Russian bullets were of a light nature. The explanation of this lies in the relative smallness and in the great striking force of the Russian pointed bullets, which cause only very small wounds from which in the rarest instances inflammation results.

"I witnessed a wonderful battle scene. Our regiment stood on a height, as reserves. I was, so to speak, an objective onlooker. It was an uncanny, beautiful picture—this broad plain over which (it was eleven o'clock in the forenoon) the arch of heaven vaulted pure and clear. The two armies stood with their broad fronts opposed to each other about a kilometer apart. On the distant forest slopes I could see our cavalry on the one side, on the other the Cossack divisions. I saw also how our battery and that of the Russians were placed. The latter had just taken position when an Austrian invisible battery opened fire upon them. For about half an hour a thundering duel ensued. The Russians shot in the beginning with full battery, then with four and finally with only two guns, which finally became silent. As we heard later these last two Russian cannon were captured at the point of the bayonet. Then passed our own troops, some of whose regiments consisted of soldiers from the Alpine districts. It was a glorious moment and a proud one, to note the bravery with which they made use of the empty ranks of the hostile artillery in order to approach nearer the enemy. A more beautiful, inspiring music I have never heard than the 'hurrah' of these troops when they penetrated the position of the enemy. This surging 'hurrah' the wind carried over to us!

"When one fights with such troops, whose souls are filled with the same inspiration as one's own, when one daily, nay, hourly, witnesses examples of unselfish heroism, then one is uplifted immeasurably and feels nothing but enthusiasm with never a trace of fatigue.

"For fully twelve days I did not take off my clothes, but this was no inconvenience to me. Every night I slept in the wet grass without any other covering than my cloak. Under ordinary circumstances I would certainly have contracted inflammation of the lungs. In the field I did not feel the slightest cold. Every sense becomes sharpened. One sees and hears more clearly. All nervous and neurotic symptoms disappear as by a magic stroke. The whole organism functions finely and is filled with energy. And if one then is withdrawn from the line of battle, as I was, one has the exalted and strengthening feeling of having worked in union with one's comrades—for the private soldier is, in the field, the comrade of the officer.

"You will then understand what I mean when I say that at the moment of my recovery I long from the depths of my soul to place myself again at the disposal of my regiment and to see again my companions, who in such a short time have become so very dear to me."

Sortie for Kreisler.

Firing a defensive volley for Fritz Kreisler, the Boston Herald—Philip Hale suspected—rushes into the fray with the following editorial from its issue of Sunday, October 4:

"The MUSICAL COURIER, of New York, asks why there is all this 'maudlin sympathy' for opera singers and other musicians who are now fighting in the armies of European countries. 'A soldier is a soldier in the eyes of his country at war, whether his calling is that of a bootblack or an operatic basso, a tenor or a tinsmith, a carpet layer or a violinist. No one seems to bemoan the fate of the great scientists, successful lawyers, gifted poets and famous architects and other professionals who are at the front.'

"It might also be said that in the reports about some of the musicians now in service the fine hand of the press agent may be reasonably suspected, if only by reason of the periodicity of announcements. Mr. Kreisler, for example, is undoubtedly one of the greatest violinists now living. He is also an Austrian and a patriot. There is no doubt that he is, or was, with his regiment, and no doubt has done his duty. This is all admirable. But the bulletins concerning Mr. Kreisler's military achievements and misfortunes have been more frequent and more circumstantial than reports about Gen. Joffre, Gen. French or any commanding officer in the German, Austrian or Russian army. Mr. Kreisler joined his regiment; Mr. Kreisler was killed in a furious charge; Mr. Kreisler was not slain, he was guarding a bridge; Mr. Kreisler was at home dangerously wounded; Mr. Kreisler will probably never be able again to play the fiddle. Mr. Kreisler says that he would not have missed his experiences for the world and is now looking forward to his concert tour in America. No one that knows the modesty of this violinist would accuse him of desiring the publicity. But even the most modest virtuoso is in the hands of his European press agent.

"The sentiment of which the MUSICAL COURIER complains is not 'maudlin' in all instances. The great singer, pianist, violinist, establishes a closer relationship with thousands than any lawyer, physician, tinker can hope to attain. He has consoled, cheered, thrilled them; he has taken them away from prosaic routine. He has awakened emotions that were unsuspected. Thousands have thus been humanized, and they look upon the artist as a benefactor. As human beings they mourn the slaughter of the swarms of the unknown; but the death of a virtuoso comes home to them with a peculiar force."

Wicked Wagner.

Rather surprising is the published utterance of Camille Saint-Saëns advising Paris to banish Wagner from its musical repertoire because the composer was a German. Saint-Saëns took the same attitude immediately after the Franco-Prussian war, but as he later visited Bayreuth, became an ardent Wagnerite, and as recently as a year ago was the guest of the Kaiser in Berlin, it seemed reasonable to expect that at the age of seventy-nine the famous Frenchman hardly would allow his emotion to becloud his judgment in determining the relation of music to war. Where, as the New York Sun asks in commenting on the Saint-Saëns episode, has the sense of humor of the nations gone in this war? It remains to be seen whether any Teutonic musician will call for the banishment from Germany of Saint-Saëns' "Samson and Delilah," "Dance Macabre," "Rondo Capriccioso" (for violin), G minor piano concerto, the violin and cello concertos, the "Havanaise" (for violin), "Le Cygne" (for cello), and the "Alceste" and "Faust" arrangements for piano—all popular compositions, performed as frequently in Germany as everywhere else in the musical world. Soon we expect to hear that some European patriot will refuse to look at the moon because it is the same moon gazed upon by the enemies of his country.

Thirst of Battle.

A member of the Aschenbroed'l Club, who has just returned from Europe, was asked whether Pilsener is going up in Germany "No," he made answer, "it is going down, as usual."

Making Music Pay.

Adorning the window of a Spokane, Wash., clothing shop for several days before Mme. Fremstad's recent recital there, a placard could be seen bearing this legend: "If you're going to the Fremstad recital, you've got to be well dressed. Step in and look over our line."

Why the War Will End.

A special cable to the New York Times:

"London, Friday, October 9.—A belief that the war will be far shorter than the present situation indicates is gradually gaining ground in diplomatic circles here. The secretary of the embassy of one of the involved powers has made a large wager that the war will be over within three months, and he is known as a careful bettor, not anxious to lose his money."

Up to Date Drama.

The manager looked patronizingly at the young man who had been begging for an interview on an important matter.

"Well," said the theatrical arbiter, with that finesse for which his guild is famous, "what do you want?"

"Your attention for just a few moments. I have here a play which——"

"What's the subject?"

"I'd like to read the piece to you for I touch upon some unconventional phases of human nature in a novel way, and I'm afraid that unless I explained as I went along, you might not——"

"What's the subject?" roared the manager.

"Well," began the author, "a crook kills a man and the girl who loves the murderer is helped by the detective to save——"

"Great," came the fortissimo shout from the listener and down came his feet from the desk. "I'll take your play. Sign this contract. Have a cigar. Need any money in advance?"

LEONARD LIEBLING.

Klamroth Methods for Voice.

Wilfried Klamroth says that singing is not an obscure proceeding. Given certain directions, follow them, and the pupil must attain definite results. He says, "Never take my assertion unless I can prove it to you. As we think, so we color our voices." Four rules are laid down by him at the outset for all singers, viz., (1) correct breathing, (2) control of breath, (3) application of this control, and (4) tone placing or tone production. His direction to the young singer includes allusions to high chest, the diaphragm, upper abdominal wall, etc., and these points are illustrated by diagrams and sketches. Every vocal law enunciated by him is followed by a definite direction. Finally, the beginning vocalizes in the middle of the voice on the syllable "la," covering three tones only. The many allusions and apt illustrations drawn from a life of varied experiences, enable Mr. Klamroth to put everything in terse, understandable language. A member of the MUSICAL COURIER staff witnessed such a "first lesson" with absorbed interest, and was sorry when the period came to a close.

Margaret Abbott, contralto, an artist-pupil of Mr. Klamroth, is now ready for big engagements. She sings with great dramatic impulse and has a voice of most beautiful quality, allied with wide range. She sings the aria from Tschaikowsky's "Jean d'Arc" with mournful pathos, convincing in its intensity. More shall be heard of Margaret Abbott.

New Music Books for Little Folks.

"Thé Dansant for Little Folks," "Mother Goose Rhymes and Tunes," "Playtime Songs Old and New" are the names of three children's books belonging to the Playtime Melody Library issued by Hearst's International Library Company, New York.

Raymond Perkins is the originator of many of the melodies, and he has also adapted and harmonized many of the old. These are throughout sufficiently simple in melody and harmony to suit the musical intelligence of the average child. They are thoroughly musical in character and of a nature to appeal to the enjoyment of the little folks.

There are favorite old game songs; thirty-eight favorite Mother Goose Rhymes have been set to music, with twenty-four well known melodies and fourteen new melodies. Easy, new accompaniments have been supplied by Mr. Perkins for the old melodies.

The simple marches, two-steps and waltzes in "Thé Dansant" are up-to-date, and aside from the pleasure giving element, they offer splendid opportunity for sight reading exercises for the young folks.

These books have been superbly illustrated throughout by Paul Woodroffe.

Morristown, N. J., Musical Season to Open.

The musical season in Morristown, N. J., will be launched Friday evening, October 16, by the first of a series of concerts under the direction of the Warford

CLAUDE WARFORD.

School of Music. Claude Warford is the enterprising head of this institution, and this season he is well sustaining the standard he set with his artists' concerts last year.

Evan Williams, tenor, and Florence Mulford-Hunt, contralto, give the evening of song October 16.

Mr. Warford is a staunch champion of the American composer, and has requested artists to sing a group of songs by Americans at each concert.

EVAN WILLIAMS.

The second concert will be given November 6, by Harold Bauer, pianist, and Caroline Hudson-Alexander, soprano.

Malkin Music School Announcement.

All applications for free or partial scholarships in the Malkin Music School, New York, must be made to the secretary on or before October 28, at 26 Mount Morris Park, W.

Examinations for scholarships will begin October 20.

USE ORIENT

CLEANER AND POLISH
On Your Piano

A new Marvelous Discovery. Nothing else like or equals it. Guaranteed harmless, odorless and free from anything oily, greasy or sticky. You can sit on a chair the next minute after Cleaning and Polishing without danger of greasing or soiling the finest fabric. Cleans and Polishes while applying it, transforming a dull, dingy Piano into a most brilliant, attractive piano with magical swiftness and ease. Endorsed by Piano makers, dealers and all who have used it. To convince you how different and superior this product is over all others we will mail you a trial sample for 4 cents postage, or better still send 50 cents in stamps for large 12-ounce bottle fully prepaid. Your money back if not more than satisfied. Piano makers, Dealers and Agents, you need Orient Cleaner and Polish to protect the finish on instruments you sell; write us for prices.
ORIENT CHEMICAL CO., 472 Gumbel Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

We hear much regarding the "soul" of the piano. Whether this "soul" is found in the soundboard or the action, or in the combination of both, is fully described in literature prepared by Kranich & Bach. It is well to know something about the grand piano, if one is going to purchase one. Study the claims of the Kranich & Bach, which present many inventions that place these instruments in a position strictly individual.

KRANICH & BACH
New York

BLANCHE GOODE PIANIST
AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS
Address: JOSEPH JOINER, 439 Fifth Avenue. New York

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO

TOUR NOW BOOKING

Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

William Thorner
VOCAL TEACHER

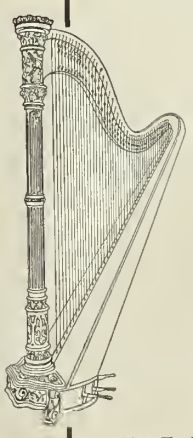
Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:
"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.
(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."

Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.

Address 70 West 68th St., New York.

ZoellnerQuartet

Coast to Coast Tour 1914-15



H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

—"Such purity of tone has never before been attained."

So writes Zamara, acknowledged Greatest Living Harpist—of the WURLITZER

HARP

"Marvelous in Tone, Majestic in Appearance," says Marthage, Harpist of Sousa's Band.

The Wurlitzer Harp has the only spruce veneered Sounding Board, which gives it a pure, liquid, velvety tone all its own. Write for beautiful booklet.

THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY
121 E. FOURTH STREET, CINCINNATI, OHIO
Chicago - - 329-331 S. Wabash Street
New York - - 113-119 W. 40th Street

MAINE MUSIC FESTIVAL.

Eighteenth Annual Series of Concerts Held at Bangor and Portland—Spendid Choruses and Fine List of Soloists—Enthusiastic Audiences in Attendance.

Portland, Me., October 8, 1914.

The State of Maine held its eighteenth annual music festival on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 1, 2 and 3, at Bangor, and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 5, 6 and 7, at Portland, with William Rogers Chapman conducting a chorus of eight hundred voices, an orchestra of fifty members of the Boston Opera House Orchestra, and the following soloists: Marcella Craft, Artha Williston, Nina Morgana, Florence Otis, sopranos; Jean

CARL MORRIS,
Baritone.

Cooper, contralto; Florence Austin, violinist; Helena Tardivel, pianist; Salvatore Giordano, Cuyler Black, Ernest J. Hill, tenors; Carl Morris, Milo Picco, baritones; Mrs. G. S. Davis, accompanist at Portland; Mrs. Carl Newman, accompanist at Bangor; and Pierre Henrotte, concertmaster. The programs were the same both at Bangor and Portland; this review covers the concerts at Portland only.

Mr. Chapman and the Chorus.

With but one rehearsal before each concert, Mr. Chapman is to be congratulated upon the splendid singing of the chorus. It was really remarkable, especially when taking into consideration the fact that the singers are drawn together from towns and cities within a radius of one hundred miles of Portland. The work was highly interesting and the chorus gave a magnificent account of itself at all times.

Another noticeable feature was the perfect union apparent between the chorus and its able conductor, causing their work to be in sympathetic accord and replete with the evidence that each individual was endeavoring to his and her utmost to make the choral performances a tremendous success. With such an object in view, it is not strange that a splendid ensemble was the result.

The Orchestra.

That he is an efficient orchestral as well as choral conductor, Mr. Chapman has proved convincingly in times past, and on this occasion he not only sustained his reputation, but added to it in a large measure. The work was most trying for the orchestra, as will be readily seen from the programs, but the work of this body of players was splendid.

The Soloists.

To the choice of soloists, Mr. Chapman must have devoted a great deal of time and thought, since there could hardly have been a better selection made for the parts which each assumed on the programs. Their work was a delight to the audiences, as the enthusiastic reception with which each was received amply testified.

The Audiences.

At every concert, Portland City Hall, which was the scene of these festivities, was well filled and at some of the concerts, quite crowded with musical enthusiasts. Mr. Chapman, the soloists, chorus, and orchestra were accorded well merited appreciation by the discriminating music lovers in attendance.

First Concert, Monday Evening, October 5.

The first concert was given by the festival chorus, the orchestra (Mr. Chapman conducting) and Marcella Craft, Salvatore Giordano, Milo Picco, and Ernest J. Hill (Portland's favorite tenor), soloists.

The program was as follows:

Hallelujah Chorus (Messiah) ..... Handel
Festival Chorus.
Ah, fors e lui (Traviata) ..... Verdi
Marcella Craft.
Butterflies (waltz) ..... Mildenberg
Festival Chorus.
Arioso (Le Roi de Lahore) ..... Massenet
Millo Picco.
Celeste Aida (Aida) ..... Verdi
Signor Giordano.
Song of Love ..... Beach
Marcella Craft.
Hiawatha's Wedding Feast ..... Coleridge-Taylor
Ernest J. Hill, Festival Chorus and Orchestra.
Largo al Factotum (Barbiere di Siviglia) ..... Rossini
Millo Picco.
Puppchen ..... Gilbert
Festival Orchestra.
Four Arias (Madame Butterfly)—
An ancora un passo or via ..... Puccini
Un bel di Vedromo ..... Puccini
Tua Madre ..... Puccini
Piccolo Oddio ..... Puccini
Marcella Craft.
The March Triumphal Thunders ..... Edward Elgar
Festival Chorus and Orchestra.

The numbers sung by Marcella Craft gave the distinguished soprano and prima donna at the Royal Munich

EDWARD A. NOYES,
President of the Western (Portland) Association of the Maine Music Festival.

Opera, a splendid opportunity to show her extraordinary ability, each selection precipitating spontaneous and long applause, which necessitated numerous encores. As Miss Craft sang in one of the leading churches of Portland before she went abroad to study and sing in opera, her rendition of "Home, Sweet Home," one of her encores, was most appropriate. It is needless to say that this favorite old selection was beautifully sung and enthusiastically received. Miss Craft has a magnificent voice, which she uses with remarkable ease and rare intelligence. Her success was sensational.

Salvatore Giordano sang with good style "Celeste Aida" from Verdi's opera. His excellent voice and artistic phrasing were greatly enjoyed, and elicited tremendous applause, which warranted two encores, these being also operatic arias, "La Donne e Mobile," from "Rigoletto," and a selection from "Pagliacci."

Ernest J. Hill's singing in Coleridge-Taylor's "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," was sympathetic and much appreciated by his fellow citizens, and deservedly so.

Milo Picco revealed a fine and skillfully used baritone voice, and dramatic intensity. His is an unusually appealing, musical and resonant organ, especially in the upper register. He sang an aria from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," and one from Massenet's "Le Roi de Lahore," to the delight of every one present.

The work of the chorus at this concert, especially in the singing of the "Hallelujah" chorus from Handel's "Messiah," is deserving of particular praise, for under the baton of Mr. Chapman, the volume and tonal beauty of the number were brought out to a remarkable degree.

Second Concert, Tuesday Afternoon, October 6.

At this concert, a large audience enjoyed the Boston Opera House Orchestra in an elaborate program. The soloists were Helena Tardival, a young and talented pianist, of Boston, and Florence Otis, a favorite at this and other festivals. The playing by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Chapman, of the "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde" as a memorial to the late Lillian Nordica was a feature of this concert. Mme. Nordica sang this aria at two of the Maine festivals, and therefore the memorial was a fitting tribute at this time. (This was the first festival in Maine since her death).

The program consisted of:

Overture, Leonore No. 3 ..... Beethoven
Festival Orchestra.
Concerto in A minor ..... Grieg
Helena Tardival and Festival Orchestra.
Symphony, from The New World ..... Dvorák
Festival Orchestra.
Polonaise, Mignon ..... Ambrose Thomas
Florence Anderson Otis.
In Memoriam to Lillian Nordica.
Liebestod, Tristan and Isolde ..... Wagner
Festival Orchestra.

The program was well arranged by Conductor Chapman, who directed with rare skill. The playing of the orchestra was excellent, encores being frequently necessary. Mr. Chapman proved himself to be as magnetic a conductor of orchestra as he is a choral leader.

Florence Otis, the soprano, sang charmingly and aroused quite a demonstration. Miss Otis gave as an encore "In the Moonlight, In the Starlight," by Hallet Gilberté, who accompanied at the piano. Mr. Gilberté is a native of the State of Maine, and the announcement by Mrs. Chapman of this song with Gilberté at the piano, brought forth much applause.

There is no doubt that Helena Tardivel, the young pianist, has every prospect for a fine future. Her playing of the Grieg concerto in A minor served to display her rare ability, and a clear and incisive touch. Throughout, her interpretation was brilliant, arousing much enthusiasm.

ERNEST J. HILL,
Tenor.

Two encores were given before the audience would consent to let her go.

Third Concert, Tuesday Evening, October 6.

Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was given under the direction of Mr. Chapman at the third concert, the soloists and their respective roles being:

Elijah, a Prophet in Israel ..... Carl Morris
Widow, aided by Elijah ..... Artha Williston
Israelitish Woman ..... Artha Williston
Youth, Elijah's messenger ..... Florence Otis
Jezebel, the Queen ..... Jean Cooper

Angel Messenger ..... Jean Cooper
Obadiah, Governor of the King's House..... Cuyler Black
Ahab, King of Israel..... Cuyler Black
Chorus of Angels..... Selected Semi-Chorus
Priests of Baal (Chorus of the People)..... Festival Chorus

This performance could hardly have been more inspiring. Mr. Chapman conducted admirably, while the singing of the chorus was quite remarkable. Mr. Chapman deserves great credit for the success of this concert. The solo parts were taken by singers who are fully at home in this oratorio, and the entire performance was most uplifting.

Carl Morris has a baritone voice well suited to the role of Elijah, and he contributed much to the success of the evening. Artha Williston was keenly enjoyed, especial interest being shown in the beautiful quality of her voice and her excellent diction. She sang the parts assigned to her with distinction and marked inspiration, her work being greatly appreciated.

The audience seemed especially anxious to hear Florence Otis again, her successful appearance at Tuesday's matinee being well remembered. She had but little to do, singing the unimportant role of Youth, Elijah's messenger, but that little was well sung. There is a brilliancy and freshness in her singing most enjoyable to hear.

Jean Cooper, the contralto, won her audience completely by her personal charm, as well as by her beautiful voice, which she uses with consummate ease.

Cuyler Black sang with a refinement and taste that proved truly delightful. Mr. Black is gifted with a tenor voice of excellent timbre and sympathetic quality. He fulfilled every expectation by his beautiful singing and thoughtful interpretation of his roles.

Fourth Concert, Wednesday Afternoon, October 7.

At this concert a so called "popular" program was heard, the artists being Florence Austin, Artha Williston and Cuyler Black.

This was the program:

Two movements from the Roman Harlequin..... Massenet
Polonaise ..... Liszt
Festival Orchestra.
Gypsy Life ..... Schumann
Festival Chorus.
Aria, I Pagliacci ..... Leoncavallo
Cuyler Black.
The Stars in Heaven..... Rheinberger
Festival Chorus.
Romance and Allegro a la Zingara..... Wieniawski
(From concerto in D minor.)
Florence Austin and Orchestra.
Air de Ballet..... Herbert
Festival Orchestra.
Elsa's Dream, Lohengrin..... Wagner
Artha Williston.
Andante ..... Tschaikowsky
String Orchestra.
Humoresque ..... Dvorák
Festival Chorus.
Waltz ..... Musin
Polonaise in A..... Wieniawski
Florence Austin.
Marche Cortege, La Reine de Saba..... Gounod
Festival Orchestra.

The arrangement of this program was another delightful feature of the festival, there being sufficient variety to suit all. The orchestra, led by Mr. Chapman, played splendidly the reverie and serenade by Massenet, and also the Liszt polonaise. Great applause followed the rendition of these numbers. The chorus again was heard to advantage during the afternoon.

Cuyler Black made a distinct impression upon the audience by his interpretation of the aria from "Pagliacci" and received tremendous applause following this number, two encores being necessary.

Florence Austin, the gifted violinist, scored a distinct success with her audience, on this, her first appearance at Portland. It was said that she will play here again this season, the engagement being directly brought about by her triumph at this concert. Her superb playing of Musin's waltz will long be remembered by those who were privileged to hear her execute this captivating composition, written by her noted teacher. Miss Austin was called upon for a number of encores.

Artha Williston, whose singing made such a favorable impression at the Tuesday evening concert, when she sang in "Elijah," was again heard. She sang "Elsa's Dream," from "Lohengrin," which is well suited to her beautiful soprano voice. She sang with faultless delivery. Mme. Williston displayed a considerable dramatic feeling and was recalled many times at the close of this number. As encores she sang with pleasing effect "When the Roses Bloom," by Reichardt, and "Last Night," by Kjerulf.

Fifth Concert, Wednesday Evening, October 7.

There is no doubt about the complete success of the fifth and last concert of the festival. The interest in the conducting of Mr. Chapman, the playing of the orchestra, the singing of the chorus and the soloists was particularly marked, and the entire evening was one heartily enjoyed by the audience, which was larger than at any previous concert.

On this occasion Nina Morgana made her only appearance at the festival in Portland (she, of course, sang at the last concert at Bangor), and the demonstration that followed her singing showed that her art will remain a pleasant memory here for a long time to come. Portland music lovers are very enthusiastic about her and her voice, which is as it should be.

Other soloists were Florence Otis, Jean Cooper, Salvatore Giordano and Millo Picco. Mr. Chapman again is to be congratulated upon his selection of artists for this concert.

The program was as follows:

Overture, 1812 ..... Tschaikowsky
Festival Orchestra.
Kermesse, Faust ..... Gounod
Festival Chorus.
Stride la Vampa, Trovatore.....
Jean Cooper.
Prologue, Pagliacci ..... Leoncavallo
Millo Picco.
Psalmody, Mephistopheles ..... Boito
Festival Chorus.
Cavatina, Sonnambula ..... Bellini
Mlle. Morgana.
Cielo e Mar, La Gioconda..... Ponchielli
Salvatore Giordano.
Quartet, Rigoletto ..... Verdi
Solo, Quartet and Chorus.
Minuetto ..... Bolzoni
Jewels of the Madonna (by request)..... Wolf-Ferrari
Festival Orchestra.
Miserere Scene (Trovatore)..... Verdi
Mrs. Otis, Signor Giordano, Chorus and Orchestra.
Mattinata ..... Tosti
Secchi di Fata..... Denza
Donna Russa ..... Giordano
Millo Picco.
Waltz, Mireille ..... Gounod
Mlle. Morgana.
Deque io Son, Il Barbiere di Siviglia..... Rossini
Mlle. Morgana and Signor Picco.
American Fantasie ..... Victor Herbert
Festival Orchestra.
Star Spangled Banner..... F. S. Key
America ..... S. F. Smith
Artists, Chorus and Orchestra.

In each of her numbers Nina Morgana displayed a voice that soars to the highest altitudes with perfect ease. Her singing is pure and true, and her voice shows strength and beauty throughout all the registers. As one of her encores Miss Morgana sang with fine art Von der Stucken's "The Sweetest Flower that Blows." A number of encores followed each of her selections.

Salvatore Giordano sang with his usual skill and aroused admiration for all his work during this evening. He has appeared before in Portland, and on this occasion added many friends to his already long list.

Florence Otis, who had already made an excellent impression, confirmed that estimate by her singing in the "Miserere" scene. Her fine soprano voice rang out with impressive effect against the beautiful singing of Giordano as Manrico in this "Trovatore" scene, displaying her unusual dramatic power. Mr. Giordano sang effectively this part from behind the scenes.

Millo Picco sang with a spirit and abandon that excited hearty applause.

Jean Cooper again proved that her rich contralto voice is as beautiful as it is powerful, and gave another exhibition of excellent interpretative ability.

During the evening Miss Morgana and Mr. Picco sang a duet as an encore, accompanied by Mr. Chapman at the piano, and the latter revealed a delicacy of touch and expression which came as quite a surprise to many in the audienec.

The concert closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" (Key) and of "America" (Smith), in which the audience joined with artists, chorus and orchestra in a fitting finale, during which a great American flag was unfurled over the front of the stage.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM ROGERS CHAPMAN (INDICATED BY ARROWS) AND FESTIVAL CHORUS AT PORTLAND, ME.
This photo was taken in front of the Portland City Hall.

Thus ended the eighteenth annual festival of music and song given by the State of Maine.

Festival Notes.

Public rehearsals were held Monday morning and afternoon and Tuesday and Wednesday mornings in Portland, and were very well attended. Indeed the number of onlookers present was noted with surprise. Especially was this evident on Monday morning when Marcella Craft sang. There were about fifteen hundred persons in attendance at this rehearsal. There was also a large number of people at Tuesday morning's rehearsal, when Nina Morgana appeared.

Mrs. Henry Smock Boice, the eminent voice teacher of New York, was a visitor at the festival with her pupil, Florence Otis, who was one of the soloists.

Walter Anderson, the manager, who is spending the week in Maine, seeking engagements for his artists, was seen at the festival on Monday evening.

William Cloudman, of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, was also at the festival on Monday evening. He was there in the interest of Marcella Craft, who is under the Hanson management.

Still another New York manager at the festival was Antonia Sawyer, whose artists were Artha Williston, Florence Otis, Cuyler Black and Salvatore Giordano. Mrs. Sawyer was able to visit the festival at Bangor only.

With Mrs. Chapman's help, Mr. Chapman was able to avoid long intermissions, and the intervals were of but a few minutes' duration, much to the delight of those present, since the long waits are tiresome to the audience.

Hallet Gilberté, who accompanied Florence Otis when she sang one of his compositions as an encore, was a guest with Mrs. Otis at a luncheon at the home of "Aunt Charlotte" Thomas, where he played a number of his compositions. "Aunt Charlotte" Thomas is always a familiar figure at the festivals, and she was present during the entire series of concerts at Portland, and this, too, where she has lived in this world almost a century.

In preparation for her singing at the festival, Nina Morgana was coached by A. Carbone, the vocal authority of New York.

Kelley Cole, the baritone and teacher who resides in New York, was also seen at the festival.

There is now being erected in Portland a new auditorium, which will be known as Exposition Hall, and it was hoped it would be ready for this year's festival. The opening will be delayed until some time in December, when it is expected Mr. Chapman will conduct a concert there. This hall is not alone for the holding of festivals, but will be used for all the large concerts, entertainments, fairs, expositions, etc.

In the choice of Mrs. Carl Newman as accompanist at Bangor and of Mrs. G. S. Davis to act in that capacity at Portland, Mr. Chapman again showed his careful discrimination. Mrs. Davis had a great deal to do at Portland, as she accompanied practically all of the encores given by the artists.

During the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "America" at the close of the festival, the Italian soloists present showed their appreciation of the success they have achieved in this country by hearty and sincere singing. Messrs. Giordano and Picco were born in Italy, while Miss Morgana, although born in Buffalo, is of Italian parentage.

At the rehearsal on Tuesday morning a loving cup was presented to Edward A. Noyes, president of the Western (Portland) Association of the Maine Music Festivals, the occasion being his seventy-fifth birthday. Following the presentation, a luncheon was given in his honor at the Hotel Lafayette.

In one of the Tuesday evening daily papers of Portland there appeared a notice under the heading, "Chapman is not a Candidate, is Out of Mayoralty Race for Business, Personal Reasons." Many thought that William R. Chapman's services to the city as Festival conductor had led the citizens of Portland to tender him that position. Alas, it was another Mr. Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman, all the soloists, and a number of visitors at the festival, stopped at the Hotel Lafayette, and many were the favorable comments heard about the attention and cuisine of this hostelry.

The M. Steinert & Sons Company is arranging a series of four concerts to be given during the season in Portland. The dates and the soloists announced are: November 3, John McCormack and Donald McBeath; December 9, Alice Nielsen and Rudolph Ganz; December 28, Evelyn Scotney, Jeska Swartz, Umberto Sorrentino and Howard White; January 25, Julia Culp and Albert Spalding.

J. Albert Riker.

Los Angeles Symphony Concerts.

At the opening concerts of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra (November 20 and 21) the program will include Tschaikowsky's first symphony, Beethoven's "Battle of Vittoria" and two orchestral tone pieces by Delius.

NEWARK FESTIVAL CHORUS TO HOLD FIRST REHEARSAL

October 28 Set for First Meeting of Gigantic Chorus—Membership Growing Rapidly—Many Noted Artists to Be Heard This Season—Newark Symphony Orchestra Directors Meet—Concerts Announced—Pupils' Concerts and Musical Notes.

Newark, N. J., October 12, 1914.

The first rehearsal of the gigantic chorus now being organized for the three day Newark Music Festival, which is to take place in the First Regiment Armory on May 4, 5 and 6, 1915, is to be held in the parlors of the South Park Presbyterian Church, corner of Broad street and Clinton avenue (seven blocks south of Market), on Wednesday evening, October 28, at 8 o'clock. As every member is to be known by number, it is important that each singer show his or her membership card at the door or remember the number, so that the secretary can keep an accurate record of those present. Seats and music will all be numbered to correspond with the numbers on the membership cards.

As the time is so short before the first rehearsal, singers who have neglected to send in their applications or register in person are urged to do so before the day of the first rehearsal. Director C. Mortimer Wiske will be at the offices of the Newark Music Festival Association, in the Lauter Building, 593 Broad street, every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m., to receive applications and to give such information as may be desired.

Although the association is not ready to announce the soloists for the festival as yet, it has been decided to engage at least one world renowned artist for each evening, adding to this number several celebrated artists of lesser fame. It is expected that on "Wagner Night," the opening program, there will be three soloists; on "Opera Night," which follows, there will be four soloists, and on the final program, "Concert Night," there is to be one celebrated vocalist, with the likely addition of a well known instrumentalist, beside the young local soloist who is to be chosen by competition some time in February. The programs for the three concerts are now being arranged and will be made public soon. Although just what is to be heard has not as yet been made public, it is safe to say that Newark is to be treated to some of the greatest of operatic works, given by a chorus of one thousand voices, assisted by some of the world's greatest soloists and an orchestra of one hundred musicians.

The chorus is growing very rapidly, and at the present daily increase it will not be long before the desired number of one thousand is reached. Every section of Newark is represented, and the mills, factories and stores, as well as the fashionable homes, are all joining in an effort to make this festival a civic event and one Newark may well be proud of.

An advisory committee, composed of the organists of the city, is being organized in connection with the festival, in order to help enlarge the chorus as well as make it a permanent body which can be used each year should the festival be held annually as is most likely. With such a large body of singers permanently organized, great choral works, oratorios and operatic selections could be given throughout the year which would not only benefit Newark educationally, but would command the admiration of rival cities so many of which are attempting a similar scheme.

Many pleasant times are being planned for the members of the chorus so that the year will not be one of work entirely. Various dances and sociables are to be arranged for so that the members will find plenty of amusement in addition to rehearsing. A large number of the members are planning private dances as a means of enlivening the winter's work. Inasmuch as the rehearsals will last only two hours, dances or sociables could very easily be arranged to follow the choral meetings.

Advance Bookings for Newark and the Suburbs.

The following list of well known artists have been booked to appear in Newark or the suburbs this season:

October 14—Mabel Beddoe and Grace Northrop, Newark, N. J.

October 14—George Rasely, East Orange, N. J.

October 16—Florence Mulford Hunt and Evan Williams in joint recital at Morristown, N. J.

October 20—Frances Alda, assisted by Gutia Cassini and Frank la Forge, at Krueger Auditorium, Newark, N. J.

October 20—First concert of the Sutorius Course, at East Orange High School. Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist will be the soloists.

October 25—William Simmons, Ridgewood, N. J.

November ?—John McCormack, Newark, N. J.

November 6—John McCormack, Orange, N. J.

November 6—William Simmons, Orange, N. J.

November 6—Harold Bauer and Mme. Hudson-Alexander, Morristown, N. J.

November 11—Ernestine Schumann-Heink, at Krueger Auditorium, Newark, N. J.

November 11—Royal Dadmun, Newark, N. J.

November 11—Francis Rogers, Lawrenceville, N. J.

November 11—John Barnes Wells, New Brunswick, N. J.

November 18—Francis Rogers, Maplewood, N. J.

November 18—Rose Bryant, Newark, N. J.

December 6—Philharmonic Society and Rudolph Ganz, at the East Orange High School.

December 8—Sutorius Course, the Trio de Lutece (Henry le Bonte, tenor soloist; George Barrere, flute; Carlos Salzedo, harp; Paul Kefer, cello), East Orange High School Auditorium.

January 18—Newark Symphony Orchestra concert, at Wallace Hall.

January 26—Anna Pavlowa, assisted by Volinine, Clustine and complete company of fifty, with symphony orchestra, East Orange High School Auditorium.

March 17—Marie Morrisey.

April 19—Newark Symphony Orchestra concert, at Wallace Hall.

May 4, 5 and 6—Newark Music Festival. Soloists will be announced later.

Tom Daniel's Pupils Give Recital.

The concert season in Newark formally opened last Thursday evening in Wallace Hall, when the pupils of Tom Daniel, one of Newark's best known bass soloists and teachers, gave a real delightful recital before a large audience. There were nineteen solo numbers on the program in addition to a duet and two mixed quartets. Each singer showed in unmistakable fashion the thorough training of the teacher, and there were not a few who displayed rare ability and true artistry.

The program which was divided into two parts was well arranged and included a large variety of songs from the popular "Will o' the Wisp," by Spross, to the celebrated prologue from "Pagliacci." Some of the numbers were rendered with much more effect than were others, yet each one did well and added much to the enjoyment of the evening's program. Because of the lack of space, a detailed account of each one's singing cannot be given here; however, those who took part were as follows: Elsa Goepferich, Cornelia M. Shawger, Mr. Holden, Mr. Kreitler, Louis K. Comins, Frances Gowell, Dorothy Huntsman, William B. Lutz, Edna Clark, Mrs. W. H. Kemery, Robert F. Tims, Helen V. Exton, Bess Schweinfest, W. H. Hoeffer, William Pace, Josephine Pascal, Arthur W. Pier, Beatrice Mackelcan, Joseph H. Porter, Maude A. Freeman, Ruth Kamm, William J. McDonough and Mr. Jackson.

Special mention should be made of the accompanists, Dorothy Daniel, Bess Schweinfest and Elsie Traudt, whose assistance was splendidly given. Miss Schweinfest deserves particular credit for she not only proved herself a splendid accompanist, but also delighted her hearers with two vocal solos.

In the audience there were noted many of Newark's prominent musicians, all of whom seemed to enjoy every number on this delightful program.

Newark Symphony Orchestra Concerts.

On Thursday afternoon last, October 8, the board of directors of the Newark Symphony Orchestra, held a meeting, the first this season, in the Security Savings Bank Building. Conductor Louis Ehrke reported that several new members had been added to the orchestra, and that the rehearsals held thus far had shown a marked enthusiasm which should prove very helpful in the development of this orchestral body.

It was decided to give two concerts this season, both in Wallace Hall. The first program will be given on Monday evening, January 18, and the second on Monday night April 19. At the first concert the program will include Beethoven's seventh symphony, Bruch's concerto for violin and orchestra, to be played by Arthur Walsh, one of the first violins of the orchestra, and compositions by Massenet, Glazounow, and Wagner. A vocal soloist will also assist.

Lyric Club Holds Special Meeting.

This afternoon, Monday, October 12, in Lauter Hall, the Lyric Club, of which Mrs. Jay Ten Eyck is president, held a special meeting preliminary to its first rehearsal. The first regular rehearsal of the club will take place in the same hall on Thursday afternoon, October 15.

Newark Musicians' Club to Hold Meeting.

The first regular meeting this season of the Newark Musicians' Club will be held Wednesday evening, October 14, at 41 Spruce street. An unusually delightful program has been arranged, including vocal, instrumental and ensemble numbers by members of the club. This is to be the beginning of a monthly series of informal concerts which are to be given throughout the season. Several public concerts are to be held during the winter, the participants being chosen from club programs. Katherine Eyman is chairman of the program committee.

MUSIC NOTES.

Ruth Rusby, soprano, of Degraw avenue, has opened a thirty weeks' tour as a member of the New York Grand Opera Company. She will sing the roles of Micaela in Bizet's "Carmen" and Siebel in Gounod's "Faust."

On Sunday afternoon, October 25, at 4.30 o'clock, Sir John Stainer's cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus," will be sung by the quartet and the young people's chorus employed in the choir of the First Presbyterian Church, Bloomfield, in that church. The performance will be given under the direction of Ralph E. Douglas, organist and choir director.

Music will be the topic at the March 20 meeting of the Saturday Club, according to the club's year book, which was issued recently.

Herbert Sachs-Hirsch, the pianist, has become a member of the Newark Musicians' Club.

An interesting article on Newark music appeared in the New York Tribune, Sunday, October 11, in the special section devoted to music. The article was written by Alexander Berne, the pianist. In this same issue an entire page is devoted to advertisements of Newark soloists and teachers.

Jacob Rittenband, the violinist; Mary Bradin, violinist, and Arthur Klein, pianist, have joined the Newark Musicians' Club.

T. W. ALLEN.

DEATH OF FRANK KING CLARK GREAT LOSS TO MUSICAL WORLD.

Distinguished American Vocal Instructor Achieved Immense Reputation Abroad—Some of His Famous Pupils—Arthur Alexander's Tribute.

In the passing of Frank King Clark the musical world is deprived of one of its most vital factors, and the news of this master's untimely demise, published in last week's MUSICAL COURIER, was received with profound regret.

For many years Frank King Clark has been a singing teacher of renown, and the work accomplished by this indefatigable American aroused tremendous interest in concert and operatic circles everywhere. Mr. Clark possessed versatility to a rare extent, and his pupils were drawn from many countries of the world.

Frank King Clark formerly resided and taught in Chicago, where he established a wide reputation, being regarded as one of the foremost vocal authorities in America. Finally in 1901, he decided to remove to Paris in order to extend his work. His success in the French capital was unprecedented for an American voice teacher, and for several years he and Mrs. Clark, who had a subsidiary class of pupils, were engaged from early morning until late at night with a host of pupils from America, Australia, Germany, Russia and France. The French Government conferred upon Mr. Clark the order of

FRANK KING CLARK.

"Officer d'Academie" as a token of recognition of his remarkable gifts as an instructor.

In the summer of 1910, after attaining enormous success in Paris, Frank King Clark decided to transfer his field of action to Berlin, realizing the importance of the Prussian capital as a music center and the opportunities to be found there in the realm of German opera and Lied.

The successes of Frank King Clark in Berlin during the four years of his activities there have become a matter of history by their frequent brilliant manifestations and the consequent publicity as a natural result of the King Clark method, as exemplified by many noted artist-pupils who hold lofty positions on the operatic and concert stages both in Europe and America, and among whom may be mentioned Helen Stanley, Gertrude Rennyson, Ruth Ashley, Bessie Abbott, Jeanne Jomelli, Frances Alda, Loretta Tannert, Estelle Wentworth, Ann Swinburn, Louise Amsden, Sue Howard, Emma Wilmeir, Clarence Whitehill, Allen Hinckley, Basil Ruysdael, Byford Ryan, Thomas MacBurney, Reinald Werrenrath, John Braun and many others.

Arthur Alexander's Tribute.

Arthur Alexander, the American tenor, who arrived in the country recently from Paris, pays the following tribute to the late Frank King Clark:

"Hotel Bretton Hall,
"New York, October 7, 1914.

"To the Musical Courier:

"The news of the death of Frank King Clark in Berlin a few days ago will come as a shock to a host of his friends on both sides of the Atlantic. With his passing, the musical world loses a forceful exponent of American teaching methods, his pupils, a devoted and painstaking master, and those who called him friend, a friend, a real one, whole souled, generous and considerate.

"We who knew him in what we call the "early days" in Paris, some thirteen years ago, were not to be surprised at his quick rise to a place of honor in the teaching world. At that time he was laying the foundation for his too short life work by earnest study and comprehensive anyalysis of the different methods as taught by the best teachers there. I do not think that any one could fail to have been impressed with his devotion to his work, and, better still, with that white hot enthusiasm which he showed in everything he undertook. After several years in Paris, teaching pupils of almost all nationalities with splendid success, he moved to what he considered a wider field, Berlin, and up to the time of his death he remained there, devoted to his work.

"There was no one more genial than Frank King Clark. He, more than any one I have every known, had a keen sense of humor. I shall never forget the many evenings spent at the Clarks' house in Paris, when for an hour he would keep the room convulsed with his droll remarks. How pleasant it all was and how impossible it seems that we shall never see him again in this world!

"I suppose that the majority of people, meeting Frank for the first time, would be impressed with his abundant vitality and cheery good nature. And yet for years he has had a constant fight against a grave form of nervous trouble, and against which a weaker nature might have given up the struggle and retired to a quiet country life, especially as Frank Clark had prospered in a business way and had no need of his teaching income, but he preferred the work and the fight, and never gave it up until the end.

"A kind and devoted husband, a wise and careful master, a true and faithful friend. Such was Frank King Clark. May he rest in peace!

ARTHUR ALEXANDER."

William Hinshaw Returns from Europe.

William Hinshaw, the American baritone, accompanied by Mrs. Hinshaw, arrived last week from Berlin. Mr. Hinshaw was engaged in Germany until November, but owing to the state of affairs in Europe he was obliged to abandon his engagements there.

The Dippel Season.

Andreas Dippel's season of operetta at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre will open October 28, with "The Lilac Domino," a French piece adapted for the American stage.

Arthur Weld Dead.

Arthur Weld, aged fifty-two, a well known New York conductor of comic opera, died last week of apoplexy while motoring through West Point, N. Y.

Carl Friedberg in New York.

Carl Friedberg, the German pianist, arrived in New York, Thursday, October 8, on the steamship Celtic, for his first American tour, which will take him as far as the Pacific Coast.

CARL FRIEDBERG.

He will make his New York debut at Carnegie Hall, November 2, and will start his tour in Pittsburgh, October 23.

A Large Virgil Enrollment.

The Virgil Piano Conservatory, 42 West Seventy-sixth street, New York, has received an excellent number of applicants this fall, almost all of whom have enrolled for the entire school year. A large number of the former season's pupils have returned, to which number are added several who planned to study abroad, but are unable to do so this year.

Among those who returned are Emma Lipp and Marion Blair, with whom Mrs. Virgil expects to tour the East again, starting at York, Pa., on October 29.

With her accustomed energy, Mrs. Virgil is utilizing the meantime in publishing more of her successful pieces, which teachers find so well adapted to pupils of various grades. The new output should be ready for the press by November 1.

Century "Opera Talks."

Havrah Hubbard, assisted by Floyd M. Baxter at the piano, gave the second of his Opera Talks at the Century Opera House, New York, on Sunday afternoon, April 11. As the opera to be presented at that house on Tuesday evening was "Madame Butterfly," the talk was upon that subject. Mr. Hubbard is a most interesting speaker and his talk should be of immense help both to those who have never before seen the opera and to those who have seen it many times. The audience was large and seemingly delighted with this novel manner of becoming acquainted with the operas to be given at the Century.

Indianapolis Orchestra.

Indianapolis, which has an orchestra of its own, will enjoy eight symphony concerts this season, which is the fourth in the history of the city's symphonic organization.

Pasquale Amato Back from Italy.

Pasquale Amato, the Metropolitan Opera baritone, arrived in New York last week from Italy.

VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
VICTOR KÜZDÖ
Sole authorized representative (in America) of the system of
LEOPOLD AUER
Studio: 560 West End Avenue, New York City

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Leonora Allen, Paolo Ananian, Arthur Aldridge, Adriano Ariani.

B

Mrs. A. M. Blair, Clarence Bird, Alice L. Bryant, Norah Brandt, Jessie Baskerville, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, Edmund Burke, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Lillian Blauvelt, Rudolf Berger, Alessandro Bonci, Ferruccio Busoni, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, Grace Burnap, Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Pauline Bachmann.

C

Enrico Caruso, Cleofonte Campanini, Shanna Cumming, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Mrs. Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Francis Coppicus, Ernesto Consolo, Charles Cooper, Andrea Casertani, Sasha Culbertson.

D

Adamo Didur, Norah Drewett, J. F. Delma-Heide, Emmy Destinn, Eleonora de Cisneros, Gaston Duchamel, Camille Decreus.

E

Annie Ellermann, Albert Elkus, Emma Eames, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Carl Flesch, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Flonzaley Quartet, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia, Adelin Fermin.

G

Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Archer Gibson, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Katharine Goodson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Hedwig Glomb, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, Aristodemo Giorgini, A. J. Goodrich, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt, Mrs. Warner Gibbs.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, George Harris, Jr., Sue Harvard, Edwin Hughes, Carl Hillman, Edward Hargrave, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Genevieve Houghton, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann.

J

Anna Taylor Jones, Clayton Johns.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Walter Kirschbaum.

L

Felice Lyne, Hans Letz, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Theodor Lattermann, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Florence Macbeth, Zitella Martin, Marguerite Melville, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Pietro Minetti, Isolde Menges, Otillie Metzger, Lucian Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, Elisabeth Mack, Hans Merx, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Victor Maurel.

N

Hildegarde Nash, Arthur Newstead.

O

H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober.

P

Paul Petri, Louis Persinger, Dolly Patterson, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Alfred Piccaver, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, Anna Pavlowa.

R

Titta Ruffo, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

Bruno Steindel, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Albert Stoessel, Carlos Salzedo, Katherine Loyal, Phillips Shaw, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Arrigo Serato, Max Smith, Giulio Setti, Ann Swinburne, Arthur P. Schmidt, Umberto Sorrentino, Bertram Shapleigh.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Arturo Toscanini, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tremonti, Elizabeth Topping, Isadore Troostwyck, André Tourret.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Luisa Villani, Constantin von Sternberg.

W

Felix Weingartner, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Frank Waller, Beatrice Whecler, Herman Weil, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams, Frederic Warren, Mrs. Warren.

Z

Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

Wm. J. Guard, press representative of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is back from Europe.

Dr. Karl Muck, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York on the steamship Ryndam, of the Holland-American Line, Wednesday, October 7, and proceeded to Boston.

Alfred Hertz, German conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was a passenger on the steamship Ryndam, which reached New York last Wednesday.

Florence Hardeman, the violinist, has returned from Europe.

Otto Roth, Albert Sand, Hubert S. Sauvelt and Hendrick Van Veen, members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York on the steamship Ryndam, from Rotterdam, Wednesday, October 7.

Andrea de Segurola, the Spanish basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was a passenger on the Italian Lloyd Sabaudo steamship Regina d'Italia, arriving at New York, Wednesday, October 7.

Allen Hinckley, the baritone, is back from Europe.

Sigismund Stojowski, the pianist, has returned from abroad.

Ada Soder-Hueck has arrived in New York from Europe.

William Hinshaw, the baritone, has returned from Europe.

Carl Friedberg, the pianist, arrived in New York last week on the steamship Celtic.

Pasquale Amato, the Metropolitan Opera baritone, arrived from Europe on the Italian liner, Duca di Genoa, Monday, October 11.

On the same boat was Frances Alda, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Manuel Quirogo, the Spanish violinist, arrived in New York, Monday of this week, on the steamship Rochambeau.

Rudolph Schirmer was a passenger on the Italian steamship Duca di Genova, which reached New York October 11.

Frank la Forge, the pianist,-composer, arrived on the same ship.

An Inspiring Incident.

Sibyl Sammis-MacDermid, who last summer paid a brief visit to her sister, Mrs. George K. March, in Spokane, Wash., was much captivated by the rugged beauty of the mountain lakes of the vicinity and several excursions were made to these ideal spots.

Toward the close of a wonderful day at Spirit Lake, Mrs. MacDermid, herself a vivid picture in a scarlet sweater, sat at the prow of the boat drinking in the loveliness of water, sky and mountains. Suddenly, impelled by an irresistible impulse, she broke into the wildest of all songs, "Brünnhilde's Battle Cry," from "Walküre." Across the water it rang until the hills took up the echo, and those on shore listened spellbound. There were no horns, no drums, no trumpets; only the soul of an artist to interpret the Wagner spirit, and a wonderful voice to break the stillness with the stirring cry, "Ho-yo-to-ho," nature alone supplying the orchestral coloring. It was a never-to-be-forgotten experience to those who heard it.

Victor Kuzdö Is Back from Germany.

After spending several months at Loschwitz, Germany, coaching with and assisting Professor Auer in teaching, Victor Küzdö has just returned to New York, and has resumed his violin classes.

Like many others, he had great difficulty and some thrilling experiences in getting out of the war inflicted territory.

A large class of students were anxiously awaiting his return and many of the Auer pupils who were booked for Russia will follow him to New York, upon the advice of Professor Auer.

"Stabat Mater" at Mt. Morris Baptist Church.

Rossini's "Stabat Mater" was given an excellent rendition on Sunday evening, October 4, when the choir of the Mt. Morris Baptist Church, New York, assisted by visiting soloists, was heard. The soloists were Olive Kline, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; Lambert Murphy, tenor, and Donald Chalmers, basso. The work of each of these artists is on a high plane artistically, and a large audience listened with evident enjoyment to their splendid interpretations of their solo passages.

MRS. KING CLARK Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, 437 Fifth Ave M. H. Hanson New York

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

The PROGRESS of AMERICAN MUSIC

[This department is designed by the MUSICAL COURIER to be as complete a record as possible of the public performance all over the world of the works of composers born in the United States. The department will be published weekly and contributions are solicited from any source whatsoever to help make the record all-encompassing. The clippings and programs sent must report concerts which have actually taken place and must be of recent date. However, advance notices and advance programs will not be considered. The data submitted must also include the place and date of performance and the names of the performers, and, before all things, it should be remembered that composers not born in the United States are ineligible for the MUSICAL COURIER list. All communications referring to this department must be addressed:—"American Composition Editor," MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.]

uer, Marion—"Send Me a Dream," "Over the Hills," "Were I a Bird," "Star Trysts," "Melancholie," "The Linnet Is Tuning Her Flute," "Only of Thee and Me," "Phillis," "A Little Lane," "Spring Fantasy" (songs), sung by May Dearborn Schwab, studio recital, Carnegie Hall, New York, April 20, 1914.

—"Arabesque" (piano), played by Hans Barth, Maplewood Lecture Association, Newark, N. J., April 22, 1914.

ach, Mrs. H. H. A.—"Sonata" for violin and piano, played by Amy Keith Jones and Florence Hodge, Lake View Woman's Club, Chicago, April 21, 1914.

—"The Year's at the Spring" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

own, Mary Helen—"The Bees' Argument," "Idylle Fantastique" (piano), played by Hans Barth, studio recital, Carnegie Hall, New York, April 30, 1914;—played by Hans Barth, Maplewood Lecture Association, Newark, N. J., April 22, 1914.

—"Snowflakes" (chorus), sung by the Summit Choral Society, Summit, N. J., April 28, 1914.

—"Thoughts of You" (song), sung by Orville Harrold, Music Festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

mpbell-Tipton—"Spirit Flower" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

—"If I Were King" (song), sung by John Barnes Wells, private musicale, New York, April 1, 1914.

—"Spirit Flower" (song), sung by Ann Ivins, Kismet Temple, Brooklyn, March 6, 1914;—sung by Ellison van Hoose, People's Institute concert, Cooper Union, New York, March 15, 1914.

rpenter, John Alden—"When I Bring to You Colored Toys" (song), sung by Louise Harrison Slade, Lake View Woman's Club, Chicago, Ill., April 21, 1914.

oote, Arthur—"Four Character Pieces" (orchestra), played by the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra, music festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

ster, Fay—"A Nocturne" (song), sung by Orville Harrold, music festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

—"The White Blossom's Off the Bog" (song), sung by Ethelynde Smith, Steinert Hall, Boston, Mass., March 24, 1914.

—"Love's Springtime" (song), sung by Ellison van Hoose, the People's Institute, Cooper Union, New York, March 15, 1914.

—"Winter" (song), sung by Ray Williams Steele, the Dixie Club of New York, Hotel Astor, New York, March 19, 1914.

—"Serenade in Seville" (song), sung by Mme. Ranke, Lenten recital, Cort Theatre, New York, March 26, 1914.

—"Nocturne," "Winter," "Love's Springtime" (songs), sung by Lulah Galvan, Waldorf-Astoria, New York, March 18, 1914.

ilberté, Hallett—"Songs of the Seasons" (song cycle), sung by Wilhelmina W. Calvert, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, April 9, 1914.

—"Ah! Love But a Day" (song), sung by Irene Cumming, Maplewood Lecture Association, Newark, N. J., April 22, 1914.

ugo, John Adams—Trio in E flat, op. 4, for piano, violin and violoncello, played by the composer, R. E. Meyer and Jacques Renard, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, April 9, 1914.

uss, Henry Holden—"Polonaise Brillante" (piano), played by Florence Beckwith, the Lecture Recital Club, Cleveland, Ohio, February 19, 1914.

—"Valse," op. 20; "Prelude for Left Hand," "Prelude in D Major" (piano), played by Ethel Thompson, Patchogue, N. Y., March 7, 1914.

—"Prelude III," for the right hand (piano), played by Edwin Stodola, Brooklyn, February 21, 1914.

rdan, Jules—"Barbara Frietchie" (cantata), sung by Gertrude Manning and festival chorus, music festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

ürsteiner, Jean Paul—"Invocation to Eros" (song), sung by Corinne Welsh, music festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

La Forge, Frank—"Expectancy," "A Retreat" (songs), sung by Grace Kerns, Summit Choral Society, Summit, N. J., April 28, 1914.

MacDowell, Edward A.—"Prelude" from first modern suite (piano), played by Mrs. John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

—"Polonaise" (piano), played by Hans Barth, studio recital, Carnegie Hall, New York, April 20, 1914:—played by Hans Barth, Maplewood Lecture Association, Newark, N. J., April 22, 1914.

—Woodland Sketches: "A Deserted Farm," "In Autumn," "To a Water Lily," "Will-o'-the-Wisp" (piano), played by Lillie Hansen, the Pouch Gallery, Brooklyn, April 4, 1914.

Mead, Catherine Pannill—"The Little Dutch Garden" (song), sung by Beatrice McCue, Cort Theatre, New York, March 26, 1914.

Nevin, Ethelbert—"Mon Désir" (song), sung by Musette d'Auli, Genesee Valley Club, Rochester, N. Y., May 27, 1914.

—"O! That We Two Were Maying" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

Paine, John K.—"Columbus March and Hymn" (chorus), sung by the festival chorus, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

Salter, Mary Turner—"The Cry of Rachel" (song), sung by Anna Bauger, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, April 9, 1914.

—"Come to the Garden" (song), sung by Irene Cumming, Maplewood Lecture Association, Newark, N. J., April 22, 1914.

Scott, John Prindle—"The Secret" (song), sung by Martin Richardson, St. Paul, Minn., August 26, 1914;—sung by Orville Harrold, Ocean Grove, N. J., July 22, 1914;—Sung by Bruce Benjamin, Saginaw, Mich., May 20, 1914;—sung by George Harris, Jr., Musicians' Club, New York, March 22, 1914.

—"The Revelation" (song), sung by Charles O. Smith, Detroit, Mich., May 22, 1914;—sung by William Thiers, Ocean Grove, N. J., July 29, 1914;—sung by Eugene Scudder, Newark, N. J., April 9, 1914;—sung by George Harris, Jr., the Musicians' Club, New York, March 22, 1914.

—"John o' Dreams" (song), sung by Elsie C. Mershon, Saginaw, Mich., May 20, 1914;—sung by Mrs. Frederic Fitzgerald, Detroit, Mich., May 22, 1914;—sung by George Munry, Geneva, N. Y., April 19, 1914;—sung by Eugene Scudder, Newark, N. J., April 9, 1914.

—"The Death Triumphant" (song), sung by Wallis Craig Smith, Saginaw, Mich., May 20, 1914;—sung by Mrs. William A. Kerr, Detroit, Mich., May 22, 1914;—sung by La Rue R. Boals, the Musicians' Club, New York, March 22, 1914.

—"The Voice in the Wilderness." "A Sailor's Love Song" (songs), sung by George Harris, Jr., the Musicians' Club, New York, March 22, 1914.

—"My True Love Lies Asleep" (song), sung by La Rue R. Boals, the Musicians' Club, New York, March 22, 1914.

—"The Ballad of Johnnie Sands," "Old Bill Bluff" (songs), sung by William Simmons, the Musicians' Club, New York, March 22, 1914.

Stevenson, Frederick—"Salutation of the Dawn" (song), sung by Louise Harrison Slade, Lake View Woman's Club, Chicago, April 21, 1914.

Torgerson, Helena Stone—"Study for Left Hand," "Butterfly," "By the Brook," "Reverie," "Concert Waltz" (harp), played by the composer, Lake View Woman's Club, Chicago, April 21, 1914.

Van der Stucken, Frank—"O Come With Me in the Summer Night" (song), sung by Gertrude Manning, music festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

Ward, Frank E.—"Love's Devotion" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

Ware, Harriet—"Good Night," from "A Day in Arcady" (song), sung by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gunther, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, April 9, 1914.

—"Hindu Slumber Song" (song), sung by Mrs. Walter Raymond, Raymond Hotel, Pasadena, Cal., March 22, 1914.

—"O Realm of Love," from the cantata "Sir Olaf," sung by Leon Rennay, Paterson Music Festival, Paterson, N. J., April 28, 1914.

Whelpley, Benjamin—"'Tis Springtime on the Eastern Hills" (song), sung by Louise Harrison Slade, Lake View Woman's Club, Chicago, April 21, 1914.

Woodman, R. Huntington—"A Birthday" (song), sung by Anna Bauger, the Assembly Salon, Hotel Plaza, New York, April 9, 1914.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

St. John, N. B., September 17, 1914.

October 15, a National Musical Festival is to be held in the Imperial Theatre (kindly loaned for the occasion), in aid of the patriotic fund. W. W. Swornsbourne, late of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and now of the Boston Opera orchestra, who is at present in the city, has volunteered his services as director of the chorus and orchestra, which will be composed of local musicians. Stanley Lawton, late of Sousa's Band, and D. Arnold Fox, organist, of this city, will also give their services. All compositions will be of British authorship and the entertainment is under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire.

The teaching season has opened somewhat earlier than usual. Pauline Beidermann, piano teacher, after spending her vacation in Yarmouth, N. S., has resumed teaching. Annie L. Lugrin, teacher of singing, after a summer's outing in the Norton Hills, has reopened her studio. Mrs. Kent Scovil, pianist and teacher, has also returned from a short vacation. Prior to her departure, a most interesting recital was given at her studio by two of her advanced pupils, Dorothy Bayard and Constance Ewing. Both acquitted themselves creditably. Miss Bayard's numbers included "Bouree," Bach; "To a Water Lily," MacDowell; "En Courant," Godard. Miss Ewing: "Venetian Love Song," Nevin; "Second Mazurka," Godard; "Venetian Barcarolle," Godard; "In the Cave of Mountain Dwarfs," Grieg. The program closed with Raff's "Tarantelle" for two pianos.

Another concert which is being looked forward to with much interest, is the one to be given in aid of the Free Kindergarten by Christian Kriens, violinist; Helen Wetmore, soprano; Mrs. Kent Scovil, pianist. Mr. Kriens, who is spending the summer at Brown's Flats, on the St. John River, has kindly given his services, also Miss Wetmore, who is visiting relatives in her native province. Mrs. Scovil contributes her work as soloist and accompanist.

ANNIE L. LUGRIN.

Helen Ware in Joint Recitals.

During the past season Helen Ware appeared with Mme. Merö in joint recitals in Cleveland, Youngstown, Detroit, etc., establishing for herself a reputation not only as a soloist of eminence in the domain of Hungarian and Slav music, but also as a pathmaker for many new sonatas from their composers.

This season Helen Ware will appear with Bauer, Ganz, and Bloomfield Zeisler in some of the most important cities in joint recitals, such as Columbus, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Emporia, Mankato, etc. Among the works she will help to introduce is a new sonata by the Hungarian composer Buttykay. She also will play some of her own arrangements of Hungarian folksongs from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Toronto Symphony Season Cancelled.

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra has, owing to the war, cancelled its season of concerts in its home city.

CHICAGO APOLLO MUSICAL CLUB TO SING "CARACTACUS."

Noted Organization to Appear in Special Performance of Elgar's Work—Concert Announcements and General Mention of the Week.

Chicago, Ill., October 10, 1914.

One week from this Sunday afternoon at the Auditorium Theatre the Apollo Musical Club of 300 singers will give a special performance of Edward Elgar's "Caractacus." This work was sung a number of years ago by the Apollo Club with great success, and this repetition is timely. The artists engaged for the solo roles are: Marie Sundelius, the Swedish soprano, who has filled many important engagements in the East; Paul Althouse, tenor, of the Metropolitan Opera; Theodore Harrison, basso, of Philadelphia. Harrison M. Wild will be the conductor, Edgar Nelson the organist, and the entire Chicago Symphony Orchestra will furnish the accompaniments.

Tiffin Musicales.

The European war will have no effect upon the Tiffin musicales, the fourth season of which has just been announced. On account of insufficient seating capacity the musicales this year will take place in the Gold Room of the Congress Hotel on the following dates: November 30, Jeanne Gerville-Reache, contralto of the Metropolitan and Boston Grand Opera Companies, assisted by Albert Spalding, violinist. December 14, Alice Verlet, coloratura soprano, of the Opera Comique, Paris, and Theatre Royale de la Monnaie, Brussels (her initial appearance in America), assisted by Arthur Alexander, tenor, of Paris (his first American appearance). December 28, Cecil Fanning and Greta Torpadie in the Irish sketch, "Amour Irlandais." Assisting artist to be announced later. January 11, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Russian pianist, assisted by Mme. Gabrilowitsch, contralto, and Carl Flesch, Hungarian violinist. January 25, Mary Garden, her only appearance in Chicago.

Reinald Werrenrath in Concert.

On Friday evening, October 2, the Grabel Orchestral Band gave a concert at Orchestra Hall, assisted by Reinald Werrenrath, baritone. Under the direction of V. J. Grabel, its conductor, the band gave a good account of itself in a well balanced and interesting program. Mr. Werrenrath won his customary success, singing several encores and singing admirably the prologue from "Pagliacci," in which he scored a huge success. Mr. Werrenrath will appear again this month near Chicago, having been engaged to open the series of the Kinsolving musicales with Florence Hinkle on Tuesday, October 20.

Grace Hall Riheldaffer Passed Through Chicago.

Grace Hall Riheldaffer, soprano, called at this office Wednesday afternoon en route to Milwaukee, where she was heard the following evening in concert. Mme. Riheldaffer informed the Chicago representative of the Musical Courier that she was booked solid to December 10 and after January she will fill many dates in the East, and in April will appear in Canada. Between June 15 and August 21 she appeared every day in concert, including Sunday, and last season her appearances were no less than 232 in number, appearing for seventy days twice a day—probably a record during last year's musical season.

Jenny Dufau to Open Recital Season.

Jenny Dufau, soprano of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, will open the concert season next Sunday afternoon with an interesting program. The concert, which will be under the management of Harry Culbertson, will be given at the Illinois Theatre.

Louise St. John Westervelt to Be Heard in Concert.

Louise St. John Westervelt, soprano, will appear at Assembly Hall, Fine Arts Building, Thursday evening, October 22, in concert. Miss Westervelt will be heard in the Louis Victor Saar-Browning song cycle. These songs will have, on this occasion, their first hearing in Chicago. The appearance of Miss Westervelt on the program will be doubly interesting.

Daddi Not With the Century Opera.

Francesco Daddi, the buffo tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, has informed this office that though several musical and daily papers had announced that he was engaged by the Century Opera Company and though his name appeared on the rostrum of the program of the company, he is in no way connected with that organization. It is true that he sang with some of the members of the Century Opera Company at Ravinia Park, this summer, but upon the completion of his engagement and while in New York he saw the brothers Aborn, who informed him that this season his services would not be needed. Signor Daddi then returned to Chicago, where he opened a vocal studio in the Fine Arts Building and expects also to be busy concertizing. Signor Daddi made a name for himself, not only as an operatic singer, but in his rendition of the Neapolitan songs he is said to have no superior.

Frederic Shipman Returns to Chicago.

Frederic Shipman, the concert manager, has just returned from Australia. The astute manager visited the Chicago office of the Musical Courier and recited some very interesting anecdotes regarding the Nordica-Paul Dufault and Elman tour. Some of Mr. Shipman's adventures will find space in these columns at a later period. He has no artists under his management just now, but, as heretofore, he will only book the "top notchers," as he expressed it, and will wait until he can get one or two stars before reentering in this country the managerial field, in which he was so well known several years ago through the Melba tour.

Floyd Wiedemann Married.

Word has been received from San Francisco that Floyd Edward Wiedemann and Alice Elizabeth Straight were married on Wednesday, September 30, at San Rafael, Cal.

Amateur Musical Club's Program.

The Amateur Musical Club announces an active members' program to be given Monday afternoon, October 12, in the Assembly Room, Fine Arts Building. The program was arranged by Mrs. W. L. de Wolf, Edith Lobdell, and those taking part will be Mrs. Charles R. Vincent, Grace Potter, Mildred Brown, Ethel Edith Jones, Mae Doelling and Olive Kriebs. This will be preceded by a business meeting at 1.30 p. m.

Gladys Hawkins Locates in Chicago.

Gladys Hawkins, piano teacher, has sent out cards announcing the removal of her studio from Vienna, Austria, to 815 Wilson avenue, Chicago. Miss Hawkins teaches the Leschetizky method.

Noted Singer in Charity Concert.

Agnes Nering, one of Chicago's most popular concert sopranos, will be the principal star at a charity concert to be given on Sunday evening, October 11, at St. Stanislaus Auditorium, at Noble and Bradley streets. Mrs. Nering will sing an aria from "Tosca" and a group of English and Polish songs. An attractive feature will be the "cherry blossom" scene from Puccini's "Madama Butterfly," in which Mrs. Nering will sing the part of Cho-Cho-San and Mrs. Hedwig Dombeck, contralto, will sing the part of Suzuki. Such numbers will also be given as Wieniawski's "Legende" by Constance Krenz, violinist; selections from Chopin by Cecilia Mallek and Mathilda Massmann, Dvorák's "Slavonian Dances" by Harriet Wiedeman-Turalski. Blanche Dyniewicz will read "The Shadow of a Song," by Rae Brown, and the "Snow Legend," by Long-

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

LECTURES, OPERA TALKS, AND PIANO LECTURE RECITALS
By
HENRIETTE WEBER
Also the Larkin-Weber Recitals
THE LARKIN-WEBER RECITALS
Are Creating a SENSATION
Engagements booked in all leading cities
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill
or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway : New York.

HERDIEN | GANNON
MABEL SHARP Soprano | ROSE LUTIGER Contralto
SINGLE OR JOINT RECITALS
5132 Kenmore Avenue, Phone: Edgewater 7252 | 715 Kimball Hall, Phone: Lawndale 1335

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
KENNETH M. BRADLEY, President

LEADING SCHOOL OF
Expression | MUSIC | Languages & Dramatic Art
Public School Music
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:

Julie Rive-King	Harold von Mickwitz	Justine Wegener
Guy Herbert Woodard	Frank B. Webster	Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter	Eleanor Smith	Edward Dvorak
Mae Julia Riley	Emile Leclercq	Adelaide G. Lewis
Abigail Raymer	Ernest O. Todd	Robert Yale Smith
Roland Leach	Dr. Charles Allum	Anna McPherson

The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone. CHARLES W. CLARK and DAVID BAXTER, the famous Scotch baritone from the Royal College of London.
The Bush Conservatory is the only Conservatory in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
For catalogue and further information address EDWARD H. SCHWENKER, Secretary.

ellow. A scene from "Lucia" will be sung by a quartet, onsisting of Mrs. Nering, Mrs. Dombeck, John Nering, enor, and Joseph Kowalski, baritone. By way of a novel ntermezzo Miss Dyniewicz and Miss McKinley, assisted by group of young lady students of the Holy Family Acadny and members of the Agnes Nering Singing Club, will resent a series of costume dances, among them the Polish azurka, the Scotch Highland fling and the Spanish bolero. roceeds of Mrs. Nering's concert will go to augment the ducational aid fund at the Holy Family Academy for irls, conducted by the Sisters of Nazareth, at Division nd Holt streets.

MR. AND MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES BUSY.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Devries began their season of Mondays at the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music, Octoer 12. Their contract is for thirty consecutive weeks.

Artists prominent in professional and social circles, who re studying in the Devries studio in the Fine Arts Buildg this season, are: Luella Chilson Ohrman, Edith Monica raham, Mrs. Thomas Prindeville, Mrs. George Hixon, ildreth Hanson Hochstetter, Hazel Eden Mudge, Marie ahr, Mrs. Leist Beebe, Ella Gates, Mrs. Stevens, Frances lizabeth McCormick, Dorothy Cannon, Grant Kimbell, eecher Burton, Lemuel Kilby and Florian Varconi.

BEETHOVEN TRIO IN ST. JOE (MO.).

The Fortnightly Musical Club of St. Joseph, Mo., preented the Beethoven Trio, which is made up of M. Jenette Loudon, pianist; Otto B. Roehrborn, violinist, and arl Brueckner, violoncellist, at the Hotel Robidoux, on Monday evening, October 5. The trio played a well balnced and very interesting program, which was arranged y Miss Loudon, and consisted of selections by Beethoven, Vilhelmj, Lachner, Arensky, Servais and Godard. They et with the full approval of the large attendance and won heir customary success.

ROSE LUTIGER GANNON IN DEMAND.

Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto, has been engaged again s soloist by the Chicago Sunday Evening Club. On Ocober 9, Mrs. Gannon sang for the Colonel F. Parker Club nd on Monday, October 12, at Orchestra Hall, she furished the program for the Knights of Columbus. She ill give a recital on October 15, at Winona, Minn., where Irs. Gannon is director of the vocal department, at St. eresa's College.

MACBURNEY RECITAL SERIES.

The first program of the MacBurney series of song recials this season were given on Monday evening, October 2, at the Hamilton Park Field House. E. Fern MacBurey was the soloist and Grace Grove the accompanist.

F. WIGHT NEUMANN ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Johanna Gadski, the soprano, will open F. Wight Neumann's season with a song recital at the Illinois Theatre, ext Sunday afternoon, October 18, at 3.30.

Margarete Matzenauer, dramatic soprano of the Metrolitan Opera Company, will be heard for the first time in hicago, in a song recital, Sunday afternoon, November 1, t 3.30, at the Blackstone Theatre.

A joint recital of great interest will be that of Rosa litzka, contralto, and Ludwig Schmidt, violinist, which ill take place at the Illinois Theatre, Sunday afternoon, lovember 8.

Carol Robinson, pianist, will make her debut at the Fine rts Theatre, Sunday afternoon, November 8.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY ITEMS.

Karleton Hackett has been engaged by the Chicago Uniersity Lecture Association to deliver a series of lectures t the North Side Center, Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian hurch, beginning October 5. The lectures will be the folowing subjects: "Liszt and Weber; The Beginning of the lodern Movement."

All of the instructors of the American Conservatory have eturned from their European trips, the last to arrive eing Lucy Duncan Hall, the teacher of the Dalcroze urhythmics. Miss Hall's children's classes began Saturday iorning, October 10, and the classes for adults are now eing organized.

Edward Clarke, baritone, and Ramon Girvin, violinist, ill give a joint recital Saturday afternoon, October 17, t Kimball Hall. Mr. Clarke will sing three groups of ngs from Shakespeare, and Mr. Girvin will play "La olia," by Corelli, and the Saint-Saëns' B minor concerto.

Herbert Butler's talented pupil, Ruth Ray, her studies in resden with Leopold Auer being interrupted by the war, as returned to this country and will resume her work with Ir. Butler upon the advice of Auer, who pronounced her to be a perfectly taught pupil.

ERNEST BRIGGS' ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Ernest Briggs announces that he has booked all of the oloists for the Canton (Ohio) Symphony Orchestra series. The Canton Orchestra had a successful season last year with Alma Gluck, Vera Barstow and Myrtle Elvyn as soloists.

The soloists for this season will be Anita Carranza, the Mexican soprano; Irma Seydel, violinist, and Grace Hamilton Morrey, pianist.

The Metropolitan Artists' Series of Recitals in the Fine Arts Theatre will open the second season with a joint recital, introducing Virginia Thomson, the New York contralto, who has extensive Eastern engagements in concerts and opera this season, and George Riecks, the pianist, presenting a program of unusual interest.

Mr. Briggs announces also that John R. Rankl, baritone, has been engaged to sing with the Milwaukee Musical Society in September, in "The Damnation of Faust."

BUSH CONSERVATORY NOTES.

Rowland E. Leach was recently engaged by the conservatory. Mr. Leach has distinguished himself both as a violinist and composer, many of his compositions having been played this summer by the National Symphony Orchestra under the conductorship of Max Bendix.

Robert Yale Smith, pianist, returned recently to the conservatory after a three years' stay in Nebraska, where he has been in charge of one of the large music schools. Mr. Smith formerly was associated with the Bush Conservatory for a number of years, and his return to the school is heartily welcomed by his friends and pupils.

The Bush Conservatory is to be congratulated in having secured the services of David Baxter, the Scotch basso. Mr. Baxter has a large class of pupils and the numerous applications for his time are an indication of the public's appreciation of him.

Since the announcement has been made that from now on Edgar A. Nelson will devote most of his time to teaching, students have been coming to him from all parts of the country.

The first orchestral rehearsal under the conductorship of Guy Herbert Woodard will take place today, Saturday, October 10, at 3 p. m. All students who are qualified have the unusual advantage of this orchestral training. Mr. Woodard will also begin his ensemble classes on Monday, October 12, at 2.30 p. m.

"A school of singing which sets the Standard in Vocal Art."

The Unqualified Success of the "Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto"

(Science of Vocal Art) of the City of New York
Has necessitated the removal of the school to her residence,

134 WEST EIGHTY-SECOND STREET

Mme. Maigille teaches the Art of Singing which begins with absolute voice placing through to the finished professional in Opera, Oratorio, Leider, in English, French, German and Italian. A method of singing for the professional as well as the beginner. A student's course, a teacher's course, an artist's course. Students may enter at any time. All lessons are private and graduated to the needs of the pupil. The unequalled results of the vocal method substantiates the claim that the "Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto" is the "foremost School of Singing" in this country. Voice trials daily at 12 o'clock and by appointment

Address the Secretary

The "Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto," Tel. 4877 Schuyler. 134 West 82d St., New York.

Vera Barstow in Toronto.

Vera Barstow, the violinist, has been resting at Toronto, studying with her old master, Luigi von Kunits.

Miss Barstow was booked for a Canadian tour of forty-one dates; this perforce has now been cancelled, and her managers are endeavoring to fill the time by booking her in the far West.

Miss Barstow has been particularly unfortunate this year, as she also had been booked for a nine weeks' tour under a well known Southern manager, which, owing to the financial depression this year, has been cancelled by Manager M. H. Hanson rather than take any undue chances. Mr. Hanson did not think it wise to accept so many bales of cotton in lieu of cash.

Ross David Opens Residence-Studios.

Ross David, the New York vocal teacher, opened his residence-studios at 49 West Eighty-fifth street, Monday, October 5.

Associated with Mr. David are Marion David, coach and accompanist; Harmonie David, French instruction, and Mrs. Ross David, German lieder.

CINCINNATI EVENTS OF THE WEEK

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 8, 1914.

The May Festival chorus, which Alfred Hartzell, choral director, has been busily engaged in building up and reorganizing, held its first rehearsal Monday night in the gymnasium of the Ohio Mechanics' Institute. The 350 young men and women began their two years' work with the Brahms "Requiem." So well equipped were the choristers that it was possible to give the entire chorus from the "Requiem" at the first rehearsals. A large number of new voices have been added, among them an unusual number of good tenors. "The present chorus is an exceptional one," said Mr. Hartzell after the rehearsal; "the new voices are fresh and velvety, and these, joined with the splendid material remaining from the previous chorus, should give us the finest singing body the festival has known."

Frank R. Ellis, chairman of the chorus committee of the May Festival, was present and addressed the chorus, thanking those who remained from last year for their services and welcoming the new members. The festival chorus will be heard at the special concerts to be given in February at Music Hall for the National Convention of School Superintendents. Every Monday evening throughout the winter there will be a rehearsal for full chorus, with extra rehearsals Wednesday evening for women and Thursday for men.

ARTISTS BOOKED WITH SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Among the artists who will appear as soloists with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra this year are two who are making their first American tour, Carl Friedberg, pianist, and Arrigo Serato, violinist. Efrem Zimbalist, who has not appeared in Cincinnati in several years, will be among the soloists, as will Fritz Kreisler. Francis Macmillen will, no doubt, be on hand for his Cincinnati engagement. Among the singers will be Elena Gerhardt, Florence Hinkle and Edmund Burke. Others who will appear with the orchestra during the winter are Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Eleanor Spencer and Ruth Deyo, pianists; Emil Heermann, concertmaster of the orchestra, Dr. Fery Lulek and Mme. Rappold.

Dr. Ernst Kunwald is now upon the sea homeward bound and will be in Cincinnati about October 15. However musical conditions may be disturbed elsewhere, Cincinnati is assured a brilliant orchestral season, with its own conductor and men, and an exceptional array of soloists.

CONSERVATORY ITEMS.

The Cincinnati Conservatory of Music will open its faculty concert series this season, with an evening of chamber music, on October 22. The program presents two numbers of more than ordinary interest, one, a sonata for piano and violin, by Korngold, the sixteen year old Vienna boy. An overture by this young composer was played at a symphony concert last season, and Dr. Kunwald has under consideration some other compositions which may be produced this winter. The other number to be heard is a quintet for piano and strings by Ludwig Thuille. Both of these works are, it is said, being given for the first time in America.

The artists to appear in this number are Theodore Bohlmann, pianist; Bernard Sturm, violinist, and Julius Sturm, cellist, who will have the assistance of two other players.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

Grace Whistler Opens New York Studios.

Since her return from Paris and London about two years ago, where her drawing room work won for her an enviable clientele, Grace Whistler, the contralto, has had all she could do in the same line in her own country. Charming of personality and vocally adequate, this is a foregone conclusion.

Pupils have come to Miss Whistler asking for lessons, to such an extent that she has finally opened studios in New York. These are large and attractive and are located at 2128 Broadway, near Seventy-fourth street.

Miss Whistler has inaugurated studio receptions the first Sunday of each month. On the afternoon of October 4, Miss Whistler's pupils furnished the musical program, which called forth many favorable remarks from those present as to its extraordinary quality.

Miss Whistler's pupils will of necessity be limited in number, as her concert work, which begins exceptionally well this season, takes up the greater part of her time and attention.

A Springfield Concert.

Artha Williston, the soprano, will appear with Alice Nielsen and Rudolph Ganz at a concert to be given today (October 14) at Springfield, Mass.

Alice SOVEREIGN

Management:
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome per Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse • Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care New York Office, Musical Courier)

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Universite - - - PARIS

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH LECTURE—RECITALS MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
French and English Readings America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter, 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
30, AVENUE KLEBER :: :: PARIS
During European War, 7 Rue de Lépante, Nice

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
who will sing to his own accompaniment is now available for recitals.
First Chicago appearance December 14.
New York Studio, No. 100 Carnegie Hall
A Few Pupils Received
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

Helen Bixby Wetzel's Italian Successes.

Helen Bixby Wetzel, the young prima donna, whose home is in Indianapolis, Ind., is singing with much success in Italy in grand opera under the name of Elena Antonelli.

The following from the Milan Review (referring to different appearances), the oldest theatrical paper in Milan, will show the esteem in which this young singer is held:

Elena Antonelli, who sang with such resultant joy and happiness,

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL.
"Von voyage."

is a pupil of the famous Sabatini, who has given many and many pupils to the stage.

Of supreme elegance was the singing of Elena Antonelli, executing all of her part with enchanting voice and bewitching grace.

Elena Antonelli received much long applause and "bis" for the aria and ballata, "Saper Voreste."

The Torino Gazette had the following to say:

A singer of pure elegance is Elena Antonelli, who received much applause.

On Board the Canopic.

The accompanying snapshot, taken on board the steamship Canopic, shows, from right to left: Hanna Butler, the well known Chicago soprano; Beatrice Wheeler, contralto of the Chicago Opera Company, and Mary Harris, who was heard recently in "The College Hero" at Peoria, Ill. Miss Harris is a pupil of Mrs. Butler, with whom she journeyed to Europe.

A MUSICAL TRIO EN ROUTE.

Florence Austin in Maine.

Florence Austin, the American violinist, was the recipient of most sincere applause, followed by insistent encores, during both the Bangor and the Portland concerts of the Maine Music Festival. A mutual friend says she received an ovation at her first appearance, October 3. Miss Austin herself said: "I do not know when I have had so much fuss made over me, and I feel real prima donnaish."

Zoe Fulton in Operatic Roles.

Zoe Fulton is the talented young contralto singer of Pittsburgh, whose work has been chronicled frequently in these columns. Herewith are appended some press notices which followed her appearances last spring in Buffalo, N. Y., where she was heard with the Aborn Opera Company.

These notices followed her appearance in Verdi's "Rigoletto":

The fine contralto voice of Zoe Fulton added its measure to the success of the quartet in the last act, which was repeated, so insistent was the applause after its fine rendition.—Buffalo Express.

Zoe Fulton as Maddalena, Sparafucile's sister, possessing a fine contralto voice, added much to the splendid effect of the quartet numbers of the final scene.—Buffalo Enquirer.

Zoe Fulton has a lovely contralto voice and she was splendid in the quartet.—Buffalo Commercial.

Zoe Fulton as Maddalena was another delightful presentation.—Buffalo Courier.

References to her appearance in "Hänsel and Gretel" follow:

The roles of the two children, Hänsel and Gretel, were admirably done by the contralto, Zoe Fulton, and the soprano, Mary Carson. The blending of their voices in the general duet numbers was charming and both singers seemed to feel the true spirit of the pretty fairy story.—Buffalo Express.

Honors were divided between Zoe Fulton, who sang the role of Hänsel, Mary Carson, as Gretel, and Philip Fein as the witch.—Buffalo Courier.

Maud Powell Begins Tour.

Maud Powell has begun her eleventh consecutive season in this country by a short Southern tour. This is a remarkable record, the most noteworthy feature being that Mme. Powell has played an increasing number of concerts each succeeding year. Before the close of the present season she will have placed to her credit more than a thousand public performances since her return from an around-the-world tour in the winter of 1904-1905.

Following her Southern engagements Mme. Powell will be heard in Boston previous to her annual New York recital, which takes place on the evening of October 27, in Aeolian Hall.

REGINA DE SALES TEACHER OF SINGING
Pupils Prepared for Opera, Oratorio, Concert
124 West 82d St., New York. Phone, Schuyler 7511.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
In America Season 1914-1915
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

Sokoloff and Rechlin.

Nikolai Sokoloff, the Russian violinist, and Edward Rechlin, his accompanist, were "snapped" while enjoying the bucolic delights of New England at Sokoloff's little farmhouse in Westport, Conn. The house is more than a hundred years old and is full of quaint fireplaces, cupboards, etc., and has a distinctly New England charm. The two are seen here resting between spells of strenuous rehearsals.

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF AND HIS ACCOMPANIST, EDWARD RECHLIN, RELAXING.

The Music League of America has engaged Nikolai Sokoloff to play in Pittsburgh on January 5 under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club.

MINNEAPOLIS SYMPHONY REHEARSALS TO BEGIN SOON.

Personnel of Orchestra Undergoes Some Changes—Season Begins October 23—A Series of Concerts in St. Paul.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 7, 1914.

Mr. Oberhoffer will begin rehearsing the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra on Monday, October 19. With the possible exception of Carl Uterhart every man has been accounted for and will be in his place on the stage of the Auditorium on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Of the four members of the orchestra who were in Europe when war was declared, Mr. Uterhart is the only one who so far has been unable to get away. The others—Richard Czerwonky, concertmaster; Karl Scheurer, solo viola, and Jean Koch, viola—had little difficulty in leaving, although Mr. Koch did not succeed in getting away until the last minute and then had to go via Sweden. In case Mr. Uterhart should not be able to arrive in time, his place, which is that of second concertmaster, will be filled by George Klass, former second concertmaster of the St. Paul orchestra.

The personnel of the orchestra has undergone several important changes and the new list of players will show such prominent names as Paulo Gruppe, cellist; George Klass, violinist; Leonardo de Lorenzo, first flute; Bruno Labate, first oboe; Michel J. Heynen, second clarinet; Vincenzo Pezzi, second bassoon.

The total membership of the orchestra is eighty musicians. The string section consists of sixteen first violins, fourteen second violins, ten violas, nine cellos and eight basses. The opening symphony concert of the season will be given Friday evening, October 23. This will be followed Sunday afternoon, October 25, by the first popular concert, and Friday afternoon, October 30, the first young people's concert.

The St. Paul season of eight concerts opens Thursday evening, November 5, with Mildred Potter, contralto, as the soloist. However, the first actual concert to be played by Mr. Oberhoffer and his men this season will be in St. Paul on Thursday, October 22, and will be exclusively for the members of the Minnesota Educational Association, then holding its annual meeting.

RUTH ANDERSON.

Gaylord Yost Returns to Indianapolis.

Gaylord Yost, the composer-violinist, of the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music, has resumed his duties as director of the violin department. Mr. Yost and his gifted wife spent most of the summer at their home in Ohio, near Lake Erie, during which time besides enlarging his repertoire for this season, Mr. Yost completed a number of compositions for violin, besides two songs and some piano numbers. Three of the former are "Poeme erotique," "Negro Dance" and "Farfalla," which are said to be real gems for the violin, written in a decidedly modern vein. These will, no doubt, be welcomed by violinists who are looking for effective and worthy concert numbers. Mr. Yost has planned for an active concert season and his manager, Ona B. Talbot, reports a number of engagements throughout the State.

Two distinct novelties which Mr. Yost will bring out this season are a sonate for violin and piano by Eric Korngold, the fourteen year old Viennese composer, and "Ascension Sonate," by the American, Cecil Burleigh.

Marcella Craft at the Maine Festival.

The success won by Marcella Craft at the recent Maine Music Festival is well shown by the following press notices selected from among the many she received after her first appearance there:

Of the soloists, Marcella Craft, the first to appear, was a revelation. Hardly had she launched out on the "Traviata" aria, "Ah, fors' e lui," when one began to wonder that such a slight figure could contain a voice of such astonishing power and range. Her technic was impeccable, but one forgot technic in increasing delight with the beauty of tone, firm, pure and clear through all the registers, and the artistic temperament that suffused her singing and made it vital. Marcella Craft is an artist who sings the sentiment and the dramatic content of her numbers, and her beautiful tone and fine execution stand fully in the service of the intent and meaning of her songs. The Verdi aria is rather a tour de force for coloratura singing, and Marcella Craft displayed in it all the flexibility and precision of technic that coloratura implies. In her encore, Papini's lovely and lingering "Caro mio ben," were displayed a sustained loveliness of tone, a beauty of phrasing and exquisite tenderness of feeling that were beyond praise. But perhaps it was in the four arias from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" that the prima donna, for such is her rank, gave full expression to her powers. For Marcella Craft is dramatic in temperament and in Puccini's music was in her element. Aria after aria she sang of Puccini's passionate unsparing music, relentless in its demand upon the higher range of a soprano's voice, asking now for sustained and impassioned cantilena and again for single phrases that shall be all poignant accent; and through it all she sang with superb mastery and power, rising in a sweep to a climax of thrilling intensity in flawless tones of poignant feeling. In contrast was her rendition of the fine "Song of Love" with its level tenderness rising finally to an impassioned climax; her delightful singing of the encore "The Year's at the Spring," and the heart-stirring simplicity and feeling of her "Home, Sweet Home." Altogether Marcella Craft must hereafter be reckoned among the prime donne of the Music Festival, a distinction made manifest by the enthusiastic applause she evoked with every song.—Daily Eastern Argus, Portland, Me., October 6, 1914.

And what can we say of Marcella Craft?

This young woman, with a list of foreign successes to her credit, won by hard work, intelligence and persistent effort, made her bow to the audience in a lovely gown worn at a private reception before the Empress of Germany—a favor, it is understood, accorded to no other vocal artist.

Miss Craft is graceful and pleasing in her appearance with a type of face and a quality of voice which seem to make her peculiarly adapted for the great operatic roles in which she is world famous—Butterfly and Salome.

The "Traviata" aria was sung in most wonderful style—her art unaffected, pure, and appealing—each tone full to overflowing with pure lyric beauty—every note a perfect gem. The audience rose to enthusiastic response and Miss Craft returned with a sheet of music, giving a perfectly delivered encore with Mrs. Gertrude S. Davis at the piano.

When she sang Mrs. Beach's composition, "Song of Love," at her second appearance, it is safe to say that every tone, thrilling with emotion, brought its response and awoke an answering thrill in the audience. "The Year's at the Spring," also by Mrs. Beach, was an encore which called forth a rapturous burst of applause.

Miss Craft's group of arias from "Madame Butterfly" reserved for her final effort, was a rare opportunity, as Puccini's music is her own, and she has become identified with the airs written to describe the tragic life and death of the poor little Japanese maid. This most artistic rendition was listened to with breathless attention and when the "Piccolo Addio" ended, with the tragic farewell to the babe interpreted in dramatic action, the audience gave evidence of its understanding and appreciation in unstinted applause. "Butterfly" would have been wonderful with the orchestra, but, as Miss Craft explained to the Express-Advertiser last evening, a [illegible] of $1,000 must be paid for the privilege of giving the "Butterfly" airs with orchestra.

At the close of this successful finale to Miss Craft's Portland debut, the American girl, clad in her filmy blue and silver gown in which she had won triumphs before royalty abroad—singing again in her native country after thirteen years' absence—gave the song that will never grow old, "Home, Sweet Home," with pathetic sweetness and most moving effect.

Many flowers were presented her.—Portland Evening Express and Advertiser, October 6, 1914.

Those who had the distinct pleasure of hearing Miss Craft Thursday evening at once became cognizant that the reputation gained abroad was thoroughly deserved. It would not be sufficient to say that she made an impression here, for she received an ovation, the audience warming to her efforts until after her vivid, operatic rendition of several arias from "Madame Butterfly" there rose a unanimous demand for encores that would hardly be stilled in spite of the generous acquiescence of the soloist. Her voice is an extremely musical soprano of magnificent range and in superb control, and the appeal of the "Butterfly" selections particularly the last, was intensely dramatic and brought home vividly the sad and pathetic story of poor little Butterfly.

Miss Craft had a difficult task before her in singing Thursday night. Up to a few weeks ago, eastern Maine had been expecting to hear the famed Mme. Eames and Senor de Gogorza, when the announcement came that the war might prevent her from coming here. Miss Craft was selected instead. The audience regretted the non-appearance of the other artists, but when Miss Craft ended her first song, the splendid applause left not the slightest doubt but that Miss Craft had succeeded in delighting her hearers. "Ah, fors' e lui," from "La Traviata," her first song, was rendered with a grace and charm that captivated all within hearing distance of her. Her high notes were especially wonderful—clear, liquid and pure. Her artistic temperament, her dramatic ability, were at once evident to an audience that included many who had heard Sembrich sing this selection here in 1899.—Bangor Daily Commercial, October 2, 1914.

1914-1915 1915-1916

We are booking dates for both this season and the next for :: ::

CHARLES W.
CLARK

Who has cancelled all European dates :: ::

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

Blanche Goode's New York Recital.

Blanche Goode, pianist, will give a recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, on the afternoon of November 4, playing an interesting program of the old classic and modern masters. She is to play on October 16 at the Christodora House, the well known New York settlement house, and has two dates booked for Mt. Holyoke College. She plays on October 21 at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., and has a series of additional dates booked for the near future. This excellent pianist is remarkable for her brilliancy of touch, power of tone, and beauty of interpretations.

Photo by Arnold Genthe, New York.
BLANCHE GOODE.

ELEONORE DE CISNEROS
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.
In AMERICA Entire Season

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORIO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Busoni Surely Coming.

Ferruccio Busoni will sail from Europe October 20 on the steamship Canopic from Naples. He did not care to leave earlier, as he was nervous about the perils of a journey under the prevailing circumstances. Mrs. Busoni, under date of September 13, wrote to M. H. Hanson: "I too thought it wiser not to let the master travel on the overcrowded boats from Northern neutral ports. His nerves would have been too much upset. How good the accommodations on the Canopic will be I cannot say, but the Italian in Busoni will be content and happy, as he will travel in the company of his great compatriot, Arturo Toscanini, whom he admires so much, and who is his great friend."

FERRUCCIO BUSONI.

Guilmant Organ School.

The Guilmant Organ School reopened for the season on October 6 with a large enrollment and brilliant prospects for a successful year. The application list is the largest since the school was organized; students are arriving from distant points in large numbers to avail themselves of the course, and to study the Guilmant method of organ playing.

Dr. William C. Carl has brought from abroad valuable ideas which are to be incorporated in the course this fall. As has already been announced, Theodore Dubois, honorary president, is largely interested in the advancement and work of the school. His rare experience will enable him to give valuable advice in the conduct of the course.

A new class will be organized October 15 by Clement R. Gale for the study of plain song, the Gregorian chant and orchestration.

Warren R. Hedden will have the classes in keyboard training, including the harmonization of melodies and basses, transposition, modulation and musical dictation. The first students' recital conducted by Dr. Carl will be given October 22.

The special order of morning worship on the so called "Peace Sunday," October 4, at the Old First Presbyterian Church, was a model of planfulness throughout, thanks to the co-operation of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Duffield, and Dr. Carl. The musical numbers were as follows:

Prelude, Vorspiel to Lohengrin.....Wagner
Anthem, Sanctus.....Gounod
Offertory anthem, Light after Darkness.....Stainer
Anthem The XLVI Psalm.....Foote
Postlude, Reformation Symphony.....Mendelssohn

Dr. Carl has received the following complimentary letter from the noted organist, Clarence Eddy:

MY DEAR DR. CARL: I arrived home yesterday and found your very handsome and equally interesting pamphlet. Accept my congratulations upon your ever increasing success. The programs played by your pupils during the past year indicate a high order of study and attainment. Yours most sincerely,
CLARENCE EDDY.

Minnie Tracey Discusses Italian Opera.

"Early Italian Opera" was the subject of discussion at the first meeting of the National Opera Club, held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, Thursday afternoon, October 8.

Minnie Tracey, the soprano, who has been singing in grand opera abroad for several years, was the principal speaker. Before touching upon the main subject, Miss Tracey assured her listeners that, despite her years of life abroad, she was "a very American woman"; that she wanted to see opera in every city of America; that Americans have sent a great message to Europe, and that the important opera singers abroad have been chiefly Americans. In continuation, Miss Tracey referred to the early Italian music as being the cradle of all music, tracing the birth of opera to Monteverde, the simple lute player, as she styled him. She outlined briefly his musical career and the basis which he gave for opera as it is today. She alluded to his "Orfeo," "Arianna" and "Nero" (the comic opera, the revival of which she had witnessed in Paris recently). She called Monteverde the "Father of Opera," and touched briefly upon the musical careers of Caccini, Stradella, Paratisi and Scarlatti, and mentioned the fact of present savants seeking out the old Italian music.

Miss Tracey's vocal selections from Scarlatti and Monteverde were among the best features of the program. She said that she had been caring for mothers and children on the other side and that she now felt more like a White Cross nurse than a singer. But no traces of anything but the true singer were evident in her numbers. Her voice was delightfully fresh and sweet, clear and pliant, and her manner of presentation and interpretation is satisfying.

Elaine de Olloqui, the Spanish-American pianist, furnished two interesting interpretations of Scarlatti numbers.

An ample account of the purpose of the National Opera Club was given in the October 7 issue of the MUSICAL COURIER. If enthusiasm, interest and a good attendance at the first meeting augur anything for a successful future, then the nearly 300 members of this new organization should be greatly encouraged.

Mme. Evans von Klenner is its founder and president. Among others who proved their active interest at the first meeting were: Mme. de Vere Sapio, Bernice de Pasquali, Florence Mulford-Hunt, Yvonne de Treville, Eva Mylott, Frances Rose, Mrs. Julien Edwards and Gardiner Lamson.

Marta Kranich Wins Success Abroad.

Marta Kranich writes from Reutlingen, Germany, in a letter that has been much delayed, an account of her successes at summer resorts in the Black Forest. Mme. Kranich received many flattering notices in the press, of which a few are herewith given:

Marta Kranich instantly won favor on account of her delightful personality; her lovely fresh voice with its power, range and sweetness of quality, and her skillful singing. Her Santuzza aria was given with such clarity and technical ease that it won her a double encore.—Schwarzwalder General Anzeiger.

Marta Kranich proved herself not only a capable soprano, but one it was a pleasure to hear.—Tübinger Wochenblatt.

Marta Kranich won a perfect ovation with the aria from "Madam Butterfly," and her fresh, lovely voice rose and soared with fascinating ease. The beautiful Brahms songs, "Muss es eine Trennung geben" and "Immer leiser wird mein Schlummer," were a marvel of artistic work.—Stuttgarter Abendblatt.

John Barnes Wells Sings.

John Barnes Wells begins his season, October 16, at Newburgh, N. Y. This tenor is one of the most popular artists on the Foster & David list, and his season promises to be even better than that of last year, which was a record breaker.

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION
and MADAME TERESA EMERICH
PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE
Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:
CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.
INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN
The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich. 'Telephone Am.tPfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

Donald Chalmers in Demand.

Donald Chalmers, the basso, has just returned to his resi-ence-studio, 150 West 104th street, New York, after a trenuous summer at Ocean Grove, N. J., where he was he principal soloist and assistant conductor for the sumner. Mr. Chalmers has contracted the habit of being re-ngaged wherever he sings, as is shown by his numerous eengagements. Ocean Grove people are said to call Mr. Chalmers "the greatest basso in America." His season here consists of conducting a choir of 100 voices, which erform various cantatas, such as Gaul's "Holy City," Gounod's "Gallia," Rossini's "Stabat Mater," etc. Aside rom this he sings before 2,000 people every morning and n Sunday before 10,000 people, both morning and even-ng. This was Mr. Chalmers' tenth consecutive reason at Ocean Grove.

DONALD CHALMERS,
The basso, in front of his cottage, Ocean Parkway, Ocean Grove, N. J.

During the summer he has sung at numerous other con-erts and festivals, among which were the Fourth of July elebration at City Hall, New York; the Norfolk, Conn., estival, where he received an ovation. This also was Mr. Chalmers' seventh consecutive engagement as principal asso at this festival.

At the fashionable Allenhurst Club, Allenhurst, N. J., Mr. Chalmers was engaged for three different concerts this summer. Before the organists' convention at Asbury Park he sang the bass part of C. B. Hawley's cantata, "The Christ Child," conducted by the composer.

These numerous engagements, combined with a trip three times a week to New York to sing for a talking machine company, where Mr. Chalmers is also principal basso, have combined to make a busy summer.

Mr. Chalmers' season is already well booked for various oratorios, concerts, etc.

Loretta del Vallé Is Due.

Loretta del Vallé, the coloratura soprano, is due to arrive in New York on the steamship Finland today, October 14. Mme. del Vallé will be heard in concert for the first time in America, under the management of Antonia Sawyer.

LORETTA DEL VALLE AS THE QUEEN IN "HUGUENOTS."

Mme. del Vallé was especially engaged in Prague by the late Angelo Neumann, who certainly was a connoisseur in music, and she would have been at his opera house now had he lived to carry out his plans.

Artists for St. Louis.

Hattie B. Gooding, the St. Louis impresaria, will include in her list of artists for the season of 1914-15 the following: Alma Gluck and Efrem Zimbalist, November 28; Elena Gerhardt and Clarence Whitehill, January 23; George Hamlin and Arthur Shattuck, February 9; Mme. Schumann-Heink, February 23; Foxton-Ferguson, English folklore artist, February 27; Maurice Hewlett, English author and lecturer, March 27.

Arthur Alexander and Alice Verlet are also engaged, but their dates are not decided as yet.

John Heath in New York.

John Heath, pianist, formerly of New York, but who has been living abroad for some years, has just returned to New York, where he will settle and open a studio. Mr. Heath studied nearly five years with Leschetizky in Vienna, and Leschetizky recommended pupils to him and also secured for him numerous engagements in Vienna and the surroundings. He was booked for an extended tour in Europe this season, and was to have played in Gratz, Vienna, Czernowitz, as well as other places near Vienna and in Paris, London, etc. He was spending the summer at St. Sulpice, near Lausanne, when the war broke out. He remained there until September 4 and then returned to America by way of Berlin and Rotterdam. While in Lausanne he saw Paderewski frequently at Morges, and he informs the MUSICAL COURIER that Paderewski was supporting a number of his compatriots there. Weingartner and Mme. Weingartner-Marcel were also at Lausanne, and were uncertain of their departure on account of the cancelling of their numerous engagements.

JOHN HEATH.

Mr. Heath has many press notices from his European appearances which show him to be a master of his chosen instrument, and his appearance in this country after so many years of absence will be looked forward to with interest.

One mercy that France is spared is that the German bands march in the rear of the columns.—Columbia State.

CARNEGIE HALL

Thursday, OCTOBER 29th at 3 o'clock

SPALDING

PROGRAMME

1.—(a) Sonata in G..... Nicolo Porpora
Grave, Fuga, Aria, Allegretto Moderato

(b) Adagio and Fugue in G minor .....Johann Sebastian Bach
(for violin unaccompanied)

2.—Concerto in D major .....Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
Allegro, Andante Cantabile, Rondo

3.—(a) Prelude ..... Albert Spalding
(b) Waves at Play..... Edwin Grasse
(c) Mazurek ..... Anton Dvorak
(d) Nostalgie ..... Albert Spalding
(e) La Campanella ..... Paganini-Spalding

ANDRÉ BENOIST, Accompanist

STEINWAY PIANO

Management, ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York City

ALBERT SPALDING.

BOSTON IS HAVING A SEASON OF ITALIAN OPERA.

Popular Price Productions Being Given at the Boston Theatre—"Aida" the Opening Bill—Symphony Season Soon to Begin—Concert Announcements and Other News of Current Interest in the "Hub."

Boston, Mass., October 8, 1914.

With the safe arrival of Dr. Karl Muck yesterday and the starting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsals next week, the auspicious opening, on last Monday night, of the new Boston Theatre opera season, early concert dates already posted around the city, and with the occupants of every music school and studio routined in their activities, the Boston music season again is under way. That it will be a season in good keeping with those of past years is almost assured, notwithstanding the apparent, although not assured, loss of the regular grand opera season under Henry Russell's management. Indications of any detrimental war effect on conditions here are not apparent, and the optimistic view taken of the situation is encouraging to say the least.

Season of Italian Opera at Boston Theatre.

Whether there is sufficient demand to warrant the cause, time alone will tell, however. W. H. Leahy's idea of giving the people of Boston opera at popular prices seemed, on the opening night, to meet with favor for the old Boston theatre was packed to the gallery, and I understand that hundreds were unable to gain admittance. Mr. Leahy is ably assisted in his management by Allessandro Bevani, the artistic director, and as their united policy has all the earmarks of success, the prospects point to the completion of their twelve weeks season and possibly an extension of the engagement here, for they have secured a one year lease on the theatre.

The orchestra, ballet and chorus, to a large extent, have been drawn from the Boston Opera Company's forces, and in this move the management easily surmounted one of the major difficulties confronting any new operatic company in its formation. Likewise a few of the principal artists come from the Boston Opera, but the majority are singers who are making their appearance in this city for the first time, and who have been gathered from various parts of Europe, South America and the United States. Many guest artists will be engaged throughout the season for single appearances, and even a few more will arrive to enter the company.

Following is a list to date of the members already engaged:

Sopranos—Johanna Kristoffy, Miriam Ardini, Rina de Sales, Dora de Phillipe, Kathryn Lynbrook, Mistilde Renis.

Mezzo-sopranos—Blanche Hamilton Fox, Alice Gentle.

Contraltos—Margarita d'Alvarez, Cara Sapin.

Tenors—Giuseppe Tricario, Umberto Sacchetti, Luigi Mainiero, Guido Ciccolini, Giuseppe Opezzo, Attilio de Crescenzo, Guglielmo Giulaini, Roberto Vanni.

Baritones—Ramon Blanchart, Pietro Gallazzi, Ferruccio Corradetti, Millo Picco, David Silva.

Bassos—Pietro de Biasi, Giovanni Corruccini, Joseph Florian.

Conductors—Cavarturo Bovi, Ignacio Castillo.

Artistic Staff—Conductors: Cav. Arturo Bovi, Ignacio Castillo. Stage manager: Luigi Raybaut. Ballet mistress: Maria Raybaut.

The operas in Italian to be given will be selected from the following repertoire: "Aida," "Ballo in Maschera," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Ernani," "Gioconda," "Pagliacci," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "Trovatore," "La Navarraise," "La Favorita," "Tosca," "Boheme," "Lucia," "Madame Butterfly," "Mignon," Martha," "Norma," "Otello," "Rigoletto," "Carmen," "Traviata" and "Tales of Hoffmann."

"Aida" the Opening Bill.

Verdi's "Aida" was selected for the opening performance and perhaps a less gorgeous and spectacular opera would have fared much better as an opening attraction for the new and unacquainted forces who have not as yet had ample time in which to become accustomed to each other. As stated in one of the Boston papers, "the performance was well worth the prices charged," and as long as this remains the case the public will assuredly support the plan. Certain ensemble effects in the chorus and even in trios and duets were decidedly bad, but this can easily be remedied and should be attended to immediately. The orchestra, on the other hand, was splendid and save for a lack of numbers in the string section could not be expected to have been any better. Giuseppe Tricario as Rhadames was badly afflicted with a spell of nerves and didn't do any good singing until the Nile scene arrived. Here he made a very good impression, as his voice is naturally of a high register and quite capable of handling the difficult part allotted to him. Blanche Hamilton Fox, a Boston girl, was a very creditable Amneris and possesses a remarkable mezzo soprano voice equally brilliant in the upper or lower register. She sings with fine distinction of artistic skill and temperamental individuality. Johanna Kristoffy enacted her Aida splendidly and made the hit of the evening. Her voice is richly imbued with many impressive dramatic qualities and she is an artist throughout. Joseph Florian, the basso, as the King, was very effective, and the remaining principals did equally well in their respective parts.

ALLESANDRO BEVANI.
Artistic director of the Boston Theatre Opera Company.

"Carmen" Tuesday Evening.

"Carmen" in Italian can hardly be classed as a treat, yet the performance on Tuesday night was in a great many respects better than the one on the previous evening. Alice Gentle was the winning feature and her Carmen, although lacking individuality, was pleasing to see and listen to. She is abundantly gifted with temperment, and her voice is one worthy of special notice in this company. Umberto Sacchetti, as Don Jose; Pietro Galazzi, as the Toreador and Joseph Florian, as the Captain, appeared to advantage in their parts. Rina de Sales, a young soprano who has never been on the operatic stage before proved to be a pleasant surprise in her Micaela. She is undoubtedly very talented and possesses a voice of fine quality. The chorus ensemble again was off color, and this is so detrimental to a first class performance.

"Lucia," Wednesday Evening.

Donizetti's tuneful music was given on this evening under the baton of Ignacio Castillo, and the effect was delightful. The Lucia of Mariam Ardini was commendable, and although her acting is rather lax, her voice makes up for all other defects. Its volume is surprising and a richness and artistic surety mark its usage throughout. Ramon Blanchart, the baritone, as Henry Ashton, gave an exhibition of some excellent singing. His voice is equal to a wide variety of demands, and he is a fine musician. Attilio di Crescenzo, the Edgardo, should spell his name di Crescendo, considering the wasted amount of vocal energies, which won for him no artistic results whatsoever. Arturo was a nice piece of work on the part of Giuliani, although he is inclined to the fault of exaggeration.

The only other opera to be given this week is "Trovatore" on Saturday evening. This will be reviewed in the next Boston letter.

Symphony Hall Notes.

The record premium paid thus far at the auction sale of this season's symphony concert tickets was $112 for seat A5 in the loft balcony. This, together with the original price of $18 makes a total purchase price of $130. Several other bids exceeding a hundred dollars were received and all in all the public sales this season have been as good as they ever were. On Monday and Tuesday the $18 and $10 seats for the Friday afternoon rehearsals were put up at auction. Thursday and Friday of this week will see all seats for the Saturday evening concerts subjected to the auctioneer's hammer and the public's fancy. This is undoubtedly a wonderful scheme for the management and I can hardly imagine it existing anywhere else, for it represents many years' training of the Boston public.

Dr. Muck, with his wife, is stopping at the Copley-Plaza Hotel awaiting the completion of a few final moving arrangements before taking up residence in the new house bought last spring in Fenway, one of the attractive suburbs of Boston. The Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor does not care to discuss the war situation.

Among the new members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are two first violins, one viola, one cello, one clarinet, one oboe and a second harp. Ernst Schmidt, one of the new violinists, was formerly concertmaster of the Darmstadt Royal Orchestra. H. A. Sauvelt, the other new violinist, was a former member of the Residenz Orchestra at The Hague. Joseph Malkin, who takes the first desk in the cello section, succeeding Otto Urack, who does not return this season, was for many years first cellist of the Berlin Philharmonic, at one time a member of the Brussels Quartet and also of the Witek Trio in Berlin. The harpist is V. Klicka. a Bohemian. A. Sand, last season's first clarinet at the Charlottenburg Opera, takes Mr. Grisez's place in the Boston Symphony Orchestra. H. Stanislaus, in past years the first oboe with Sir Henry Wood's Orchestra in London, will take the place of Mr. Fosse.

The usual series of eight Thursday night symphony concerts will be given in Cambridge. The soloists will be Florence Hinkle, Pasquale Amato, Harold Bauer, Anton Witek, Edward Morris, Irma Seydel and Ruth Deyo.

The Arthur J. Hubbard Studios.

The Arthur J. Hubbard Studios in Symphony Chambers certainly have success written all over them, and it was only by the greatest good fortune that the new Boston representative of the Musical Courier was able to take advantage of a few minutes between lessons and become personally acquainted with Mr. Hubbard. I went to talk shop, but the genial hospitality and manners of my intended victim led me quite away from the subject. Luckily enough, to, for thus was I better able to obtain a view of the man whose splendid success belongs to one of America's most prominent vocal instructors. I did learn, however, that only a very few more students could be accepted for enrollment on his books, which in itself is noteworthy evidence of the popular demand made for instruction here, especially so when one considers the early stage of the present season.

Mr. Hubbard is not alone in his success achieving methods, for there is Mrs. Hubbard, who so ably assists as accompanist and who, as Mr. Hubbard says, "is just as good a teacher as I am," and then Vincent Hubbard, their son, together with Caroline Hooker, who have studios in the same building and act as assistant teachers. It is needless for the writer to revert to the many past glories which have materialized from Mr. Hubbard's tuition, for they are already well known to the music public, but one can look forward with real expectancy to some of the new talent he will bring out this season, for these young artists seldom fail to make good.

Ethelynde Smith's Engagements.

The snapshot on page 39 of Ethelynde Smith was taken in camp on the shore of Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H., where she spent part of the summer rusticating. Miss Smith's second recital at the Fine Arts Theatre, Chicago, will be given February 19. Other Chicago engagements will be filled the same week and the remaining portion of that month and the first half of March will bring a short Western tour from that center. This popular young singer

FELIX FOX PIANIST
WESLEYAN BUILDING
581 Boylston Street - - Boston

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address. THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

has many engagements throughout the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, which will include oratorio appearances, recitals and a variety of miscellaneous programs, one comprised of songs by American women composers. This last named program caused quite a bit of favorable comment last season, and I understand various new numbers will be added to it this year.

CONCERT ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Rudolph Ganz, "the pianist with a message," as Charles L. Wagner calls him, will be heard in recital at Jordan Hall, Saturday afternoon, October 17, and will inaugurate Boston's present concert season by that occasion.

Maude Powell, violinist, and Felix Fox, pianist, will participate in a joint concert at the Scollay Square Olympia Theatre on Sunday afternoon, October 25.

RALPH LEWANDO ARRIVES FROM EUROPE.

Another young American violinist whose unplanned arrival in this country has been due to the war situation abroad, is Ralph Lewando, formerly of this city. Mr. Lewando will locate in New York City this season and use that point as the center of his concert and teaching activities. For the past four years he has been in Vienna, studying with Otto Sevcik, the last year of this period being spent as a distinguished member of the famous master school conducted by Sevcik in the Royal Conservatory there. The young artist won distinction on a short concert tour through Austria and certain parts of Germany early this year and should meet with success in this country as soon as he becomes better known.

HARVARD MUSIC SEASON BEGINS.

The music season for the Harvard University got under way last week after two days had been spent in hearing new applicants for respective positions in the Glee Club and the Pierian Sodality, or orchestral organization of the institute. Many new arrivals have been entered for membership and present plans indicate a banner season for the collegian musical activities. According to recent publications here, the Pierian Sodality is considered one of the oldest orchestral organizations in the United States. It originally included the Harvard Glee Club, but in recent years, separated from it and devoted all efforts to the treatment of instrumental playing and the more serious work of advancing the study of music generally in the college. The Pierian Sodality at present maintains a good sized orchestra, which rehearses conscientiously throughout the year and contributes its service to all the big events of the school season, the principal one of these being the annual concert given in the spring, when, as I have heard, a very creditable performance is always offered.

"STAR SPANGLED BANNER."

Monday night's performance at the Boston Theatre was preceded by the "Star Spangled Banner," during which the audience remained standing. A rather impressive and unusual sight to witness at an Italian operatic performance. Mayor Curley and his family also were there, and a few encouraging remarks for the management were forthcoming from His Honor. Congratulations were sent via telegram from Governor Walsh, who was expected to attend in person.

VICTOR WINTON.

Boston Concert Announcements.

Following the precedent of the last two winters, a series of Sunday afternoon concerts will be given in Boston during the coming winter at Symphony Hall, under the management of L. H. Mudgett. These concerts have become an important factor in the musical life of Boston. Given at 3.30 in the afternoon, they form a welcome break in the day, and their uniformly high character, both in respect to artists and programs, has built up for them a splendid public.

The first of these concerts will be given November 1. Two had been scheduled for this month, but one was cancelled and the other postponed. The first was to have been by Emmy Destinn and Dinh Gilly, both of the Metropolitan Opera House, but Mr. Gilly is held in Germany as a prisoner of war and Miss Destinn has announced that she is not coming to America, therefore this concert had to be abandoned. The other concert was to have brought Frieda Hempel, the German soprano, who had such remarkable success in America last year. Miss Hempel, however, is not coming to America as soon as she expected, but she will appear at a Sunday concert later in the season.

The first concert, Sunday afternoon, November 1, will be given by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under Josef Stransky, with Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, as soloist. The concert of the Philharmonic Orchestra has become an annual fixture in Boston and always attracts a large audience.

On the following Sunday, November 8, the concert will be given by Olive Fremstad, late of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Pasquale Amato, the principal Italian baritone of that institution.

Sunday afternoon, November 15, will bring a joint recital by Julia Culp and Olga Samaroff. Mme. Culp in her various Boston appearances, both in recital and with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has built up a large body of fervent admirers, who will be glad to hear her again. Undoubtedly a very warm welcome will be extended to Mme. Samaroff, who appears in Boston for the first time in several years. Mme. Samaroff, who is now the wife of Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, is returning to public life for the first time since her severe illness several years ago. Boston has always counted her as one of its favorite pianists.

The annual concert for the benefit of the pension fund of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given Sunday afternoon, November 22. It is too soon as yet to give any details regarding the program for this concert.

These Sunday concerts will continue well into the spring. Among the concerts which have been arranged are one by John McCormack, the Irish tenor; another by Harold Bauer, the pianist; the annual song recital of Mme. Schumann-Heink; one by Alma Gluck, with an assisting artist, and a violin recital by Fritz Kreisler. Paderewski will appear on a Sunday afternoon, also Elisabeth van Endert, Fricda Hempel, Jacques Thibaud, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Margarete Matzenauer, Carl Flesch, Elena Gerhardt, while the Handel and Haydn Society will give its usual concerts.

It is hoped that arrangements can be made by which Mme. Sembrich, who is coming to America for a visit, may give one recital in Symphony Hall.

Mr. Mudgett makes preliminary announcement of a list of recitals which will be given during the coming winter

ETHELYNDE SMITH,
Soprano.

under his management in Jordan Hall, Boston. The first will be by Rudolph Ganz, the Swiss pianist, next Saturday afternoon, October 17. Emilio de Gogorza, the baritone, will give a recital Thursday afternoon, November 5. On the following afternoon, Frank Gittelson, the American violinist, will make his first appearance in Boston. Ethel Leginska, a pianist new to Boston, will give a recital Monday afternoon, November 9, and Thursday afternoon, November 12, Albert Spalding, the violinist, will be heard. Ruth Deyo will appear in a piano recital Thursday, November 19. Franklin P. Cannon, a pianist, will give a recital Monday afternoon, November 23, and Paul Draper, tenor, will give a recital on Wednesday afternoon, November 25. Other recitals will be given by Julia Culp, Elena Gerhardt, Josef Lhevinne, Ferruccio Busoni, Jacques Thibaud, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Arrigo Serato and Carl Friedberg. Among local singers to be heard in recital under Mr. Mudgett's management will be Helen Allen Hunt and Marie Sundelius.

The Flonzaley Quartet will give its usual series of three concerts in Jordan Hall on Thursdays, December 10, January 28 and March 11.

Carl Fiqué's Lecture-Recitals.

Carl Fiqué's second lecture-recital on the works of Richard Strauss drew the usual large Institute audience to the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Tuesday evening, October 6. Mr. Fiqué presented the two symphonic poems, "Thus Spake Zarathustra," and the "Merry Pranks of Till Eulenspiegel."

His discourse on Nietzsche's philosophy was ably delivered, and his piano playing was brilliant and did ample justice to Strauss' difficult score.

October 11 the subject will be "Salome."

CONCERT RECORD OF SONGS BY SOME OF OUR BEST AMERICAN COMPOSERS.

Paul Ambrose.

A Song of Yesterday.....Isabel Fellows, New York
In a Rose Garden.....Bessie Stewart, Troy, N. Y.

Marion Bauer

Only of Thee and Me.....Rose Bloch Bauer, New York
Only of Thee and Me.....May Dearborn Schwab, New York
Send Me a Dream.....Christine Miller, Appleton, Wis.
Send Me a Dream.....Eva Emmet Wycoff, New York

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach

June.....Eva Emmet Wycoff, Hoschton, Ga.
Ah, Love, but a Day!.....John B. Miller, Chicago
Song of Love.....Susan Pilsbury, Franklin, Mass.
Ecstasy.....Edna F. Smith, Philadelphia
The Year's at the Spring.....John W. Nichols, Fredonia, N. Y.
The Year's at the Spring.....E. Gordon Patterson, New York
The Year's at the Spring.....Isabel Richardson, Belding, Mich.

J. W. Bischoff.

The Summer Wind.....Daisy C. Daniels, Syracuse
The Summer Wind.....Leila Auger, Toronto
The Summer Wind.....Lillie Carpenter, Dayton
The Summer Wind.....Mabel Moran, Dayton
The Summer Wind.....Mildred Smith, Walla Walla, Wash.

Gena Branscombe

Hail Ye Tyme of Holiedayes! (Christmas),
David Bispham, Portland, Ore.
Hail Ye Tyme of Holiedayes! (Christmas),
McCall Lanham, New York
A Lovely Maiden Roaming.....Eva Emmet Wycoff, New York
A Lovely Maiden Roaming.....Josephine Knight, Peterboro, N. H.
Dear Little Hut by the Rice Fields,
Josephine Knight, Peterboro, N. H.
I Send My Heart up to Thee.....Morton Adkins, New York
Laughter Wears a Lilied Gown (duet),
Winifred Henderson and Arthur R. Brown, Toronto

G. P. Centanini

O Mariner, Mariner!.....Alice Wheeler, New York

G. W. Chadwick

The Danza.....Mildred Potter, Spartanburg, S. C.
The Danza.....Selma Couch, Sherman, Tex.
Thou Art So Like a Flower.....Grant Kimball, Elgin, Ill.
Allah.....Daisy C. Daniels, Syracuse
Allah.....Mabel Moran, Dayton, Ohio
O Let Night Speak of Me....Theodore Harrison, Hutchinson, Kan.
The Maiden and the Butterfly.....Thomas M. Phillips, New York

H. Clough-Leighter.

After.....Eva Emmet Wycoff, New York
April Blossoms.....Ella Gibbons, Pittsburgh

Mabel W. Daniels

Daybreak.....Mrs. Ross Hall Maynard, Boston
Daybreak.....Ethelyn M. Weare, Auburndale, Mass.
The Lady of Dreams.....Pearl Robertson, Walla Walla, Wash.
The Lady of Dreams.....Miss S. L. Dexter, Auburndale, Mass.
The Fields o' Ballyclare.....Morris Zam, Boston
The Desolate City (baritone and orchestra),
Reinald Werrenrath, Syracuse

Arthur Foote

There's a Ship Lies off Dunvegan.....Christine Miller, Detroit
On the Way to Kew.....Anna Miller Wood-Harvey, Berkeley, Cal.
Love Me if I Live.....Edith Bullard, Cambridge, Mass.
O Swallow, Swallow, Flying South...Esther Davis, Salt Lake City
O Swallow, Swallow, Flying South.....Mary Jordan, New York
Roses in Winter.....Josephine Hewins, Boston
Constancy.....Marie E. Milliette, Berkeley, Cal.

G. A. Grant-Schaefer

The Sea.....Christine Miller, Erie, Pa.
The Sea.....Eva Emmet Wycoff, Hoschton, Ga.
The Eagle.....Josephine Jones, Danville, Ill.
The Eagle.....Heathe Gregory, Aurora, Ill.
Song of Saul.....Charles E. Lutton, Chicago
Song of Saul.....Robert C. Long, Lafayette, Ind.

Bruno Huhn

Unfearing.....Eva Emmet Wycoff, New York
Invictus.....Paul Dufault, Wellington, New Zealand
Invictus.....Ashley Ropps, Perkiomen, Pa.
How Many Thousand Years Ago?
Merle Tillotson-Alcock, London, Eng.
How Many Thousand Years Ago?.....Estelle Hesketh, New York
Proposal.....Fannie R. Brounstein, Syracuse
A Song of Promise.....Thomas M. Phillips, New York

Margaret R. Lang

Day Is Gone.....Lucile White, Rockford, Ill.
Day Is Gone.....Ethelynde Smith, Exeter, N. H.
Arcadie.....Rena Flardo, Auburndale, Mass.
Somewhere.....Ethelynde Smith, Chicago and Exeter, N. H.
An Irish Love Song.....Bertrand Alan Orr, Fargo, N. Dak.
An Irish Love Song.....Mollie B. Wilson, Berlin, Germany
An Irish Mother's Lullaby.....Kathleen Mizell, Columbia, Mo.

John W. Metcalf.

The Cares of Yesterday.....Mabel Moran, Dayton, Ohio
Moon Dreams.....Henry Perry, London, Eng.
The Path of Light.....M. Sophie Ryan, San Jose, Cal.
At Nightfall.....W. G. Hay, Chicago
Sweet Love of Mine.....Beatrice Epstein, St. Louis

Mary Turner Salter

The Sweet o' the Year.....Florence Wells, Sioux City, Ia.
They're Like a Cloud of Butterflies.....Alice Wheeler, New York
Requiem of the Sea.....John Milligan, London, Eng.

Ward-Stephens

The Rose's Cup.....Constance Purdy, Hanover, N. H.
The Rose's Cup.....Arthur J. Burgner, Trenton, N. J.
Summer-time.....Vernon T. Carey, New York
Be Ye in Love with April-tide?.....Lillian Lutzhoff, Chicago
Be Ye in Love with April-tide?.....Irene Trautman, Syracuse
Amid the Roses.....Elsie Nelson, Chicago
Devotion.....Roma D. Hempstead, New York

(Advertisement.)

PIANOS IN PARIS

Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos

We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.

Renting for Music Students a Specialty

THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Moloney-Holland Recital—Peace Sunday Experiences — Morris Artist-Pupils — Emma Thursby Here—Ziegler Institute Opens—Hassler-Fox—Cornell Pupil—Hassell Conservatory Opens—Florence E. Gale Resumes—May McGibeny Sings Well—Notes.

New York, October 10, 1914.

Geraldine Holland, soprano, artist-pupil of Elizabeth K. Patterson, and Charlotte Moloney, violinist, an artist-pupil of Florence Austin, united in an "Exposition Musicale" at the Country Life permanent exposition, Grand Central Terminal, October 10. A good sized audience listened to a program of seven numbers, all of it, as substantiated below, of standard quality. Miss Moloney's playing is ease itself, and the same may be said of Miss Holland's singing. Both ladies were heartily applauded and frequently recalled. This was the program:

Ave Maria ..... Bach-Gounod
Miss Holland.
Obligato, Miss Moloney.
Prize Song, from Meistersinger ..... Wagner-Wilhelmj
Valse de Concert ..... Musin
Miss Moloney.
Vissi d'arte, from Tosca ..... Puccini
Miss Holland.
Air on the G string ..... Bach
Liebesfreud ..... Kreisler
The Bee ..... Bohm
Miss Moloney.
The Lord Is My Light ..... F. Allitson
Miss Holland.
Hijre Kati (Gypsy air) ..... Hubay
Miss Moloney.
The Raindrop ..... Kursteiner
Morning .....
Miss Holland.

PEACE SUNDAY EXPERIENCES.

"Peace Sunday," by proclamation of President Wilson, October 4, brought several unusual experiences to various organists. One organist, who played the "Marseillaise," "Dic Wacht am Rhein" and "The Star Spangled Banner" as a postlude to the morning service, was subsequently asked by a good British subject, "Why didn't you play 'God Save the King?'" She evidently did not know that this tune is the same as our "America," and had the organist played it, he would have been accused of playing two American national anthems. It is not generally known that "God Save the King" (our "America") was originally German, composed in 1790. It is also the national hymn of Bavaria and Switzerland.

An interesting occurrence came when a patriotic Southern lady made frantic endeavors to get out her hatpins and remove her hat during the playing of the national hymn. She explained that this was the custom in the South.

Another interesting incident occurred when, during Professor Baldwin's performance of Buck's Variations on the "Star Spangled Banner" (some seventeen minutes long) at City College, the audience stood during the entire performance.

MRS. MORRIS' BRILLIANT PUPILS.

Hattie Clapper Morris has a number of pupils who are conspicuous in musical professional circles. Emily Steinbach, soprano, is one of the recent young artists whose unusual voice (with five lessons weekly) is doing wonders. Mrs. Morris states that she has not only voice and personality, but that she is a wonderfully intelligent student, with an unusual memory and an amazing gift for learning.

Harriet Burt is another Morris artist-pupil who started practically without any voice. She was heard singing Nevin's "At Twilight" recently, when the deep pathos of her voice and the beauty of expression combined to make it a noteworthy performance.

Guilia Strakosch is also from the Morris studios. She had engagements to sing the role of Carmen all over Europe, when the present cataclysm struck that portion of the world. Mrs. Morris expects to give several students' musicales this season.

EMMMA THURSBY RETURNS.

Emma Thursby returned to the metropolis and began her studio work on October 8. Many pupils were awaiting her, some from the South and others who have been obliged to return from Europe. Miss Thursby has passed a most delightful summer in this country.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OPENS.

There was a large attendance of students and friends at the opening of the Ziegler Institute, October 1, giving evidence of an active season. Anna E. Ziegler, the director and founder, gave the opening address, in which she pointed out the necessity of hard, honest work, and impressed upon the students the importance of discipline.

Mrs. Julian Edwards then told of the importance of learning, to acquire a repertoire, not for the sake of present needs, but to train the brain through memorizing.

Doctor Fitz, of California, professor of science, spoke to the assembly, telling the different characteristics of the voices, followed by his examination, taking measurements of the heads, by which he told temperaments and the qualification of voices; this proved very interesting to all present. In the afternoon classes were opened in voice diagnosis and reading.

The commencement exercises were held at the Institute Wednesday evening, October 7.

FORREST LAMONT IN ITALY.

Alfred Y. Cornell's pupil, Forrest Lamont, the tenor, won much success in Donizetti's opera "Poliuto" during the early summer. This was one of Tamagno's famous roles. Press notices from Rome gave much credit to Mr. Cornell's teaching.

Quoting from a New York paper:

"The Italian public is hard to please," he tells The World correspondent. "I was awfully nervous the first time I went on to sing in 'Trovatore' one Sunday afternoon after only four days to study the part. Roman Sunday afternoon audiences are the most critical of all. But it went well and I had a fine reception. Singing in Italy is a severe task, for you are expected to give two performances on Sundays. I have had to sing in 'Poliuto,' which tires the voice and nerves, one night and in 'Trovatore' the next. But I like the Italian public. It has been very good to me.

"Of course," he added, smiling, "my dream is to get back home and sing in grand opera there."

MAY MCGIBENY SINGS.

May McGibeny, the soprano, at present soloist in an uptown Baptist church, recently sang for a private audience the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria," and Rachmaninoff's "Frühlingsfluten." The young lady has a very sympathetic, clear and expressive voice, making her equally available for concert and church. Her appearance is much in her favor, and the present writer happens to know that she has both persistence and ambition; these qualities should bring her to the front.

MME. HASSLER-FOX.

Mme. Hassler-Fox, the contralto, appeared as soloist in the popular concert recently, given for the benefit of the Fourth Street Clinic. She sang a group of songs that were enthusiastically received and encored. These were "When the Roses Bloom," Reichardt; "Vergebliches Staendchen," Brahms; and "Morning," Speaks. When recalled, the contralto gave in a delightful manner Thayer's "My Laddie." By request she sang for her second number the Habanera from "Carmen" in English.

Mme. Fox begins here regular concert season on November 4, with a recital in Newark, N. J.

LOUISE VIRGINIA GORSE, A VIRGIL PUPIL.

Louise Virginia Gorse, the well known organist and teacher of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who was the subject of an illustrated article in the MUSICAL COURIER, of September 30, studied with A. K. Virgil in 1908, and gained a certificate in the Virgil method and is now teaching it. Miss Gorse wishes this fact known.

HASSELL CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

Irwin E. Hassell has established a conservatory of music at 853 Marcy avenue, Brooklyn, where all departments of music are taught by eminent teachers. Certificates are given to students, and diplomas awarded to those completing the full course. October 10 there was an entertainment at the conservatory, consisting of a lecture by J. van Broekhouen, with vocal numbers sung by Marguerite Rockhill, and violin numbers played by Max Jacobs.

FLORENCE E. GALE RESUMES INSTRUCTION.

Florence E. Gale, whose prolonged illness at the end of last winter caused her temporary withdrawal from musical activity, has completely recovered and is again teaching the piano and allied musical subjects at her studio, 151 West Seventieth street. Miss Gale's various appearances with the Kneisel Quartet, and her position as a teacher and exponent of the Leschetizky method, places her among the leaders in New York City.

NOTES.

Laura Sedgwick Collins' clever composition, "Hail, Gentle Peace," was sung on Peace Sunday at the West End Presbyterian Church (Hawley), Marble Collegiate Church (Percy), the Broadway Tabernacle (Gale), and the Central Baptist Church (Riesberg). The work is very melodious, with an imposing climax.

Henrietta A. Cammeyer, pupil and former assistant to Dr. Mason, has opened her studios for piano and harmony instruction at Steinway Hall, and The Rutland, 256 West Fifty-seventh street. Among her patrons are the following well known musical authorities: Dr. Holbrook Curtis, Oscar Saenger, Harry Rowe Shelley, W. B. Tallman, etc.

Mme. Bell-Ranske says the New Assembly season will be of exceptional interest this year. Concerts will begin in November and will occur regularly at the Hotel Plaza. This year a number of music loving amateurs have guaranteed the expenses.

Prof. Samuel A. Baldwin continues his public organ recitals at City College on Wednesdays and Sundays at 4 o'clock. Among the Americans represented on his program of October 11 were Rogers, Diggle, MacDowell and Buck.

Albertus Shelley Hiester, director of music at San Marcos Baptist Academy, Texas, planned to make a "concert auto trip" last summer. He writes: "One week before the close of the academy it began to rain and did not stop for seven weeks. Bridges were washed away and three weeks after the flood you could neither drive nor walk to Austin or San Antonio. We were mad enough over the dam(p) weather, as I had dates booked all the way to New York and return." Next time he will travel by rail.

At the Central Baptist Church, Ninety-third street and Amsterdam avenue, the pastor, Rev. Frank M. Goodchild, D. D., is giving a series of Sunday event "Lantern Lectures," covering what he saw on his recent trip around the world. Large audiences listen to his interesting talks, and admire the many beautiful stereopticon pictures. Japan, China, the Philippines, Burmah, India, all these are on the current schedule, and for each evening appropriate music has been selected. The new soprano of this church is Beth Ordeman, formerly of Baltimore, Md.

Hamish Mackay announces a song recital at Aeolian Hall, on the evening of November 5. This young Scotch baritone is a pupil of Dr. Henschel and has planned a very original program. He will sing one of Fay Foster's songs, and will attire himself in full Jacobite Highland costume for the final group.

Edith White Griffing, accompanist, who has appeared with success at Aeolian Hall, announces her return to the city, where she will resume work at her studio, 264 West Fifty-seventh street.

Arthur D. Woodruff, conductor and vocal teacher, will conduct the concert given by the combined Orpheus Society of Philadelphia and the New York University Glee Club early next year. Further details of this concert will be announced in due time.

VIDA

LLEWELLYN

PIANIST

In America 1914-1915

. . . . "The pianist has at her command a sonorous and refined tone and a very remarkable technic."
—Berliner Borsen Courier.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD

Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York

NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915

STEINWAY PIANO USED

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

The Boston Music Company, Boston.

FOURTH SYMPHONY, IN C. Full orchestral score. By J. Guy Ropartz.

This beautifully engraved score fills 107 pages, and it makes a volume which is an ornament to any musical library. No more could have been done by the publishers to make the work appeal to the eye. Of course, whatever attraction the opus may possess for the ear is a matter that concerns the composer alone. The symphony is written for the modern full orchestra without any special or unusual instruments. Two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, bass clarinet, two bassoons, four horns, two trumpets, three tenor trombones, bass trombone, tympani, harp, first and second violins, violas, cellos and basses are the instrumental forces required for the performance of the work. It is possible that the bass tuba may be substituted for the bass trombone occasionally. But in every other respect the orchestration is normal. In structure this symphony departs from the classical in that the entire work is continuous from beginning to end without a break. There are numerous changes of key and modifications of tempo, however, and there is no likelihood of the work becoming monotonous.

It is modern in the extreme, so far as its harmonies and thematic material are concerned, but the composer has managed to express all he has to say without making undue demands on the technical skill of the executants. There is considerable contrapuntal complexity in places, yet none of the parts is difficult.

This symphony is also published for piano, four hands, with the parts for first and second performer printed in score form and not on opposite pages. By this means each performer can follow intelligently the part writing and grasp the whole. The instrumentation of the orchestral score is indicated by means of the names of the various instruments printed over the passages in the piano version.

"WOODLAND SKETCHES." Six easy pieces for the piano. By F. Flaxington Harker.

This album of "Woodland Sketches" is No. 317 of the Boston Music Company's edition, and it is published in the same superb style as the other numbers of this edition. The pieces, which may be had separately if desired, are called: "The Old Mill Wheel," "In the Swing," "The Woodpecker," "The Fairies' Dance," "Mountain Sprites," "The Hunter's Horn." They are all carefully fingered and edited.

"SPICCATO AND STACCATO." Daily violin exercises. By N. G. Dulow.

This album of seventeen pages is No. 83 of the Boston Music Company's edition. These twenty-six studies are without accompaniment. They consist of scale passages and arpeggios for the most part, with full directions for the management of the bow.

"THE TWO ANGELS." Symphonic ballad for chorus of men's voices, with orchestra or piano accompaniment. By W. F. Harling.

This short choral work of forty-two pages has a very elaborate and modern accompaniment of considerable difficulty. Four part harmony for the voices is the rule, with an occasional page in which the tenors are divided into three parts and the basses into four.

John Greenleaf Whittier is the author of the beautiful poem which has served as an inspiration to the composer.

"WEEPING PIERROT AND LAUGHING PIERROT." A comedy with music, with a French text by Edmond Rostand, an English translation by Amy Lowell, and music by Jean Hubert.

The original accompaniment is for orchestra, but the vocal score, as published by the Boston Music Company, has a piano accompaniment. The work is soon to be performed in Boston by eminent artists, when its musical merits will be revealed more practically than by any verbal description we might make. It is only right, however, that we mention the beauty of the edition, which the Boston Music Company has prepared for the American public. More than a word of praise is due Amy Lowell for her careful and poetic translation of Rostand's French poem and for its adaptation to music which had already been composed. For the performance of this work at educational institutions or clubs of young ladies the parts of the two Pierrots may be sung by a soprano and a mezzo-soprano. The piano accompaniment is not difficult and is effectively transcribed from the orchestral score. It will be found entirely satisfactory whenever the orchestra is not available.

"CHORAL TRANSCRIPTIONS." By Louis Victor Saar. Published by the Boston Music Company.

For women's voices: "Faithfu' Johnie," by Beethoven; "The Bridegroom," "When Love Hath Entangled," "Love Will Find the Way," by Johannes Brahms; "Solvejg's Cradle Song," by Edvard Grieg; "Cradle Song," "To Sylvia," by Schubert; "By Moonlight," "The Lotus Flower," by Schumann; a cycle of six Swedish songs; "Agnus Dei," by Georges Bizet.

These are all most effectively arranged by a master of the art.

Two short songs: "Lilacs," "A Child's Song," by Marshall Kernochan. These are pleasing trifles of two pages each, daintily written by a man of fine feeling. The composer has given a pronounced artistic unity of each of these songs by a judicious employment of certain rhythmical and melodic phrases in the accompaniments.

Three songs: "Morning Song," "Across the Fields," "Nightfall," by Horatio Parker. These are quite simple, direct and well written works which will give singers no great trouble to learn.

Eleven songs: "Youth," "Far Away," "Mother," "Love's Sweet Sorrow," "The Answer," "Songs of the Forest," "Spring," "Clouds of the Autumn Night," "My Jack," "Good Advice," "John, I Must Go," with English and German texts, the music composed by Heinrich van Eyken.

Two songs: "The Caterpillar," "The Gift of the Gods," with English and French texts, the music composed by I. Albeniz.

Eleven compositions for piano: "Berceuse," "Caprice," "Forget-me-nots," "In Springtime," "Intermezzo," "In the Starlight," "Mélodie," "Scène de Ballet," "Told at Twilight," "Valse," "Yesterdays," composed by Charles Huerter. These are salon pieces of the best class, full of fancy, melodious, of no great emotional depth, and not difficult.

Sigismond
STOJOWSKI
The Great Polish Pianist and Composer has arrived in this country to continue his teaching at the von Ende School of Music.
¶For terms, appointments or school catalogue write to the secretary, Box 7.
The von Ende School of Music
44 WEST 85th ST., NEW YORK

Albert Spalding's New York Concert.

After winning extraordinary triumphs in Europe, Albert Spalding, the American violin virtuoso, will effect his re-

SPALDING'S RESIDENCE IN FLORENCE, ITALY.

entree before a New York audience, in Carnegie Hall, Thursday afternoon, October 29. This will be Mr. Spalding's first recital in the metropolis in two seasons. Since his last appearance here he has made two tours of the continent of Europe, one of Egypt and three tournees in Scandinavia. He was recalled last year to give a second series of concerts in Norway and Sweden. During these tours Mr. Spalding, assisted by Andre Benoist, pianist, gave ninety-one concerts. His bookings included England, France, Northern Germany, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Italy, Russia, and a course of recitals in Alexandria and Cairo.

Photo by Mat ene, Chicago.
ALBERT SPALDING.

One of the accompanying pictures shows the Spalding residence in Florence, Italy (14 Lung Arno Americus Vespucci); the violinist and his family are alighting from their automobiles, after a trip through the Apennine Mountains. The other photograph shows the violinist in a characteristic pose.

During his absence from his native land Mr. Spalding has written a number of new compositions, including a violin concerto (one movement) and a prelude and fugue for piano.

JERSEY CITY TO HAVE MUSICIANS' CLUB.

Jersey City, N. J., October 2, 1914.

The day professional musicians in Jersey City, pioneers in the cause, have worked for, is beginning to dawn. Paterson, Trenton and Newark has each its Musicians' Club. The time is propitious; there is no reason why Jersey City should not have a like association. To this end a preliminary meeting was held at the residence of James P. Dunn, September 28. It was decided to enlarge the scope of the movement, ask Hoboken and Bayonne to come in with Jersey City, and form an association representative of Hudson County. Enthusiasm marked the gathering and each one present pledged himself or herself to interest three or more persons in the society. Temporary officers were appointed as follows: James P. Dunn, chairman; Henrietta Foster-Wescott, secretary. "The society has as its object," to quote from the circular letter, "first, the promotion of a better mutual acquaintance among the musical people of our city; second, the improvement in musical conditions in the city which such a society could accomplish, and, above all, an organization which by its unity could claim for the musical profession the recognition to which it is justly entitled and which would serve as an agency to bring about any changes, betterments in musical conditions, etc., which the membership might think proper." The next meeting to organize further will be held at the residence of Mrs. Daniel H. Bender, 116 Fairview avenue, this city.

A TALENTED JERSEY CITY SOPRANO.

Jane Mae Hanks, soprano at the First Congregational Church and general favorite with Jersey City audiences, has a voice of good quality. She holds a diploma from the Institute of Musical Art, New York, having stood first in a class of eighty-five pupils in the vocal department and having completed the four years' course in three years, and was selected to sing the solo in Schubert's "Serenade" on the program of the graduation exercises last June. Miss Hanks has temperament to a marked degree and is a hard working student; she is continuing her vocal studies under her former instructress, Mme. Niessen-Stone, who has returned to America.

JESSIE BRUCE LOCKHART.

DETROIT TUESDAY MUSICALE SEASON.

Detroit, Mich., October 6, 1914.

Entering its twenty-ninth year of activity, the Tuesday Musicale has planned an interesting season. Since its inception as a small club organized by a coterie of society girls interested in music, it has grown until its active membership averages over one hundred and fifty members annually, three-fourths of whom are professional women musicians. In addition to its active membership, it has a large student and an associate body. Throughout its history it has been a pioneer in many a field of musical endeavor, and some of the leading musical artists of the world have made their initial appearance under its auspices, and it has always been recognized as a potent factor in the development of the musical life of the city.

Its ten morning concerts are in charge of a most capable committee with Mrs. M. D. Bentley, chairman; among other things there is planned a program of the works of Detroit composers, of whom there are a number whose compositions merit serious hearing. There will be two evening concerts, the first to be given in November by the Trio de Lutiece, the second in January by Mrs. H. H. A. Beach. In addition to its own work, it generously supports other musical organizations, being one of the guarantors of the Orchestral Association and one of the founders of the Detroit Orchestra.

Change in Philharmonic Course.

Manager James E. DeVoe announces that the first concert of the Philharmonic Course will be given by Pasquale Amato and Anna Case, instead of by Emmy Destinn and Dihn Gilly as first advertised. The date of the concert is October 24.

Orpheus Club Plans.

The Orpheus Club, Charles Frederic Morse, director, will give two concerts to its sustaining members this season. Florence Hinkle, soprano, will be the soloist at the first concert in November. The club will fill a number of out-of-town engagements during the season.

Institute of Musical Art Holds Reception.

Thursday afternoon and evening, October 1, the Detroit Institute of Musical Art, the latest accession to Detroit's schools, opened its doors to the public in two delightful receptions. Everything was in gala attire and everyone in festival mood, and the various teachers, most of whom are well known in Detroit, received congratulations from friends and fellow teachers. One of the handsome floral tributes was from the Orpheus Club to its director, Charles Frederic Morse. Guy Bevier Williams, head of the piano department; William Howland, head of the vocal department, and Charles Frederic Morse, head of the organ department, are the directors of the school.

Jennie M. Stoddard.

SAN DIEGO EVENTS.

San Diego, Cal., September 28, 1914.

The executive committee of the Amphion Club made the final arrangements Tuesday evening with L. E. Behymer, of Los Angeles, for the artist course to be presented here during the coming season. The club will present seven events, as follows:

October 14—Schoenfeld, harpsichord; Russing, soprano. In costume recital at Wednesday Clubhouse.
November 13—Marcella Craft, leading soprano of the Royal Opera, Munich.
November 27—Evan Williams, tenor.
January 29—Efrem Zimbalist, Russian violinist.
February 12—Josef Lhevinne, Russian pianist.
March 24—Zoellner String Quartet.
April 5—Julia Culp, Dutch contralto.

These artists, with the exception of Schoenfeld and Bussing, will appear at the Spreckels Theatre. The Schoenfeld-Bussing affair will act as the opening event of this club, which will be October 14 at the Wednesday Club house. All the local events, namely, those in which the local artists are taking place, will naturally be held in this same clubhouse, which is most attractive and capable of holding about five hundred people.

The first artists' event of the San Diego Club takes place on Tuesday, and will be one of unusual interest to the members and invited guests, as Claude K. Webster will appear in piano recital of selections from Beethoven, Pugno, Tschaikowsky, Sibelius, Friml, and those of his own composition.

Willibald Lehmann is congratulating himself upon the rapid progress shown by the People's Chorus, and a large number of the professional singers have joined this organization. Mr. Lehmann announced to the chorus the decision of the board of directors to indorse the plans of the director for the performance of Haydn's "Creation," and to authorize him to engage the services of the Popular Symphony Orchestra of fifty performers, and the best soloists obtainable. The announcement was received with great enthusiasm. Although a definite date for the performance has not as yet been set, it will in all probability be given the latter part of December.

Roscoe B. Shyrock reports a good attendance of old members and many new ones at the San Diego Choral Union rehearsals. B.

Century Sunday Night Concert.

On Sunday evening, October 11, the second concert was given at the Century Opera House, New York, before a large and appreciative audience. Helen Stanley sang an aria from "L'Enfant Prodigue" with great charm and excellent interpretation, displaying her exceptional vocal attainments, and she was forced to give two encores.

Thomas Chalmers was heard in "Dio Possente," from "Faust," his magnificent baritone voice and excellent diction being greatly enjoyed. Another favorite with the audiences at the Century is Orville Harrold, and his singing of "Ridi Pagliaccio," from "Pagliacci," was listened to with delight.

Other singers on the program were Hardy Williamson, in "Spirito Gentil," from "La Favorita"; Augusta Lenska, in "Autumn" (Franz); Elizabeth Campbell, in "Mon Cœur s'ouvre a ta Voix," from "Samson and Delilah," and Alfred Kaufman, in the "Catalogue" aria, from "Don Giovanni."

Hugo Riesenfeld gave as a violin solo the "Prize Song," from "Die Meistersinger." The orchestral numbers included overture to "Sakuntala" (Goldmark), "Variations" (Ochs), "Roses From the South" (Johann Strauss), and closed with Schubert's "Military March." The conductors were Josef Pasternack and Hugo Riesenfeld.

WANTED

ENGAGEMENT WANTED—Dramatic soprano, just returned from four years' work in Europe as concert singer, wishes engagement as soloist with orchestra or band; arias or songs. Voice strong and well trained, great range. Address "H. O.," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

ORGANIST WANTED—By prominent New York department store, for the winter season; state terms and references. Address "B," care Musical Courier, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

HENIOT LEVY PIANIST Kimball Hall, CHICAGO

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa

JOHN B. MILLER, TENOR
624 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Emily Church BENHAM Pianist
Concerts Recitals Lessons
Studio: 1299 Bryden Road, Columbus, Ohio

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone Ravenswood 2319 849 Lakeside Place Chicago

SUSANNAH MACAULAY
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
Composer of "Allah Is Great," "The Butterfly," "Ave Maria"

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID HARPIST
THE FOREMOST WOMAN HARPIST IN AMERICA
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX
CONTRALTO BOSTON THEATRE OPERA COMPANY,
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Ave., New York

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

Mrs. HALL McALLISTER
TEACHER OF SINGING
Musical Management
407 Pierce Building - - Boston

Mrs. MINNIE M. McCONNELL
Voice Culture and Coach
McConnell Vocal Trio
204 Cathedral Parkway, (W. 110th St.) New York
Phone: River 6439

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 85[illegible]

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

OLIVE KLINE
SOPRANO
Management: Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

MME. KARWESKA
ITALIAN, GRAND OPERA
M. Southern Russia. Concerts de la Grande Noblisse, St. Petersburg
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.

EMMA NAGEL SOPRANO
SEASON 1914-15
Management, WALTER ANDERSON, - New York

SARTO
Bass-Barytone
(Late Metropolitan Opera Company)
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th Street, New York

Morse - Rummel
VIOLINIST
Endorsed by Nikisch, Damrosch, Ysaye, Godowsky
DIRECTION - Walter Anderson, 171 West 57th Street - NEW YORK

WALTER ANDERSON ANNOUNCES
LOUISE VAN OGLE
In Illustrated
"TALKS ON MODERN OPERAS"
Assisted by EMMA NAGEL, Soprano
Western Tour, January-February, 1915
Address 171 West 57th Street - - - New York

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.2

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 16 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1914

OF THE 1914

YEATMAN GRIFFITH

American Basso Cantante and Teacher

JSICAL AND GENCY.
sitions Secured.
New York.

ER
CTOR.

egie Hall,
New York.

ER,
STRUCTION.
olian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

REUMANN,
ONE.
rt of Singing.
egie Hall.
New Rochelle, N. Y.

Miss Susan S.
I C E. Expert Coaching.
STUDIOS. Diction in all languages.
Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

N MILLER,
ACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

ARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

ELEANOR PATTERSON,
AMERICAN CONTRALTO.
Tel. 880 Morningside. 510 W. 124th St.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
Mme. Anna E. Ziegler, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN,
Studio: 70 Carnegie Hall.
Telephone, Columbus 5946.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7408 Bryant. New York.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals.
Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

Miss EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

ELIZABETH PILLOW OLIVER,
SOPRANO.
Available for Oratorio, Chamber Music, Concerts.
Studio: 837 Carnegie Hall, New York.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

Mr. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the Leschetizky Method.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction
Theory of Music
Telephone
7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, Piano
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE.
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring We Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Hearthcote Hall, 600 West 114th St., New Yor
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLEF
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City.

Mme. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(Mrs. Hermann G. Friedmann.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th S

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FO
VIOLIN PLAYING. PIANO AN
VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Stre
Complete musical education given to studen from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

Mrs. J. HARRISON-IRVINE,
PIANISTE—ACCOMPANISTE.
Instruction in Piano, Teaching, Accompanyin Coaching of Operatic Roles. Concert, Orator Sight Singing and Reading Classes, Harmony.
1013 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Phone, Columbus 135

Mr. and Mrs. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOI
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBER
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizin in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limite number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Di mond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaz

DOUGLAS POWELL
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Special attention paid to
Concert Breathing and Tone Placement.
Studio: 448 Madison Ave., Phone Plaza 5722.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singin
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 16. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1804.

BERLIN ALMOST NORMAL IN MUSICAL MATTERS.

Concert Rush Shows Signs of Assuming Large Proportions—Two Opera Houses Open and a New Orchestra Formed—Russian Musicians Retained—How Critics Should Listen to Music.

Berlin, September 26, 1914.

Whereas it was thought when the war broke out that there would be no concert season at all in Berlin, it now is evident that we are to have a busy and very interesting succession of tonal events.

As I mentioned last week, the Nikisch Philharmonic Concerts are to be resumed, the oratorio performances of the Philharmonic and the Singakademie Choirs are also to begin as usual, and the Philharmonic Pops will occur three times a week all winter as in ordinary times.

During the last week it has been decided that the following series of concerts also will begin as usual: The series of so-called Elite Concerts, under the management of the Konzertdirektion Sachs, four in number; the chamber music evenings of the Willy Hess Quartet, also four in number; they will occur on October 22, December 10, January 21 and March 18; the interesting and instructive cycle of concerts for the people which have been given for years on Sunday afternoons in the Schiller Theatre under the direction of Florian Zajic, the violinist; the Klingler Quartet series of six chamber music concerts at the Singakademie. This organization has for several years past had the largest public patronage of any of the many string quartets of Berlin.

This makes eight important series of concerts that are already announced. Others no doubt will follow later.

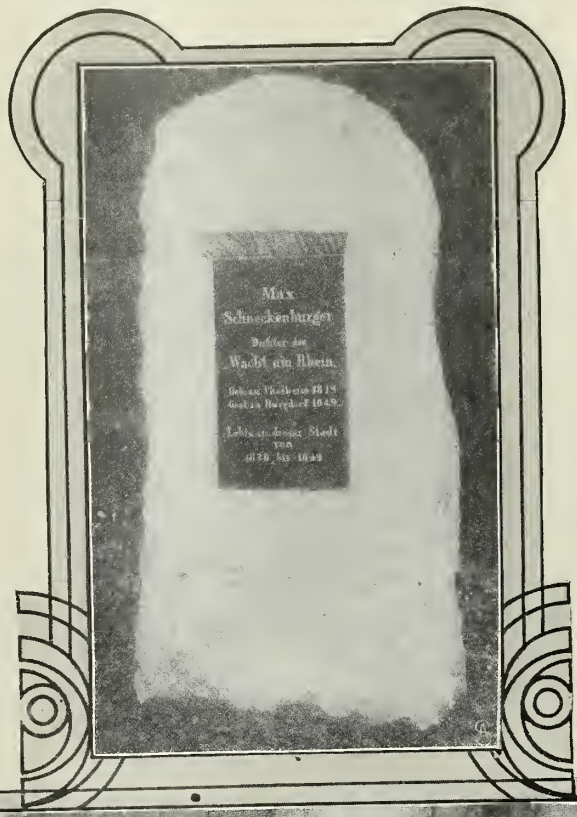
Red Cross and Other Charity Concerts.

A large number of important Red Cross concerts have been given, and more are announced for the near future. Much is being done in the musical circles to relieve the suffering among the working classes, particularly among those families of which the heads have been called to the front. The greatest artists gladly offer their services free of charge for concerts of this nature. Next Thursday, Frieda Hempel and Franz von Vecsey will be heard in the large hall of the Philharmonie in a concert given with the assistance of the Philharmonie Orchestra for charitable purposes. This evening several of the leading soloists of the Royal Opera, assisted by Heinrich Grünfeld and Hermann Sudermann, will give a concert at the Singakademie for the benefit of the Volksküche. This Volksküche (kitchen for the masses) feeds several thousands of the poor daily at ten pfennigs (2¼ cents) a head.

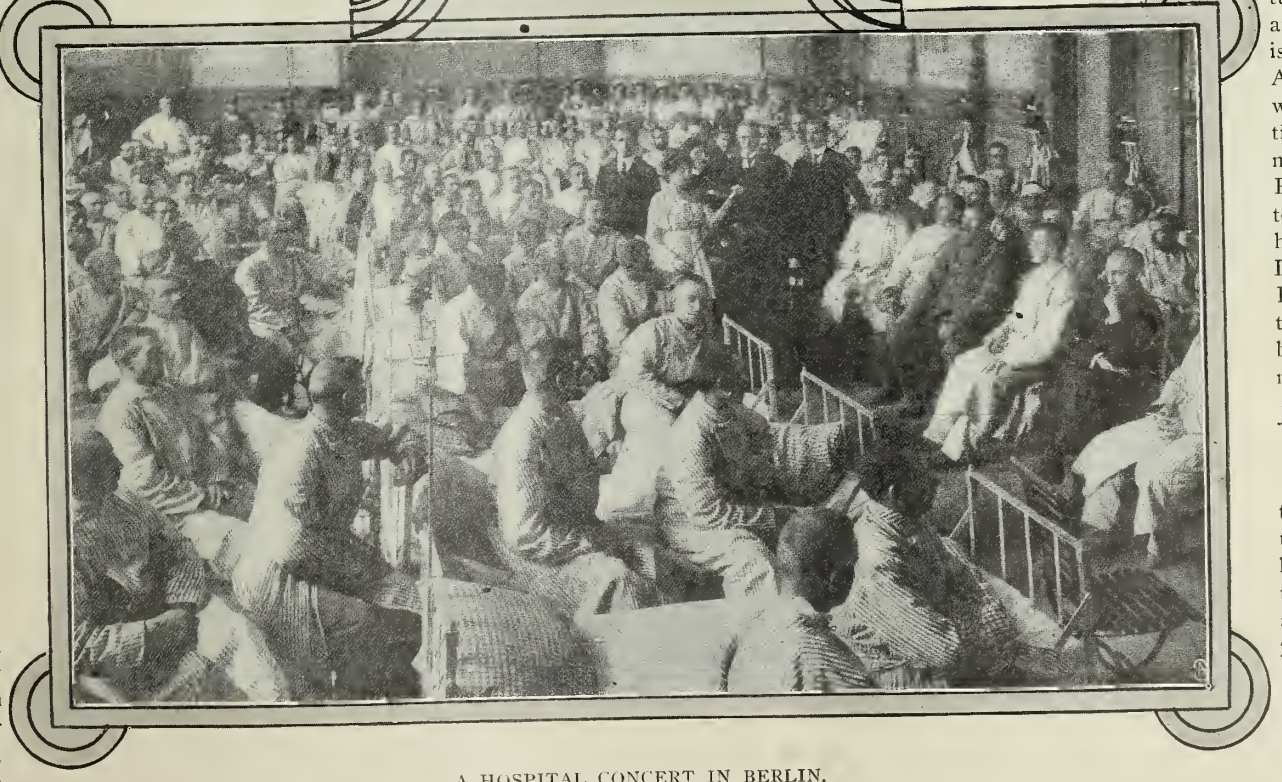
There has been a large demand for tickets for the second Red Cross concert to be given jointly by Julia Culp and Ludwig Wüllner at Beethoven Hall tomorrow evening.

Berlin's New Orchestra.

The many string and wind instrument players who now are without occupation in Berlin have banded together and formed a new orchestra, which is to be called "Die Freie Orchestra Vereinigung. This new orchestra will give a series of concerts during the winter for the benefit of indigent musicians. The first will occur on September 28 at the Philharmonie under the leadership of Oskar Fried. Among the violins of the new orchestra are many well known soloists and teachers of Berlin. The first cellist is Anton Hekking. A different conductor will lead each concert, but in each case it will be a man of national reputation.



Singers Active.



An interesting event is announced for October 19, when a big symphony concert will be given by the Philharmonie Orchestra under the baton of Fritz Steinbach, with Lilli Lehmann as soloist. The proceeds are to be turned over to the municipality of Berlin to be distributed among the poor.

The Berlin Vocal Quartet, of which the members are Jeannette Grumbacher, Therese Schnabel, Paul Reimers, and Artur van Eweyk will give a concert October 17. The organization, which is a great favorite in this city, will have the assistance of Artur Schnabel (piano). Since the tenor, Paul Reimers, is a prisoner in London, a substitute has been found in Georg Walter.

THE GRAVESTONE OF MAX SCHNECKENBURGER, THE AUTHOR OF THE POEM TO "DIE WACHT AM RHEIN."

He lies in the old village cemetery of Burgdorf, near Berne, in Switzerland, where he ran an iron foundry. The famous poem was written in 1840, when France threatened the left bank of the Rhine. During the war of '70-'71 it became a national patriotic song.

A HOSPITAL CONCERT IN BERLIN.

Laura Helbling, the well known violinist, playing for the wounded soldiers.

Open Air Music.

A stirring musical event took place on Sunday, September 20, at noon, when a Berlin male choir, the Saengerbund, 600 strong, gave an open air concert at the Königsplatz in front of the Bismarck monument. Long before the appointed hour thousands of people had assembled, and this immense audience listened with rapt attention to the singing of this admirable chorus. The program opened with the ancient Netherlands' prayer of thanksgiving, which was recently heard by the Liedertafel in the Philharmonie. Then followed "Die Wacht am Rhein," "Deutschland, Deutschland über alles" and other patriotic songs. In the closing number, the German national hymn, the entire audience joined.

A New Tenor Makes Debut.

Last evening a new tenor, Lorenz Hofer by name, made a successful debut at the Charlottenburg Opera as Pedro in "Tiefland." The young singer has a fresh sympathetic voice, his top notes in particular being brilliant. He also is a good actor. His success was well deserved.

Russians in Opera Here.

The trouble with the Russian members of the Charlottenburg Opera has been adjusted. Director Hartmann has decided to retain Heinz Arensen, tenor; the brothers Waghalter, conductor and concertmaster, and Lang, clarinettist, all Russian subjects. The public repeatedly has protested against their appearance, but Director Hartmann declares that all four artists had taken steps to become naturalized just before the outbreak of the war. So he does not feel justified in discharging them. They are not, strictly speaking, Russians, for the Waghalters are Poles from from Warsaw, and Arensen and Lang are from Riga in the Baltic Provinces, and are really of German extraction.

Director Hartmann's attitude is a laudable one, for in art matters breadth of view is preferable to chauvinism. A line has to be drawn somewhere, of course, in war times, particularly in government positions. For instance, Press, a Russian, and Marteau, a Frenchman, could not have been retained at the Dresden Royal Opera and the Berlin High School respectively, as that would have been an affront to the German nation.

Jadlowker at the Royal Opera.

Jadlowker, the favorite tenor of the Royal Opera, although a Russian subject, has not been discharged by the management, but his salary has been reduced from 75,000 marks to 12,000 marks. Jadlowker also is from Riga in the Baltic Provinces. He is a favorite of the Kaiser, but the monarch is, of course, at the army headquarters now. Although the season began three weeks ago at the Royal Opera, Jadlowker has not yet sung.

Frieda Hempel's Charity.

Frieda Hempel has been singing at the Royal Opera with her accustomed great success. She appeared in her old favorite roles like Rosina in the "Barber of Seville," Violetta in "Traviata," etc., and always drew a full house.

although normal prices prevail when she appears, the artist has generously turned over all of her fees received at the Royal Opera to the Red Cross and other charitable institutions.

THE BERLIN THEATRES.

Dramatic art also is coming in for its share of attention and patronage. The following theatres of this city have reopened for the season: Deutsches Theatre, Kammerspiele, Lessingtheatre, Komödienhaus, Residenz-Theatre, Lustspielhaus, Schiller-Theatre in East Berlin, Schillertheatre in Berlin West (Charlottenburg), Theatre an der Weidendammer Brücke, Theatre des Westens, Friedrich-Wilhelm-Städtsches Theatre, Casino-Theatre, Apollo-Theatre, Gebrüder-Herrnfeld-Theatre, Luisen-Theatre and Theatre Follies Caprices. The attendance at the sixteen theatres, considering the times, is very satisfactory.

LISTENING TO MUSIC.

An article which appeared in the Scientific American on the manner in which the general public listens to music has been widely quoted in the German press. A professor of psychology, who has made a thorough study of acoustics, gave a special concert of classical music, in which all sorts of instruments were played, before an invited audience of 300 persons, representing every grade of society and every degree of education. After the concert the professor requested the listeners to write down their impressions of the music. More than fifty per cent. of the 300 persons could not find anything to say; that is, they had no impressions at all.

The investigator came to the conclusion that listening to music intelligently is a rare capacity. He decided that even music critics were often much at fault in this respect, and that routine rather aggravates than diminishes their natural deficiency.

The learned professor does not touch at all one interesting point in connection with that subject, a point which I consider of the utmost importance, and my observations are based on many years' experience as a music critic here. I refer to concentrated attention in listening to music. I am convinced that the lack of concentration was the reason why more than fifty per cent. of those 300 auditors had no impressions of the music. In reality they were not listening at all, but were allowing their thoughts to wander. I maintain that more than fifty per cent. of any miscellaneous audience at a concert allow their minds to wander from one subject to another while listening to music. It is such an easy habit to form and such a difficult one to break. For most people music affords an agreeable background for mind wandering. This is particularly true of the musically undeveloped. Mind wandering is the most pernicious of all mental habits, but listening to music with great concentration and intelligently is one of the quickest and shortest ways to cure it.

ARTHUR M. ABELL.

"MADAME BUTTERFLY" AT THE CENTURY.

Puccini's Opera Well Performed by an Excellent Cast.

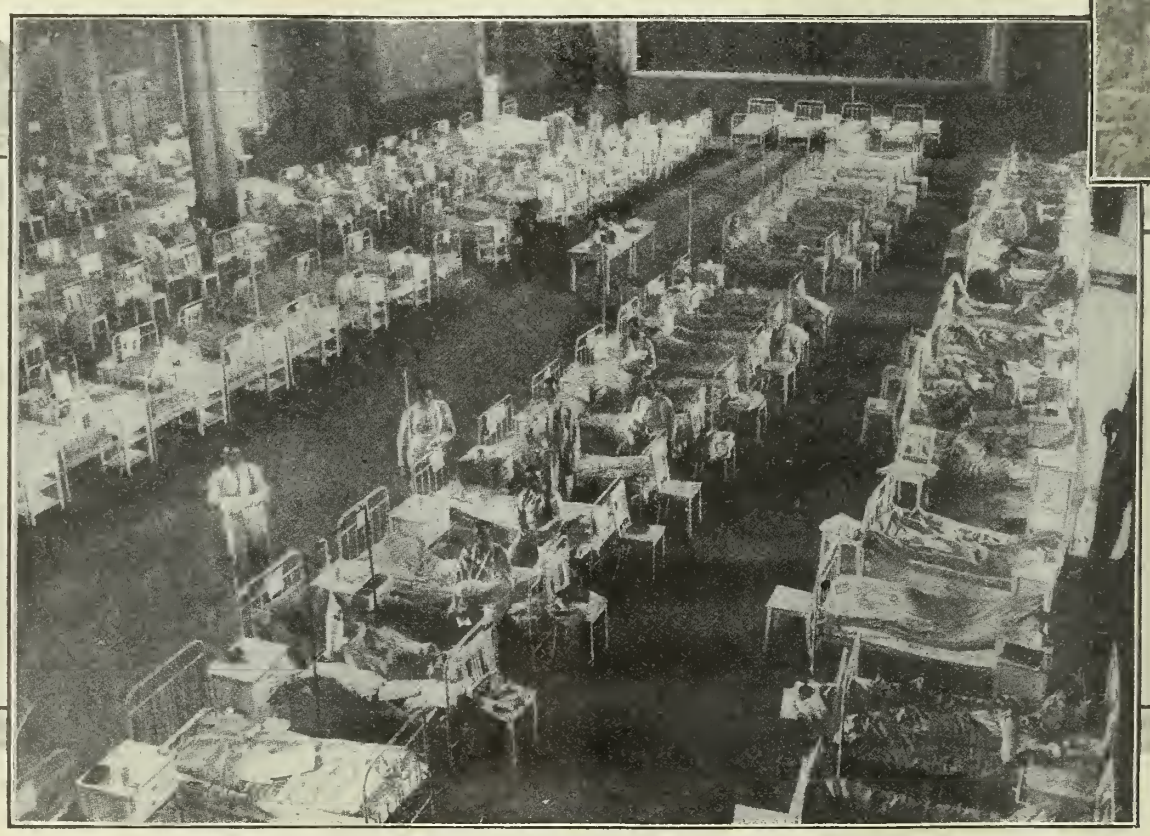
"Madame Butterfly" was given its first performance of the season on Tuesday evening, October 13, before one of the largest audiences that has filled the Century Opera House, New York, this season. The performance was in almost every particular superior to those given of the same work last year. Madame Butterfly was sung by Helen Stanley and is particularly well suited to this attractive and talented artist. The soft and luscious quality of Miss Stanley's voice brought out to its full intensity the pathos of the story of poor little Cho-Cho-San, and she played the role with a quietness which showed her thorough comprehension of the meaning of the authors and of the Japanese character.

Kathleen Howard repeated her excellent performance of last season in the role of Suzuki, and brought out all of Suzuki's rare devotion to her mistress in a touching way. Orville Harrold sang the part of Pinkerton with brilliancy and passion.

Praise is due Thomas Chalmers for his splendid interpretation of the role of Sharpless, the big hearted American consul. This is a role which very few artists are able to do with even a semblance of verity. Mr. Chalmers, however, not only looks the role, but he evidently also feels the part deeply. The music gives him no opportunity to display his fine vocal qualities.

George Everett did a good piece of work as the Commissioner, and Louis D'Angelo was excellent as Prince Yamadori. The same may be said of Mr. Kaufman as the Bonze.

The orchestral part was well played as far as sonority and solidity of tone are concerned, but Agide Jacchia, who conducted, hastened the tempi in many places so as to destroy the perfection of the ensemble. This was notably the case in Cho-Cho-San's aria, "One Fine Day," in which Miss Stanley was hopelessly handicapped by the haste of the conductor, and in the flower duet, where the same blemish was noticeable, although not to so great an extent.



Nicosia Will Coach for Opera.

Carlo Nicosia has opened a studio at 5 West Sixty-fifth street, New York, where he will coach pupils in opera. Mr. Nicosia's long experience renders him well fitted for this particular work. He was conductor for a number of years with the Aborn Opera Company, before the Aborns took charge of the Century Opera Company. Afterward he was conductor with Hammerstein during the period of his opera giving in New York, and then at the opening of the Century Opera House Mr. Nicosia was one of the conductors who did the greatest amount of work during the whole of the first season.

Mr. Nicosia has also an adequate knowledge of French, English and Italian, and coaches in all three languages with equal facility. It is rumored that a new opera company is being started, which will be largely backed financially by wealthy citizens of this city, of which Mr. Nicosia will have charge.

THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE AND CROWN PRINCESS.

THE BERLIN FRIEDRICHSHAIN CONCERT HALL FITTED UP AS AN EMERGENCY HOSPITAL FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

This hall has a seating capacity of 2,400, and it is here that the Summer Philharmonic Popular Concerts are given.

John McCormack's Programs.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, who arrived in America October 16 will open his season at Fort Wayne, Ind., Monday, October 26.

He is to present some beautiful programs this year, covering a wide range of composers—German, Russian, Austrian, Norwegian, Finnish, Italian, French and American. He is going to sing his German lieder in English, as he has had very beautiful and singable translations made.

Mr. McCormack's manager, Charles L. Wagner, remarked recently: "We are looking forward to a tremendous season; every mail brings new offers. I have just arranged to play McCormack at the Auditorium, Chicago, Sunday afternoon, December 6, under the auspices of Wessels & Voegelli."

On another page of this issue of the MUSICAL COURIER will be found an interesting interview with the noted tenor.

Constance Purdy Contralto

Personal Representative: MABEL HAMMOND - - - 400 Riverside Drive, New York, Phone: 4043 Morningside

Helene Maigille Achievements.

The music room of the Helene Maigille American School of Bel Canto recently witnessed many pleasant reunions of old pupils, together with a remarkable list of new students anxious to pursue vocal instruction under the guidance of this eminent teacher of the great school of Italian bel canto. Helene Maigille may be justly proud of her achievement in establishing a school of singing which not alone has won such immediate recognition, but which lives up to the traditions of Italian bel canto, unchanged by any new ideas of present day theorists.

It is not to be wondered at that Mme. Maigille has been obliged to remove to still more commodious quarters, and she is now established and hard at work at her new residence studio, 134 West Eighty-second street, New York, where the fall term has opened delightfully under successful auspices, and where is happily combined her school and residence, for with Mme. Maigille there lives her beautiful and venerable mother, Harriet Hubbard Wakeman Carter. It is not at all difficult to understand why Mme. Maigille is so rarely met outside her home, when one beholds her mother, a remarkably cultured woman of nearly eighty-two summers, with the light of eternal youth in her eyes and radiant expression.

Students may indeed deem themselves fortunate to be under the beneficent influence of such women, who are by birth, education and nature so artistic and cultivated. The future, as well as the present, can only give added luster to the career of Helene Maigille, who spoke truly when she said: "I place my mother above every earthly consideration, and what I am I owe to her in every particular. I had no ambition to achieve, but she helped me to achieve it, and now that the way seems at last to have lost the thorns and disillusions so abundant in professional life, I verily believe that the roses sprang that she might cull each one as a tribute to her own dear self; and she deserves them, every one."

Under such influences, sincere as well as aristocratic, pupils are bound to excel in the great art of bel canto, taught with fidelity and unerring skill by this exponent of the old Italian school of vocal training, a school which formed the voices of Grace George, Mrs. Archibald White

HELENE MAIGILLE.

(Olive Celeste Moore), Stanton Eliott, George Stuart Christie, Sabery d'Orsell, Frank H. Leonard and many others who owe to her training the success which came to them through the teaching of this conscientious woman and distinguished teacher.

Elizabeth Pillow Oliver in New York.

Elizabeth Pillow Oliver, the soprano and vocal teacher, a pupil of the late Frank King Clark, of Berlin, and also of Pauline Viardot, of Paris, has opened her studio at 837 Carnegie Hall, New York. Mrs. Oliver has received a cordial welcome into the music life of the metropolis, and New York adds another voice teacher of tested ability to its ranks.

As a singer and vocal teacher in Chicago, Mrs. Oliver proved her excellent work by her large and enthusiastic following, and she met with this same success in Oklahoma City, where she located in 1911 because of the delightful climate. Although she was leaving a studio class of more than forty pupils there, Mrs. Oliver realized the necessity of locating in New York, because of the great musical advantages for her daughter, Gladys Marie Oliver, whom she prepared for professional work.

Many of Mrs. Oliver's former pupils are making great sacrifices in order to continue their studies with her, having come considerable distances from the West and South. Several already have begun their work, the most talented of whom are Alice Marlatt (El Reno, Okla.), Hulda Fredricks (Oklahoma City), Kathleen Black (Gainesville, Ga.), H. W. Beddoe (Oklahoma City).

One unusual rule of Mrs. Oliver's studio is that she requires personal reference from each student before he or she becomes part of her studio life. This gives her an exclusive following.

Maude Klotz, the Sailor.

Summer time pleasures seem over for most musicians. There are still a few, however, who are taking advantage of these pleasant days.

Maude Klotz was "snapped" recently while sailing off Staten Island in her big sloop yacht White Wing. It is evident that this soprano does not like the passing of summer days.

MAUDE KLOTZ ON HER YACHT, THE "WHITE WING," SAILING IN NEW YORK BAY.

Schoettle to Conduct Des Moines Orchestra.

Gustav Schoettle is the new conductor of the Des Moines (Ia.) Orchestra.

Twenty popular Sunday afternoon concerts will be given during this season. The organization will be augmented to symphonic proportions next season and besides the popular concerts will give a series of regular symphonic concerts.

Mr. Schoettle was obliged to resign his position as director of the School of Music of the State University of Iowa, in order to devote his full time to the interests of the orchestra.

Olive E. Atwood Opens Season.

Olive E. Atwood opened her studio on September 15 with a gratifyingly large enrollment of pupils. Mrs. Atwood has been able to demonstrate to the piano students under her care that she is an earnest and able teacher. Aside from teaching her regular classes, Mrs. Atwood will continue as a preparatory teacher for Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.

Russia, it is reported, will bar Wagner operas. Germany will now have a chance to retaliate by barring the Russian ballet.—New York World.

Richardson to Manage De Pasqua li

Bernice de Pasquali, the coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has placed herself under the exclusive management of G. Dexter Richardson, and in the spring will make an extensive concert tour in addition to filling a number of festival engagements in the near future.

Her first New York recital will be at Aeolian Hall, and during the winter months she will appear in concert, when her operatic engagements permit.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher
Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

HUGE AUDIENCES ATTEND LONDON BALLAD CONCERTS.

Music Goes on Uninterruptedly in the English Capital—Landon Ronald's Conducting—His Excellent Orchestra—Godowsky Repeatedly Urged by the Vienna Meisterschule to Return There—He Will Sail for America October 24.

London, October 7, 1914.

The London winter musical season may be said really to have begun with the first ballad concerts last Saturday afternoon, followed the next day by the first Sunday afternoon concerts. On Saturday the firm of Boosey & Co., inaugurated their forty-ninth consecutive season of ballad concerts at the Royal Albert Hall. There were all the usual features: a dozen different vocalists and an instrumentalist (Fred Squires, who took the place of Jacques Thibaud at short notice), the interminable program of English ballads new and old, most of them pretty bad, and the huge audience amounting—on a good afternoon—to as many as seven or eight thousand, though I should say there were "only" some four to five thousand there last Saturday, the war undoubtedly accounting for the falling off in attendance.

The principal soloist of the afternoon was the young American soprano, Felice Lyne, who began with a number from Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and later sang two new ballads. She was in fine voice, in full command of all her technical proficiency, and she was received with great favor by the audience, an encore being imperatively demanded at each appearance.

Albert Hall Concert.

On Sunday afternoon in the same hall, there took place the first concert of the tenth season of Sunday afternoon concerts at the Albert Hall. There are seats for some ten thousand people in this huge structure, and there were perhaps seven thousand there last Sunday, including a very large crowd in the upper gallery, where seats are free. The acoustic excellence of this hall depends very largely on where one is situated. At the Albert Hall I had a place directly opposite the platform in the center of the amphitheatre, and there was a detestable echo which caused one to hear every chord on the piano as if struck double, though the singers' voices carried well. On Sunday, however, in one of the big omnibus boxes right over the stage the acoustics were excellent.

The New Symphony Orchestra.

The orchestra was the New Symphony Orchestra (concertmaster, John Saunders), under the direction of its regular conductor, Landon Ronald. Frankly I was very much impressed with Mr. Ronald's ability as a conductor. He has force and exact rhythm and at the same time the elasticity which, combined with a thorough understanding of the musical contents of the works which he conducts, produced splendid effects from his orchestra. I had often heard it stated that the big British orchestras are fully equal to the continental orchestras and, frankly, I had not believed it, but the New Symphony Orchestra taught me my mistake. Strings, wind and brass were alike first-class in every respect, and the orchestra, which is made up entirely of native born British players, can afford comparison with any orchestra which I ever have heard on the continent, even with the Vienna Philharmonic, which has been my ideal of what an orchestra should be.

The program was rather peculiar, as Sunday afternoon programs are apt to be. The orchestra started with the national anthem of all the five allies and then came Edward German's "Welsh Rhapsody," a work dating from 1904 and made up of four movements founded on some of the splendid Welsh folk melodies. I found the first three movements very fine, both in material, handling and orchestration, especially the andante on a melody called "David of the White Rock," but the finale "Alla Marcia," with the splendid melody of the "Men of Harlech" march, failed to work up to as overwhelming a climax as one expected and in this way rather marred the effect of the whole work. The second group of orchestral numbers consisted of a charming praeludium by Järnefeldt, a sentimental "Valse Triste," by Sibelius, and an extremely jolly "Shepherds Hey," a most virile old English dance splendidly orchestrated by Percy Granger. The last orchestra number was the "Pomp and Circumstance" march No. 2 in D, by Elgar, in which there appeared to be a tremendous lot of circumstance and very little pomp, though the melody of the trio, which, in the form of "Land of Hope and Glory," is one of the most popular patriotic songs of this country, is a whistling success, almost equal to that piece which first won immortal fame for Sir Edward, "Salute d'Amour."

The soloists were Katharine Goodson, pianist, and Kirkby Lunn, contralto. Miss Goodson played the Grieg concerto very effectively, her brilliant execution of the third movement, with its splendid dash and go being specially fine, and winning for her, as usual, a number of most enthusiastic recalls from her audience. The huge Albert Hall is no place to play the music of Chopin on the piano alone, but Miss Goodson chose her two numbers, the etude No. 7 in C minor, and the A flat polonaise, to give opportunity for as big effects as possible, and succeeded very well by the breadth of her playing in making one forget the disparity in size between the hall and the instrument.

Anybody who has sung "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from Saint-Saëns' "Samson and Delilah," as often as Mme. Kirkby Lunn has, should not make the rhythmical mistakes in it that she did on Sunday.

Chappell's Ballad Concerts.

The series of ballad concerts directed by Messrs. Chappell and Company, also began last Saturday afternoon at the Queen's Hall, and Sir Henry Wood's series of Sunday afternoon concerts at the same hall began on Sunday, though as I was at the concerts noticed above, I was unable to attend the others.

Gilbert and Sullivan Revival.

In the week previous to the opening of the ballad concert and Sunday afternoon season, about all the music which we had in town, except the "Proms," was the d'Oyly Carte Opera Company playing the Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire at the Coronet Theatre. I went to two or three performances to hear the charming music once more, and particularly to see how the company compared with our American road companies, for this d'Oyly Carte company is a really national institution which has been in existence for years, gives a short season in London every year, plays through the provinces, and goes to the provincial towns in Australia and Africa as well, and possibly even to Canada, though I am not sure of that. The men of the company are excellent; Fred Billington, for instance, who is now, I am informed, some sixty years old, and is one of the original Savoyards, and such artists as Leister Tonks, Allan Morris, George Sinclair and particularly Henry Lytton, are not to be exceeded in their singing and acting of these well known roles, all of which have now in their way come to have nearly as many traditions as those of the Bayreuth master. Dewey Gibson, too, is a young tenor who has a voice and ability to use it, which I have not heard exceeded on the English stage either in grand or light opera.

But the women are very bad, particularly, and most unfortunately, the leading soprano and the leading alto. It goes without saying that the operas were splendidly done as far as the ensemble is concerned. The orchestra played well, and it was not the fault of the players that the musical director neglected to bring out a great many of the nice bits of rhythmical and instrumental details, which are such important features of Arthur Sullivan's scores. I do not think England quite realizes to this day what a thoroughly genial and inspired composer it had in this man Sullivan. I cannot think of the name of any English composer of the present day who is equal to him in real ability.

Godowsky's Plans.

Leopold Godowsky, the eminent pianist, is still here with his family, owing to the fact that three of the steamers on which he has had accommodations have been taken over for military purposes, but he now plans to get away for New York on October 24 by way of Montreal on the steamer Laurentic. There was an impromptu musicale at Mr. Godowsky's hotel last Saturday afternoon, in which he played through and explained his splendid sonata for the benefit of the small company of musical friends, including the pianists, Archy Rosenthal and Benno Moisiewitch. What was my surprise to find an old acquaintance from Vienna, Daisy Kennedy, the Australian violinist (a former pupil of Sevcik, whose work has often been mentioned in these columns) in this little party, and to learn that she is no longer Miss Kennedy, but Mrs. Moisiewitch.

By the way, Godowsky tells me that the Vienna Academy has started its season, that the Piano Meisterschule had fourteen pupils waiting, and that the management had repeatedly telegraphed him to come back and take up his position, to which he replied that he would await the course of events and return by January 1 if possible. Of course it would have been utter foolishness of him to have gone to Vienna, even if it were possible, where he would be cut off perhaps for months from any communication with his wife and family whom he would not think of taking with him to a city so uncomfortably situated as Vienna is at the present moment.

Kurt Schindler Held.

Here is some news of Kurt Schindler, which perhaps may not have reached the many friends of the director of the Schola Cantorum of New York. He is at present in Berlin doing nothing, but not allowed to leave by the military authorities as, though he never served in the German army, he is likely to be called up with the final reserves. The worst part of the news which comes to me is that he has been obliged to sacrifice the famous long black shining locks in favor of the latest pattern of military hair cut—the veritable Samson shorn of his strength! Mr. Schindler has, however, nobody to blame for the predicament in which he finds himself but himself. He was safe in London up to the last days of July, but on the rumor of excitement to come, he immediately left for Berlin to see the fun—of which it is feared he is seeing more than he counted on.

A Paris Visit.

Your London correspondent hopes to leave for Paris tomorrow morning, and to send next week the promised letter on musical conditions—or rather the lack of them—there at the present moment.

H. O. Osgood.

Educational Chamber Music Society Concert.

The first concert of the Educational Chamber Music Society, New York, was given in the Straus Auditorium of the Educational Alliance, on October 18. This is a philanthropic musical endeavor, the admission to these concerts being only 10 cents. The program was as follows: String quartet, op. 51, E flat, Dvorák; piano trio, No. 3 G major, Haydn; string quartet, Gliere.

Oscar Gareissen Lectures.

On the first and third Saturdays in November, Oscar Gareissen, the vocal authority, will give two lectures at his studio, 64 East Thirty-fourth street, New York.

Mr. Gareissen has selected as subject for his first lecture on Saturday, November 7, at 11 a. m., "What Breath?" and on November 21 his subject will be "What is Voice?"

Mabel Riegelman in Operetta.

Andreas Dippel announces that Mabel Riegelman, who for the last four years has been singing for the Chicago Opera Company, has been engaged by the Dippel Opera Comique Company for "The Lilac Domino," the French operetta which will have its American première at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre on Wednesday, October 28.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

MINNEAPOLIS CLUB OPENS AUSPICIOUS SEASON.

Original Prize Compositions Heard at First Meeting—Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 16, 1914.

The first great social musical event of this season was the president's reception of the Thursday Musical Club, held in the Hotel Radisson, Thursday afternoon, October 1. In the receiving line were Anne Hughes, president; Mrs. C. W. Gardner, vice president, and the other officers, including Belle Baezell, Edwina Wainman, Mrs. J. R. Martin and Mrs. R. G. Smith. Three former presidents helped to entertain; they were Mrs. Harry W. Jones, Annette B. Muckey and Mrs. A. M. Fryberger. The house committee assisted also, and elaborate refreshments were served by members of the student section. Music was furnished by members of the string section of the club under the direction of Ruth Anderson, chairman of the string section. Helen Crittenden, an active member of the club, played piano numbers, and Tillie Gordon played drums.

Two noted musicians were guests, Esther Osborn, prima donna of the Swedish Grand Opera Company and the Royal Opera in Hamburg, and Beatrice Gjertsen, prima donna of the Dresden Royal Opera. Both singers are spending this year with their parents in this city.

More than 600 guests attended the reception. The secretary of the society tells me that the war does not seem to affect the membership of the club, which numbers this season so far close on to 1,200. This is its twenty-third season. Last year a prize was offered for original compositions.

The first bimonthly program of the season was given in the First Baptist Church on the afternoon of October 8, when prize compositions were heard. Guests were allowed and the church was filled to overflowing. The program was made up of numbers composed by local women. The first was a trio composed by Lillian Nippert and was gracefully played by Miss Nippert (violin), Meta Fust Willoughby (piano) and Cora E. Richard (organ). This number won Miss Nippert the prize for concerted form. Mabel B. Smith played a group of dainty numbers for the piano, by Mrs. Bernard Rosenquist; "Sundown," by Helen Hopekirk, and "Elfin Dance," by Joyce H. Hetley. The rondo and "Elfin Dance," pleasing and quaint compositions, were prize winners.

The opening allegro of Mrs. H. H. A. Beach's piano and violin op. 34 was played by Marion Baernstein and Mrs. Willoughby. A group of songs for middle voice was sung by Mrs. John Robert Stites—"A Memory," by Edna Rosalind Park; "A Lovely Maiden Roaming," by Gena Branscomb; "A Little Lane" and "Only of Thee and Me," by Marion Bauer. Another group for high voice was beautifully sung by Martha Cook, whose high notes rang clear and true. She sang "Dawn in the Desert" and "Night in the Desert," by Gertrude Ross; "When Lovers Dance Upon the Green," Mary Turner Salter; "Ah, Love! But a Day," Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, and "Day," by Jessie Hall Phillips. Mrs. James Bliss and Ruby Stone were the song accompanists.

The closing number of this very interesting program was a composition by a man and played by a man, R. Buchanan-Morton, a Scotch organist and composer, who has lately come in our midst. This number consisted of some very fine variations on a theme by T. Tertius Noble.

Gentlemen who are professional musicians will be admitted to all biweekly meetings upon presentation of their professional cards.

Notes.

Beatrice Gjertsen, prima donna, of Weimar, will give a recital at the First Baptist Church November 10.

The Arpi Swedish Male Chorus announces the engagement of the Boston soprano, Marie Sundelius, for its concert, to be given at the Auditorium, November 5.

The Chamber Music Society will give its first concert November 17. The Flonzaley Quartet will provide the second number of the series January 12, and the last in the year will be given by the Minneapolis String Quartet, consisting of these players from the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra: Richard Czerwonky, first violin; Franz Dicks, second violin; Karl Scheurer, viola, and Cornelius van Vliet, cellist.

Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

Duchess Goodenough, a graduate of the artist course of the piano department, who went to Berlin in June, 1913, to study with Josef Lhevinne, arrived in New York September 30. Miss Goodenough has been appointed as assistant in the piano department of the Women's College, Nevada, Mo.

Lillian Riske, 1914 graduate of the piano department and department of public school music, visited the conservatory last week. Miss Riske has opened a private studio in Doland, S. Dak., where she has a large class.

Robert Fullerton, head of the conservatory voice department, is devoting two half days a week to the voice department of Stanley Hall. Mr. Fullerton has organized a Stanley chorus made up of students in the high school and college departments. Later, he will organize a glee club.

Pupils in the voice, the piano, and the expression departments were presented in recital in Conservatory Hall on Wednesday afternoon in the following program: "Aubade Printaniers" (Lacombe), Margaret Longyear; "I Hear a Thrush at Eve" (Cadman), Mabel Sibley; "Butterfly" (Grieg), Leah Marshall; a child study, "The Lie" (Donnelly), Carrie Rolph; "Slumber Song" (Heller), Alice Ferm; "Click o' the Latch" (Parks), Ethel Martyn; "Idyll" (MacDowell), Vienna Larson; reading, "A Morning's Mail," Harry Holbrook; "Dance of the Doll" (Poldini), Joyce Dorsey; an Indian love lyric, "Till I Wake" (Finden), Alma Johnson; mazurka (Chopin), Lily Kingstedt; prelude (MacDowell), Beth Lawrence.

The most important event of the coming week at the conservatory is the recital to be given by Josephine Retz-Garns, associate professor of the conservatory school of expression. Mrs. Garns is well known as a reader and teacher throughout the West, having made several recital tours from 1905 to 1908. Since 1908 she has been instructor in the school of expression at Lawrence University, which position she resigned to accept the appointment at the conservatory. Mrs. Garns will be assisted by John Beck, pianist.

Franklin W. Krieger, director of the conservatory [illegible] department, is to appear with several other artist [illegible] private musicale October 21, at the home of Ella Richards, on Dayton avenue, St. Paul. The musicale is announced as a Brahms evening.

The regular faculty hour on October 10 was devoted to a lecture-recital by Margaret Daugherty, head of the conservatory normal department. Miss Daugherty illustrated her lecture by the following numbers: "Moonlight" sonata, three movements (Beethoven); impromptu, F major, and ballade, A flat (Chopin); barcarolle, A minor, and "Caprice Espagnole" (Moszkowski).

Under the able direction of Mrs. Leslie Hall Pinney, the conservatory dancing school expects a busy season.

Ethel Alexander, pianist, and Gladys Conrad, violinist, appeared in a concert at Stillwater last Monday evening, under the auspices of the Woman's Reading Club.

The vesper service at Stanley Hall, October 4, was in charge of Miss Holbrook, dean of the conservatory. The program consisted chiefly of music, the artist being Nanny Tait, contralto. Miss Tait is a graduate of the Royal Academy of London. Since her graduation she has been instructor in a prominent London private school for girls. Miss Tait's accompaniments were ably played by Martianne Towler, former student of the conservatory.

Ruth Anderson.

Behymer is Optimistic.

L. E. Behymer, the Los Angeles manager, who has been instrumental in taking to the West and Southwest many of the leading artists who have come to America in recent years, writes to the Musical Courier in a most optimistic vein concerning the present season. Mr. Behymer, as has already been announced in these columns, spent a good part of his summer in the East and in traveling through the Middle West and Northwest, looking over the situation. He writes: "I found on coming West that practically all of our fences had fallen down during the summer, but have been getting out, and today I think we have more business on our books than ever before." And he adds: "After I counted up the gross business, I found that I am even ahead of previous years, and that a good many more artists will be heard on the Pacific Coast this year than heretofore. . . . A number of the clubs who have been in the habit of taking very cheap artists are attempting one or two of the medium priced ones this year, in addition to their more reasonable priced people, which means a greater radiation of concert work throughout the West." And further on in the same letter, he says: "We are selling more fruit, grain and vegetables than ever before, and when we look over the bank clearings, they are on the increase; building permits increasing, mortgages being cancelled."

It will be recalled that Mr. Behymer has just taken over the management of the new Trinity Auditorium Building, in Los Angeles, which has one of the finest and largest auditoriums in the West, as well as several smaller auditoriums, banquet halls, rehearsal rooms, etc. A list of the Behymer Philharmonic Course for this season shows twenty-seven star events, in which some of the greatest names known to musical art appear.

Willy Burmester's Great Art

What the papers of Leipzig, Berlin and Dresden say:

With Burmester everything down to the slightest detail sounded full of life and soul, rose up into a swell, died away like a fleeting breath, and on the lower strings a wealth of song so beautiful that I can think of no violinist whose tone resembles to so great and overwhelming a degree the human voice itself.—Leipziger Abendzeitung.

Willy Burmester is one of the most noticeable, if not the most striking figure among violinists—a virtuoso in the word's highest perfection, musician of comprehensive importance, he possesses in both these qualities a unique personal charm that bases above all in an astonishing energy and highest concentration.—Neuste Nachrichten, Berlin.

Beethoven's C minor sonata and the rarely heard composition by Mozart were rendered with such dignity and purity that the evening was immediately stamped as a most superior happening.—Berliner Tageblatt.

Willy Burmester, who gave six concerts to sold-out houses, undoubtedly has scored the greatest success of the season. This violinist belongs to the most unique figures in the history of his art. Magnificent, unerring technic, a superb, warm, commanding tone are his; everything he rendered was stamped by a master's mind.—Allgemeine Musik-Zeitung.

If his Paganini evening gave us an opportunity of admiring his eminent technic, then this time he showed himself a truly great, indisputable artist. A violinist capable of rendering the adagio in Spohr's seventh violin concerto with so singing a tone, so touching an expression, so simply and yet deeply, undoubtedly is one of the elect. We do not know any living violinist whom we could put on an equal footing with Herr Burmester after this magnificent performance.—Dresdener Zeitung.

Philharmonic Data.

To enjoy the advantages of subscription rates for the New York Philharmonic concerts, it is not necessary to secure tickets for the entire season with its forty concerts in Carnegie Hall. There are three separate series, twelve on Thursday evenings, sixteen on Friday afternoons, and twelve on Sunday afternoons, and the concerts of each series are distributed regularly through the whole season. Soloists appear in each series, and the subscription rates are as low as in Berlin or any other foreign capital—a balcony seat for a series of twelve concerts may be had for four dollars and a half, or thirty-seven and a half cents for each concert. The subscription sale already has opened at the box office, and the demand is greater than ever before. The opening concert of the season will be given on Thursday evening, October 29. The entire receipts of this concert will be turned over to the American Red Cross Society.

JEZZY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

NEVADA VAN der VEER Mezzo Contralto REED MILLER Tenor
Oratorio :: Concerts :: Recitals
Individually and Jointly
Address, 749 West End Avenue New York City Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

Madame OTTILIE METZGER
THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)
and THEODOR LATTERMANN
THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)
WILL ARRIVE IN AMERICA FEBRUARY 1st.
Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio
Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Regina de Sales
TEACHER OF SINGING
Formerly at 40 rue de Villejust, Paris, now located in New York.
124 West 82d Street, Phone, Schuyler 7511. Reception hour Tuesdays 3 - 4
STUDIO: 1013 CARNEGIE HALL—Thursday mornings

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates
GODOWSKY
Will be in America
this Season
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.
KNABE PIANO USED

A. A. Van De Mark's Yearly Star Course Book.

A. A. van de Mark, the Lockport (N. Y.) Star Course manager, who has for several years brought to that city such a galaxy of brilliant musical stars that his concerts have aroused attention and interest, is now at work collecting material for the next issue of his yearly Star Course Book, which will appear next March. The book Mr. van de Mark issues each year is handsome in typography and contains such interesting and valuable matter that it is really a souvenir volume, especially for music lovers.

Especially readable is the section devoted to the era in music, which extends back almost fifty years, and illustrated with photographs of the artists who appeared at that time. Adelina and Carlotta Patti, Parepa Rosa, Ole Bull, Adelaide Phillips, Emma Abbott, Clara Louise Kellogg, Gottschalk and Minnie Hauk are among the number. Clara Louise Kellogg was the last star to appear there until forty years later, when Mme. Schumann-Heink opened the new era in music in Lockport under Mr. van de Mark's direction. Very interesting is a caricature of himself as Julien, made especially for Mr. van de Mark's book by Enrico Caruso; also the article on the industrial status of Lockport written by one of its prominent residents, the list of box holders and full course subscribers, nearly a thousand in number, and a poem on music by Mrs. Spalding Evans, of Lockport, furnish much of local color. Ella Wheeler Wilcox has contributed a poem on music, and there are special contributions by Dr. Vogt, of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir; Edward Bok, of the Ladies' Home Journal; Booker T. Washington, and others. A new feature of Mr. van de Mark's book this year is the introduction of a musicians' directory, which will include the names of noted artists. A two page memoriam will be devoted to Lillian Nordica, who sang almost her last concert in America in Lockport under Mr. van de Mark's direction. The last letter, according to Mr. van de Mark, Mme. Nordica ever wrote to a local concert manager was to him, thanking him for her wonderful reception in that city.

A portion of the book that will be of interest to opera singers and opera students alike, and which shows Mr. van de Mark's alertness in creating enthusiasm for his concerts, is the prize page. Partial verses have been selected from twenty-two well known operas and $100 in gold will be given in four prizes to those who can give the names of the opera, the composer and the characters who sing the part.

Marcella Craft's Program.

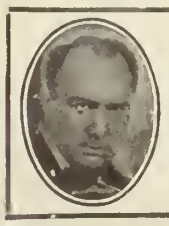
Marcella Craft has engaged Uda Waldrop as accompanist for her California recital tour. Miss Craft has arranged the following unusual program for her Los Angeles and San Francisco concerts:

OLD ITALIAN SONGS.

O del mio dolce ardor.....Gluck
Se florindo e fedele.....Scarlatti
Violette.....Scarlatti
Caro mio ben (arranged by Papini).....Giordano

AMERICAN SONGS.

Exultation.....Mrs. H. H. A. Beach
Song of Love.....Mrs. H. H. A. Beach



GERMAN LIEDER.

Du meines Herzens Krönelein.....Richard Strauss
Schlagende Herzen.....Richard Strauss
Frieden.....Pfitzner
Liebesfeier.....Weingartner
Susanne's Song (from The Secret of Suzanne).....Wolf-Ferrari
Smoking Song (from The Secret of Suzanne).....Wolf-Ferrari
A ancora un passo (from Madame Butterfly).....Puccini
Un bel di vedremo (from Madame Butterfly).....Puccini
Tua madre (from Madame Butterfly).....Puccini
Piccolo iddio (from Madame Butterfly).....Puccini

Christine Miller Is Lauded Again.

Appreciative comment of a concert given by Christine Miller, America's contralto, at the Ashtabula, Ohio, City Hall, on February 24, 1914, are herewith attached:

When the ensemble of a singer, even to the design and colors of her costume, gives the impression she wishes to convey, and it is the expression of frank truth, understanding and progressive modernism, there is bound to be appreciation even from a critical audience, and as Christine Miller, of Pittsburgh, in the opening engagement of the artists' course, appeared to the large number of musical people and students who heard her at the City Hall last evening she felt an answering chord of sympathy and appreciation of her art which expressed itself in repeated applause. It grew warmer till the climax was reached and an ovation tendered the charming woman after the recital. Miss Miller has a gloriously beautiful contralto voice and uses it equally well with simplicity or dramatic fervor.—Ashtabula, Ohio, Wednesday Evening, February 25, 1914.

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Morgan Kingston's Popularity Increases.

That Morgan Kingston, the tenor at the Century Opera House, New York, is coming more and more into his rightful own this season, his second at the popular grand opera house, is already an established fact. His splendid voice has materially brightened and grown much larger, and above all, his acting has now become a real part of his art. Appended are a few of the press criticisms concerning the tenor's Don Jose in "Carmen," during the opening week at the Century:

Mr. Kingston sang with greater freedom and flexibility, as well as with more reserve, and his stage presence was conspicuously easier. His work was the individual feature of the evening.—New York Times.

Morgan Kingston, who was the Don Jose, sang with much fervor. His style of singing has improved over summer and his voice has lost none of its natural beautiful quality. After the flower song he was applauded heartily.—New York Herald.

Morgan Kingston sang Don Jose with the quality and charm of voice that impressed us at his first appearance last season, and he acted with far greater freedom.—New York Evening World.

As Don Jose, Mr. Kingston was happily cast. His voice was in splendid condition and he sang with style and feeling. As an actor Mr. Kingston shows vast improvement. He was natural and convincing, his scenes were forceful and telling in effect.—New York Journal of Commerce.

Morgan Kingston, who sang Don Jose, sang with much fervor and received a much merited reception after his singing of the flower song.—Brooklyn Times.

Morgan Kingston as Don Jose sang with greater freedom than last year and showed more flexibility. His voice is well suited to the role.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Morgan Kingston's Don Jose showed a vast improvement over anything that he did last year. He not only sang better than ever before, but acted with intelligence and ease.—New York Evening Mail. (Advertisement.)

Alma Gluck in Lynchburg.

Lynchburg, Va., October 11, 1914.

Few singers of national reputation, who have appeared before Lynchburg audiences in recital during the past few years, have ever been received with more warmth and genuine cordiality than Alma Gluck when she returned to the Academy of Music last night, and afforded her admirers another opportunity to pass upon the quality of her lovely voice. Her popularity in Lynchburg was eloquently attested by the capacity house which greeted her, and her art, charming personality and unaffected stage presence won many friends who had not heard her before.

Her appearance in Lynchburg was due to Emma Adams, of this city, who has been successful in bringing a number of America's distinguished artists here for recitals, and the demand for seats was so great that some of the singer's admirers paid men to stand in line in front of the theatre all night in order that they might be assured of securing choice seats for the recital, three days before the event went down in the musical history of Lynchburg. Mme. Gluck sang in seven different languages and the magnetic influence of her superb voice, together with her equally superb interpretative versatility combined to convince her hearers of her high standing in the musical world. JULIAN T. BABER.

Albert Spalding Bookings.

Albert Spalding will go West immediately after Christmas for a tour on the Pacific Coast. The American violinist has four appearances with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Henry K. Hadley, conductor, the first concert taking place on January 8, 1915. A series of recitals are being booked in Southern California, including Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Diego and Riverside, after which the artist tours the "Golden State." This will be Spalding's first professional tour in the Far West.

Spalding's New York recital will be given in Carnegie Hall, Thursday afternoon, October 29. André Benoist is to be the assisting pianist.

Julia Culp Appearances.

Julia Culp will arrive in America on the steamship Noordam, November 3, and will open her season in New York with the New York Philharmonic Society November 12 and 13.

Her first New York recital will be given in Carnegie Hall on December 10.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander's Recital.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander, well known as an oratorio and concert singer, will give a recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Thursday evening, October 29. The soprano will offer a program in four parts, including Old Airs and Songs, German classics, modern French songs, and modern songs in English.

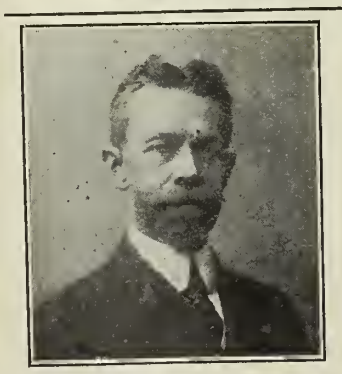
CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
STEINWAY PIANO USED
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

VAN YORX THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York



GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

GIUSEPPE CREATORE AND HIS BAND
NOW BOOKING FOR 1914-1915
OFFICE: 1512 TRIBUNE BUILDING, - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

A. CARBONE
MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References.
AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City
'Phone 3313 Audubon

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

CHICAGO MUSIC SEASON HAS A BUSY BEGINNING.

An Overplus of Sunday Concerts—Symphony Season Started—Cash Prize Offered for Dance Music—Concert Reviews and General Mention of the Week.

Chicago, Ill., October 17, 1914.

Sunday concerts in Chicago are too numerous. This coming Sunday four concerts are to take place downtown, while at least three or four will be harbored in halls outside of the loop district. In the downtown theatres, the Apollo Musical Club will present at the Auditorium Edward Elgar's "Caractacus"; at the Illinois Theatre, F. Wight Neumann will present Johanna Gadski; at Orchestra Hall Harold Bauer will give a piano recital under the management of Wessells & Voegeli; at the Fine Arts Theatre the Metropolitan Artists' Course, which is managed by Ernest Briggs, will present Virginia Thomson, contralto, and George Riecks, pianist. Reviews of these various events will appear later on in these columns. In the meanwhile, it is to be hoped that managers will not crowd the Sundays, but, instead, spread the musical happenings over other days in the week.

Jenny Dufau Opens Recital Season.

At the Illinois Theatre last Sunday afternoon, October 1, Jenny Dufau, prima donna coloratura soprano of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, opened the musical season with a very interesting song recital. Miss Dufau's program was well balanced and contained several novelties. It began with "Quel rusceletto," by Paradies, and was followed by three songs by Wolf-Ferrari, "Un verde practicello," "Io del saluti ve ne mando mille" and "E tanto c'e pericol cl'io ti lasci." These songs were new to Chicagoans and proved quite effective. In her second group the recitalist was heard in the "Bell Song" from "Lakme"—a number in which she had been heard previously with the Chicago Opera Company, and in which she scored her customary success. The German group comprised four numbers by Wolf, viz., "Nixe Binsefuss," "Auch kleine Dinge," "Das Verlassene Magdelein" and "Elfenlied." The French group consisted of Dalcroze's "L'Oiseau bleu," Debussy's "Beau soir," Grieg's "Chanson de Solvejg's" and Vidal's "Printemps nouveau." The fifth group was American and included Foote's "Irish Folksong," Ronald's "Take, O Take" and "The Pretty Creature," by Stephen Storage. The program was concluded with the rendition of the aria, "La Perle du Bresil," with flute obligato.

Miss Dufau, so the program stated, was compelled to appear in her Alsatian Sunday costume, due to her baggage containing her concert wardrobe being astray somewhere in Europe. Our colleagues on the daily press took opportunity to write at length about the hair ornament, shoes and concert garments worn by the recitalist, but as the Musical Courier is devoted to music and pays but little attention to fashion or press agents' tricks, it might be said right here that, although Miss Dufau may have lost her wardrobe in Europe, yet she came back to America in better voice than ever. She sang gloriously and scored a huge and well deserved success. Her diction in the French, German and Italian numbers was excellent, and, though calling herself a coloratura soprano, she sang some selections which do not call for coloratura work and created in them an especially good impression through a beautiful legato seldom noticeable among coloratura sopranos.

Miss Dufau's voice has, during the summer, taken on some volume, her medium is rounder, yet her high notes are as limpid as ever and she reached the top region as easily as of yore. Her technic is such as to permit her to negotiate certain difficult vocal gymnastics, which please the public and dilettante alike. After each group the recitalist was recalled to the stage and asked for encores, which were graciously added to the original program. As a matter of record, it might be stated that Miss Dufau's friends showed their appreciation not only with vociferous applause, but also by lavishing upon her many floral tributes, which later on made the piano look more like a greenhouse than a musical instrument.

The singer was beautifully supported by Charles Lurvey, who played most artistic accompaniments. In "La Perle du Bresil" Miss Dufau was assisted by Mr. Timmons, flutist. The concert was well attended and was given under the management of Harry Culbertson.

Offers $100 for Dance Music.

Blanche van Buren, press representative for the Midway Gardens, informed this department that the Midway Gardens Company has offered a prize of $100 for the best music suitable for a modern dance. Any one may enter the contest. The names of the judges will be published later on. The dance will be introduced by the orchestra at the Midway Gardens before it is placed on the market.

Agnes Nering in Concert.

Agnes Nering was heard in a concert given under the auspices of the Agnes Nering Singing Club on Sunday evening, October 11, at St. Stanislaus Auditorium. The large hall was filled and the Holy Family Academy, which was to receive part of the proceeds, must have shared well in the profits of the night. In the first part of the program the Polish soprano was heard in the aria "Vissi d'arte," in a Polish number by Moniuszko, and D'Albert's "Maiden and Butterfly." Her second group included "La serenata," by Braga; "Elegie," by Massenet, and Muratori's "Amore." The program was concluded with a scene from "Madame Butterfly," including the duet between Butterfly and Suzuki, the latter part being sung by Hedwig Dombeck. The concert enlisted the services of a pianist, violinist and a quartet, which was made up of Agnes Nering, Hedwig Dombeck, John Nering and Joseph Kowalski; a Polish reader, Blanche Dyniewicz, and some twenty members of the Agnes Nering Singing Club. In the second part of the program national dances were given by pupils of the Holy Family Academy.

Miss Nering, who is considered the best Polish soprano in Chicago, is very popular not only with her own people but with the musical public in general. She is the possessor of a large, sonorous soprano voice, which has been especially well trained and which she uses with consummate artistry. She sings with fine taste and style. She belongs to the temperamental class of singers, and she reflects in her songs her emotional disposition. She was enthusiastically received and won the success of the night.

Amateur Musical Club Year Book.

This office is in receipt of the year book of the Amateur Musical Club for the season 1914-15. The officers for this season are: Mrs. Rossetter G. Cole, president; vice president, Mrs. F. S. Bagg; second vice president, Mrs. George W. Dickson; secretary, Kate P. Richards, and treasurer, Mrs. Charles F. Everett. The first artists' recital will take place on November 23 and will be given by Efrem Zimbalist, violinist. The second artists' recital will take place on January 18 and on this occasion Katharine Goodson, pianist, will furnish the program. George Hamlin, the tenor, will be heard at the third artists' recital on March 1, 1915.

Henriette Weber a Popular Lecturer.

A series of ten popular lectures called "The Story of Music," the subject to be extended from the legendary law regarding the origin of music to the most modern manifestation of the art, is to be given by Henriette Weber. Most of the lectures are to be open to the public and are being arranged at the request of a great many people. They will be given on the fifth floor of the Fine Arts Building on Friday evenings from 7 to 8 o'clock and Saturday afternoons from 12.30 to 1.30 o'clock.

Victor Heinze Locates in Chicago.

On account of the war and the desire of his many American pupils, Victor Heinze, the Berlin teacher, has decided to locate in Chicago for the musical season of 1914-15, arriving here about the middle of October.

Walter Spry's Interpretation Class Program.

Walter Spry, director of the Walter Spry School in the Fine Arts Building, furnished the program before his interpretation class Wednesday morning, October 14. The program included the Handel chaconne in G major, Mozart's fantasia from sonata in C minor, Mendelssohn's scherzo from the "Scotch" symphony, Beach's "Scottish

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

HENRIETTE WEBER
Lectures. Opera Talks, Opera Concerts
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.
Or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
KENNETH M. BRADLEY, President

LEADING SCHOOL OF
Expression Public School Music MUSIC Languages Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:

Julie Rive-King	Harold von Mickwitz	Justine Wegener
Guy Herbert Woodard	Frank B. Webster	Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter	Eleanor Smith	Edward Dvorak
Mae Julia Riley	Emile Leclercq	Adelaide G. Lewis
Abigail Raymer	Ernest O. Todd	Robert Yale Smith
Roland Leach	Dr. Charles Allum	Anna McPherson

The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone. CHARLES W. CLARK and DAVID BAXTER, the famous Scotch baritone from the Royal College of London.
The Bush Conservatory is the only Conservatory in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
For catalogue and further information address EDWARD H. SCHWENKER, Secretary.

Legend," op. 54, No. 1, and "Gavotte Fantastique," op. 54, No. 2.

SHERWOOD SCHOOL HOUSE WARMING.

The Sherwood Music School, through its business manager, Jessie K. Read, informed this office that a house warming in the form of a reception will take place in the new premises of the school in the Fine Arts Building Annex next Saturday, October 24, from 4 until 10 p. m., to which they invite all their friends to inspect their new home. The president of the school, Georgia Kober, has just returned from Knoxville, Ill., where she gave a very successful recital for the pupils of the St. Mary's School, of which she is visiting director of music.

Martha Jacobson, of the Sherwood School faculty, will play before the high school principals at their meeting during October.

METROPOLITAN ARTISTS' COURSE BEGINS SUNDAY.

The second season of the Metropolitan Artists' Course of Musical Events will begin at the Fine Arts Theatre, Sunday afternoon, October 18, at 3.15 p. m. sharp, on which occasion Virginia Thomson, and George Riecks, pianist, will appear in joint recital. Virginia Thomson is an artist educated in America and possesses a wide experience in concert work throughout the East, where she has appeared in opera, recitals and in oratorio work. Mr. Riecks is an artist of European experience, having studied with Leschetizky in Vienna and afterward made appearances in Berlin and elsewhere in Europe before beginning his career in this country.

BUST OF LATE WILLIAM H. SHERWOOD TO BE EXHIBITED.

The committee in charge of the Sherwood Memorial Fund announces that the bronze bust of the late William H. Sherwood, executed by Lorado Taft, will be placed on exhibition shortly, and that any musicians or amateurs who desire to contribute to this fund will have until December 1, when the subscription list will be closed. Contributions should be sent to Walter Spry, treasurer, 712 Fine Arts Building, Chicago.

HERBERT MILLER WILL GIVE CHICAGO RECITAL.

Herbert Miller, baritone, announces a song recital to be given at the Germania Theatre (Whitney Opera House) on Monday evening, November 9. Mr. Miller will be heard in a program of interesting songs, many of which have never before had a public presentation in Chicago. Mr. Miller's plans include many public appearances throughout the country this season.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN'S PLANS.

The plans for the Glenn Dillard Gunn studios this year include six piano recitals at the Fine Arts Theatre, in which four young artists will be presented to the public and two of the old time favorites from among Mr. Gunn's pupils. There will also be a series of chamber music recitals held in the Little Theatre and the Comedy, in which Mr. Gunn's pupils and young artists under his endorsement will take part.

Among Mr. Gunn's Chicago appearances this year are the two-piano recital to be given with Allen Spencer on November 22, two lecture-recitals to be given for the Hebrew Institute in January, his piano recital in the Fine Arts Theatre, February 28, and the two American Symphony concerts, respectively on November 2 and March 11.

BERGEY CHICAGO OPERA SCHOOL CONCERT.

The Bergey Chicago Opera School will present in a recital, on Sunday evening, October 18, Florence Benson, pianist and pupil of Mrs. Bergey, and George Simons, tenor, pupil of Mr. Bergey. Miss Benson will be heard in the prelude by Rachmaninoff, Widor's "Chanson," Friml's "Etude Fantastique," and a group by Chopin. She will conclude the program with the Liszt "Waldesrauschen." Mr. Simons will sing a group by Franz and Schumann's "Die Lotus Blume." His English group will include "A Question," by R. W. Mockridge; "Dear Love, Remember Me," by Marshall, and Coleridge-Taylor's "An Explanation."

435TH CONCERT OF THE AMATEUR MUSICAL CLUB.

The Amateur Musical Club will give its 435th concert at the Blackstone Theatre next Monday afternoon, October 19. The program will be furnished by Naomi Nazor, soprano; Marion Taylor Hobbs, mezzo; Louise Harrison Slade, contralto; Wally Heymar, violinist; Else Harthan Arendt, soprano; Marie Hoover Ellis, pianist, who will play the Grieg concerto in A minor, with orchestral parts on the second piano by Carol Robinson. The accompanists will be Theodora Sturkow Ryder and Tina Mae Haines.

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRAL ASSOCIATION CONCERTS.

The University Orchestral Association of the University of Chicago has announced a concert at Leon Mandel Assembly Hall by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor, Tuesday afternoon, October 20. The program will be made up of numbers by Weber, Beethoven, Saint-Saëns, Wagner and Liszt. The next concert given under the same auspices by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will take place on Tuesday afternoon, November 3.

The association announces eight concerts by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, October 20, November 3 and 24, December 1, January 12, February 9, March 9 and April 20. Albert Spalding, violinist, will give a recital on December 15, and on February 16, Emilio de Gogorza, baritone, will appear in song recital. These concerts will take place at Leon Mandel Assembly Hall.

The association is entering its sixth season.

M. H. HANSON IN CHICAGO.

M. H. Hanson, of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, New York, and Mrs. E. H. Lewis, of the same bureau, were in Chicago during the week on their annual fall tour, booking artists under the Hanson direction.

TEXAS ASKS FOR HAROLD VON MICKWITZ.

Harold von Mickwitz has just received an unusual compliment in the form of a petition signed by 1,000 prominent citizens from the State of Texas, urging him to locate in Dallas and take the directorship of the conservatory to be established in connection with the new university.

Mr. von Mickwitz is one of the leading artists and pedagogues in America. His pupils hold prominent positions in all parts of the world. The contract which Mr. von Mickwitz holds with the Bush Conservatory prohibits his entertaining the idea of accepting the proposition made him by Dallas.

Success of Two Valeri Pupils.

Iole Pastori, whose lovely soprano voice has attracted the attention and interest of many New York musical people during the two years that she has been studying with Delia M. Valeri, and of whose talking machine record of "Caro Nome," many an artist of fame and experience would be proud, made her debut in San Francisco, Cal., on September 24, appearing at the Colonial Hall of the St. Francis Hotel, under the auspices of the Pacific Musical Society of that city.

FRANCESCA ROMERO SCHMEER,
Contralto pupil of Mme. Valeri.

The elite of the San Francisco artistic circles was prominently represented in the audience, which was so large that all the aisles and adjoining halls had to be used to meet the demands of the occasion. Expectations were high on account of the excellent report that had been given by those who had previously had a chance to hear the young American singer.

Miss Pastori sang "In quelle trine morbide" from Puccini's "Manon" and "Mi chiamano Mimi," from "La Boheme," with such a superb display of voice and such artistic delivery that she was received with round after round of applause. This, after her rendition of "Caro Nome," became so insistent and noisy as to assume the proportions of a demonstration, and the young singer was obliged to respond with some songs in English as encores.

The local press, commenting on Miss Pastori's work, stated that "she was a true revelation," and that "it is difficult to name another soprano who has sung in San Francisco with more sentiment in her tones and more interpretative power." The critics agree that it is impossible to foresee how far this young singer will advance in her profession when her beautiful voice will have had the benefit of experience and stage routine.

The San Francisco Chronicle, in presenting Miss Pastori's picture, together with that of Mme. Fremstad, refers to her appearance at the opening concert of the Pacific Musical Society as "a sensation," and affirms that San Francisco never before heard a better soprano of her class. It emphasizes the fact that Miss Pastori obtained her vocal instruction exclusively in America, under the guidance of Mme. Valeri, of New York.

Following are some extracts from various papers:

Iole Pastori created a sensation at the opening concert of the Pacific Musical Society.

From whence came this singer?

She had come back from her studios in New York only a week or two when the Pacific Musical Society located her and secured her services as soloist for the opening recital of the season. Her voice is a lyric soprano which her youth suggests may develop to the rim of the dramatic. It has a quality foreign usually to lyrical and coloratura voices—its depth of emotional feeling. No soprano of her class has sung in San Francisco with more sentiment in her tones, and I would with difficulty name any who, in this quality, is her equal. She has the intelligence of a musician and this she exploits, rather than the egotism of a singer. She employs her voice in the task of interpretation rather than in the vainglorious manner of many, if not most, Latin singers. In the mechanics and natural gifts of voice, Miss Pastori is singularly well qualified. She has vocal ability, a fluent quality, characteristic of Latin voice and a power far beyond the limits of the average opera singer of lyric roles. How far toward the dramatic her capabilities already reach was evident in "Mi chiamano Mimi," from "La Boheme," which took on the bigness of a dramatic representation wherein the histrionic gifts of the singer and the sympathetic gifts of the player were united in a rendering at once unusual and impelling.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The vocal numbers had real charm. Miss Pastori sang Puccini, Denza, and the delicious "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto." She did well, indeed, particularly in the aria, "In quelle trine morbide," from "Manon." Her tones are pure and clear; they have flexibility and charm. It is a pleasure to listen to her.—San Francisco Examiner.

Wednesday night's program presented a new, youthful and perfectly charming voice in Iole Pastori. Here is a young girl endowed by nature with a really beautiful voice, capable of the warmest expression and coloring. She was heard in two arias—one from Puccini and the other, the familiar "Caro Nome," and in a Neapolitan folksong. All were well done, but the folksong served to show the possibilities of Miss Pastori's beautiful voice from the standpoint of artistic musicianship. Developed along such lines, there is no telling how far Miss Pastori will get, for nature has endowed her with a perfectly exquisite voice. It was a great pleasure to have heard her.—Pacific Coast Musical Review.

Within a short time, New York will have the privilege of passing judgment upon what is claimed to be one of the most beautiful contralto voices that America has ever produced. Francesca Romero was born in Portland, Ore., a little over twenty years ago. She is of Spanish descent, her grandparents having come to America many years ago and settled in the State of Washington. While she was still a little girl, Miss Romero showed unmistakable signs of dramatic instinct and of a voice worthy of extensive cultivation. The musical people of her own town were unanimous in acknowledging the unusual power and beauty of Miss Romero's voice, and advised her to take up the study of voice seriously. At this point, the usual search for a good teacher was made. The girl was unfortunate, so it is said, in the selection of teachers. She was finally directed by a well known New York manager to Delia M. Valeri, who was recommended as a teacher who would adjust and develop her voice and make up for the time lost. Within a little less than a year, Mme. Valeri developed Miss Romero's voice into a rich, full and resonant contralto, evenly balanced, whose melodious and deep low register and high B flat and natural, enable her to indulge in the most effective contrasts. Mme. Valeri taught her also how to breathe correctly and how to sing in a broad legato style.

The large audience that assembled at the Neponsit Club, Neponsit, L. I., and the musical people who gathered recently at Mme. Valeri's studio in New York to hear her pupil in several operatic excerpts, were particularly impressed by her presentation of Amneris in "Aida" and her rendition of "Mon fils" from Meyerbeer's "Prophet," and the impression was general that Miss Romero is bound to become an artist of whom any first class operatic organization would be justly proud.

Alice SOVEREIGN
Management:
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, N. Y.

JACQUES KASNER VIOLINIST
120 East 85th Street :: :: New York
Phone 2768 Lenox

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
150 West 104th Street, New York
Phone 3832 Riverside
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
TENOR
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Season 1914-1915
SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway
New York City

School of Music and Arts Concert.

The pupils of the New York School of Music and Arts, Ralfe Leech Sterner, director, gave a concert, Thursday evening, October 8, at the school, 56-58 West Ninety-seventh street, New York. The program was divided into three parts, the first and third being given over to vocal and violin excerpts from grand opera, the second to miscellaneous songs and piano pieces.

Several of the young performers acquitted themselves creditably, noticeably Marguerite Cleghorn, a young lady of attractive personality. She sang the Massenet "Elegic" and "Where Blossoms Grow," by Gertrude Sans Souci, displaying a soprano voice of good range and very agreeable quality, which she handles with taste and skill. She also showed dramatic fire in her part of the duet, "Ah! lo vedi," from "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Rocco Carcione sang an aria from "Lucrezia Borgia" with spirit, giving, as an encore, "La Donna é Mobile."

In the aria, "Thou Lovely Bird," from "La Perle du Bresil," Ramee Rivas revealed a pretty and flexible voice. The Liszt polonaise, No. 2, was played by Eleanor Lois Fields with authority and a technic which was, on the whole, very well controlled.

An interesting contribution to the program was the playing of Liszt's second rhapsody by Harold A. Fix, of the faculty.

Other numbers were the duet from "Aida," sung by Ramee Rivas and Frederick Maroc; "Caro Nome," from "Rigoletto," by Rae Henriques Coelho; "Celeste Aida," by Frederick Maroc; a tenor aria, from "Tosca," by Andrew Martin; "Trovatore," fantasie for violin, by Louis Ferraro, and songs by Raymond Walsh, Marguerite Zacharias, Florence Layton Bruschi, Emma Mae Hamilton, Jenness Jones, Blanche Kelley and Charlotte Segler. The audience, which filled the rooms, applauded with great enthusiasm.

Helen Wolverton was at the piano.

Friday evening, October 16, this institution will give an "artist-pupil concert" at Y. M. C. A. Hall, Plainfield, N. J. Concerts given at the Wanamaker Auditorium last season were very successful and well attended.

Frances Ingram in Arabia.

The accompanying picture of Frances Ingram, contralto, and Smeaton White, president of the Montreal Gazette, was snapped on board the steamship Empress of Russia while touring the world. This was taken off Aden, Arabia, said to be the hottest spot on the globe. But the sunsets and evenings fully recompense for the heat of the day, as they are of unrivaled splendor and the nights are such as one reads about in Eastern romance, the sky and stars resembling a field of sapphire studded with countless diamonds.

FRANCES INGRAM AND SMEATON WHITE, PUBLISHER OF THE MONTREAL GAZETTE, ON BOARD THE S.S. EMPRESS OF RUSSIA IN THE INDIAN OCEAN.

Bauer Recital.

Harold Bauer will give a recital in Aeolian Hall, Saturday afternoon, November 7. The pianist's program is to include compositions of Bach, Beethoven (two sonatas) and Brahms.

Francis Rogers Recital.

Francis Rogers, the New York baritone, will give a song recital in the Little Theatre, Thursday afternoon, November 12.

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

BLANCHE GOODE PIANIST
AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS
Address: JOSEPH JOINER, 439 Fifth Avenue, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
115 E. 53rd St., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York

MADAME MOLIÈRE
Grand Opera Prima Donna
Vocal Culture. Special attention to voice placing. Voices tried free during October. Address, 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N. Y. Phone, 3900 New Rochelle, N. Y. Studio also in N. Y.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
STUDIO: 327 CENTRAL PARK WEST
Phone, Riverside 3170

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,

51 West 76th St., New York.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN. 1451 Broadway, New York

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN 1451 Broadway, New York

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, New York

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Manegement; The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St., New York City Phone, Madison Square 3789

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL:
64 East 34th St.
NEW YORK CITY.

SLEZAK
The Great Dramatic Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston, Mass.

It is seldom that we meet with new piano music which gives us such unalloyed pleasure as the reading of Wilmot Lemont's "Dream Pictures" has given us. In this little album of nine short pieces are to be found a great variety of sentiments, grace, melodic charm, elevation of style and a spontaneous vitality which promise well for the long life of the collection.

Oliver Ditson Company is fortunate in having the publishing rights of these poetic little pieces. We see no reason whatever why they should not be destined to become the most successful suite since "Water Scenes."

The names of these compositions are: "Lotus Bloom," "The Dancers," "At Eventide," "Rêverie d'Amour," "Sérénade Mexicaine," "The Nautch Girl," "To My Valentine," "The Caress," "Valse Intermezzo."

Technically, they are all within the powers of any good amateur pianist. In style they suggest a little Schumann modernized by French influences; but there is no plagiarism.

White-Smith Music Publishing Company, Boston.

Three songs of the desert—"SUNSET IN THE DESERT," "NIGHT IN THE DESERT," "DAWN IN THE DESERT." Words by Faith Boehncke, music by Gertrude Ross.

These songs have atmosphere; of that there is no question. As soon as the introductory measures for the piano are played the listener feels that the instrumental frame for the vocal picture is correct. And the composer accomplishes her ends without making her accompaniments difficult. The music is a kind of melodic recitative, which, however, is appropriate to the uneven lengths of the poet's unrhymed lines. Both words and music agree in sentiment, and the musical treatment of the verses is always judicious, pleasing, effective and thoroughly vocal. Each song is complete in itself; but together they make a homogeneous short cycle. We learn from the title page that these songs are sung by Mme. Schumann-Heink and Mme. Gerville-Reache. The composer will soon know, therefore, if her songs are what the public wants; for with two such artists to sing them these three songs have the best possible publicity.

"GNOMENREIGEN," dance of gnomes, for the piano. Composed by Ernest Harry Adams.

This somewhat academic, though interesting and musical work, is like a classical toccata in style and spirit. It makes an excellent study for a good pianist, and yet it is not difficult enough to prevent it from being used as a teaching piece for advanced students.

Arthur P. Schmidt, Boston.

"ELDORADO," a song with piano accompaniment. Words by Edgar Allan Poe, music by Bruno Huhn.

It is not surprising that there should be so many settings of Poe's romantic lyric, for the words are in every sense suitable for music. But there are very few musical settings which are so grateful to the singer and satisfactory to the hearer as this bold, manly and genial music of Bruno Huhn. It is a broad and compelling concert song with a fine climax. It is issued in three keys for high, medium and low voices.

"A SONG OF PROMISE." Words by P. J. O'Reilly, music by Bruno Huhn.

This smoothly written and graceful song has more in it than its calm surface might at first indicate. It is a still water that runs deep. The comforting moral sentiments of the poem are happily expressed in the music, which is organlike in manner.

Octavo edition of three and four part songs for women's voices: "Eastern Song," "The Voice of My Beloved,"

STEINWAY

MASTER musicians, past and present, have achieved their greatest successes upon Steinway Pianos.

The Steinway of half a century ago was the preferred instrument of the "maestro," because of its mechanical perfection and its melodious sweetness, sonority and power of tone.

The Steinway of today is an even greater musical marvel—and every Steinway Piano is a Steinway in all the attributes implied by that name.

The name of the Steinway dealer nearest you, together with illustrated literature, will be sent upon request.

STEINWAY & SONS
STEINWAY HALL
107-109 East 14th Street, New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

HELEN
WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

PAUL
DRAPER
LIEDER SINGER
TEACHER OF VOICE
Personal address: 18 West 8th Street
For concerts, recitals, etc., address:
LOUDON CHARLTON,
Carnegie Hall New York

The Sensation of the Year
CARL
FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
COLORATURA SOPRANO, Grand Opera Prima Donna
Now in America Season 1914-15 Booking
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
New York Recital, Aeolian Hall, Afternoon, Nov. 6
Brooklyn Recital, Brooklyn Institute, Evening, Nov. 4
Washington, D.C., Recital, Columbia Theater, Nov. 13
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

by Mabel W. Daniels; "Looks and Eyes," by Roeckel-Lynes; "Goodbye, Summer," by Frank Lynes; "Dance of the Dragon Flies," by Reinecke-Lynes; "Maypole Song," "Will-o'-the-Wisp," "The Old Apple Tree in Bloom," by P. Gretscher; "Where the Lilacs Grow," "The Waves," by R. Wickenhauser; "Dawn Waltz," by Oscar Straus; "Forever and a Day," by J. W. Bischoff; "Tomorrow," by Arthur Foote; "The Cares of Yesterday," "The Rain Cloud," by H. Waldo Warner; "An Irish Love Song," "An Irish Mother's Lullaby," by Margaret R. Lang; "Enchantment Waltz," by Charles P. Scott; "Yesterday and You," by Paul Ambrose; "Song of the Spinning Wheel," "A Masquerade," "Behold the Spring," by Florence N. Barbour; "The Stars," by Bernard Johnson; "Intry-Mintry," by W. Franke-Harling; "Another Day Is Winging," by G. Marschall-Loepke; "The Radiant Morn of Spring," by Cliffe Forrester; "The Summer Wind," by J. W. Bischoff; "Glad and Sad Make Rhyme, My Dear," by Frank Lynes; "Sing Forth Thanksgiving Praises," by F. W. Peace; "The Clang of the Forge," by Rodney-Lynes; "Song of the Scythes," by Sydney H. Nicholson; "Clear and Cool," by John Pointer; "May Day," by G. Marschael-Lynes; "When the Daylight Goes," "A Song of Spring," by W. H. Neidlinger.

Select compositions for the organ: "Meditation in San Marco," by F. N. Barbour; "Pastorale in C," by Hugh Blair; "Intermezzo in E Flat," by Jean Bohannan; "Reverie," by Romaine Callender; "March in B Flat," by G. W. Chadwick; "Melody Pastorale," by Clifford Demarest; "Extase," by Henri Deshayes; "Andantino in A Flat," by E. A. Dicks; "Adoratio et Vox Angelica," "Hosannah," by Th. Dubois; "Twelve Church Pieces," by Henry M. Dunham; "Communion in E Minor," "Finale in E Flat," "Reverie in A," by William Faulkes; "Festival March," "Pastorale," "Meditation," "Pater Noster," "Offertory," "Intermezzo," "Prelude," "Nocturne," by Arthur Foote; "Lamentation in G," by C. J. Grey; "Finale in G," by B. J. Hancock; "Allegretto Grazioso in B Minor," by F. Holloway; "Offertory in G," "Invocation," "Canzonetta in D," by Frank Lynes; "Pastorale," by John W. Metcalf; "Meditation," by Johannes Pache; "Grand Chorus in D," "Andantino in A Flat," by A. Renaud; "Gothic March," "Offertory in E flat," by Th. Salomé; "Carnival Overture," "At Twilight," by S. Gatty Sellars; "Grand Chorus in D," by W. R. Spence; "March in F," by Bruce Steane; two books of short compositions for the church service, by Bruce Steane; "Volkslied," "Melody in C," "Allegro Militaire," by W. Wolstenholme.

Nordheimer Music Company, Toronto.

"Love's Tribute," song, with words by Myrtle Corcoran-Watts and music by W. O. Forsyth.

In this song the composer has employed a very rich and modern harmony and an elaborate piano accompaniment to support a straightforward and vocal melody. The result is satisfactory alike to singer and to pianist. It is primarily a recital song, as its difficulties put it beyond the range of the average amateur. But when this art song is properly interpreted by a singer and an accompanist who can do justice to the composer's finely felt work, it cannot fail to impress a cultured audience.

Clayton F. Summy Company, Chicago.

Four piano compositions—"Novelette," "Capriccio," "Etude," "La Coquette." By Carl Beutel.

These are all good examples of the best kind of salon music—graceful, moderately difficult, effective, pleasing and of no great emotional depth. They are also of considerable value as teaching pieces for advanced students of the piano.

Carl Fischer, New York.

"Browning Song Cycle," from letters of Robert Browning to Elizabeth Barrett. Compiled by Jessie Andrews and set to music by Louis Victor Saar.

There are five of these songs—"Thou Shalt Know Me," "Some Happy Day," "Thou Wilt Know," "The Rose Tree," "This Little Flower."

These impassioned letters of a great poet to a great poetess lend themselves admirably to musical setting. The composer certainly had a genial task in working on such inspiring lyrics. He has happily succeeded in catching a good deal of the infectious worth of the verses and in expressing it through the voice and piano for which his music is written. This cycle of song belongs on the recital program, but it will be welcomed in many homes.

The Likelier Case.

DeWolf Hopper was condemning the recent plague of white slave plays.

"I met," he said, "a white slave playwright the other day. He bragged about a white slave melodrama that he had just finished.

"'It goes on,' he said, 'next week. It will make a hit, or I'm a lobster. Believe me, the audience will call for the author after each act.'

"'Call for the author?' I snorted, disgustedly. 'Call for the authorities, you mean.'"—Washington Star.

Hermann WEIL
Great Wagnerian Baritone
Metropolitan Opera House, New York
Hans Sachs—Amfortas—Wotan
Roles in Bayreuth Festivals
For Concert Dates Address Exclusively
ANNIE FRIEDBERG
Metropolitan Opera House Building, - - New York

GEORGE
DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano

First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah
Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

ELEANOR SPENCER
PIANIST

Returns to America Season 1914-15
Management, Antonia Sawyer
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARITONE

Concert, Oratorio, Recitals, Etc.

BERNHARD STEINBERG
A real ovation was tendered Bernhard Steinberg, the applause frequently breaking in on the music, or during a rest. Mr. Steinberg has such superior merit, such grace in his singing, that the audience was friendly to him from the first. His voice is sympathetic, of much warmth, and he handles it with the best of schooling.—Staats-Zeitung.
Lecture Recital on HEBREW TRADITIONAL MUSIC
For terms and dates address
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Florence Macbeth
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera
DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBER

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
CARL HEIN Directors AUGUST FRAEMCKE
The college has for its object the universal higher education in all branches of music—Department for those who desire to teach music—Course for Supervisors of Music in Public Schools—Opportunities and training for public appearance—40 Instructors of highest reputation—Newly engaged, Rubin Goldmark, Composition; Michel Sciapiro, violin.
CATALOG ON APPLICATION

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

BRILLIANT SYMPHONY SEASON FOR CINCINNATI.

Numerous Novelties to Be Performed.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 16, 1914.

With every prospect of an artistically brilliant and financially successful year, the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra Association is about to launch its nineteenth season. Several innovations will add to the interest which always attend the symphony concerts. In the first place the number of pairs of concerts has been increased from twelve to sixteen; this will enable Dr. Kunwald to make room for a number of novelties, particularly compositions by American composers. In the past such novelties have been limited, as conductors invariably feel that certain standard classics must take precedence over newer compositions. Now that the number of concerts have been increased, there will be ample opportunity for the performances of such modern works as are exciting favorable criticism on both sides of the Atlantic.

At a meeting of the symphony board Thursday this program was agreed on for the opening concert, which is barely two weeks away:

Eroica Symphony, No. 3, in E flat.....Beethoven
Vorspiel and Liebestod, from Tristan and Isolde.....Wagner
Waldweben, from Siegfried.....Wagner
Vorspiel, from Meistersinger.....Wagner

As is the custom, there will be no soloist for the opening concert; Carl Friedberg, pianist, who is making his first American tour, will be the soloist at the second pair of concerts. The auction sale for choice of seats and boxes will be held in Assembly Hall, Sinton Hotel, on the mornings of October 20 and 21. The evening of chamber music announced by the Conservatory of Music for October 22 will be given as scheduled, but owing to the illness of Theodore Bohlmann, the pianist, the two new works announced, Korngold's sonata for piano and violin, and a quintet of Ludwig Thuille's, will not be heard. Wilhelm Kraupner, pianist, a member of the conservatory faculty, will take Mr. Bohlmann's place, and with Bernard Sturm, violinist, and Julius Sturm, cellist, will give the program for the first conservatory faculty concert.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

Hambourg Activity in Toronto.

Jan and Boris Hambourg are preparing for a very busy winter in Toronto. The Hambourg Concert Society was founded by them in Toronto for the purpose of giving annually a series of chamber music concerts. Each concert is preceded by a public rehearsal, which takes place on the day before. This is an innovation to Toronto and has proved very successful. Their Buffalo and Rochester series of chamber music concerts commence shortly, both of which are important musical and social events. In addition to this the Messrs. Hambourg have a great number of dates booked in Ontario and Quebec before Christmas. Shortly after the New Year, Boris Hambourg expects to take his own company for an extended concert tour through the Canadian West.

The Hambourg Conservatory has opened up brilliantly, and already numbers several hundred pupils. Professor Hambourg is particularly pleased with his piano class this season and he has several talented pupils studying with him at present who promise to make a name in the musical world. It may be of interest to know that most of these are either of Canadian or American birth.

Loudon Charlton Announcements.

The members of the Flonzaley Quartet have cabled Loudon Charlton that they have sailed on the steamship Carpathia, due in New York October 26.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, and his wife, Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, the contralto, are passengers on the same ship.

Edmund Burke, the Irish baritone, who last year was heard with Mme. Melba, arrived in Montreal last Thursday.

Other artists under the Charlton management who have sent word that they surely will be here, are Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist, due early in December, and Josef Lhevinne, the Russian pianist, who will arrive early in January.

Century "Opera Talks."

Havrah Hubbard, assisted by Floyd M. Baxter at the piano, gave the third in his series of "Opera Talks" at the Century Opera House, New York, on Sunday afternoon, October 18. The subject was "The Jewels of the Madonna," and Mr. Hubbard's dramatic recital of the opera and his pointed and interesting remarks concerning the composer and his works were enthusiastically received by the large audience which filled the Century Lyceum, where the lecture was given.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY OF NEW YORK

Founded 1842
1914—Seventy-third Season—1915

JOSEF STRANSKY, Conductor

Subscription Series

Twelve Thursday Evening, Sixteen Friday Afternoon, Twelve Sunday Afternoon and Four Saturday Evening Concerts at Carnegie Hall, New York; Two Concerts for Young People at Aeolian Hall; Five Sunday Afternoon Concerts in the Brooklyn Academy of Music; and series in Baltimore and Washington.

TOURS
New England New York State
Middle West

SOLOISTS

LUCREZIA BORI, Soprano
ALMA GLUCK, Soprano
LUCILLE WEINGARTNER-MARCEL, Soprano
JULIA CULP, Soprano
JOHANNA GADSKI, Soprano
ELENA GERHARDT, Soprano
PASQUALE AMATO, Baritone

FRITZ KREISLER, Violinist
EFREM ZIMBALIST, Violinist
ARRIGO SERATO, Violinist
JACQUES THIBAUD, Violinist
LEOPOLD KRAMER, Violinist

LEO SCHULZ, Violoncellist
F. DeANGELIS, Oboe

FERRUCCIO BUSONI, Pianist
OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH, Pianist
CARL FRIEDBERG, Pianist
ELEANOR SPENCER, Pianist
GERMAINE SCHNITZER, Pianist

KITTY CHEATHAM will be the soloist at the Two Concerts for Young People.

Prospectus containing detailed information may be had on application to:

FELIX F. LEIFELS, Manager
Carnegie Hall New York

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

WILFRIED KLAMROTH TEACHER of SINGING

NEW STUDIO: 124 EAST 39th STREET

Tel. 4421 Murray Hill

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Engaged for Maine Festivals, with Boston Symphony Orchestra; Aeolian Hall Recital, December 3; Norwich Monday Musical Club, etc.

Address THOMAS McGRATH, 133 East 34th St., N. Y. Phone, Murray Hill, 2239.

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street

Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER

SOPRANO

Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY

Soprano

Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales

IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY

Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

DRAMATIC MEZZO SOPRANO

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals, also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

3671 Broadway - - New York City

WITHERSPOON

BASS Metropolitan Opera

Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct. 1st. to Jan. 15th

Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau

1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER

Distinguished Russian Pianist

FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

Mme. KATE ROLLA

Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.

PUPIL OF MARCHESI

Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.

JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE

Studio, 251 West 81st Street, N. Y. Phone, Schuyler, 3960

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake. N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.

Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

Regina de Sales Opens New York Studio.

Regina de Sales, one of America's eminent vocal teachers, who has resided in Paris for some years, has been obliged to give up her Paris home, in the Rue de Villejust, on account of the disturbed conditions. Naturally, all of her American pupils also have had to leave Paris, and they have joined her in New York. Mme. de Sales has opened a studio in Room 1013 Carnegie Hall, and receives there on Thursday mornings. Her personal address is 124 West Eighty-second street, and she will receive there from 3 to 4 o'clock on Tuesdays.

Since Mme. de Sales' arrival in New York was announced in the MUSICAL COURIER a few weeks ago, she has received nearly a hundred letters from friends and pupils all over the country, welcoming her back to her native shores, and she has been overrun with demands for lessons.

It is not at all surprising that Mme. de Sales should have such a large following, for she has taught an almost unbelievable number of the prominent people on the stage today. A list of these pupils was given in the MUSICAL COURIER some time ago, which showed, among other things, that Mme. de Sales had pupils on most of the prominent stages of Germany, England, France and America, besides, of course, a large number who were professionally engaged in teaching or in concert work, and many who had not entered the profession at all.

Sokoloff-Smith Recital at Westport.

Nikolai Sokoloff, assisted by Alice Esther Smith, soprano, gave a superb recital at Westport, Conn., Friday evening, October 9. Miss Smith, who is an artist-pupil of Lillian Sherwood Newkirk, sang brilliantly, her lovely tone coloring being especially praised. Mr. Sokoloff's playing upon this occasion was especially commendable for the musical intensity of his interpretation and the great breadth and beauty of his tone. His technic is fine and possesses the quality of rare clarity and incisive sharpness. He lends also to his playing a wealth of passion which called forth great enthusiasm from the audience. Mr. Sokoloff has just opened his tour of this country.

LILLIAN SHERWOOD-NEWKIRK AND HER PUPIL, FREDA WILLIAMS, MOTORING IN THE WHITE MOUNTAINS.

Mme. Newkirk has a large class this season, many going to her home city (which is but one hour from New York) to study there. The accompanying picture shows Mme. Newkirk touring in the White Mountains with Freda Williams, one of her pupils, who has a splendid soprano voice. Miss Williams comes from Indianapolis and is living with her teacher at Norwalk. Mme. Newkirk has also a studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York.

William H. Pagdin at Worcester.

William H. Pagdin, tenor, who recently appeared as soloist at the Worcester (Mass.) Festival, as already stated in these columns, won many friends and admirers by the excellent quality of his voice and his thoughtful interpretations. That Mr. Pagdin is an artist whose singing is greatly enjoyed is proven by the number of reengagements he fills.

Here is what some of the Worcester papers said of his work there recently.

Excellent work was done by Mr. Pagdin . . . conscientious . . . a voice of great suavity . . . sang so easily and with such ready force of tone, that he was accepted at once.—Worcester Telegram.

Mr. Pagdin has a tenor voice of fine range and a resonant, vibrant quality which made every tone a delight. There was no demand upon Mr. Pagdin's voice or understanding which was not met in a satisfactory manner.—Worcester Gazette.

Knick: Are they a musical family?

Knack: Yes. The father blows his own horn, his wife harps on the same old string, the daughter is always singing her own praises, the young boy plays hookey, and the eldest son is (usually) on a toot.—The Orchestrion.

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction

Returning to New York in October

Address: Care of Musical Courier

FRANKLIN RIKER

In America Season 1914-15

Personal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York

Phone, 3964 Riverside Studio: 603-4 Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER

SOPRANO

223 Mathilda St., Apt. 5 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Florence Hinkle

....SOPRANO....

Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN

Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin

Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT

DRAMATIC SOPRANO

Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing

817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON

AMERICAN PIANIST

Management: Robert P. Strine, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

EMIL J. POLAK

ACCOMPANIST AND COACH

Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL

Coloratura Soprano

Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER

THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST

In America Season 1914-1915

Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City

BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto

STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York

SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Frederieks, Andrew Mack, Nell Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fisk O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

Season 1914-15

LOUIS SIEGEL

Violin Virtuoso

FIRST AMERICAN TOUR

Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15

GRACE POTTER

PIANIST

MARIE HERTENSTEIN

PIANIST

FRANCIS MACMILLEN

VIOLINIST

Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger

TEACHER OF SINGING

From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are

Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conkli, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rain, basso.

TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK

Resume Teaching October 1st.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
NOW IN AMERICA
CONCERT ORATORIO
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Cincinnati College of Music News.

The success of the Cincinnati College of Music series of subscription concerts, inaugurated several years ago, was especially marked last season, and all the concerts were so well attended that there will be fourteen of these events this season, instead of twelve, as in the past.

In the subscription series the virtuoso element of the college faculty will again be brought into prominence. In this year's series there will be three chamber concerts by the college string quartet, assisted by Miss Westfield, Romeo Gorno and Louis Victor Saar, pianists. Johannes Miersch and Emil Heermann, violinists, will each give two evenings of sonatas and chamber music, assisted by pianists. Two evening piano recitals will be given by Frederick J. Hoffmann and Walter Gilewicz, and an organ recital by Lillian Arkell Rixford. There will be an operatic aria recital by Giocinto Gorno, assisted by Romeo Gorno, and a song recital by Hans Schroeder. One faculty concert with complete orchestra will have for the soloists Mr. Hoffmann and Mr. Gilewicz, pianists; Mr. Schroeder, baritone, and Mr. Miersch, violinist. The faculty concert and the performance of grand opera will be given under the direction of Albino Gorno.

The college concerts will be held on Tuesday evenings as usual, and since this day has been reserved by the institution for its evening events for a number of years, interference with other musical affairs is not anticipated and should not occur. All of the subscription concerts last season were well attended and with the continued increase in the school's enrollment the interest is expected to be even more keen than ever before.

The first of these concerts will be held in the Odeon October 20.

Mme. Koelling's New Residence.

Helene Koelling, the German soprano, recently purchased a permanent residence in New York, at 65 West Eighty-ninth street. Mme. Koelling is devoting most of her time this season to recital, concert and oratorio work. In Europe she achieved great success, being characterized as a singer with a perfect technic, a pure and faultless intonation, remarkable dramatic ability, as well as an interpreter who renders her music true to the text.

Primarily a coloratura, Mme. Koelling nevertheless concerns herself with the study of music of a more worthy nature, such as German lieder. As an interpreter and singer of Mozart she has been declared to be one of the best in this country. Mme. Koelling sings high F sharp with perfect clarity and ease. As high tones are apparently valued by the public above other musical considerations, Mme. Koelling has, on more than one occasion, demonstrated her ability to enthuse her audience through the flexibility and extreme range of her voice.

HELENE KOELLING.

New York Institute Resumes Work.

Ferdinand and Hermann Carré, directors of the New York Institute for violin playing, piano and vocal culture, located at 230 East Sixty-second street, New York, have resumed their pedagogic duties with their usual large number of violin, piano and vocal students. A number of recitals at the institute, as well as at Aeolian Hall, will take place again during the season, in which the advanced students will take part.

The Greatest Economy in the selection of a piano is to buy the best, and dollar for dollar, there is no instrument in the world that can match the

Knabe
Piano

Length of service, richness of tone, quality of material and workmanship all combine to make these exquisite pianos the most economical offerings today.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

combine all the beauties of Knabe tone with the highest possible efficiency of expression control—in every sense THE WORLD'S BEST.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND THE ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Pegujar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1914.

No. 1804

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—Victor Winton, 11 Boylston Road, Fenway. Suite 31.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dobbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeh, Box 79.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 312 Menzies St.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Elsenstuckstrasse 16.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, care of G. Schirmer, 18 Berners St., London W. In charge.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tidehöhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Music remains Berlin's ruling passion. A new orchestra has just been started there.

Famous symphonic battle music is Beethoven's "Vittoria," Liszt's "Hunnenschlacht," Tschaikowsky's "1812" and Strauss' "Heldenleben."

October 20 marked the departure from Naples for this country of Messrs. Busoni, Caruso, Gatti-Casazza, Arrigo Serato, Toscanini, and many other musical personages.

Dr. Anselm Goetzl has been appointed conductor of the Dippel Opera Comique Company, which will open its season at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, October 28, with "The Lilac Domino."

A graceful and benign act is that of the Norwegian Government, which has bestowed an income of 1,400 kroner on Christian Sinding "as compensation for the loss he is likely to sustain from diminished performances of his works in Germany, owing to the war."

Now the American musical season is on in deadly earnest. The Philadelphia, Boston, and Chicago Orchestras gave their initial concerts last Friday and Saturday. In all three cities the audiences were large and gave every indication of joy at the resumption of symphonic delights.

A letter from the management of the famous Leipsic Gewandhaus concerts (Arthur Nikisch, conductor) informs the MUSICAL COURIER that the programs of the organization "will this winter try as much as possible to be in accord with the deep seriousness of the period through which we are passing."

Reports of the death of Vanni Marcoux in battle should be received with caution by the musical world. The MUSICAL COURIER has been in communication with its European news centers regarding the Marcoux rumor and learns that no confirmation of the death of the popular baritone has been received either in London or in Paris.

Carl Bernthaler, after successfully wielding the baton as conductor of the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra for six summer seasons, has resigned that position to acept the leadership of the Bernthaler Festival Orchestra, which now is being organized in Pittsburgh. It is announced that Mr. Bernthaler will tour with his new festival orchestra for several weeks during the season.

It is interesting to note that several of the symphony orchestras in America now are printing their programs for the entire season in advance. Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, was the first leader, so far as we know, to inaugurate this system which has obvious artistic and practical advantages, and he has been doing it for the past five years, first in Cincinnati and then in Philadelphia.

Much is being done by Gustav L. Becker, chairman of the board of examiners of the New York State Music Teachers' Association, to bring about the general adoption of the "Essential Standard" requirements in music teaching, and with voice, pen and example he preaches unabatedly the gospel he believes in so thoroughly. His main contention is that music teachers should be equipped with credentials, certificates, or diplomas received from sources authorized to grant them and proving the ability of the holder to carry out what he engages to do when he contracts to instruct a pupil properly. It sounds simple and Mr. Becker says that it is simple, to put the scheme into practical operation. Up to the present moment, the only obstacle in most cases has been the established teacher himself. He would like the newcomers to pass rigid examinations, but he objects to the system being made retroactive. Mr. Becker and his associates are endeavoring gently but firmly to change such a viewpoint.

American orchestral projectors will be interested to learn that the London Philharmonic Society ended its past season with a balance on the right side of the ledger, so that the guarantors were not called upon to make good any part of their promises. This should show the backers of American orchestras that with patience and perseverance a symphony orchestra can be made a profitable enterprise. The London Philharmonic, by the way, will continue its concerts this season.

A correspondent writes to thank the MUSICAL COURIER for its editorial last week on the Century Opera situation, and says: "I quite agree with you that the enterprise is entitled to a subvention. I have attended many of the performances and found them to be musical and not only 'educational,' but also extremely enjoyable. Perhaps Chicago will appreciate the Century Company more than New York seems to and thus again establish its artistic superiority to the so called 'metropolis' and its pretensions."

Tina Lerner, the Russian pianist, who has not been heard in this country for two seasons, will open her tour with a recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Tuesday afternoon, November 3. At this Election Day matinee Miss Lerner is to play works of Padre Martini, Sgambati, Beethoven-Busoni, Liszt, Chopin, Rachmaninoff, Tscherapnine and Balakireff. Since her last visit to America Miss Lerner has been heard in Russia, Germany, England, France, Belgium, Norway, Sweden and Italy.

Johanna Gadski will give a song recital in Aeolian Hall, Wednesday afternoon, November 11, following the windup of her successful fall concert tour through this country. Mme. Gadski is to be one of the busiest stars at the Metropolitan this season and her admirers are delighted that the Wagnerian repertoire is to be kept intact, for it represents a department of opera in which she has won her greatest renown. Also as a lieder singer Mme. Gadski ranks with the few famous exponents of that rare art.

Something practical in the way of production of new works by American composers is being undertaken by Winthrop Ames, artistic director of the Little Theatre, who has decided to make up his entr'acte programs of pieces by Americans. Rudolph Schirmer, the publisher, announces that he will be glad to consider the works which are selected. They must be arranged for the quartet of violin, cello, piano and organ led by Elliot Schenck at the Little Theatre. All manuscripts should be sent to him there not later than November 15, 1914.

Officially (that is, by means of a printed prospectus) the Metropolitan Opera House announces the beginning of its 1914-1915 twenty-three weeks' season, from November 16 to April 25, 1915. Novelties promised are Giordano's "Madame Sans Gêne" and Borodine's "Prince Igor." There will be several revivals, including "Carmen," "Euryanthe," "Fidelio," etc., and the usual Wagner repertoire is to be heard. The company and the corps of conductors is to be substantially the same as last season. The newcomers among the singers are the sopranos Melanie Kurt, Mabel Garrison and Elisabeth Schumann; the contralto Raymonde Delaunnois; the tenors Max Bloch, Luca Botta, and Johannes Sembach; the baritones Silvio Burkenroad and Riccardo Tegani; the bassos Albert Pellaton and Arthur Middleton.

ORCHESTRAL SEASON OPENS.

From its correspondents in Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston the MUSICAL COURIER is in receipt of the following special reports concerning the opening concerts of the symphony orchestras in those cities last week:

Philadelphia Hears Symphony.

Philadelphia, October 16, 17, 1914.

Leopold Stokowski has begun his third season with the Philadelphia Orchestra greatly to the delight of the musicians and the musical public of this city.

When we heard of European tourists' efforts to escape from the war zone, many times the question was asked: "And how about Stokowski?" "Has Stokowski come?" He came, and all but four of the twenty Philadelphia Orchestra men who were in Europe came too, some at personal sacrifice, to report for duty. As a consequence we are assured performances as complete and well balanced as those of former seasons under the same leadership.

The first program is placed conservatively between the unhackneyed and the overplayed, with the "Freischütz" overture, Brahms' second symphony, the Sibelius "Swan of Tuonela," and the "Capriccio Espagnol" of Rimsky-Korsakow. As for the interpretation and the playing, Stokowski and his men gave us of their best and performed with tact, taste, musicianship and finish. Stokowski never overimpresses his own individuality upon the composer, and therein he reveals one of the elements of true greatness as a baton artist.

Some time during the season, perhaps several times, I shall have to say that a number was played as perfectly as possible. But not yet. It would be neither truthful nor complimentary to assert that the orchestra enters upon a season with the unity and polish with which the conductor leaves it. At any rate, this week's program was delivered with enthusiasm, and a fine spirit of ensemble, the latter helped perhaps by the speech made by Stokowski at the first rehearsal, when he expressed the hope that music has charms to neutralize. The orchestra represents every European nation in arms, barring Montenegro possibly, and its success depends upon meeting on equal terms in the territory of art. His speech was applauded and his wishes are being respected.

And see how evenly the afternoon was divided between the Germans and the Allies. O, diplomatic Program! T. MORRIS LONGSTRETH.

Chicago Symphony Start.

Chicago, October 16, 17, 1914.

Our symphonic season was opened by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, October 16 and 17. The patrons were as numerous as of yore, both concerts bringing practically capacity audiences. On Friday afternoon every seat was subscribed for and standing room being forbidden in this State, the hall was filled to its spacious limits. The fashionable element was at hand, and the music lovers in large numbers showed their appreciation by bestowing prolonged applause upon Frederick Stock and his men.

Stock has done much for Chicago, and Chicago has rewarded his efforts handsomely, and demonstrated again on this occasion in no small way its full appreciation for the leader of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

This year the personnel of the orchestra has been changed somewhat. Hugo Kortschak (last year at the first desk as second concertmaster) no longer is with the orchestra, and his place is being filled by Alexander Zukowsky, who two years ago was acting in the same capacity of second concertmaster. At that time his work was pronounced most satisfactory, and probably it will be even more so during the present season. Two of the former first violins, Messrs. Von der Voort and Albin Steindel, have left. During the last summer engagement of the orchestra at Willow Grove, Mr. Reinen died, and those three vacancies have been filled by Herman Felber, Jr., Joseph Silberstein and Carl Hecker, formerly at a second violin desk. Newcomers in the orchestra are Louis Novak, Harry Rogers and Charles Hellander, who have been placed as second violin players. Bruno Steindel, the principal of the cello department, was conspicuous by his absence, and was replaced by Emmerson Stoeber. Mr. Steindel, however, will be at his desk at the third concert, having sailed from Europe during the week. Another newcomer is J. Houdek, a double bass player, and J. Prezel is playing on the bass tuba instead of F. Otte, who recently passed away.

Those changes are not only related as matters of record, but also to indicate the handicap under which one would suppose the first concert to have been given. The result, however, was satisfactory, and under Stock's baton his veteran players, as well as his new recruits, obeyed the indications of their leader with precision and gave of their best. The selections included the "Euryanthe" overture by Weber, the C minor symphony by Beethoven (which was the backbone of the program and was well played throughout in an enthusiastic reading, full of vim and color), Strauss' "Don Juan," the "Waldweben" from "Siegfried," and the finale from "Götterdämmerung"—the latter perhaps a prophecy in the history of the world during the present war. All the numbers were executed with the finish expected from this organization.

It may be added in this review that the management wisely has inscribed on each ticket sold for the symphony concerts that "the purchaser of this ticket accepts same subject to the rules of the house, including the rule requiring the removal of hats." The rule as to the removal of hats was accepted unanimously by the ladies, and hereafter the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will be better listened to by the gentle sex, which heretofore was somewhat disturbed at times by the last word in head masterpieces from European or domestic famous modistes. Orchestra Hall will no longer be a mode salon, but the loss to the milliner probably will be the gain of the hairdresser.

A witty but unmusical person said that "the acoustics of Orchestra Hall now are better, due to the removal of hats." If this were true, it would give even more joy to the dilettanti, who, nevertheless, are delighted at being able to see the stage, which in years gone by was obstructed by long feathers or other ornaments in the last word in chapeaux. RENE DEVRIES.

Boston Symphony Re-entry.

Boston, October 16, 1914.

The first public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, inaugurating its thirty-fourth season (Dr. Karl Muck conducting) was heard at Symphony Hall, Friday afternoon October 16. Long hours before the doors were opened the gallery audience stood in line awaiting the five hundred chosen seats which no money can buy until the allotted time, which is just previous to the performance, and then the price is but the fourth part of a dollar. Every seat in the large auditorium was occupied, and as Dr. Muck made his appearance on the stage a demonstration of greeting was generally participated in while the audience remained standing. The ovation lasted many minutes and was an appropriate tribute to the popular organization and its conductor. The program was as follows:

Symphony No. 3, Eroica.....Beethoven
Variations on a theme of Haydn.....Brahms
Tone poem, Don Juan.....R. Strauss
Overture to Euryanthe.....Weber

It is far from fitting to recite in detail the performance of any of the numbers on this program, for there are new men in the orchestra and one must wait until further public ensemble has united them harmoniously. Dr. Muck's musicianship and intelligence were in evidence, as of yore.

In the eight variations with a finale on Haydn's "St. Anthony Choral" one wonders what induced Brahms to go into such elaborate tonal painting on such a slight subject. In Strauss' tone poem splendid virtuosity on the part of the orchestra indicated that the new men are fitting artistic companions for the regular members of the body.

The final number, Weber's "Euryanthe" overture, made a spirited climax for the occasion. Applause was plentiful throughout the afternoon.

VICTOR WINTON.

ORCHESTRAL NEUTRALITY.

At the first rehearsal this season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Major Henry L. Higginson, the founder and chief patron of the organization, said to the players: "We meet this time under very different circumstances than we ever have before—we are of many nationalities, including Americans, and we all are on American soil, which is neutral, therefore we must use every effort to avoid all unpleasant words or looks, for our task is to make harmony above all things, harmony even in the most modern music. I expect only harmony in your relations to one another."

In Philadelphia the opening rehearsal of the orchestra brought forth these remarks from Leopold Stokowski, the conductor: "With war on the largest scale the world has yet seen, it is natural that every one's deepest feelings are aroused, especially if his own country or race is fighting. We have men in the orchestra from every nation now fighting, except Servia. Also we have men from two countries not connected with the war, Holland and Italy. Each of you has the right to his own opinion, and for that reason I ask you to respect the right of opinion of others who, in their love for their own country, differ from you. There are men from this orchestra taking active part on both sides of the war, and out of respect for our comrades, whom we all fervently hope some day to welcome back to our ranks, and for the sake of the smooth running of the orchestra, I ask you to avoid all remark and discussion of the war during this whole season. Especially is this necessary when on tour. Although the blood in our veins is different, we are all musicians, we all have the same love for the great masters, whatever their nationality may have been, so let us treat each other with manly respect and courtesy as artists should."

MENDELSSOHN CHOIR PLANS.

As was announced in the MUSICAL COURIER some time ago, the European tour of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir has been postponed indefinitely. At a recent meeting of the executive committee it was decided to release subscribers from all responsibility in connection with their subscriptions to the choir's European tour, and to return to them in full all amounts paid in by them, notwithstanding the outlays already incurred in connection with the proposed trip.

The nature of the Toronto season of the choir (which now is rehearsing) will be governed by existing conditions. It is the intention to devote such surplus funds as may result from the season's concerts to worthy patriotic or charitable purposes.

BUSY NEW YORK.

If there is any doubt on account of the European war as to the musical outlook in this country, the following bookings for concerts and recitals at Aeolian Hall will dispel it. Almost every day between October 23 to December 22 is engaged, and many of them will witness concerts both afternoon and evening. The list as printed below is subject to change and also to augmentation, but even as it stands it shows such activity in one concert hall alone in New York for the first part of the season that there is every reason to look upon the musical prospects in the most optimistic spirit, especially when one remembers also the concerts in Carnegie Hall and the opera season at the Metropolitan and the Century. Teachers and conservatories already are extremely busy, and although a number of pedagogues from abroad are locating in this country, there will be room and work for all, as thousands of American pupils who might have gone abroad this winter now will be obliged to stay at home and to study with the teachers in this country. Attached is the Aeolian Hall schedule, subject to change, as previously remarked:

OCTOBER.

23, Friday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
25, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
26, Monday, evening, song recital, Reinald Werrenrath.
27, Tuesday, evening, violin recital, Maud Powell.
28, Wednesday, afternoon, song recital, Marian Wright Powers.
28, Wednesday, evening, violin recital, Alexander Bloch.
29, Thursday, afternoon, piano recital, Harold Henry.
29, Thursday, evening, song recital, Caroline Hudson Alexander.

NOVEMBER.

1, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
2, Monday, afternoon, song recital, Florence Hinkle.
3, Tuesday, morning, lecture by Jessica Lozier Payne, under the auspices and for the benefit of the New York Diet Kitchen Association.
3, Wednesday, afternoon, piano recital, Tina Lerner.
4, Wednesday, afternoon, piano recital, Blanche Goode.
4, Wednesday, evening, joint recital, Mme. Schnabel-Tollefsen and Horatio Connell.
5, Thursday, evening, song recital, Hamish Mackay, assisted by Fay Foster.
6, Friday, afternoon, song recital, Yvonne de Treville, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne," in costume.
6, Friday, evening, song recital, Percy Hemus.
7, Saturday, afternoon, piano recital, Harold Bauer.
8, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
9, Monday, afternoon, piano recital, Marta Milinowski.
9, Monday, evening, song recital, Marie Morrisey.
10, Tuesday, afternoon, song recital, Andrea de Segurola.
10, Tuesday, evening, Kneisel Quartet.
11, Wednesday, afternoon, song recital, Johanna Gadski.
11, Wednesday, evening, song recital, Arthur Herschmann.
12, Thursday, afternoon, song recital, Clara Jaeger.
13, Friday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
13, Friday, evening, song recital, Augusta Schacht.
14, Saturday, afternoon, piano recital, Vida Llewellyn.
14, Saturday, evening, piano recital, Adele Katz.
15, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
16, Monday, afternoon, piano recital, Ethel Leginska.
17, Tuesday, morning, lecture by Jessice Lozier Payne, under the auspices and for the benefit of the New York Diet Kitchen Association.
17, Tuesday, afternoon, song recital, Paul Draper.
17, Tuesday, evening, Adele Margulies Trio.
18, Wednesday, evening, violoncello recital, Frederick Preston Search.
20, Friday, afternoon, violin recital, Nicolai Sokoloff.
20, Friday, evening, piano recital, Victor Wittgenstein.
21, Saturday, afternoon, violin recital, Willy Burmester.
22, Sunday, afternoon, song recital, Bernice de Pasquale.
23, Monday, afternoon, violin recital, Frank Gittelson.
24, Tuesday, afternoon, violoncello recital, Frederick Preston Search, in special Beethoven sonata program.
28, Saturday, afternoon, piano recital, Ferruccio Busoni.
29, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.

DECEMBER.

1, Tuesday, morning, lecture by Jessica Lozier Payne, under the auspices and for the benefit of the New York Diet Kitchen Association.
1, Tuesday, evening, Music League of America.
2, Wednesday, evening, joint recital, Isabel Hauser and Saslavsky Quartet.
3, Thursday, afternoon, violin recital, Florence Austin.
4, Friday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
4, Friday, evening, song recital, Franklin Riker.
6, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
6, Sunday, evening, violin recital, Maximilian Pilzer.
7, Monday, evening, Flonzaley Quartet.
8, Tuesday, afternoon, piano recital, Henriette Michelson.
8, Tuesday, evening, piano recital, Ruth Deyo.
11, Friday, evening, violoncello recital, Frederick Preston Search, evening of chamber music (compositions of Frederick P. Search.)
12, Saturday, afternoon, piano recital, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler.
13, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
15, Tuesday, morning, lecture by Jessica Lozier Payne, under the auspices and for the benefit of the New York Diet Kitchen Association.
17, Thursday, afternoon, song recital, Julia Culp.
18, Friday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
20, Sunday, afternoon, Symphony Society of New York.
22, Tuesday, evening, Kneisel Quartet.

SPIERING'S SPECIAL COURSE.

An engagement extraordinary is being made public by the New York College of Music, which has secured Theodore Spiering to give a special course of violin instruction at the school, beginning at once. This wise stroke, made possible by Spiering's sudden return from Europe, enables that fine pedagogue to continue his excellent teaching work here and adds appreciably to the prestige of the New York College of Music in giving it a violin department now second to none in any American musical institution.

SHATTUCK PLAYS BOYLE.

An Osgood cable to the MUSICAL COURIER from London announces the markedly favorable reception extended to Arthur Shattuck at Harrogate on the occasion of his performance (its first in England) of George Boyle's piano concerto. There were six recalls and an immediate reengagement, according to the Osgood cable.

SPALDING'S NEW YORK CONCERT.

That sterling and successful American violin artist, Albert Spalding, will give his opening New York concert this season (the first here in two years) at Carnegie Hall, Thursday afternoon, October 29.

OSGOOD SAILING.

H. O. Osgood, Paris representative of the MUSICAL COURIER, will sail for New York on the St. Louis, October 24, for a business trip to this country.

SOLDIERS' LULLABY.

Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er,
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking:
Dream of battlefields no more,
Days of danger, nights of waking.

. . . . . .

No rude sound shall reach thine ear,
Armor's clang, nor war steed champing,
Trump nor pibroch summon here
Mustering clan, or squadron tramping;
Yet the lark's shrill fife may come
At the daybreak from the fallow,
And the bittern sound his drum,
Booming from the sedgy shallow.

—Scott; "The Lady of the Lake."

NORAH DREWETT'S PLEA.

It is with pleasure that the MUSICAL COURIER publishes the attached letter from Norah Drewett, the pianist, a neutral document, whose only motive is one of disinterested charity and helpful endeavor. The missive was written to Louis Blumenberg, president of the Musical Courier Company:

Châlet Jaffé, Chaumont near Neuchâtel,
Switzerland, September 23, 1914.

DEAR MR. BLUMENBERG—I have something to say to your readers and would be very grateful to you for publishing this letter, or part of it, if you consider it worth while. This terrible war is shaking Europe to its foundations, and will be a source of distress to many musicians. Already in those awful lists of killed, wounded and missing I have seen names of fellow artists. There will be many a young German, French, Belgian and Austrian musician killed or wounded, for where service is compulsory they must all run these risks. And although these cases will be terribly sad and will sometimes entail unprovided families, it is not the only tale of woe. For how many will not be thrown out of work, become impoverished, destitute even, through the war? Not only concertizing artists, but that large number of teachers, more or less well known, more or less unknown, who will suffer bitterly from the necessary economies every family must be making. Now there are some fortunate colleagues—those who belong to neutral countries, those who are not called by their countries to serve, and others, who are able to earn money in spite of this European earthquake. Most of these lucky beings are those who are in America just now, those who have either good engagements or those who receive fees from their teaching profession. And although I perfectly realize that the position in your country will suffer from the crisis over here, and although, as I write, I know I am addressing myself to colleagues who very often have heavy taxes of their own to bear, I believe I am justified in making the following appeal: Will not each colleague on receiving a fee put a minimal part of it aside to help those in Europe? Each one of them, virtuosos, teachers, in whatever position they may be, could help, some with only a few cents here and there—others surely with more. And as they do so, they should think of how fine a thing it is when we can help one another—help of this kind is not charity, it is unity. If a little personal discomfort ensues, if a small luxury has to be given up, never mind. A little self-denial is a good thing and goes a long way. We must remember that the wealthy classes in Europe have heavy tasks just now, and are in a difficult position too. They have to help their governments, rightly or wrongly, these awful death spreading armaments have to be bought and paid for, and there are the millions of unemployed, of widows, children and sick, who must be looked after. We artists are often asked to give our services for charity, but we know by experience that not only is this an indirect good, but that more often than one likes to admit, the money goes in very different channels than is intended. Besides I want to remind you that I am appealing to one and all, not only to a handful of celebrities. There are many of my colleagues in America who have received great benefits in Europe, principally in Germany, Austria, France and Belgium. Not only those who have studied there, many of them, as I know, gratuitously through scholarships, etc., or who have even earned money there (think of all the vocal and piano teachers in Berlin alone of American nationality), but those who have received inspiration through the art of Europe. Think of the riches we owe to Germany alone! Think of Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Wagner, to name only these. Remember the hours you spent in Bayreuth, the happy days of study in Munich, Vienna, Brussels, Paris, Berlin, Dresden, Leipsic, or wherever it was. And now if I make a special plea for a special country, do not forget that I am a British subject, proud of it and proud of Tommy Atkins. So that if I am making this plea, it is because I try to be unprejudiced, and perhaps because I am before all else, a musician by nationality. The countries my musical heart goes out to are Germany and Austria, those cradles of music, to whom we owe more than to any others. And if I consider the musicians of these countries those most in need of help, it is because they contain the largest number of musicians and will probably be in the greatest distress. England, with its great riches, its charity organizations, is helping Belgium and to a great extent France, although the later country has immense funds of its own. But Germany and Austria stand alone in this terrible war. They are fighting at tremendous odds. I know nothing of politics and have neither the power or the wish to plead for one or the other nation, from a political standpoint. I do not know, or very much care, who (or what circumstance) has made this war. All I know is that there are masses of suffering, innocent people. I am suffering myself by it, since I have lost innumerable engagements and lessons. But I am fortunate in being with friends in a beautiful country, in being in good health and able to do work for the families of the Belgian and Alsatian refugees who are streaming into Savoy and Switzerland. It is a relief to be able to sew, knit and crochet clothes for the poor little children who arrive barefooted and in rags. On sending away each large parcel to the frontier, I feel a little less selfish for being so well cared for and for having more food than is really necessary, when there are so many people starving a few miles from here!

I would suggest that all funds collected should be sent to the American consul of the town where the heart goes out to most. However, I have written to Berlin to ask where one can send contributions, as I know there is an organization. As soon as I have the answer I will write to the MUSICAL COURIER and communicate it to my colleagues through your widely spread columns. If I were sure that my friend, Mr. Abell, would remain in Berlin, I would suggest all gifts to be sent to him, as I am sure no one better than himself and Mrs. Abell would be able to direct them to the proper channels.

If I do not mention Russia, it is because I am absolutely inexperienced there and can know or suggest nothing in regard to the empire home of Tschaikowsky, Moussorgsky and Rubinstein.

With kindest regards, and apologies for the length of this letter, believe me, dear Mr. Blumenberg,

Sincerely yours,

NORAH DREWETT.

For the information of those desiring to send contributions to Berlin, as Miss Drewett suggests, it may be said that Arthur M. Abell, MUSICAL COURIER representative in Berlin, will remain there throughout the war and be in charge of our offices there during that time. Also, it should be remembered that the London office (which is attending as well to our Paris affairs) is open too, and will be glad to forward to the proper persons any funds received for English, French or Belgian musicians. Miss Drewett, residing in Switzerland, may not know that the distress is great in all the musical circles of the warring countries, and eloquent pleas for help have come from London, Paris, Liège, Brussels, etc. It would be well to remember, in apportioning contributions, that, as Miss Drewett implies, art has no nationality. In London and Berlin associations have been formed for the relief of destitute musicians.

ALBERTO JONAS COMING.

Another important addition to New York's musical refugee colony will be Alberto Jonas, the pianist, who has been obliged to leave Berlin for war reasons, and go to London, whence he departed for this country on October 17, arriving in New York about October 24. Several of his Berlin pupils are accompanying Mr. Jonas. He was signally successful in the German capital as a pedagogue and public performer, and his residence in this city will constitute a material gain in the general artistic average of the metropolis. Until Mr. Jonas' arrival in America all mail may be addressed to him at Steinway Hall, 107 East Fourteenth street.

MUSICAL COURIER SERVICE.

Confirming the statement in the MUSICAL COURIER of October 14 that this journal is the only means Europe has of keeping in touch with musical doings all over the globe, comes the following paragraph published in the London Observer of September 27 last: "Musical news from Germany is arriving by way of America. It appears that in Berlin a certain number of concerts and operatic performances are given to distract the public mind. The Philharmonic concerts will be limited, and those to be directed by Nikisch will be given only if attendances justify their continuance."

A. J. GOODRICH HERE.

A. J. Goodrich, the well known musical author and theory teacher, whose residence is in Paris, has given up his French home temporarily and will remain in the United States until the conclusion of the war. Mr. Goodrich arrived here on the steamship Rochambeau, October 12.

THE AUSTRALIAN MYTH.

Musicians of Europe and America long have been in the habit of looking upon Australia as a music hungry country where the population is so anxious to be fed tonal delights that it will pay the wealth of Golconda and El Dorado to the foreign singers and virtuoso willing to act as caterers. It is true enough that a few well known musicians have been financially successful in undertaking Australian tours, but the rank and file who go there return sadly disappointed in profits and greatly surprised at the general lack of interest in music displayed by the inhabitants of a country which has been described so often as thirsting for culture in all matters of art.

According to certain public statements (Sydney and Melbourne Theatre Magazine, September 1, 1914) made by Harold Bauer recently in Australia, that land is not so musically thirsty as has been supposed, even though reports all agree that the Bauer recitals there were attended to a degree thoroughly satisfactory to the artist and his manager. "If I thought for a moment," Bauer told the Theatre, "that my remarks would be interpreted as the outcome of any personal disappointment, I would not have anything to say. The audiences I attracted were made up of the same people again and again. I am grateful to have won their appreciation, and to say anything that would be offensive to them would be ungracious. The truth, however, should be spoken of the condition of music in Australia. It is as well to say it now while the remedy is to hand."

The truth about Australia, says Bauer, is that its musical conditions are deplorable. To start with, there are too many examinations. Every teacher in Australia is, apparently, willing to abide by the decision of the examiners who are sent out from England to say whether his pupils play well or not. The effect is to produce a dead level of mediocrity. All the Australian musicians are working under the direction of foreign examiners, without reference to the gifts of their pupils. The work the Australian students are to do is set every year by somebody 15,000 miles away. The student's only idea is to pass his examination and get his diploma. An enormous amount of money goes out of the country every year under such a system. Bauer computes the sum at about $100,000 per annum.

The concentration of the pupils on their own mechanical work, continues Bauer, prevents them from taking any interest in music as a whole. As a result, orchestral concerts are not supported. If examinations do not tend to a desire to hear good music, what is the good of them, asks Bauer? He judges the public taste of Australia by the kind of music sold in its big cities, and he has found the chief demand to be for enormous quantities of rubbish. Opera, which is supposed to be of particular fascination to the Australians and has all the advantages of trumpet proclamations in the press and fashionable sponsorship, means very little to them as such. In proof of this, Bauer instances the episode of the visit of the Quinlan Opera Company when they introduced several Wagner works not previously heard in Australia. A music warehouse bought several hundred piano scores of the operas in question, expecting a strong demand for them. They sold exactly three.

"Students wrote," relates Bauer, "telling me quite frankly that they could only attend my concerts if I played the pieces that they had to study for their examinations. As I gave nine concerts in Sydney I obviously could not play these at every recital! Neither can I reconcile this with an interest in music. When, on the other hand, I have been told that very large audiences have attended certain concerts, my investigations enable me to reply that they have been brought together to listen to the sound of one particular voice, or to look at some particular individual—not to hear music; also when I look at the programs of these artists who have drawn large audiences in Melbourne and Sydney I am literally amazed that they could have had such an utter contempt for their public as to perform the trash that comprises their recitals. In London, Paris, or New York such offerings would be impossible. There, of course, the public is segregated. One section attends concerts, another musical comedies, another picture shows, and so on. In Australia every entertainment is regarded as a 'show,' and to attract large audiences you have to rely on drawing from all classes."

After condemning the dearth of classrooms in the conservatories, all of which have devoted their space to the erection of large halls, Bauer goes into some constructive criticism that should be of great value to Australia, and suggests that the remedies for the present poor conditions are the elimination of the foreign examination system, the establishment of sound musical education along thorough and artistic methods, cooperation among the local musicians (who in Australia seem to run away from each other all the time) and an extension of the movement already begun, to establish conservatories through the aid of the universities and the State.

In a general way, the Bauer contentions (except the one relating to the examination system) might apply with equal force to America, especially as to the amount of musical rubbish sold here, the lack of real cooperation among musicians, the preferment of the singer over the music he sings, and the feasibility of municipal, State and governmental subventions for and regulation of music schools.

Bauer has done a useful thing in calling the attention of his brother artists to the financial danger lurking in concert tours to Australia. He mentions eight well known interpreters whose Australian visits have been failures, although in Europe and America they were made to appear as huge successes. "I am undecided," was Bauer's candid admission, "whether I shall tell the truth when I leave here or continue the legend about Australia."

With characteristic sincerity Bauer told the truth, and so the Australian myth is exploded, even though there is no doubt that the Commonwealth has its few favorite visiting artists who appeal to all classes of the population and on whom they shower adulation and the ducats of the realm.

The next destruction of a musical myth probably will happen along when some artist decides to tell the truth about South America. Harold Bauer has been there. Will he speak?

PARKER AGAIN WINS PRIZE.

Horatio Parker, winner with his "Mona" of the Metropolitan Opera House prize of $10,000, now has captured another competition of the same amount, his opera "Fairyland" having been selected by the judges of the Los Angeles $10,000 opera prize as the best of the works submitted to them. It is not stated by the committee who the judges were—although the MUSICAL COURIER has been trying to obtain the information for some months—nor has any public announcement been made as to the number of works entered in the contest. Doubtless these points will be made known later by the committee in charge of the project.

Remembering "Mona" and its fate, it is to be hoped that the Los Angeles givers of the $10,000 prize for "Fairyland" have acquired in it a better work and one more destined to hold popular and musical attention than "Mona." Brian W. Hooker wrote the texts of both the Parker prize winning operas.

SIEVEKING RESUMES TEACHING IN PARIS.

Martinus Sieveking, the pianist, reports that Paris is "quiet and safe" and that he has resumed his teaching there.

Felix Borowski, the excellent music scribe of the Chicago Herald, proposes playfully that in revenge for Max Bruch's renunciation of his title of Doctor of Music, conferred upon him by the University of Cambridge, Grove's 'Dictionary of Music" (a typically English publication), in its next edition leave out the adjective "eminent" which now describes Bruch as a composer in Grove's.

Following out the same line of thought, we could suggest also the appended changes to be incorporated into the celebrated English musical dictionary:

Albrechtsberger, Johann Georg—The teacher of Beethoven, of whom A. expressed but a poor opinion—and deservedly so.

Auer, Leopold—A violin pedagogue of no ability. All he did was to bring out Kathleen Parlow, Mischa Elman, Efrem Zimbalist, etc.

Bach, Johann Sebastian—A much overrated composer. Wrote fugues and had many children. He is being rapidly forgotten by those who do not care to remember him.

Beethoven, Ludwig van—He composed symphonies or something.

Bohm, Carl—"Still as the Night," his chief composition, contains the phrase "deep as the sea," showing conclusively that a submarine attack on English vessels was planned long before the declaration of war.

Brahms, Johannes—He wrote a German requiem and Hungarian dances. Had little real musical ability and was fond of beefsteak.

Bruckner, Anton—He is played only when conductors have nothing else to put on their programs.

Bülow, Hans von—It is necessary only to say that he was a friend of Wagner and Liszt and admired Bismarck.

Bungert, August—No one ever hears of him, anyway.

Bussler, Ludwig—Wrote a book of harmony rules which no self-respecting English composer will follow.

Czerny, Carl—Has tortured English children for ages. It is better for them to play soccer football and learn "Die Kunst der Fussfertigkeit."

Door, Anton—A Viennese pianist. He should not be despised entirely, as his name suggests an English word.

Dvorak, Anton—He wrote a pretty tune called "Humoreske," which is played in cafés by violinists who walk about the room.

Finck, Henry T.—American; has written books on music, but is known to have visited Bayreuth on several occasions.

Flotow, Friedrich von—"Martha" should be performed occasionally, but without this man's music. The characters in the libretto are English.

Franz, Robert—Wrote a number of songs, none of which are as good as any of the ballad publications of Boosey or Chappell.

Froberger, Johann Jakob—One of the first to cause German music.

Gluck, Christoph Wilibald—Purposely wrote two bad operas in London in 1745, and later went to Vienna and composed good ones.

German, Edward—He isn't.

Goldmark, Carl—Tried to ruin Dickens by using his "Cricket on the Hearth" as an opera text.

Handel, George Frideric (wrongfully called Georg Friedrich by the Germans)—England's famous oratorio writer. It is contemplated to change the spelling of his name to Handle.

Haydn, Josef—His music is of little account, as is proved by the inefficacy of the national anthem he wrote for the Austrians, the Russians defeating them easily.

Joachim, Joseph—A violinist to whom London foolishly used to be devoted. All his English pupils now have repudiated the Joachim style of bowing and are beginning the study of their instrument anew.

Kreisler, Fritz—A man who plays the Brahms and Beethoven concertos and fights the Russians. Is that enough?

Liszt, Franz—He arranged Schubert songs for piano and spoke German with a Hungarian accent.

Lortzing, Gustav Albert—The Czar has ordered his name to be taken out of Lortzing's "Czar und Zimmermann."

Mendelssohn, Felix—A pale, slight man who played the organ for Queen Victoria. Wrote a work called "Elijah," which any English composer could surpass if he chose, but up to this season none of them has chosen.

Meyerbeer, Giacomo—A man who was jealous of Rossini. Rossini was a native of Italy, the country which refused to join Germany on a recent momentous occasion.

Millöcker, Karl—A Viennese operetta composer who served to keep English musical comedy from being born sooner.

Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus—Had some talent for minuets, but Elgar is able to write a longer and thicker symphony than any by Mozart.

Nikisch, Arthur—He conducts Beethoven.

Offenbach, Jacques—(See Millöcker).

Rheinberger, Joseph—(See Bussler).

Richter, Hans—Conducted well before the war, but conducted himself badly afterward.

Reimann, Hugo—(See Rheinberger).

Schubert, Franz—Died young. Might have achieved fame had he lived longer.

Schumann, Robert—Composer of "Träumerei." (See Dvorák and "Humoreske.")

Suppé, Franz von—(See Offenbach.)

Strauss, Johann—Failed to write a successful tango or one step.

Strauss, Richard—Alive and yet dead.

Weber, Carl Maria—Visited London in 1826.

Weingartner, Felix—(See Nikisch.)

Wagner, Richard—Conducted the London Philharmonic Society badly; also composed some music which has been performed publicly.

The Vocal Attack.

In the war dispatches we read of "Mme. Melba's Troop of Boy Scouts," but up to the present moment the wires have not explained whether the diva has outfitted a juvenile brigade for martial purposes or whether the youngsters are Australians who merely as a matter of sentimental compliment have taken the name of that country's best known singer. Any attempt to say that the Melba Troop ought to be sent to do duty on the high C's should be punishable by hamstringing. By the way, look out now for the Gadski Guards and the Garden Grenadiers.

Making Oratorio Pay.

"What can be done," asks the Los Angeles Graphic, "to bring about oratorio in Los Angeles on a proper basis?" Serve a cold buffet and liquid refreshments, have colored cabaret entertainers enliven the pauses, and follow the concert with a dancing contest, first and second prizes of sterling silver.

Suggestion.

It is a good idea these days to send to the MUSICAL COURIER for publication articles called "Music and War." So far we have received only 962 of them and would like to make it an even 1,000.

Not Worried.

From a recent number of London Truth: "The king had a few hours' partridge and rabbit shooting on Thursday in some of the royal preserves near Richmond, which were formerly in the hands of the late Duke of Cambridge. Lord Farquhar accompanied his Majesty. It is expected that the king will be able to get a few days' partridge shooting in Norfolk next month, both at Sandringham and at Castle Rising."

Composer Describes King.

Saint-Saëns, who frequently has met King Albert, of Belgium, on intimate terms at the palace in Brussells, not long ago, wrote a pen picture of him for L'Echo de Paris, of which the attached is a translation:

"Of this king I would have wished to draw a silhouette, but a more clever pencil than mine is necessary, for never has a task appeared to me so difficult.

"Very tall, slight, elegant, very reserved, speaking with a sweet voice and with extreme deliberation, the king of the Belgians makes a first impression that is somewhat enigmatic. To one who does not know him he seems to have upon his face, indeed upon his whole person, an impenetrable veil. Now there is really no veil, there is no enigma. Notwithstanding the suggestion of coldness and indifference, he reveals in his conversation the fact that he is really a man of feeling and affability, a man who has studied much and thought much, to whom nothing is without interest. It is to him, without doubt, that the superiority of the Belgian army is due, an army which has given such striking proofs of its ability in its unequal strife against Germany.

"While losing nothing of his tranquillity, this young sovereign, known up to the present time as a diplomat, a scholar, an artist, suddenly reveals himself, to the astonishment of the world, as a hero.

How It Was Done.

Sprach der Kaiser:
"Ach, ich bitt' dich
Gebe hin und nehme Lüttich."
Sprach der Emmich:
"Ne'm ich."

Metred Mirth.

"By and Large" is the latest volume of humorous verse from the pen of Franklin P. Adams, smile dispenser of the New York Tribune. He not only has a singular rhythmic facility and an unusually sensitive ear for euphony, but also he possesses the gift of putting his finger on the funny spots of everyday life and emphasizing them in quaintly original phrase and form. In the finish and variety of his verse, which often sounds a deeper purpose than that of merely making the reader laugh, "F. P. A.," as he is known to thousands who follow his daily published whimsicalities, can be compared only to Owen Seaman of London Punch, that impish tickler of British ponderosity. Our favorite in "By and Large" is "The Tired Business Man's Song"; see which of the collection you like best. The booklet (price $1 net) is published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

How About Przemysl?

An occasional contributor from the West sends this:

"It's hard for me to keep my wonted poise
When stupid persons mispronounce it Oise;
My temper though I absolutely lose
At ignoramus folks who call it Meuse."

As Others See Us.

And, by the way, those Americans who shudder at the consonantal Russian, Belgian, French and Galician names should remember our own Quemquamoguisett and many other similar tongue twisters to be found on the American map.

German Disgrace.

It has been discovered by the Paris Figaro that Beethoven's family was Belgian and came originally from Louvain.

Is a Prize in Itself.

Chicago, October 9, 1914.

DEAR SIR.—I would be pleased to know the prize yearly for the MUSICAL COURIER and also prize of space and oblige, Very truly,

GIOVANNI VACCA & FIGLIO.

Improving Wagner.

By way of London Musical News comes the information that the Berlin Vossische Zeitung says: "Having regard to the fact that our ally, Austria-Hungary, and especially Hungary, is fighting so bravely by our side, Wagner's text to 'Lohengrin' was slightly altered at the opening performance in the Royal Opera House (Berlin). In Wagner's own version Henry the Fowler sings 'Herr Gott, bewahr uns vor dem Ungarn Wut' (Lord God, protect us from Hungarian rage). Knüpfer, who undertook the role, deleted the word 'Ungarn' and substituted 'Feind' (enemy)! The alteration was wildly applauded."

Belligerency.

Franz Ries, composer of the imperishable "Moto Perpetuo" for violin, is seventy-three years old, which does not prevent him from shouldering a gun and standing guard over the bridge at the Savigny Place in Berlin, from three to six o'clock every morning, in order to keep it from being blown up by spies. It is a good way to use composers, singers and virtuosi in war. It exercises their patriotism and saves their lives.

Worse Than Murder.

"John McCormack, Leonard Borwick and Paul Dufault are among the recent artists in this country who are publishing Australian criticisms on their own appearances in the MUSICAL COURIER (New York) with 'Advt.' at the end denoting that they are paid at so much per inch."—Sydney (Australia) Theatre Magazine.

Hints for Artists.

After looking over some of the current American newspapers and magazines we have decided to suggest to them the following as likely to constitute popular and original illustrations:

A shrouded skeleton labelled Death trampling over dead soldiers.

A lady figure of Peace holding her hands before her face.

Burned houses and devastated fields, surmounted by a vaporous spectre entitled "War."

A number of women and children holding their hands aloft in supplication while in one corner of the picture several monarchs are seen attacking one another with clubs.

A broken column draped with crepe and inscribed, "Civilization."

A burning wheat field captioned "Culture."

A battle scene with a cloud hovering above, from which protrudes the face of Napoleon. This picture should be designated "One Hundred Years After."

Neutral Reflections.

And speaking of pictures, let us ask in all neutrality, where the millions of photographs come from showing the ruin wrought by Germany in Louvain, Rheims, Termonde, etc. We are still awaiting the photographs depicting the damage done by the Allies when they capture towns. The Germans are reported to have been driven from many inhabited places in France, Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine. The Russians are said to have done the same thing to the Austrians. Where are the pictures? Or were the shots of the victors fired over the roofs or between the houses? It always surprises us when folks are surprised that war is brutal.

Much Obliged.

"All the big men in music have done something in the Variations form."—Sydney Theatre Magazine.

Sincere Flattery.

"Variations," Musical Courier, October 7, 1914.

"We do not think it important to find out who started the war. What we wish to know is, who will end it."

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer, October 12, 1914.

"The European governments ought to quit talking about who caused the war and begin to talk about who will end it."

Measure for Measure.

Curio—"What are you doing now?"
Oleo—"I'm an American composer."
Curio—"Well, well. That's a surprise. I——"
Oleo—"Sh! I'd rather you lowered your voice. You see, I don't wish my mother to find out. She thinks I'm a bartender."

LEONARD LIEBLING.

John McCormack Interviewed.

John McCormack received a MUSICAL COURIER representative in his handsome suite overlooking Central Park and the Plaza Square, at Hotel Netherland, New York, soon after his arrival from Europe.

"First of all," began the genial tenor, "I wish to make a correction. In a recent issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, I am credited with being at work on a symphony, also to be a violinist. Now that is all a mistake. I could not if I would."

Mr. McCormack did not deny a certain knowledge of the violin, but as to playing that instrument, he maintains that he is far from being a violinist.

These facts had been received recently by the MUSICAL COURIER on what was deemed to be reliable authority, but as the tenor wishes these corrections to be made, the writer gladly makes the change.

"I refuse to believe I have gifts which I have not." This characteristic remark reflects strongly the caliber and modesty of the man.

"There is at present great material for one who can write a symphony; an overture à la Tschaikowsky, with the beautiful old battle hymns," Mr. McCormack observed reflectively. And continuing in the same mood, he said:

"The British army has a wonderful voice to hear. Their singing was exhilarating."

Mr. McCormack showed great concern for his intimate friend, Fritz Kreisler. He considers the "Jocelyn" berceuse (Godard), recently made by the Austrian violinist and himself, to be one of the best records he has made for the Victor Talking Machine Company.

"But I was nervous singing with the great artist"—and the admiration of these two must be exceedingly mutual, as Manager Wagner, in the writer's presence, told that Kreisler had said to him that McCormack was the "greatest musical soul known." And McCormack had previously remarked that "although Mr. Kreisler is fighting against England, I cannot help but take my hat off to a man like that. Every good Irishman likes a good fighter."

A reference to his own age brought forth the remark from the young tenor that "it's commenced!"—pointing to his jet black hair—"but I'll be more interesting looking when it becomes really gray."

On his forthcoming American tour, John McCormack is to sing English translations of German lieder, made especially for him. "I don't understand German and I don't believe in being a parrot." This remark referred to one of his reasons for the singing of the English translations. But his main purpose is contained in the following: "I think these classics would become loved by our so called popular audiences if people only knew what was being sung."

In Ostend, at his last concert given just before the war, Mr. McCormack sang entirely in English, with the exception of two Italian arias, and this with great success. "I think, too, that great artists should sing ballads. I am going to do it all the days of my life."

"Just how many times have you sung 'I Hear You Calling Me?'"

"At every concert since 1908. And there were only two concerts where there was not applause at the end of the first two bars from the smallest town audiences to those of the great cities."

And at the writer's inquiry Mr. McCormack explained how the song was first given by the English composer, Marshall, to a young English tenor, whose publisher refused it. Then McCormack took it to his publisher, who promised to bring it out if McCormack would sing it at his next parlor concert in London. The young tenor agreed to do this, and all the musical world knows with what success.

McCormack was humming the air over at the piano to the composer's accompaniment.

It was then that he hummed the A natural in the third verse. "There! that is the tone I want," said the composer, and that note remained. "But you have no idea how difficult it is to get it just right every time, for it must be just so," added the tenor.

McCormack starts on tour October 23, at Grand Rapids, Mich. "I hope it will prove a good omen," he facetiously remarked.

"You are superstitious, then?"

"All Irishmen are that, and I lived two years in [illegible] too."

Rudolph Ganz, the Swiss pianist, has written some new songs for Mr. McCormack, which he is to use this season.

"One of them has a top X in it," humorously added the popular singer.

John McCormack arrived on the steamship Mauretania, Friday morning, October 16, and will remain in America until the war is over. He brought his entire family, household and automobile. This will make him available for spring festivals, a thing he has heretofore not been able to do.

He was to open his season at Ft. Wayne, Ind., October 26, but the Grand Rapids committee persuaded him to open there October 23. He was originally booked at Grand Rapids for March 6, but the non-arrival of de Gogorza has caused the change of dates. This is the third consecutive year in Grand Rapids.

Some of the critics object to what they call Elman's tricks—his "playing to the gallery." In fact, he has been described as an artisan rather than an artist. Well, well—fancy that! Who, of the envious little musical world which talks this way, would not be such an "artisan"?—Sydney (Australia) Theatre Magazine.

JOHN McCORMACK AND HIS INTERESTING FAMILY.

YEATMAN GRIFFITH OPENS NEW YORK STUDIO.

With the Assistance of Mrs. Griffith Vocal Instruction Has Already Begun with Large Class at Attractive Residence-Studio.

Yeatman Griffith, American basso cantante and voice teacher, and Mrs. Griffith, soprano, teacher and accompanist, have given up their London studio, Holland House, because of the war and have come to America, where they are already established at their residence-studio, 318 West Eighty-second street, New York. They arrived on the steamship St. Paul, Saturday, October 10, and lessons began in their well equipped West Side studio, Monday, October 19. The expedition with which Mr. and Mrs. Griffith became settled in their new home and began work in so short a time, is simply characteristic of their energy and progressive spirit, and likewise indicates the great demand for their instruction.

READING FROM RIGHT TO LEFT: MR. AND MRS. YEATMAN GRIFFITH, MRS. MACBETH AND FLORENCE MACBETH.
Taken at Brighton, England, the day war was declared and they all were obliged to return to London immediately.

MR. AND MRS. YEATMAN GRIFFITH AND THEIR CLASS OF STUDENTS RETURNING TO NEW YORK FROM LONDON ON BOARD THE S. S. ST. PAUL.

For they were accompanied from Europe by a large class of pupils of various nationalities—American, English, English South African, Canadian, Russian, etc. One group picture showing Mr. and Mrs. Griffith on board the St. Paul with their class en route from England, accompanies this article. Dutch, English and Austrian pupils are to follow as soon as war conditions permit. French and German pupils are now at the front. A large class of Americans were already awaiting them in this country. In connection with this, it is interesting to note this remarkable example of American teachers, who are now bringing pupils from Europe to America.

Florence Macbeth, the American coloratura soprano, who with her mother, Mrs. Macbeth, and Mr. and Mrs. Griffith, is seen in the smaller accompanying snapshot, has never studied with any other teacher. She was working with Mr. Griffith all summer in London and is to follow him to America, as soon as her English provincial engagements allow. In these she has been extraordinarily successful. October 18 she appeared with Landon Ronald and his orchestra at Albert Hall, in London. Twenty-five guest appearances await Miss Macbeth with the Century Opera Company this season, when she will doubtless renew her American successes of last season with the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

Pauline Donnan, prima donna coloratura soprano of the Carl Rosa Company, is to follow for study also, as soon as her engagements are concluded for the season.

Edna Showalter spent the entire summer in London studying with Mr. Griffith. She is now en tour and will return to Mr. Griffith for study as soon as her present tour is concluded.

Edward Roberts, the Canadian baritone, was a member of the returning party. His successes en tour in London and the Provinces, with Marie Hall, the English violinist, were marked. He is likewise to have a big tour in America with Marie Hall and Mark Hambourg in January.

Nita Prewett, an American soprano, who created a favorable impression with Landon Ronald at Albert Hall, London, came to America in the Griffith party. Also Edith Caler Carr and Ruth Hayward, two American sopranos, who have sung with success in London, and Wilhelmina Taylor, an American coloratura, have returned and are continuing their study in the New York studio.

Among the Griffith colony of students who have resumed their study in New York are many other promising voices, from whom Mr. and Mrs. Griffith are expecting great things and who, he says, will surely be heard from later. It is scarcely necessary to remind MUSICAL COURIE readers that Mr. Griffith is recognized as one of the fore most teachers of voice in Europe, or of his four successfu years of teaching and singing abroad, one year in Florenc Italy, and three years in London. These facts have bee often recorded in these columns.

His position in London was unique. He went there u heralded and won for himself, entirely through his ow singing and teaching as shown by the excellent work of h artist-pupils, the enviable reputation as a voice teach which is his today.

His studio became well known and attracted singe from all over the world for study, among them beir prominent artists. There were, for instance, Mme. Vuk vic, who gave many recitals in London, and who coache with Mr. Griffith during her entire time there; Lane Wi son, the English baritone-composer; Viola Tree, daught of Sir Herbert Tree, who, having temporarily lost h voice, came to Mr. Griffith for lessons, and after only short period of study with him she was able to resume h engagements; and many others besides those already me tioned among the number who will continue study America at the Griffith studios.

Mr. Griffith is also a teacher of teachers. During th past summer the following have been working with him London: Herbert Harroun, Oberlin College; Erne Chamberlain, Knox College (these returned also on t St. Paul); Lowell Wells, Iowa State Teachers' Colleg Adele Matthews and Jeanette Chesnut, of Portsmout Ohio; Ella Berry, of Quincy, Ky., and Euphemia Blunt, New York.

It is indeed with regret that Mr. and Mrs. Griffith le their attractive villa in London, but present conditio abroad made this seem the wisest step for them. Ho ever, the Yeatman Griffith method of teaching is still bei continued in London by several assistant teachers.

New York musicians are truly glad to welcome amo their numbers two such excellent representatives of t highest forms of musical art.

Dr. Wolle to Give Organ Recital.

Assisted by Maud Morgan, harpist, and Mrs. David Wood, soprano, J. Fred Wolle will give an organ reci in Scranton, Pa., on Thursday, November 5. Dr. Wo promises a varied and interesting program for that oc sion.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
TOUR--SEASON 1914-15--NOW BOOKIN
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USE

KATHARINE COODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO
In America January to April 19
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIAN

LOS ANGELES ANNOUNCES PHILHARMONIC SERIES.

Artists Appear at Pasadena in Vaudeville Benefit—Conservatory Recitals Begin—A Symphony Study Club—An Interesting Musicale.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., October 3, 1914.

L. E. Behymer has issued the annual bulletin announcing the artists and dates for the three Philharmonic Courses this season. These, he says, will be unaltered so far as he can say, and the report, already published in the MUSICAL COURIER, may be considered correct.

GARDEN VAUDEVILLE AT HOTEL HUNTINGTON.

The Court of the Hotel Huntington, Pasadena, was the scene of an unusual and highly entertaining performance given for the Red Cross Society by the Pasadena Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Saturday afternoon, October 26.

This was under the direction of Ellen Beach Yaw, who is prominent in philanthropic work and always generous of her time and talent for a good cause. The program was similar to the one given in the gardens of her own villa a few weeks ago. It is too long a program for an extended notice, but mention must be made of Mme. Yaw's contribution to it. Besides singing her "Sky Lark" in a marvelous manner, she closed the long program with a most unique performance. Assisted by Ernest Crawford as Hamlet, she as Ophelia made here initial appearance as a legitimate actress. They gave the scene between Hamlet and Ophelia from the Shakespeare drama in a manner worthy of stars. Immediately following this, Mme. Yaw returned to the stage and sang the "Mad Scene" from the opera of "Hamlet," by Thomas. It made a most impressive effect and so far as known is the first time such a thing was ever attempted. Mme. Yaw was never in better voice, and it is needless to say, she scored a triumph.

The one or two other numbers that I cannot pass by, were the two Mendelssohn trios given by Celeste Nellis Ryus, pianist; Dr. S. M. Alter, violinist, and Robert Alter, cellist, which were beautiful; the brilliant piano solo by Mrs. Ryus and the violin numbers by Master Raymond Menhennick, a lad of twelve or fourteen, whose work was little short of wonderful.

An audience composed of the elite of Pasadena and Los Angeles society filled the court on this occasion, and a large sum was realized.

LOS ANGELES CONSERVATORY RECITALS.

The first artists' recital of a series of seven to be given by the faculty of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts was performed by Arthur Babcock, baritone, Monday evening, September 28 in the Recital Hall of the Conservatory, in the Mozart Theatre Building. I have often had occasion to speak of the good work Mr. Babcock does and on Monday evening he was especially happy both in his program and its rendition. His program was a model and presented several novelties. The little song of Alice Barnett's (now Mrs. Price, of San Diego) was a gem in its simplicity and feeling. It is interesting to learn that it was written when she was only about nineteen years old. Her songs should be better known.

The songs of Mr. Laparra I have mentioned several times before, but they certainly grow in interest with each hearing. The composer accompanied Mr. Babcock in these numbers.

The next recital of these series will be given by the Fuhrer-Zielinski Trio, Miss Ciesielska, soprano, assisting.

The above mentioned program follows: "Where'er You Walk," Handel; "My Love's an Arbutus," Old English Melody; "Bois epais," Lully; "Bergere Legere," Wekerlin; "Maedchen mit dem rothen Muendchen," Franz; "Es hat die Rose sich beklagt," Franz; "Auch Kleine Dinge," Wolfe; "Der Muiskant," Wolf; "Chanson triste," Duparc; "Extase," Duparc; "Soir," Faure; "Dans une Villa Romaine," Laparra; "Des pas de Sabots," Laparra; "O, Let Night Speak of Me," Chadwick; "On the Sea of Dreams" (dedicated to Mr. Babcock), Colby; "The Cock Shall Crow," Carpenter; "The Vagabond," Thayer; "At Twilight," Barnett; "Tears, Idle Tears," Whelpley; "O, Swallow Flying South," Whelpley.

MATHILDE RUDORF AND THE SYMPHONY STUDY CLUB.

The writer spent a very delightful afternoon with Mme. Rudorf recently, and, as everyone else who visits her, was impressed with her enthusiasm and devotion to her art. She is more than a pianist, she is a musical enthusiast and authority. She has not been a resident in Los Angeles many years and with the modesty characteristic of her type of musician, has done little to make herself known to the general public, but gradually musicians interested in their art are meeting her and appreciating her ability and scholarship.

She is very much wrapped up in the study of the great symphonies, and the larger works of the masters and her classes for the study of these will be appreciated by those coming in touch with this opportunity. She will be assisted in these recitals and classes by some of the best talent.

STILLWELL MUSICALE.

At the Hotel Stillwell, September 22, a delightful program was given by Viola Ellis, contralto, assisted by Harry Hunter (at a player piano) and William Newell Hull, reader. Miss Ellis came to Los Angeles in the early summer and already has made a host of friends with her fine contralto voice and happy disposition. She has made a number of public appearances and will be one of the soloists with the Brahms' Quintet this season. I am glad to mention that Mrs. Ross' "Japanese Lullaby," which she sang on this occasion, had to be repeated.

This was the program: Five minutes at the piano, Harry Hunter; "The Vagabonds," J. T. Trowbridge, William Newell Hull; "Light," Sinding, "I Love Thee So," DeKoven, "Ah mon Fils," from "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer, Miss Ellis; Barcarolle, Moskowski, "Liebestraume," Liszt, Harry Hunter; "Gone with a Handsomer Man," Will Carleton, William Newell Hull; "Japanese Lullaby," Gertrude Ross, Miss Ellis; "Chanson du Tigre," Victor Massé, Miss Ellis.

NOTES.

The first pupils' recital of the Musical College of University of Southern California was held in Symphony Hall, Thursday afternoon, October 1. These will be given every Thursday afternoon at four o'clock during the season.

Bessie Chapin gave a violin recital a week ago at Santa Ana. October 6 she appears at the Hemet Opera House and between now and January 1 will play in Pasadena, Riverside and Visalia. After January 1 she will resume the series of Morning Musicales given with her trio, which were so popular last year.

Rehearsals for the first Lyric Club concert have begun. This will be given November 13, probably in the Trinity Auditorium.

Soloists for the Brahms' Quintet concerts will be: Marie B. Tiffany, soprano; Fred G. Ellis, baritone; Roland Paul, tenor; Aurelia Wharry, soprano, and Viola Ellis, contralto.

JANE CATHERWOOD.

MUSICIANS' CLUB THE AIM OF JERSEY CITY MUSICIANS.

Permanent Club of Jersey City Musicians to Be Organized Along Progressive Lines.

Jersey City, October 15, 1914.

The following are the names of the musicians who attended the meeting at the residence of James P. Dunn, to form the society, an account of which appeared in the MUSICAL COURIER of October 14, and constituted themselves an organization committee: Mrs. Daniel H. Bender, Franziska Hopf, Flora R. Wittpenn, Miss Bauer, J. Belle Boltwood, Mary L. Lockhart, Howard Z. Long, Earnest Russell, Grace Bender, together with the chairman and secretary previously mentioned, and the MUSICAL COURIER correspondent.

Two weeks of persistent effort, personal visits, telephone calls, more circular letters, chance meetings on street and cars resulted in a well attended gathering at the home of Mrs. D. H. Bender. It was an interesting evening. Discussion waxed warm over the various questions brought forth by individual opinion, clearly demonstrating the earnest endeavor and interest that will be put into this movement if organized along wide, impartial, progressive lines—the only lines that lead to good and lasting achievement, a broad and lofty finality. The names that follow, in addition to the committee on organization, comprised those present: Mrs. Naething, Miss Allen, Miss Herr, Miss Sniffens, Miss Fenner, Mrs. George, Mrs. Swan, Miss Hughes, Miss Knight, Miss Paddock, Miss Druhmel, Mrs. Glassmeyer, Mr. Fells, Mr. Carroll, Mr. Breck, Mr. Hicks, Mr. Coutant, Mr. George and Roy Falconer. It being a holiday, many who otherwise would have attended were out of town.

The next meeting will also be held at the home of Mrs. Bender, 116 Fairview avenue, on October 19, at 8.30 p. m.

JESSIE BRUCE LOCKHART.

ADDITIONAL CINCINNATI NEWS.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 16, 1914.

The College of Music will present Hans Schroeder, baritone, in a song recital October 20 at the Odeon. Mr. Schroeder, who is a recent addition to the college faculty, will, on this occasion, make his local debut. Although he has been heard in Cincinnati at a private musicale, this is his first appearance before the general public. His program embraces a number of German lieder and a group of songs by Louis Victor Saar, who will assist Mr. Schroeder at the piano.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC ORCHESTRA.

The soloists for the first concert by the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music orchestra are Marguerite Stegemiller, soprano, and Bristow Hardin, pianist. The orchestral numbers include the prelude by Smetana, the Siegfried idyl, and the entire fifth symphony of Tschaikowsky. The orchestra, under the capable leadership of Pier[illegible] delli, is already in excellent trim. All of the splendid material of last year has reported promptly and there are a number of new talents which add to the strength of this sterling organization. The first concert will be given early in November.

NOTES.

Two popular young artists of the College of Music, Mary G. Morris, soprano, and Irene Gardner, pianist, gave a recital at Greensburg, Ind., October 13. Miss Gardner played the variations on Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens," Chopin's Berceuse, Albino Gorno's Burlesca, ballade in B minor and fantasie on Gounod's "Faust" themes by Liszt. Miss Morris sang a group of German songs by Tschaikowsky, Grieg and Brahms, the aria from "Madame Butterfly," and a group of English songs.

David Bispham, always a favorite in Cincinnati, will give a song recital, November 27, in Memorial Hall. It is announced that the program will be sung entirely in English.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is booked for a song recital on November 8, which falls on Sunday. This is an innovation in Cincinnati, although other cities have had Sunday song recitals for years.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

KANSAS CITY STUDIO ACTIVITIES RESUMED.

News of the Local Teaching Fraternity—Organist Association Concert—Other Items.

Kansas City, Mo., October 7, 1914.

Kansas City's large fraternity of capable private music teachers is now at home in studios all over the city. With the single exception of Mrs. Carl Busch, who is now in Copenhagen, not one is missing, which would seem to prove Kansas City to be a favorable city for the music teacher.

Jennie Schultz, after three months' rest at her summer home on the St. Clair River, in Michigan, is busy with old and new pupils from both country and town.

Carl Busch is occupied with his preparations for the symphony orchestra season, after a summer in his Ozark Mountain home. The mountains, the woods and the rivers there usually furnish him with inspiration for a new composition of some kind, and many of his admirers are wondering what shape it has taken this season.

George Dean, tenor; Ida Simmons, pianist; Charles H. Case, baritone, and Claude Rader, violinist, rested quietly at home, and their enthusiasm proves that rest is not always a case of a change of scene, but a state of mind.

Rudolf King, pianist, was busy here all summer, too, and has already begun his weekly concerts, which have been much appreciated by the various churches of the city. Last year, in collaboration with David Grosch, baritone, he gave more than fifty concerts during the season. Mr. King will have the assistance of George H. Miller, baritone, this season.

Paul Lawless, tenor, has been appointed head of the vocal department of Bethany College, at Topeka, Kan. His pupil, Mabel Markel, will assist him. Mr. Lawless will continue his studio work here and conduct the choir of the Independence Avenue M. E. Church.

ORGANIST ASSOCIATION CONCERT.

The Kansas City Association of Organists will give its first big concert November 2 in the Grand avenue Temple, presenting the American organist, Clarence Eddy.

A YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERT.

A concert of high standard was given on Tuesday evening by the young people of the Central Presbyterian Church. Those taking part were: Leon Schechter, tenor, just returned from four years of study in Italy; Mrs. Victor Ettinger, soprano; Elma Medora Eaton, violinist, and Geraldine Shepard, pianist, whose brilliant playing proved quite a sensation.

A NEW COMER IN KANSAS CITY.

Among the newcomers in the profession is Daisy Dowden, just returned from two years' vocal study with Sabeltini in Italy. She has opened a studio for vocal instruction at Thirty-first and Troost streets.

MRS. BASKERVILLE TO RETURN TO NEW YORK.

A few local musicians have been fortunate enough to meet Jessie Baskerville, the operatic coach, of New York City, who has been living quietly here a few months. She will return to her studio in the Metropolitan Opera House, November 1.

GENEVE LICHTENWALTER.

Paul Draper's New York Recital.

Paul Draper, a New York tenor, who has spent several seasons abroad coaching with Raimund von Zur-Muehlen and concertizing in London and the English Provinces, will make his New York debut in Aeolian Hall, Tuesday afternoon, November 17. His program will comprise a varied list of German lieder.

Winifred Lee Mayhall.

H. Rawlins Baker, the piano instructor, some years ago taught Mildred Loomis, who, on her return to Parkersburg, W. Va., had great success there, both as teacher and pianist. Mrs. Loomis subsequently taught her sister, Winifred Lee Mayhall, for a brief period, and then she became Mr. Baker's pupil. Miss Mayhall is a superior pianist and accompanist, and acted in that capacity for the Koemmenich studios during the season 1913-1914, also for well known lecturers during the same season, and for the Rider-Kelsey-Cunningham tours through California, Canada and the Northwest. The present writer wrote of her in the MUSICAL COURIER of June 11, 1913, as follows:

WINIFRED LEE MAYHALL,
Pianist and accompanist.

"At the June 3 recital, Winifred Lee Mayhall distinguished herself by her playing of Sgambati's notturno and the seldom played Liszt impromptu. One listener was heard to say it was the best playing he had heard."

Miss Mayhall will give a recital late next month. Some of her press notices during the Rider-Kelsey-Cunningham tour were as follows:

Miss Mayhall, at the piano, added all that was needed to round out the work of the artists.—Santa Barbara (Cal.) Morning Press.

As an accompanist, a more efficient and a more modest one than Winifred Mayhall would be hard to find.—Spokane (Wash.) letter to MUSICAL COURIER.

Winifred Mayhall at the piano was an able and accomplished accompanist.—Santa Barbara (Cal.) Independent.

Winifred Mayhall, accompanist, gave exceptionally effective background for the songs.—Galveston (Tex.) Daily News.

Accompaniments were played quite skilfully by Winifred Mayhall.—Tacoma (Wash.) Daily Ledger.

Winifred Mayhall played good accompaniments and merited her share of applause when, after the last ducts, she came forward with the vocalists.—Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman Review.

Winifred Mayhall made an able and sympathetic accompanist.—Victoria (B. C.) Daily Colonist.

To Winifred Mayhall, who accompanied Mme. Rider-Kelsey, great credit is due. She is sympathetic and most artistic in her work.—Pittsburgh (Pa.) Dispatch.

Winifred Mayhall at the piano was a thorough artist in her accompaniments throughout.—Duluth (Minn.) News-Tribune.

(Advertisement.)

Dubinsky's Violin Recital.

On Tuesday evening, October 27, David Dubinsky will give a violin recital at Griffith Hall, Philadelphia. With the assistance of Edith Mahon, Mr. Dubinsky will give the following program: Sonata in G major, op. 78, Brahms; concerto in A minor, op. 37, Vieuxtemps; sonata in G minor, Tartini; andantino, Martini; "La Precieuse," Couperin; "Allegretto," Boccherini; "Melodie," Tschaikowsky; "Spanish Dance," Sarasate.

American Academy of Violin Makers.

August M. Gemünder, secretary of the American Academy of Violin Makers, has issued the following notice with the caption "A Confession and an Invitation," in the September issue of the Violin World:

The American Academy of Violin Makers, in its present status, isn't big enough to attempt a course of action or to assume to speak as authority for all American violin makers.

It has a membership of forty. It should have a membership of seventy-five.

It has not held its first convention. It should hold it at as early a date as possible.

It has not set up its permanent exhibit. At this very moment, the permanent exhibit would do more to advance the status and prosperity of each maker than could be accomplished in any other way.

The permanent exhibit should be taken in hand at once. Europe is undergoing demolition. There is a conspicuous absence of the sign reading "open for business during alterations."

America is the only violin making center open for business. The opportunity is unmistakable.

Let every maker not a member of the A. A. V. M. at once signify his willingness to join. A penny postal will do. Let every member write a postal stating what date he could attend a convention of the A. A. V. M. The secretary's address is appended.

AUGUST M. GEMÜNDER, secretary,
141 West Forty-second street, New York.

Florence Hardeman's Art.

Florence Hardeman, the American violinist, who returned to this country from Europe a few weeks ago in consequence of the disturbed conditions abroad, is an exceptionally well equipped young artist, for she had made her professional debut in America before her departure for foreign study, and included among her early engagements in her home land one with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, tours of the United States and Canada as soloist with Sousa, and recitals in Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina.

Miss Hardeman's first year in Europe was spent under the guidance of Arrigo Serato, and then followed a period of eighteen months' work with Prof. Leopold Auer, for which purpose the young violin disciple journeyed to the city then known as St. Petersburg and resided there. In addition to her private lessons with Auer, Miss Hardeman attended also all his classes at the Imperial Conservatory. Last May the master repaired to Dresden (Loschwitz) for his annual summer stay in the lovely Saxon resort, and Miss Hardeman and other pupils accompanied their instructor for the purpose of continuing their studies uninterruptedly during the warm months, intending to return with him to the Russian capital in the fall. War broke out, however, and changed all the plans of the noted pedagogue and his class of students. He was unable to go to his northern home, and the Americans under his charge were advised by their consul to travel to their native land in all possible haste. Miss Hardeman sailed forthwith and thus finds herself entered precipitately among the season's public music makers on this side of the water. In a manner of speaking, Miss Hardeman's debut (which had been planned for next season) will entail no hardships upon her, as Prof. Auer long ago pronounced her to be ready for a hearing before the most critical audience, but the young artist would have preferred to round out in Europe the full time she had allotted for her stay there.

Although all America will watch with interest and pride the future career of Florence Hardeman in this country, Cincinnati feels a peculiarly warm sympathy for her, as she made her essential studies in that city, establishing a brilliant record at the College of Music, where she first won a free scholarship and then was the only woman in the history of the institution to post-graduate there. Also she achieved the Springer gold medal "with great distinction." It was shortly after that a group of music loving people in Cincinnati, headed by Mrs. Adolph Klein, subscribed toward a fund which enabled Miss Hardeman to go to Europe.

Some of the newspaper notices which Miss Hardeman received are worthy of perusal. The San Francisco Examiner mentions her "confident ease, perfect technic and soulful expression." The Chronicle of the same city speaks of the "appeal" in Miss Hardeman's playing and of the "ease and ideal grace of her bowing." The St. Louis Herald concedes to her "artistic temperament in a marked degree," and "the indispensable gift of sympathetic interpretation." From the Montreal Gazette one learns that "the number of Hardeman encores threatened to hold up the progress of the Sousa concert." "A revelation," is the verdict of the Los Angeles Express; "she has beautiful warmth of expression and a totally surprising technical equipment." In Salt Lake City the Republican grows enthusiastic about her tone and skill; the New York Telegraph remarks upon her power to make her violin a true artistic medium; the Kansas City Journal characterizes her as an artist "who makes the audience sit spellbound"; the Fresno (Cal.) Republican, speaking of the Hardeman encores, says: "They were not of the perfunctory kind, but the real outburst provoked by a gift that reaches to the heartstrings"; the Nevada State Journal compares Miss Hardeman favorably with "men years her senior in the violin art," and with "any of the most famous European artists who have been heard in this country"; the Toronto Star dubs the young woman "a master hand at the violin," and adds "she was applauded with greater zeal than is usually displayed by a Canadian audience."

FLORENCE HARDEMAN,
American violinist.

Miss Hardeman has settled in New York, and an announcement may be expected shortly covering her management and her future public plans.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

"She unfolded her extraordinary superior qualities, elegant technic, marked rythmical feeling, and musical temperament."—Breslauer Morgenzeitung.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Thoughts on Vocalism.

San Diego, Cal., September 24, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Your hospitable publication entertaining, as it does, communications of all sorts and from all quarters, it may not be amiss, for the sake of variety, to send you a few thoughts running a little to one side of the orthodox faith of vocal teaching. All of us who talk or write about the human voice, meaning mental and spiritual expression in tone form, are trying to add our mite to the general fund of knowledge. I shall endeavor, at this time, to present a few principles which I have been, through my teaching life, laying before my pupils from day to day. While theorizing, my thoughts are rooted in long practical experience. Voice teachers throughout the world, however they may differ in method, seek the principles governing tone language. I refer, of course, to the real instructor, who would follow rather fundamental principles than the notions of some other teacher in some other country. Universal law is just as true to itself on Pike's Peak as it is in any foreign city.

What is the first step with a pupil? My way is to begin with the fact that singing, like walking or throwing a stone, is a physical action, undertaken to carry out a thought uppermost in the mind. Certain laws of nature govern the action, and the success of the performance is dependent on obedience to these laws. The cause of the action is thought. To produce a lawful tone, one must have the mental concept of a lawful tone. Simply asking a pupil to produce a beautiful, "round and smooth" tone without definite knowledge regarding the model vowel sounds belonging to his or her individual tone-forming organs, would be anything but educational. We sing and talk through vowel forms, and these forms must be adapted to the individual, not in a groping way, but in the confidence of intelligence. Everlastingly respect individuality, or the truth will be missing. The persistent imitation and resultant similarity among the singers of the hour, tends toward nothing short of degeneration. If fashion is to govern the singing world, it is time to quit talking about the voice of song.

To go back to tone-forming, one must work in harmony with the organs of articulation, that they may mold the tone in their own legitimate way; for if the mental tone is placed wrong with reference to the organs of articulation, there is confusion in muscular action. We begin, then, with tone analysis for discovery of the vowel form peculiar to the pupil in hand. This once ascertained, the pupil may think where he sees fit. To elucidate the principle to which I refer, place a lighted candle directly in front of the mouth of the pupil, and watch the adjustment of the lips and under jaw when blowing the light out. Gradually drop the light lower, till it is out of sight, under the chin, all the while watching the change of the lips and the under jaw, and you will note that the lips and under jaw are carrying out the will of the mind, the thought being wholly on the what to do and the where to do it. I develop tone, the stream of vocalized air or breath, exactly on the same principle; the constant aim being to work in harmony with the organs which produce it—a process original and developing, the direct contrary of imitation.

The first thought of all is to free the mind from the body absolutely. The right thought of the what and the where outside the body, will bring the corresponding action within; hence the concentration must be on the what and where, not on the how of the physical action. Under this condition, the lower jaw, tied to its socket, swings down and back, to suit the required resonance for each pitch. This subtle adjustment is Nature's own secret, not ours. We did not invent the human mechanism and cannot set it trap fashion. The tone is to be heard outside; if so, the mind must be placed outside while developing it. Tone, like every other result of physical action, follows the thought. Does the thought call for a book, the hand goes out to get it if the mind knows what book and where it is located. Without the right what and the right where, outside the physical form, voice culture is to be set down as unintelligent experiment, mere guess work. In all science the right cause comes first, and there must be a logical relation shown between this cause and its effect. The mental action which frees the voice being memorized, the physical action is for once and all assured. We are dealing with the voice of the mind if we were not we would have nothing to progress with. Every invention has to be in the imagination first. In analyzing tone or vowel form, the proofs are double: the mental impression and the corresponding physical sensation. Standing on the toes of one foot, the balancing point is easily felt; the same certainty and confidence attends the germinal point of tone, or the tone center. Tone form in vocal art corresponds to drawn form in the painter's art. It is inartistic, unscientific, to try to force fine coloring into poor form in either of the arts. It is the same mind which sees, feels and hears form, and form is always form. 'Tis the invisible that adjusts the visible. Facial expression and all body expression are developed under the same laws governing tone. We have as many mental shades of tone coloring and changes of facial expression as we have of thoughts and feelings, and no more.

I place before the mind of the pupil what is wanted, making no mention of the obstacles to be overcome. Breathing is the simplest of all exercises, yet the rules laid down for it are daily sending thousands of pupils adrift. In all other physical exercise we think what we are going to do, and do it. With not the slightest attention to our legs we start off in the direction of town, and in due time we get there. The physical line of action simply follows the mental line. Much of the technique of vocal science appears to be upside down, confused effort; which is, to say the least, lost time. When a pupil comes to me saying her tongue is too large, or it refuses to stay down, I know at once that I have on hand one who has been wasting time trying to tell Nature how to do things. The first step is to free this deceived student's thought from the body, and bend the mind to concepts of right tone form. Allow the tone to develop, never mechanically make it.

Reading these random suggestions, more than one reader has exclaimed, but look at the great singers who have been brought up on the good old doctrines of the tongue, the soft palate, the diaphragm, the registers and the rest; surely they have succeeded. Yes, not because of their "method," however, but in spite of it. In rare characters, the intuitions of genius are too strong to be vanquished by the onslaught of false theory and the practise consequent on it. I have in mind one of the great tenors of the world. Had he always the right tone concept, which never leads to pushing, but allows the voice to take its way unmolested, he would not now and then omit sound that is void of all musical quality whatsoever. So rich is the great tenor's native equipment that he can afford to do things unforgivable in an ordinary singer. He may do such things, but he fails to justify them. Resonance is practically the adjuster of the tone-forming organs, and to follow the line of resonance which leads from the trachea to the anterior nares, the beautiful line of gradation, without friction, the resort must be, not to physiology, but to psychology. As for the tremolo ("goat trill") now pushed into discouraging prominence, did a public speaker put on the tremolo stop for each word he uttered, he would, no matter how wise his discourse, be laughed off the rostrum. For those who desire the tremolo I would advise them to perform the act from the outside by placing their forefinger on their throat, as the result would be less serious. Now singing and talking are two forms of the same thing, namely, the voice. Your voice is you, and you cannot any more have two voices than you can make two of yourself. While the talking form is an outgrowth of the singing or prolonged form of tone, singing is at the same time heightened or extended oratory; and the elementary laws governing one, hold good for the other.

Long accepted theories concerning the human voice are, at last, sharply questioned. Progressive educators are asking, for example, can the human voice—the voice of the mind, of the feelings, the direct speech of the soul—can this be developed by methods of the mechanic? Can we say, place your muscles, adjust your vocal organs, so and so, and by this means reach full and perfect expression? Is this the method of science, of knowledge or knowing? Let me illustrate the position by a personal experience. An enthusiastic fellow teacher in Boston once asked me to tell him, in a word, the difference between his method and mine. My answer was, "You begin at one end, I at the other. You teach the dog's tail to wag, while I drop a happy sensation into the dog's brain and leave the tail to take care of itself." Yours truly,

ALBERT BAKER CHENEY.

"Mammoth Music."

[From the Musical Courier Extra.]

Leonard Liebling, editor of the MUSICAL COURIER, says: "The 'largest organ in the world' pops up at various times in different places. Why does not some enterprising piano house build the largest piano in the world? What a splendid advertisement that would be. The largest violin in the world may be seen in any orchestra; it is double bass."

Mr. Liebling probably is not aware that it was proposed to build the largest piano in the world to be exhibited at the San Francisco Exposition. This piano was to be several hundred feet high and as wide in proportion, and various and sundry exaggerated details were worked out in the plans for this mammoth piano, but the fear that the musicians might demand a commission, or a quid pro quo for a testimonial, prevented the carrying out of the ideal plan.

The idea was to have the piano played in San Francisco and heard in New York. Just who the pianist was to be had not been decided—in fact, the plans had not arrived at that point of detail.

What difference would it have made whether anybody could have played the piano or not, just so that it was there? And certainly New York would have cared little whether it would hear a piano played in San Francisco or not. The music on such an instrument, heard in New York, would probably sound as well as many of the player pianos that we hear, and certainly there are some grand pianos that we hear upon the concert stage that would show just as good results as regards tone and music as would have been shown by this mammoth piano that was not only designed to crush out all desire the American people might show in the way of love for a piano, but would certainly have not advanced the love for piano music in the least.

The picture shows have made great demands upon the pipe organ and several are being advertised as "the largest in the world"; and it might be added with much truth that they are the poorest played in the world.

If Mr. Liebling is interested in musical monstrosities, he might look into the window of the Mathushek piano warerooms, at Broadway and Forty-seventh street, and see what is claimed to be the smallest player piano in the world; and there also exists in another wareroom in New York City what is called the smallest piano in the world, both of these instruments being carefully carried out to the smallest detail. Likewise, it may be added that the music that comes from these instruments is probably just as satisfactory as would have been the music obtained from the largest piano in the world that was designed to grace the San Francisco Exposition.

Probably the smallest player piano in the world would delight Mr. Liebling's artistic ear, in that he could get far enough away from it so that he could not hear it. That is something that a great many people desire when they hear the average player piano demonstrated by the average piano salesman.

EARLY EVENTS AT PORTLAND.

Season Shows Signs of Activity in the Oregon Metropolis.

Phones, Main 5906 and Main 6711,
445 Sherlock Building,
Portland, Ore., October 10, 1914.

Notwithstanding the financial depression on the Pacific Coast, a capacity audience heard Olive Fremstad sing in the Heilig Theatre on the evening of October 7. The singer was repeatedly recalled with great enthusiasm. Mme. Fremstad's recital, which was given under the direction of Steers & Coman, marked the opening of the local musical season. George F. W. Bruhns, the accompanist, gave much satisfaction.

PORTLAND SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Beginning November 1 the Portland Symphony Orchestra will give another series of six concerts. The organization has three conductors, Harold Bayley, Carl Denton and George E. Jeffery. Each conductor will direct two concerts. The orchestra is a cooperative organization, composed of union musicians. This orchestra does not engage soloists. Schubert's C major symphony is on the first program.

JULIA CLAUSSEN TO SING WITH APOLLO CLUB.

The first concert of the season of the Apollo Club, William H. Boyer, director, will take place on October 24, with Julia Claussen, the contralto, as soloist. The club, of which the city is very proud, is made up of seventy-five male singers.

STEERS & COMAN'S ATTRACTIONS.

Steers & Coman, the local managers, have booked, among others, the following artists for their fourteenth annual series of subscription concerts: Josef Lhevinne, Alma Gluck, Efrem Zimbalist and Leo Slezak.

PORTLAND NOTES.

Some of the leading teachers of voice, piano, violin and cello are cooperating with W. Gifford Nash for the purpose of presenting their advanced students in a series of six concerts with orchestra. Heretofore students desiring an appearance with the support of an orchestra have had to go to one of the large Eastern musical centers. Last year Mr. Nash presented six of his pupils in piano concertos with orchestral accompaniment. D. C. Denmark will manage the concerts.

William Wallace Graham, who has occupied the concertmaster's chair of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, has been reappointed conductor of the Portland Amateur Orchestral Association, which numbers thirty-five musicians.

F. X. Arens, conductor of the People's Symphony Orchestra of New York, who passed the month of September in Portland, left this week for his home in New York City.

Robert Boice Carson, the tenor and voice teacher, has returned from his vacation spent in Chicago and the East.

Local subscribers are invited to send their recital programs to the writer. JOHN R. OATMAN.

Ada Soder-Hueck Back from Europe.

Ada Soder-Hueck, the German contralto and voice trainer, after an extended trip abroad has returned from Europe and reopened her vocal studios in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, with a brilliant reception on Sunday, October 4, giving her many pupils, patrons and friends an opportunity to welcome her back. Many well known people were present, including musicians as well as society people, and an interesting program of songs and arias was rendered by some of Mme. Soder-Hueck's artist-pupils, who delighted the big audience.

It was difficult to secure passage on a Rotterdam steamer, Mme. Soder-Hueck says, after war conditions forced her to return via Holland. "It caused me a delay of several weeks," she said, "and I knew that everybody was anxiously waiting here for me. But oh, it is good to be back in safe, dear old New York, after having gone through all this horrible excitement abroad; and yet I would not have liked to have missed it for the world. I could write a book about my experience and what I have seen and heard has stirred my deepest emotion. I never will forget it! What a winter season this is going to be for Berlin! No time and no care for music; only the rattling of the bullets on the battlefields and much grief and tears.

"I feel the present condition personally because on this trip I intended to establish myself in my former home city, Berlin, for part of the year, spending the greater part of each season like before, in my New York vocal studios. This was an old idea and plan, as I know and have studied the musical conditions of both countries, and thought to extend my business, helping my many trained American singers now before the public, and those who are to appear later. I wanted to take many of them along and to place them successfully in the various German opera houses, also bringing over European singers of mine who desire to visit America.

"Well, my plans had to be postponed, but they will be fulfilled later on. I have just started my busiest American season with many singers enrolled, among them some very gifted sopranos of great promise. There are also many professionals coaching with me. Regular monthly receptions and musicales will be arranged during the season."

Mme. Soder-Hueck is a teacher of the Garcia method.

Case-Kasner Concert.

On Friday evening, October 9, Anna Case, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Jacques Kasner, violinist, gave a concert at the Second Reformed Church of Somerville, N. J. The church was crowded to its capacity to hear these talented young artists, who were assisted by Charles Gilbert Spross, pianist, and Diana Kasner, accompanist.

The following was the program:

Rhapsody ..... Dohnanyi
Etude Melodique ..... Raff
Paraphrase, Fledermaus ..... Strauss

Charles Gilbert Spross.

Es blinkt der Thau ..... Rubinstein
Röselein ..... Schumann
Ecloque ..... Delibes
Ave Maria ..... Schubert

Anna Case.

Serenade Melancolique ..... Tschaikowsky
Perpetuum Mobile ..... O. Novacek

Jacques Kasner.

Ah, non credea, from Sonnambula ..... Bellini

Anna Case.

Caprice Viennois ..... Fritz Kreisler
Tambourin ..... Fritz Kreisler
Chinois Tambourin ..... Fritz Kreisler

Jacques Kasner.

My Little Grey Home in the West ..... Herman Lohr
Coming Thro' the Rye ..... Old Scotch
Way Down Upon the Suwanee River ..... Old American

Anna Case.

Hejre Kati ..... Hubay

Jacques Kasner.

Bell Song, from Lakme ..... Delibes

Anna Case.

Miss Case scored her usual success, the enthusiasm amounting to an ovation, and she was obliged to add three encores. Her beautiful soprano voice has long been a favorite with the people of her home State, and it is not difficult to understand the reason.

Mr. Kasner's success was marked by sincere appreciation on the part of the audience. His encores included "From a Wigwam," Cecil Burleigh; "Spanish Dance," Rehfeld, and mazurka, Mylnarski.

Miss Kasner was at the piano for Mr. Kasner's numbers and proved herself an excellent accompanist. Mr. Spross accompanied Miss Case.

David Hochstein's Rochester Success.

The young violinist, David Hochstein, who arrived in this country recently after a five year sojourn abroad, where he studied with the foremost masters of the present day and also toured in concert extensively, is now deeply engrossed in his concert and teaching activities in and around New York City. Future plans for a tour throughout the Western and Southern States will be announced at an early date.

By special arrangement, Mr. Hochstein played at a private recital for Mrs. Watson, at her Rochester home, on Friday evening, October 9. On this occasion the young artist was enthusiastically received by his distinguished audience, and brilliant predictions for his American success were forthcoming. Mrs. Watson will be remembered as the founder of the Rochester Art Gallery. The violinist's program for the evening was as follows:

Sonata in D major ..... Handel
Romance ..... Schumann
Vogel als Prophet ..... Schumann
Sicilienne ..... Bach
Waltz ..... Brahms
Albumblatt ..... Wagner-Wilhelmj
La Capricieuse ..... Edw. Elgar
Cherry Ripe ..... Cyril Scott
Menuet en style ancien ..... David Hochstein
Melodie ..... Tschaikowsky
Caprice ..... Paganini
Rapsodia Piemontese ..... Sinigaglia

Rudolph Ganz Plays.

Always welcome in New York, where he long has been known as an artist of dignified and appealing musical attainments, pianist Rudolph Ganz is more than ever a favored visitor here at this time, when he has just come from helping his native Switzerland maintain its neutrality.

A sympathetic audience followed Rudolph Ganz's piano ministrations at his Carnegie Hall recital last Sunday afternoon, October 18, with unabated interest, and found him to have broadened and deepened immeasurably in his art, a fine spirit of authority and bigness informing every phase of his performance. He sets forth on the piano music rather than pianism. The composer makes more appeal to him than the audience and it is evident that he possesses to a rare degree the enviable powers of artistic objectivity and introspective self-absorption. Transparent interpretative analysis, clean presentment of formal boundaries and demarcations, and absolute freedom from any attempt to exploit the technical proficiency which he possesses in such astonishing completeness, are the solid foundations of Ganz's art, and on them is built a less austere superstructure of many shaded tone quality, refined sentiment, and a wide gamut of temperamental variety, ranging from poetical charm to exulting masculine vigor. Ganz is in every sense of the word a modern player of the piano, which means one in touch with every phase of the instrument and its literature, from the day of clavecin composition to the finger breaking complexities of a Godowsky in his transcriptional mood.

While oversensitive purists might bemoan the fact that Busoni has arranged Bach's violin chaconne for piano, the fact remains that as Ganz played the work last Sunday, it had a reason to exist, for it represented a musical achievement with an ethical purpose. The D major sonata of Haydn had a tender reading from Ganz, whose delightful touch helped to give the quaint old measures their proper air of crystalline simplicity. On the other hand, Chopin's B minor sonata revealed large grasp, passionate impetus, and a warmly colored imagination. The work showed Ganz at the top notch of his resources as a suggestive and stimulating interpreter.

Two subtly sensed and cleverly harmonized pieces by Blanchet ("In the Garden of the Old Seraglio" and "Serenade" in G flat), a well made morceau by Korngold ("Elve's Dance"), two pieces by Ganz ("Etude Caprice," op. 14, and "The Pensive Spinner," op. 10), and Liszt's "Mignon's Lied" and "Rakoczy March" ended the program unconventionally and brilliantly. The Ganz compositions revealed melodic attractiveness and uncommonly polished workmanship. The second one had to be repeated.

Ringing applause rewarded all the Ganz efforts and encores were given as the result of undeniable desire for more on the part of the auditors. The afternoon was one of real musical pleasure, and to many its significance had an added flavor because of the fact that the box office proceeds went to the Swiss Red Cross Society.

Reinald Werrenrath's New York Program.

Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, will give a song recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, on October 26. He will be heard in the following program: "O wüsst' ich doch den Weg zurück," "Tambourliedchen," Brahms; "Hochsommer," Weingartner; "Licht," Sinding; "Sonnenuntergang," "Die Hexe," "Der Brunnquel," Arthur Hinton; "Fior di dolcezza," E. del Valle de Paz; "Ultima Rosa," Harry Spier; "Sei morta ne la vita mia," P. Mario Costa; "Tristezza Crepuscolare," Francesco Santoliquido; "The Place of Dreams," Harold Osborn Smith; "You, My Dear," Miner Walden Gallup; "The Little Ghosts," F. Morris Glass; "Song Magic," Deems Taylor; "Night and the Curtains Drawn," G. Ferrata; "Sometimes I Watch Thee," Bruno Huhn; "Romany Love Song," David Stanley Smith; "In the Foggy Dew," Harvey Worthington Loomis; "Fuzzy-Wuzzy," Arthur Whiting.

Yvonne de Treville and Carmen Sylva.

The recent death of King Carol of Roumania is sincerely mourned by Yvonne de Tréville, for during her many visits to Bucharest, the prima donna was always received "in intimité" by Queen Elizabeth (Carmen Sylva) and sang many times to royal accompaniment, as Her Majesty is a very fine musician and accomplished pianist.

"Auf der Bleiche," which Miss de Tréville sings in the twentieth century part of her costume recital program to be given in New York, Brooklyn, Washington, etc., next month, was arranged especially for her by Carmen Sylva.

After De Tréville's first performance of this song at the palace of Cotroceni, King Carol decorated the singer with the Golden Order of Benemerito, an honor much coveted but rarely bestowed on any but officers in the field of battle.

The new queen, Marie, considered the most beautiful member of the royal houses of Europe, presented Miss de Tréville with a lovely ruby and diamond pendant on the occasion referred to above.

Below appears Miss de Tréville's program for her costume song recital, "Three Centuries of Prime-Donne," which she will give in Aeolian Hall, New York, Friday afternoon, November 6.

FIRST PART—EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.
Mlle. de Maupin (period, Louis XIV).

Menuet Chanté ..... Lulli
L'Amour Est Un Enfant Trompeur ..... Martini
Phillis ..... Anthony Young
Pastorale ..... Henry Carey

PART SECOND—NINETEENTH CENTURY.
Jenny Lind (Period, 1850).

Thema e Variazioni ..... Proch
Scandinavian Folksong—No. 1.
Scandinavian Folksong—No. 2.
Scandinavian Folksong—No. 3.
Mad Scene from Camp of Silesia ..... Meyerbeer
(Composed for Jenny Lind.)

PART THIRD—TWENTIETH CENTURY.
Yvonne de Tréville.

Air from Louise ..... Charpentier
Thistledown ..... Charles Wakefield Cadman
(Composed for and dedicated to Mlle. de Tréville.)
Song ..... Henry K. Hadley
(Composed for and dedicated to Mlle. de Tréville.)
Chanson Provencale ..... Dell' Acqua
(Arranged for Mlle. de Tréville by the composer.)
Auf der Bleiche ..... Bungert-Carmen Sylva
(Arranged for Mlle de Tréville by Her Majesty the Queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylva.)
Aria from Ariadne Auf Naxos ..... Richard Strauss

Boston's Estimate of Blanche Fox.

Blanche Hamilton Fox, the American contralto, is now singing in opera in Boston, Mass.

The press of that city has the following to say of her voice and ability:

Miss Fox, who was heard for the first time in opera in this city, gave a highly creditable impersonation of Amneris. Her rich, full voice is well suited to the music, and she sang authoritatively in the grand style. Her acting showed experience and a knowledge of routine, and she was more animated and less conventional than the average American singer.—Boston Herald, October 6, 1914.

The principals, on the other hand, surpassed expectation. Mme. Fox as Amneris, perhaps, carried away the principal laurels of the evening, combining as she does a pleasing, rich voice with very creditable acting.—Boston Evening Transcript, October 6, 1914.

Blanche Hamilton Fox proved a revelation to the public and her friends who were present in platoons. She possesses a rich, velvety contralto, agreeable in all registers, which she uses with skill and authority. She has had much experience in foreign parts, and her Amneris was very satisfactory.—Boston American, October 6, 1914.

(Advertisement.)

Albert Spalding's Bookings.

Albert Spalding will open his season at Carnegie Hall, New York, with a recital, Thursday afternoon, October 29. The violinist's bookings for the first half of the season, arranged to date, are as follows:

November 5, Philadelphia, Pa.
November 12, recital in Boston, Mass.
November 30, Chicago, Ill.
December 8, Lawrence, Kan.
December 11 and 12, with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.
December 15, Chicago, Ill.
January 8, San Francisco, Cal., with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.
January 23, joint recital with Julia Culp, in Washington, D. C.
January 25, joint recital with Julia Culp, in Portland, Me.
January 26, joint recital with Julia Culp, in Providence, R. I.
January 27, joint recital with Julia Culp, in Worcester, Mass.
February 4, joint recital with Emilio de Gogorza, in Brooklyn, N.Y.
February 16, concert in Detroit, Mich., with the Cincinnati Orchestra.

New Honor for Wilbur A. Luyster.

Wilbur A. Luyster has been unanimously elected conductor of the Orpheus Glee Club, of Ridgewood, N. J.

Examinations for scholarships at the Galin-Paris-Chéve School of Sight Singing, 64 East Thirty-fourth street, New York, Wilbur A. Luyster director, will close this week.

Alice Garrigue Mott's Studio Again Active.

While it was Alice Garrigue Mott's full intention to open her season of 1914-1915, October 1, she practically resumed teaching the day she arrived from Europe. Many professional singers and actresses were waiting for Mme. Mott's return, in order to have her prepare them for winter performances. Managers and physicians are constantly sending their artists and patients to Mme. Mott, in order to receive the knowledge of the normal, natural use of the vocal organ in song and speech, which if not observed in performances, is wrecking to their voice and produces untold distress to the performers.

One of New York's celebrated throat specialists asked Mme. Mott to open her studio before October 1 for the benefit of professionals. One particular singer in total vocal disorder was obliged to acquire the knowledge of the normal use of her physical organ, or renounce her very good contract, which meant support to herself and daughter. A habit of forcing her tones by muscular strain had interfered with tone and pitch, and had also checked the circulation of the blood to the brain, causing the artist to faint while performing. Mme. Mott located the trouble instantly, and with some infallible exercises for putting the physical organ in normal use, the singer went through her performance that night and continues to hold her position satisfactorily to her manager, and her physician finds no more throat disorder.

Since this season has opened with the same demand upon Alice Garrigue Mott's time as last season, she can hear voices now by special written appointment only. In order to avoid the interruption of lessons, Mme. Mott refuses to answer telephone calls personally, except at 8.45 a. m., 1.30 p. m. and 6.30 p. m.

Granberry Piano School Events.

On Wednesday evening, October 14, six pupils of the Granberry Piano School, George Folsom Granberry, director, appeared in recital at Carnegie Chamber Music Hall, New York. A feature of the concert lay in the fact that three of the compositions were played in any key requested by the audience, thus illustrating the Faelten System of Fundamental Pianoforte Instruction, which occupies a prominent position in the work of the Granberry Piano School.

The following was the program:

French suite, E major (Bach), Virginia Corcoran; musette, D major (Bach), waltz, C major (Dennée), waltz, D major (Bertini), Elizabeth McAinsh; "Gondoliera," A flat major (Reinecke), "Loreley," E flat major, op. 2 (Seeling), Marion Sachi; "Winter Goodby" (Loew), barcarolle, G major (Elsenheimer), Gertrude Elsenheimer; rondo capriccio, E major, op. 14 (Mendelssohn), Virginia Corcoran; "The Maiden's Wish" (Chopin-Liszt), valse, A flat major (Chopin), Beatrice Moore; etude, A flat major, op. 25, No. 1, etude, F minor, op. 10, No. 9, berceuse, D flat major, op. 57, fantaisie impromptu, C sharp minor, op. 66 (Chopin), Suye Ogura.

A Christine Miller Letter.

From Christine Miller, the American contralto, comes a graphic picture of her life and conditions in Berlin, as shown in the following letter to Fitzhugh W. Haensel, of the New York managerial bureau, Haensel & Jones:

Kurfurstendamm 40-41,
c/o Pension Medenwaldt,
Berlin, W., September 15, 1914.

DEAR MR. HAENSEL: Your letter of August 26 is just received, and I am happy that at least my cable has reached you. Have received no letters from home since one dated July 30—I do hope they are all well. Certainly one cannot count upon the post in these times, for with yours of August 26 came others from America dated July 30. You see I am yet in Berlin, safe and well and comfortable. Berlin is a safe place now, for western Europe, France and Belgium, certainly are in a precarious state.

I am, of course, very, very anxious about getting home. The Channel, I am afraid, will soon become the center of great battles; how soon no one can tell. My passage on the "Potsdam" for October 10 is paid for, and I can only await developments. I considered myself most fortunate in securing first class accommodations. I simply could not see the necessity of taking anything, merely to get out of Germany. Truly here in Berlin one cannot realize that such a terrible war is in progress. Food is plentiful and cheap; business seems to go on as before, and there is no excitement apparent, save when the hundreds of wounded soldiers arrive. Here in the Pension, our cook today received word that her husband and only son have been killed on the Russian border; my chambermaid, by the same mail, received word of the death of her only brother, on the French border; and they go about their duties today, taking it all as a matter of course, hearts breaking, but showing little grief. The loss of life is appalling, I am told, and so many high officers are among the killed.

I am glad you approved of my not rushing off as hundreds did and as the Ambassador advised. It seemed so uncalled for. I have written you weekly letters, but cannot hope that all have heached you. I am coaching with Conrad V. Bos and H. Heineman, and am not wasting my time. I have coffee often with Mr. Abell, of the MUSICAL COURIER, and the folks in the Pension are most agreeable, so I am not lonesome. The days are not at all long enough for all I wish to do and accomplish.

I am truly hoping and praying that all may yet be well, that I may return safely. My heartfelt greetings to you all.

CHRISTINE MILLER.

China is to have a new national anthem, composed by Chang Chien, minister of agriculture and commerce. The music is said to be appropriately Oriental in flavor and the anthem is expected soon to become a genuine people's song.—Exchange.

Frederic Martin in Recital Field.

Frederic Martin, basso, is probably best known throughout the country as an oratorio singer of superior attainments. In this special line of work he has appeared with all the leading oratorio societies of the country. Martin is one of the few artists whose versatility is of such a high order that he has successfully entered the recital field, as the following program will show:

Creation's Hymn	Beethoven
She Never Told Her Love (Canzonet)	Haydn
The Inpatient Husbandman (from The Seasons)	Haydn
Leave Me, Loathsome Light (from Semele)	Handel
More Sweet Is That Name (from Semele)	Handel
Das Wirthshaus	Schubert
Wohin	Schubert
Der Wanderer	Schubert
Alt Heidelberg	Jensen
An einem Bache	Grieg
Mit einer Wasserlilie	Grieg
Ständchen	Brahms
Das Kraut Vergessenheit	Hildach
Chanson de Vulcain (Philemon et Baucis)	Gounod
Paysage	Hahn
Chanson, La Jolie Fille de Perth	Bizet
Phillis Has Such Charming Graces	Old English
The Pipes of Pan	Elgar
The Sea	MacDowell
Don't Ceäre	John A. Carpenter
Noon and Night	Charles B. Hawley
Robin Goodfellow	Orlando Morgan
Exhortation (A Negro Sermon)	Will Marion Cook

This program was given at the summer school session of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., July 10.

Notices of Mr. Martin's work last season are given below:

"He demonstrated his fitness to rank among the first of American bassos."—The Press, Pittsburgh.

"The star of the occasion. His singing was a revelation in the purity of tone and absolute command of his splendid voice."—The Herald, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"He gave the finest illustration of the true oratorio style that this season has brought forth."—New York Tribune.

"To Frederic Martin, as Elijah, belongs the real triumph of the evening. He sang the role in a manner that was ideal. His interpretation of the aria, 'It is Enough,' was superb."—The Herald, New Castle, Pa.

Mr. Martin has been reengaged for the New York Oratorio Society's performances of "The Messiah" at Carnegie Hall, on December 29 and 30. He will also appear with the A Capella Chorus in Milwaukee on December 20, when "The Messiah" will be sung in German, under the direction of William P. Boeppler. On Christmas Night Mr. Martin will appear with the Philharmonic Club of Minneapolis. He is, as usual, under the direction of Foster & David.

LATEST PHOTO OF THE PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA. LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI, CONDUCTOR.
A report of the opening pair of concerts, season 1914-15, will be found on another page.

Photo by Haeseler Photo Co., Phila.
LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI,

LATER CHICAGO NEWS.

Chicago, Ill., October 18, 1914.

The South Park Commissioners announce a song recital to be given in the Hamilton Park Field House, Monday evening, October 26. The program on this occasion will be given by Florence Pettinger, soprano, who will sing songs by La Forge, Chadwick, Beach and Campbell-Tipton.

STURKOW RYDER STUDIO RECITAL.

On Friday afternoon, October 30, the first of a series of five studio musicales to be held this winter in Theodora Sturkow Ryder's studios will be given. An all classical program made up of selections by Haydn, Beethoven, Hartmann, Friml and a sonata for piano and violin to be played by Mmes. Sturkow Ryder and DeVore, will bring forth besides those two professional artists, pupils of Mme. Sturkow Ryder, namely, Ruth Hanak, Alexander Alison and Ernau Blythe Smith. Miss Smith has just been engaged as Mrs. Ryder's assistant teacher. She has had experience in instructing children, especially beginners, and has made a special study of normal work and harmony with reference to young students.

CHICAGO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OPENS SEASON.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra began its season under the direction of Frederick Stock on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, October 16 and 17. A full report of the opening concerts appears on another page.

NEWARK MUSICIANS' CLUB GIVES FIRST CONCERT.

New Organization Holds First Regular Meeting of Season—Large Audience Hears Delightful Musical Program—Final Arrangements Are Being Made for First Rehearsal of Gigantic Newark Festival Chorus.

Newark, N. J., October 19, 1914.

On Wednesday evening last, October 14, the Newark Musicians' Club, which was organized last May, held the first meeting of the season at 41 Spruce street. As delightful a musical program as one could wish to hear was rendered by members of the club, and the large audience present found ample opportunity for loud applause.

The printed program was a follows:

Trio, op. 1, No. 3, C minor.....Beethoven
Andante con variazioni.
Edwin Wickenhoefer, violin; Henry W. Jordan, Jr., cello, and Alexander Berne, piano.

Contralto solos—
Wohin.....Tassen
Thy Beaming Eyes.....MacDowell
Mary Potter.

Violin solos—
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Gypsy Airs.....Sarasate
Arthur L. Walsh.

Tenor solos—
Phyllis Has Such Charming Graces.....Wilson
Bois Epais.....Lully
Prayer from Jewels of the Madonna.....Wolf-Ferrari
Edward J. Boyle.

Piano solos—
Etude.....Alexander Lambert
Etude.....Schlozer
Katherine Eyman.

Soprano solos—
One Fine Day, from Madame Butterfly.....Puccini
Marsh Rosemary.....Cox
Catherine Bryce.

Trio, op. 49, Molto Allegro ed Agitato.....Mendelssohn
Messrs. Wickenhoefer, Jordan, Berne.

Newark can now boast of a real musicians' club. To the writer's knowledge at least, never in the past has there existed in this city an organization of this kind. Purely democratic, with aims and ambitions of the very best, how can it fail to succeed? It is not a club limited to a group of friends, as one mistaken person recently remarked, but an association organized and to be conducted for the benefit of all musicians of the city and music in general.

It is the desire of the club to have every teacher in the city represented and to make the membership not wholly local, but to include teachers and pupils residing within the twenty-five mile radius allowed for in the club by laws. Some of the teachers now represented are as follows: Florence Mulford Hunt, Newark; James Sauvage, Newark; Tom Daniel, Newark; Louis Ehrke, Newark; Otto Shill, Newark; C. Wenham Smith, Newark; Manuel Svet, Newark; Miss Colgate, New York; Alexander Lambert, New York; Rafael Josephy, New York; Leopold Godowsky, New York; Mrs. Baumann, Newark, N. J.; Mrs. George E. Clauder, Newark, N. J., and numerous others.

If this last program is a sample of what the club members are to hear each month during the season, a delightful and unusually interesting series of meetings are to be looked forward to. The club, which is growing continually, has some extraordinary talent among its members, and with such a large number of really capable musicians, the programs, both private and public, ought to prove excellent ones.

The club has now been firmly established and has opened the season with a most successful meeting. It is to be hoped that the club will grow and prosper in such a way that Newark will soon find it an organization of great benefit to the development of music and art in this city as well as elsewhere.

SINGERS URGED TO JOIN FESTIVAL CHORUS.

Only eight more days remain before the first rehearsal of the gigantic Newark Festival Chorus, which is to take part in the three-day music festival in May. For this reason singers who have neglected to send in their names, or call in person for their membership cards, are urged to do so before the first rehearsal. Director Wiske will be at the offices of the association, Lauter Building, 593 Broad street, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m. to receive applications.

The chorus is growing rapidly, but it has not yet reached the desired one thousand mark. There are many singers who have not as yet received their membership cards. Not alone are singers of Newark invited to join, but those of the suburbs are also asked to become members. Every nearby town and city in New Jersey is represented, and there are a large number of New York singers who have sent in applications for membership.

The first rehearsal of the chorus will be held on Wednesday evening, October 28, in the parlors of the South Park Presbyterian Church, corner Broad street and Clinton avenue (seven blocks south of Market street).

Manuel Quiroga's Debut.

Spanish violinists are not many—Sarasate and Manen long formed the only exceptions—and therefore curiosity was rife concerning Manuel Quiroga, a native of Spain, who effected his New York debut last Sunday evening at the Hippodrome, assisted by Jeanne Jomelli and Nahan Franko's Orchestra. Quiroga was engaged in London by Lee Shubert, the theatrical manager, who is sponsoring his American tour in conjunction with R. E. Johnston.

MANUEL QUIROGA.

Using the Mendelssohn concerto as his introductory number last Sunday, Quiroga (who is twenty-three years old and of picturesque appearance) at once made the impression of being a serious performer of legitimate training and advanced accomplishments. He has a technical mastery which while it shows only slight flaws here and there, in some departments easily reaches the sensational, especially in his spiccato and staccato bowing and his virtuoso handling of octaves. Quiroga's tone is of rare sweetness and makes a pronouncedly sensuous appeal. In his interpretation he reflects taste and sentiment rather than depth and nobility. The Mendelssohn concerto might have had a more reposeful reading at Quiroga's hands and one purer in intonation, but allowances must be made for the young artist's nervousness. Also the enormous hall was against him. However, in Saint-Saëns' "Havanaise" and Wieniawski's "Russian Airs," Quiroga shone resplendent and brought to light all the traditional fiddle fireworks in approved fashion. His brilliancy was unquestioned and he inspired the audience to tumultuous applause. Eight encores were added during the evening to Quiroga's regular numbers. Of his vast success with his hearers there was no doubt.

Mme. Jomelli was heard in the "Jewel Song," from "Faust," and four songs, Chaminade's "L'Eté," d'Hardelot's "Summer," MacDermid's "Sacrament," and Lehmann's "Cuckoo." This gifted and popular soprano has obtained a firm hold on the affections of our local public and she was given a rousing reception as usual. Her voice proved to be in unusually fine estate and its lovely timbre as well as the vocal skill displayed gave joy not only to the layman, but also to the connoisseur. Keen appreciation of the variations in musical style marked all the Jomelli renderings, and their effect was enhanced markedly through the intelligent text exposition and effective climax building of the experienced song artist.

Nahan Franko's control of the orchestra is too well known to need emphasis at this late day. He has the unique faculty of being able to make his numerically small orchestra play with the full bodied tone of an organization much larger than his own. His fine sense of rhythm, spirited readings, unfailing musicianship and magnetic personality are features which have made him the best known and best liked orchestral leader in New York. Alfoen's "Swedish Rhapsody," Goldmark's "Sakuntala" overture, a Bach choral and fugue, and Rossini's "Semiramis" overture were received rapturously by the audience in the fascinating Franko readings. The versatile leader's orchestral accompaniments for the violinist and the singer were models of discretion and accuracy.

A box was occupied by Alma Gluck, Efrem Zimbalist and Mischa Elman.

Century Opera Sunday Evening Concert.

Sunday night's concert (October 18) at the Century Opera House, New York, brought forth a number of excellent soloists in the persons of Kathleen Howard, who gave Tschaikowsky's "Nur, wer die Sehnsucht Kennt," with cello obligato, played by Vladimir Dubinsky, in which she was enthusiastically received; Maude Santley, whose singing of "Il Est Doux," from Massenet's "Herodiade," was a delight to the ear; Louis Kreidler, who gave the "Evening Star" song, from "Tannhäuser," with his usual fine interpretation and splendid voice; Henry Weldon, singing with masterful effect Vulcan's song from "Philemon et Baucis" (Gounod), and Graham Marr, who sang "Eri Tu," from "The Masked Ball," and displayed his remarkable baritone voice, winning much applause.

Other soloists on the program were Bettina Freeman, Hardy Williamson and Carlo Sodero, the latter giving as a harp solo, "Marche Triomphale," by Godefroid. The orchestral numbers included the overture to "Mignon," a waltz by Johann Strauss, the "Coronation March," from "Le Prophete," and a group of Tschaikowsky, Gillet and Jaernfeldt.

The conductors were Josef Pasternack and Hugo Riesenfeld.

German Press Club Reception to Friedberg.

Carl Friedberg, the German pianist, who arrived in this country recently and will make his first American appearance this season, was tendered a reception last Saturday evening at the Hotel Astor by the German Press Club.

Mr. Friedberg was presented to the large assemblage by his manager, Annie Friedberg, who also shortly will introduce to America the Italian violinist, Arrigo Serato. During the evening a very interesting program of music was heard. The artists participating were Earl La Ross, pianist; Adele Krueger, soprano; Karl Klein, violinist; Helen Scholder, cellist.

Among the guests were Jeanne Jomelli, Nana Genovese, Betty Askenasy, Mr. and Mrs. Hertz, Lima O'Brian, William Guard, Louis Koemmenich, Richard Arnold, Vernon D'Arnalle, Dr. William C. Carl, Herwegh von Ende, Theodore Spiering, Mrs. Bruno Oscar Klein, Louis Blumenberg, and others.

Music at Smith College.

Smith College, North Hampton, Mass., has a successful music department. There are seventeen members in its faculty, three of whom are full professors. Work in this department is accredited toward an A. B degree. Weekly recitals are given by members of the faculty and visiting musicians. These are open to the public.

In addition to the above there is a Smith College concert course, consisting of eight concerts by various artists, orchestras, etc.

Shattuck at Drake University.

Arthur Shattuck, the American pianist, has been engaged to give a recital at Drake University, Des Moines, Ia. February 15. Holmes Cowper is dean of the music department.

Annie Louise David Wins Plaudits.

Herewith are reproduced some telling estimates of Annie Louise David's ability to please, and of her standing as a harpist. These notices are based upon some of her spring concert tour appearances:

Annie Louise David has a gift of program making, and among her excellencies is a keen sense of rhythm, which, though we do not often stop to think so, belongs to the harp as to any other music. She has a dainty touch, and the pearliness of run and cadenza seems to lack that twang and snap which some harpists acquire. It would be a little difficult to imagine a harp recitalist who gets more consistent musical value out of her numbers, or more agreeable nuance out of an instrument that many people insist is hardly adaptable for much solo use, as it is for color in orchestral surrounding.—Utica Daily Press.

From a musical and artistic point of view, the most valuable incidents of the concert were Annie Louise David's performances. In all these, fine technic and sound musicianship compelled hearty applause.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The committee presented the well known harpist, Annie Louise David, of New York. She scored unmistakably—winning inevitable encores—showing a rare program taste, much delicacy and grace of rhythm, a delightful technical skill, the grace that revealed "the thrill without the almost inevitable snap of the harp string." Her themal etching was beautifully done and daintily encrusted with the arpeggio arabesques so characteristic of the instrument. The harp she played is a particularly fine concert instrument, of full luscious tone, even to the altitudes.—Wilkes-Barre Record, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The high reputation of Annie Louise David, which preceded her to this city, was sustained to the highest degree, as she won instant favor, fairly entrancing her hearers with her masterly handling of the harp, which responded to her skillful touch as if by magic.—Chillicothe (Ohio) Advertiser. (Advertisement.)

Mme. Wylie with Wichita Symphony Orchestra.

Louise Jansen Wylie appears in the accompanying picture, which was taken as she came out of the Crawford Theatre, Wichita, Kan., with Mr. Lindberg, conductor of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra, and Manager Iris Pendleton, after a rehearsal for the symphony orchestra concert, Sunday afternoon, October 4.

This was Mme. Wylie's third appearance in Wichita, where her name on a program is sufficient to tax the capacity of any theatre in the city.

Mme. Wylie will sing in several of the principal cities of Iowa, and appear at a recital at Lincoln, Neb., November 2; also at an Omaha concert before beginning her Southern tour through Texas to the Gulf.

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE, PROFESSOR LINDBERG, IRIS PENDLETON.

Mendelssohn Club Sings at Brown University.

Conservative Providence (R. I.), through the press of that city, refers to the concert given by the Mendelssohn Glee Club, of New York, Louis Koemmenich, conductor, during the recent anniversary week celebration at Brown University, as a "superb" affair. It mentions Louis Koemmenich as "an artist and a leader of note," as a "thorough musician" and one who "keeps his forces under excellent control at all times."

The Providence Journal of October 15 contained the following account:

"A concert by the Mendelssohn Glee Club, of New York, the chief musical event in the anniversary celebration of Brown University, was given in Infantry Hall last evening, before a large audience of delegates and invited guests.

"There is probably no other male chorus in the country which can boast of such individual excellence of voice as the Mendelssohn. This being the case, it is easier to understand the truly remarkable results which the club obtains. There is flexibility of ensemble scarcely to be expected of such a large body of singers and their attack is almost perfect. Last evening's program afforded abundant opportunity for the display of the artistic finish for which the club is so justly famed. Each number was so beautifully sung that a choice would be hard to make. The audience, however, showed a particular liking for Nagler's 'Huzza! the Old Fiddler,' and it was repeated.

"The club has a fine first tenor section which sang the very high parts when pianissimo with ravishing effect. The conductor, Louis Koemmenich, is a thorough musician and keeps his forces under excellent control at all times.

"One of the most noticeable as well as enjoyable features of the club's singing is the perfect blending of the voices. This results in a very beautiful quality of the body of tone. The balance of parts is also finely adjusted. The closing chorus of several of the numbers which were held softly had the richness of a great organ. The assisting soloists, who were members of the club, were John Young, tenor, who sang Ponchielli's 'Cielo e mar,' from 'Gioconda,' and a duet from 'Boheme,' with William D. Tucker, baritone. Mr. Young is the only member of the club who is a Brown graduate, he being a member of the class of 1895. During his college course he sang in the university quartet and led the glee club for a time.

"His solo work, which was very pleasing, displayed a voice pure and high and very easily produced. In the duet, Mr. Tucker also made an impression with his round, smooth voice and easy style. For an encore Mr. Young sang the old English song, 'Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes,' playing his own accompaniment.

"The concert was a great artistic success and was thoroughly enjoyed by those who had the good fortune to be present."

The Providence Evening Tribune, of October 15, paid this tribute to Mr. Koemmenich and his singers:

"One of the most delightful features of anniversary week at Brown University was the superb concert given in Infantry Hall last night by the famous Mendelssohn Glee Club, of New York. This delightful musical evening was arranged especially for the entertainment of guests here for the anniversary and the alumni and alumnæ of Brown, and few seats in the great hall were unoccupied.

"This fine musical organization, made up as it is of a male chorus of trained singers, many of them singers of note, has scarcely an equal in the country, and the result is a wonderful beauty of tone, a remarkable smoothness and balancing of the parts, and a degree of musical harmony which is truly unusual and delightful.

"The conductor, Louis Koemmenich, himself an artist and a leader of note, had his chorus under excellent control, as was evident in the results obtained and the brilliancy of the attack of the chorus when necessary. The tenor section of the chorus, especially, achieved some exquisite effects in the high parts, while the bassos were especially successful in the deeper tones and harmonies.

"The program was as follows: 'Shine Forth, O Day' (Weinzierl); 'Would That Life Were Endless Sailing' (Storch); 'Viking Song' (Coleridge-Taylor); 'The Lamp in the West' (Parker); tenor solo, 'Cielo e mar,' from 'La Gioconda' (Ponchielli), Mr. John Young; 'The Flying Dutchman' (Andrea); 'Huzza! the Old Fiddler' (Nagler); duet from 'La Boheme' (Puccini), John Young and William D. Tucker; 'In Winter' (Kremser); 'Suomi's Song' (Mayr); 'Marietta' (Gall); 'The Willow Song,' from 'Otello'; 'Antolycus's Song' (Greenhill), 'A Winter's Tale,' Frank Croxton; 'Morning in the Dewy Woods' (Hegar); 'Vale Carissima' (Attenhofer); 'Hymn of Thanksgiving' (Kremser).

"The assisting soloists, members of the club, were John Young, a talented lyric tenor and a Brown graduate of the class of 1895, and Frank Croxton, basso. Mr. Young delighted all with the beauty and freshness of his voice, and for encore sang 'Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes,' to his own accompaniment."

Francis Rogers Engagements This Week.

Francis Rogers, with Daniel Gregory Mason, gave a song and piano recital at Columbia University, New York, Sunday evening, October 18. Today, October 21, he is sharing a musical program with Edwin Grasse, at the church wedding of Miss Hostetter, at Locust Valley, N. Y.

1914-1915 1915-1916

We are booking dates for both this season and the next for :: ::

CHARLES W.
CLARK

Who has cancelled all European dates :: ::

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MINUS THREE MEMBERS.

Players Delayed in Europe Expected to Reach This Country in Time for Third Pair of Concerts—Italian Opera Continues at Boston Theatre—Concerts for the People—Music School Activities.

11 Boylston Road, Fenway,
Boston, Mass., October 15, 1914.

A report of the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (thirty-fourth season) will be found on another page. The orchestra is minus only three players, these being Joseph Malkin, the cellist; V. Klicka, the new second harpist, and Mr. Agnesy, one of the double bass players. The first two of the absent players were to have sailed from Liverpool on October 15, the ship did not start on that date, but sailed today instead. This will make it possible for them to be here in time for the third concert. Agnesy was last heard from in Austria, and should he fail to make his appearance within three weeks his place will be given to a new man.

A list of novel, or in parts, new compositions which will be produced during the season by Dr. Muck will include the Ropartz fourth symphony (first time in America); Schönberg's "Five Pieces for Orchestra"; Stravinsky's "Ballet Music"; Volbach's symphony; a symphonic poem, "Brand," by Schelderup, and Oscar Fried's "Adagio and Scherzo," for wind instruments, two harps and tympani.

Italian Opera at Boston Theatre.

Repetitions of operas already reviewed have constituted the bill at the Boston Theatre this week, where Leahy's Italian Opera Company has entered upon a twelve weeks' season at popular prices, the one exception being Verdi's "Trovatore," which was heard Thursday evening. Many improvements have taken place in the company during the past week and the performances which they are now putting on can hardly be duplicated in artistic value at any other place in the country at the same prices. The attendance has been bad in general, excepting in the second and third balconies, where at each performance a too enthusiastic Italian element fills every seat. The genuine Italian operatic atmosphere, which it infuses into the performances, is at least original in its effect.

"Trovatore," Thursday Evening.

Vociferous applause and enthusiasm such as would have been hard for any other audience twice the size to display, proved beyond all doubt that Verdi's popular "Trovatore" pleased immensely on this evening. Bovi conducted in his usual manner which is safe enough, but by no means startling. Blanche Hamilton Fox was again the feature of the performance and her Azucena was a splendid role in which to display the fine qualities in her magnetic mezzo-soprano voice. This she did to perfection. Her dramatic talent so nicely developed serves her well at all times. Leonora, under Kathryn Lynbrook's guidance, was all the sweet lady of state should be, dramatically. Good vocal effects were at her command throughout. Opezzo as Manrico used his robust tenor effectively, especially in the high register, but Manrico was neither a bold young chieftain nor strenuous enough in his troubadour love making. Count di Luna was a good soldier and the robust baritone under this guise was Coradetti.

"Otello," Monday Evening.

Verdi's "Otello" was heard on Monday evening. The attendance was unusually large, due in all probabilities to the holiday festivities. Much more credit was due the company on this evening, than the audience granted it, for scarcely a week was given to rehearsals. Johanna Kristoffy, as Desdemona, sang beautifully and gave her refined dramatic talent full sway. Opezzo in the title role was satisfying in parts, however his vocal method is very unsatisfactory at times. Coradetti as Iago suffered from a bad attack of hoarseness. Joseph Florian as Montano displayed a basso voice big enough for any stage. It is, too, a voice of good quality. Other roles were taken by Matilde Renis, Giuliani, Roberto Vanni and Pietro di Biasi.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" Wednesday Evening.

The double bill attraction on Wednesday evening proved a drawing card, as usual, and the Italian force was out en masse. In Mascagni's one act opera, Blanche Hamilton Fox appeared as Santuzza. She was in splendid voice and the remarkable equality in the opposite registers of her mezzo soprano continued to create pleasing surprise. Cora Sapin, the new soprano, was an ideal Lola, and she exhibited good vocal poise. Sachetti as Turiddu showed to good effect in the "Siciliana" air. Gallozzi as Alfio was splendid. His interpretation of the brusk teamster was full of original interpretation and his portrayal of the part, vivid. Castillo, who conducted, missed much of the orchestral beauty which lies in the prelude.

In "Pagliacci," Picco's Tonio has created wide admiration. His clownship is bubbling over with mirth, roguishness, pathos and through all there is a simple sincerity which wins for him the heart of every listener. Tricario deserves credit for his every effort to place his Canio in a deserving position, but few voices are fitted to this role. Dora de Phillipe, a petite and charming soprano, who made her Boston debut in this performance, put life into every minute of the two short acts. Her voice is not large but it contains winning qualities which will make her a very useful addition to the company. Neither David Silva as Silvio nor Giuliani as Peppe were interesting, although Silva has a voice of good quality, and it is too bad that he does not use it better.

FELIX FOX.

"Rigoletto" Tuesday Evening.

Verdi's "Rigoletto" was heard on this evening, with Millo Picco in the title role, Sachetti as the Duke, Miriam Ardini as Gilda, and Alice Gentle as Maddalena. This was the best performance witnessed thus far, and credit was due on all sides. However, laurels fell to the baritone, Millo Picco, who effected his Boston debut on this occasion. Picco is indeed a valuable addition to the company, and if he appears often he will doubtless help swell box office receipts, because the people know that he is good. His Rigoletto is a work of art. A voice which has many admirable qualities and is susceptible to the slightest temperamental demands made upon it, together with his ideas of dramatic art, brought him the most auspicious reception any artist has thus far received. After his duet with Gilda, "Yes, My Vengeance," closing the second act, he was recalled time and again and the number had to be repeated. Ardini's Gilda was sympathetic to a certain extent, although a deeper feeling of sincerity could well be infused into such a role. Her singing displayed precision and much ease, as in the difficult "Dearest Name" aria. Sachetti gave a very credible performance, likewise Alice Gentle, whose splendid mezzo-soprano voice and exceptional artistic abilities are establishing her as one of the prime favorites with this company. Bovi conducted with good authority.

Activities at the Fox-Buonamici School.

Felix Fox, the pianist and instructor, is so busily engaged in his teaching activities at the Fox-Buonamici School of Piano Playing, that it is almost feared the concert world will not hear so much of him this season as in previous years. Mr. Fox's identification with the Boston music world has been of the most popular sort for many years past, and his teaching has won for him a reputation and success rarely duplicated. His concert record stands out even to a greater extent and bears excellent testimonial of his undisputed musical abilities. Just for the sake of recalling old memories, it might again be mentioned that Mr. Fox while in the Leipsic Royal Conservatory in 1892, studied with Reinecke and Jadassohn and upon his graduation from there received the coveted "Helbig" prize. His activities in Paris, where he studied under Isidor Phillip and was heard on several occasions in the Societe d'Art concerts, later led to the bestowal upon him of the rank of Officier d'Academie. His European concert tours took him to all the principal cities of the continent and in them all, the critics accorded him high praise. Here in America he has been heard often throughout the New England, Central and Southern States in recitals, chamber concerts and with most of the leading orchestras.

The Fox-Buonamici school has occupied its new quarters in the Wesleyan Building since the opening of this season on September 14. Here conditions are much more suitable as to location and ample room than they were in the former abode. Among the many new features of the school is the charming private concert hall in which, from time to time, pupils' programs will be arranged for public performance. Attendance thus far speaks well for the present season and indications point to a year surpassing any the school has heretofore experienced.

Faelten School Program.

The first school concert of the season was heard last Thursday evening, when various members of the senior, junior and freshman classes of the Faelten Piano School participated in a program given in that school's concert hall. The degree of efficiency and marked talent displayed by the pupils was surprising and offered splendid proof of what this popular New England institution can do and has been doing for the past fifteen years. The program included compositions by Grieg, Reinhold, Balakirew, Cesek, Paderewski, Faelten and Beethoven.

Columbus Day Program.

At the Columbus Day commemoration meeting held in Symphony Hall, Monday evening, over which Mayor Curley presided, a musical program was also one of the attractive features. The vocal soloists were Alice Gentle, mezzo-soprano, and Luigi Mainiero, tenor, both of the Boston Theatre Italian Opera Company. The two other performers were Nelson Bernier, cornetist, and John A. O'Shea, organist. Special musical programs were given in the various churches throughout the day and several band concerts in the parks marked further musical activities of the occasion.

Tomas and His Band.

Guillermo Tomas and his Havana Municipal Band are making a "hit" at the Domestic Science and Pure Food Exposition, which is now being held in the Mechanics Building. The daily programs offered by this rather novel organization, since it is maintained by the city of Havana are of a first-class order. The repertoire, including seventy-one standard overtures, sixty-two operatic selections and over five hundred other miscellaneous com-

FELIX FOX PIANIST
WESLEYAN BUILDING
581 Boylston Street - - Boston

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address, THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

Oliver Ditson Company
150 Tremont Street - - - Boston
8-10-12 East 34th Street - - New York

DREAM PICTURES
OP. 6
— BY —
WILMOT LEMONT
Price - - - $1.25 Postpaid

A COLLECTION of piano pieces which fascinate by their spontaneity and fresh flavor. Mr. Lemont offers an abundance of melody and a pleasingly euphonious harmonic scheme, which always shows refinement and sprightly fancy. To those who play for pleasure, to whom music brings joy and relaxation, these facile and effective compositions will be more than welcome.
The cover is a marvel of the printing art, in four colors, tied with silk cord, making the collection a most attractive gift to a musical friend.

"Destined to be the most successful suite since WATER SCENES."—Musical Courier.

BOSTON NEW YORK

positions represents one of which any band can well be proud.

CONCERTS FOR THE PEOPLE.

The Boston Music School Settlement Society announces that its series of Sunday afternoon "Concerts for the People" will be given at the Boston Theatre this year instead of at the Olympic, as had previously been announced. The concert will be given every other Sunday, beginning October 25. Maud Powell, violinist, and Felix Fox, pianist, will be the soloists for the first Sunday. Arrigo Serato, violinist, and George Mitchell, a new tenor, will appear on November 8. Tina Lerner, pianist, and the Swedish Singing Society Barmoni, Gustaf Sundelius, conductor, will be heard on November 22, and for December 6, Mme. Gerville-Réache, contralto, and the Hoffman String Quartet will be the attraction. The prices for these popular concerts will range from fifteen cents to seventy-five cents. Compliments are in order for the society, because of its splendid efforts in projecting such a plan by which these splendid musical attractions at prices within reach of all will form a veritable treat to many of Boston's music loving populace.

"YE WILBUR" SUNDAY EVENING MUSICALES.

The 1914-15 season of Sunday evening musicales at "Ye Wilbur" Theatre, under Wm. Carrol Hill's management, will begin November 1, with Florencio Constantino as the principal soloist. Other November programs already announced will include Jeska Swartz-Morse, mezzo-soprano of the Boston Opera Company; George Rasley, tenor; Emiliano Renaud, pianist; and Lydia White, harpist, November 8. Blanche Hamilton Fox, mezzo-soprano of the Boston Theatre Italian Opera Company; Bernard Ferguson, baritone; Anna Eichorn, violinist; and Vincent Doyle, pianist, November 15. The Fuller Sisters in their program of old English country songs with harp accompaniment, November 22, and another Boston Opera Company singer, Elvira Leveroni, the contralto, together with Hazel Henry, a soprano formerly of the Namur Opera Company, Belgium, and Elmer Adams, a violinist, November 29. Prices for these concerts range from 25 cents to $1.50. Monthly course tickets at $1 to $6.

RUDOLPH GANZ'S PIANO RECITAL.

Rudolph Ganz, whose piano recital at Jordan Hall next Saturday afternoon is attracting much attention here, has included in his program a few novelties Korngold's "Elves Dance"; an Etude Caprice by himself, and Blanchet's "Serenade" in G flat. Liszt's "Rakoczy" is there also.

WORD FROM GADSKI'S PROTEGE.

Clara Huntington, the Chicago girl who, as a protege of Mme. Gadski, has become well known abroad as a concert and operatic singer, is apparently unaware that the Boston Opera Company has postponed its season. Miss Huntington was engaged last summer by Mr. Russel, and was to have made her Boston debut early in the season. In a letter written from Berlin to a friend here, she says that she expects to sail on the steamship Ryndam, which leaves Rotterdam October 31. VICTOR WINTON.

Gittelson Appearances.

Frank Gittelson, the American violinist, is to be the guest of honor at a dinner to be tendered him by the Musical Art Club of Philadelphia at its clubrooms, Monday evening, October 26. Later, Mr. Gittelson will appear with the Pittsburgh Art Society. He makes his debut in Pittsburgh on Friday evening, October 23, when he will appear in joint recital with Carl Friedberg, the pianist. The following week Mr. Gittelson will play in Philadelphia with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Constantin von Sternberg Homeward Bound.

Constantin von Sternberg, founder and president of the Sternberg School of Music, which is located at 10 South Eighteenth street, Philadelphia, Pa., is reported to have sailed for America on the steamer Rotterdam on Thursday, October 15. He has been in Germany and is anxious to get back to his duties in the United States.

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Noble's October 25 Program—Holland-Moloney-Mitchell Trio—Elizabeth Topping Here—Louise Kellogg Announcement—McLewee Studios—Notes.

New York, October 17, 1914.

T. Tertius Noble, organist of St. Thomas' Church, and Clarence Dickinson, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, participated in the dedicatory recital at Bailey Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., October 8. The handsome illustrated program contains pictures of the givers of the instrument, Andrew Carnegie, Frank Hiscock, and various university men. Mr. Noble played:

Concerto in G minor.....Camidge
Elegy.....Noble
Lamentation.....Guilmant
Toccato in D minor.....Bach

Mr. Dickinson played:

Fantasia and fugue on B-A-C-H.....Liszt
Ave Maria.....Arcadelt-Liszt
Norwegian Rhapsody.....Sinding

The series of organ recitals by Mr. Noble on Sunday evenings at eight o'clock continue, this being the program for October 25:

Fantasia and finale (sonata in B minor).....Rheinberger
Prelude Solenelle.....E. Shippen Barnes

FRANK
GITTELSON
The Distinguished American
VIOLINIST
New York Debut, New York Symphony Orchestra, November 8th
Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 W. 34th St., N.Y.

Prelude and fugue in B minor (Vol. II).....Bach
Lamentation.....Guilmant
Andante (from the Reformation Symphony).....Mendelssohn
Vivace (from the Reformation Symphony).....Mendelssohn
Imperial March.....Elgar

HOLLAND-MOLONEY-MITCHELL TRIO.

Geraldine Holland, soprano; Charlotte Moloney, violinist, and Katherine Mitchell, accompanist, have been very successful in giving musicales in and near the metropolis. One of the most interesting occasions was their appearance at the home of the Countess Annie Leary. They have also taken part in the musical programs at the Liederkranz Society affairs. Their most recent appearance was at an Exposition Musicale at the permanent Country Life Exposition, given at Grand Central Terminal. There is much variety and real musical charm in all that these three young artists perform.

ELIZABETH TOPPING RETURNS.

Elizabeth Topping, that excellent pianist and instructor, spent the summer in Europe. She was caught in the war territory, but managed to extricate herself in the general exodus, landed in London, and is now, as she says, "safe and sound in America." Miss Topping's class is already larger than at any period in her career, and she looks for a fine season.

LOUISE KELLOGG ANNOUNCEMENT.

Louise Kellogg has issued an announcement card as follows:

LOUISE KELLOGG
TEACHER OF SINGING

Pupils taught from the rudiments of tone placing to the most artistic finish, and prepared for opera, concert and recitals.

Special coaching for singers in French repertoire and correct French diction.

Studios: 1211-1213 Carnegie Hall
New York City
Telephone: 1350 Columbus

MRS. MCLEWEE'S STUDIOS.

Mrs. M. H. McLewee, whose handsome studio is at 21 West Sixty-ninth street, desires to sublet her studio, as per advertisement in another portion of this paper.

NOTES.

E. R. Caldwell is giving an hour's organ recital preceding the Roberson Travelogues, at Carnegie Hall. He plays with considerable taste and obtains good effects with the limited resources of this instrument. October 14 Mr. Roberson talked on and showed views of Germany, when a large audience thoroughly enjoyed everything. There was general and united singing by the audience of the "Watch on the Rhine," played by Mr. Caldwell as his last number. Mr. Roberson goes to Cleveland next.

Some of the lectures on musical subjects given by the Board of Education, New York City, include lecture-recitals by Marie F. MacConnell, Mary Hill Brown, Arthur Rowe Pollack and Platon Brounoff. Mr. Brounoff's subject is always Russian music, consisting of folksongs, classical and modern composers, illustrated by vocal and piano music. At Public School 101, 111th street, October 5, George Brounoff, aged ten years, played Rubinstein's "Kamenoi Ostrow" and Mr. Brounoff sang his new patriotic song, which made a great hit.

Samuel A. Baldwin, organist and professor of music at City College, gives his 386th public organ recital October 21. On the program are works by Guilmant, Bach, Reger, Bonnet, Schubert, Tschaikowsky, and the Philadelphia American, Ralph Kinder.

Edna Marione, prima donna soprano, who has flattering notices from New York, Boston and London papers, has a studio in Carnegie Hall, in connection with Christiaan Kriens. Mme. Marione is in private life Mrs. Emery Jones.

Heinrich Klingenfeld, the violinist and teacher, has returned to New York, following a lengthy stay in Germany. He has New York and Brooklyn studios, the latter at 2653 Bedford avenue. Some of his published works consist of the following: (1) "Elements of Violin Playing"; (2) "Viola School for Violinists"; (3) "A Daily Drill for Thorough Violinists." The last named has been used in leading European conservatories and is endorsed by the great violin pedagogue, Sevcik.

Edmund J. Myer's pupil, Theo Karl Johnston, "The Golden Voiced Tenor," is making a hit in various appearances in and near Seattle, Wash. The Post of October 10 and the Times of October 7 have captions such as "Johnston Scores Artistic Success," "Embryonic Caruso," "Triumph of Art," etc. He sang in Seattle recently in "Trovatore," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." In a personal letter, Mr. Myers, his teacher, says: "He expects to come to New York next year. He has volume, compass, power, beauty of tone, and a fine stage presence."

Katheryne A. Lee, president of the Monday Evening Musical Club, Norwich, N. Y., sends friends the year book containing the program for the present season. This club engages leading artists, and has, besides, a monthly musical evening at the homes of various members. For this season the following are the topics for the various evenings: "American Composers of the Present," "Indian Music," "Negro Music," "Bohemian Music," "Madame Butterfly," "Dance Music," "Light Opera."

Ethel Leginska, pianist, who has already had several New York hearings, will give a Chopin recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Monday afternoon, November 16.

ELEONORA DE CISNEROS
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.
In AMERICA
Entire Season

HINSHAW
Metropolitan Opera
BARITONE
Berlin Wagner Ring Festival,
June 23rd to Aug. 21st
American Tour
DECEMBER TO JUNE
Management R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway, N. Y.

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeut, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chant diplome par Mme. Mathilde Marchesi 151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST 35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care New York Office, Musical Courier)

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement Opera Concert

ELISABETH LECTURE—RECITALS MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
French and English Readings America—October to April Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students) Courses Begin April 1, 1914 Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter, 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeut (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
During the Coming Season at 7 Rue Leplante, Nice, (Riviera) France

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
who will sing to his own accompaniment is now available for recitals.
First Chicago appearance December 14.
New York Studio, No. 100 Carnegie Hall
A Few Pupils Received
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

Philip Feinne, a Parsons Artist-Pupil.

Philip Feinne was born in New York City, June 2, 1893. After a period of instruction at a New York conservatory, he was accepted as a pupil by Albert Ross Parsons in 1912, and immediately began a thorough study of Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier, as the foundation of his present advanced technic and musicianship. After he had memorized fifteen or twenty of the preludes and fugues, and had learned to interpret them with character, style and musical effect, he began to play the larger works of Mendelssohn, Schumann, Rubinstein, Chopin and Liszt in public. At his debut and since then he has impressed his audiences by the visible inspiration with which he plays his selections, which are always thoroughly mastered, both technically and musically.

The following are some of the critical comments upon Mr. Feinne's playing, which have at different times appeared in the MUSICAL COURIER:

"Pronounced ability was shown by Philip Feinne in a Bach prelude and fugue and two etudes by Rubinstein."

PHILIP FEINNE,
Artist-pupil of Albert Ross Parsons.

"Marked individuality was shown in Feinne's warmly musical playing." "Philip Feinne reached a big climax in the Staccato Etude of Rubinstein." "The musicianly rendering of Schumann's great F sharp minor Novellette brought pleasure to all. The standard set by Mr. Feinne reflects credit upon Mr. Parsons."

W. O. Forsyth's Classes.

W. O. Forsyth, the well known Toronto pedagogue, composer and pianist, has booked a large number of pupils this season in spite of Canadian activity in war matters, and looks forward to an unusually busy winter.

The demand for Mr. Forsyth's time increases from year to year, and this winter there has been an especially large number of student applications from the United States, owing probably to the cessation of American student pilgrimages to Europe.

W. O. Forsyth has been called a "master teacher" by the Canadian Magazine, a "wizard in teaching and presenting the virtues of touch, tone, technic and temperament," by the Toronto Daily News, "an excellent teacher who obtains beautiful results," Xaver Scharwenka, "a teacher of international reputation who has brought out many players who have appeared here and elsewhere with great success, and who have made positions for themselves," by the Berlin Continental Times, and "a perfect teacher, an artist teacher of exceptional talent and pedagogical gifts," by Arthur Friedheim, distinguished pupil of Liszt.

Martha S. Steele's Vacation.

Martha S. Steele, contralto of Pittsburgh, spent a delightful vacation of six weeks at Asbury Park, N. J. Combining work with play, Mrs. Steele created a favorable impression by her singing at the Ocean Grove Auditorium and with the Bostonia Orchestra at the Arcade in Asbury Park. Her particular recreation while away, was motoring, and each day found her driving over the beautiful ocean road from Asbury Park to Atlantic Highlands.

Early in October she began her concert season, her first appearance being before the Philharmonic Society of Somerset, Pa. She has been engaged to sing for the Mendelssohn Club of Cleveland, Ohio, on December 8, and in January will appear with the Symphony Orchestra of New Castle, Pa. Mrs. Steele is available for recitals and concerts during the season, and can be reached at Wightman and Fairoaks streets, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Philadelphia Operatic Society.

Philadelphia's Operatic Society has authorized Wassili Leps, of that city, to organize and conduct an opera school, to be known as the Philadelphia Opera School, which will be under the auspices of the Operatic Society. No vocal instructor will be connected with the school, and Mr. Leps and Joseph Engel, the new stage manager, are going to train singers for the operatic stage, both privately and in classes. Mr. Engel was for many years stage manager with the Savage and Aborn Opera Companies, with Oscar Hammerstein, and lately with the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company.

The Operatic Society is planning to present Bizet's "Carmen," and the stage rehearsal held recently was a great success, 146 members being present in the chorus. Joseph C. Engel, introduced to the chorus by Wassili Leps, won at once the hearts of the members for himself; the splendid work he did and the results he accomplished during the evening speak well for the coming performance. The members of the cast were all present and showed careful training in their parts, both musically and dramatically.

For the January performance the society has chosen an opera by Victor Herbert, "The Serenade," one of his earlier successes, and Mr. Herbert will himself conduct the performance, upon the invitation of Mr. Leps.

The Philadelphia Operatic Society has set for itself the task, besides giving young singers the opportunity to try their talents in opera, of bringing out the works of American composers. Some five or six years ago an opera by each of two local Americans, John Luther Long, the dramatist, and Wassili Leps, the composer, was presented.

Composers are requested to send their scores to Mr. Leps, in care of the Philadelphia Operatic Society, Parkway Building, Philadelphia, and if suitable for production these will receive due consideration.

REGINA de SALES Teacher of Singing
124 West 82nd Street Phone, Schuyler 7511
Tuesdays, 3-4
STUDIO: 1013 CARNEGIE HALL
Thursday mornings

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

THE FRANCES E. DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France (Champs-Elysées). Exclusive residence district. Thorough French Course. Art lectures in great galleries. Season box at Opera. Travel classes. Address Mrs. G. J. Deverell, 109 Cedar St., Lapeer, Michigan, or Mlle. Deville Chabrol, 82 rue Vaneau, Paris.

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
In America Season 1914-1915
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Manegament: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

SCIENCE AND SINGING.

BY OTTO TORNEY SIMON, MUSICAL DIRECTOR,
The Motet Choral Society, of Washington, D. C.

To Italy belongs the distinction of having been in the past the most important training school of the voice in singing. The goal of its teaching was vocal virtuosity, accomplished through arduous and exacting routine and study.

Its great masters of singing taught by empiricism, or a natural and subtle instinct for the normal processes of voice production and tonal beauty.

The successes and triumphs of the great Italian singers in past centuries is a matter of record, but the shattered and strained voices of unnumbered students from incompetent teaching have not been noted.

The methods of the modern school of singing in Italy, as observed by the writer, were not convincing. Italy, like other countries, has at the present time its distinguished maestri del canto. The musician, however, has only to investigate its studios and hear the voices there presented, to realize the inadequacy of the training and the unusual mediocrity of a large number of its instructors. To encourage sonority and quantity of tone rather than quality, to force the voice unmusically to its very limit, and to make dramatic sopranos irrespective of the kind of voice are usual tendencies. Such unskilled teaching is the result of entire absence of the finer intuitive processes of the older masters, or of definite knowledge to develop tonal beauty through later scientific discovery.

Putnam Griswold, superb as artist, singer, man, wrote thus, a short time before his death: "Italy is the land of spontaneous vocalism. Voice production is not cultivated there, but is, instead, a natural product. Those vocalists whom Italy sends us are natural vocalists, trained by their language with its open vowels. . . . America can produce the greatest teachers in the world, because the keen practical type of the national mind, being free from hidebound conservatism and age-worn tradition, is quick to grasp and apply all that is good and vital in teaching."

Physiologically, the human instrument of the voice, and the laws for its best development are identical in all countries.

No one nation has the monopoly of brains or the especial gift to understand the intelligent and the æsthetic development of the vocal instrument.

The student should unerringly choose, wherever he may be, the master, whose voices, through breath-control, show steadiness of production and an even scale, and in which the essential qualities of tone are freedom and a peculiarly æsthetic appealing beauty. From the higher art side there should be that fine and varied play of color in the vowel that will make it the true exponent of the emotional nature.

No greater fallacy exists than the opinion that any good musician or player on other instruments may, without special training or experience, successfully develop the singing voice.

In most instances such opinion is the result of ignorance or unusual egotism. To subject any student of singing to vague and experimental instruction can only mean vocal deterioration.

Manuel Garcia, of Spanish birth, residing in Paris and London for many years, made through his mirror-invention of the laryngoscope, the scientific investigations of the voice possible. Especially was this valuable in the observation of the changes of the registers of the voice.

In 1855 Garcia delivered his famous address to the scientific world of London "On the Observations of the Human Voice." Seiler, in Heidelberg, about 1860, continued these investigations with the great physicist, Helmholtz.

Further developments in the science of laryngoscopy were made by Emil Behnke, a German, who lived in London for many years, and who collaborated with the eminent throat surgeon Lenox Browne.

It was the privilege of the writer to reside with Emil Behnke in London, and there investigate those scientific theories which have for the teacher of singing undoubted value.

Such research, founded on science, defines the basic laws of voice-production. It emphasizes also the delicacy of construction of the vocal instrument, its easy possibility of strain and the care necessary for its development.

If for no other than the latter reasons, this knowledge is superlative in its significance and interest. Such investigation, alone, however, will not make the skilled teacher of singing.

On this scientific preparation should be superimposed other essential qualifications, especially the knowledge of breath management, and also a musical ear to recognize, judge and develop the æsthetic tone.

These latter qualifications belong to the tone-perception of the musician, rather than to the intelligence and the keen vision of the scientist.

In the ascending scale of the female voice, a sensitive musical ear will easily discern changes of quality occurring periodically. These changes correspond physiologically to certain changes of mechanism in the vocal bands, as they are made to vibrate by the breath in its outward flow.

Behnke defines the term "register" as "a series of tones made by the same mechanism." The existence of registers of the voice is frequently repudiated by teachers who are unsuccessful in their adjustment and management, or by writers on the voice who are not musicians or whose statements are not founded on the actual experience of teaching.

These changes of quality need not be called registers. They exist, however, and must be reckoned with if the voice is to be developed to the possibility of equality, beauty of tone and freedom.

The rigid insistence on correct register adjustment, chest, medium and head voice, as personally observed in the studio of Mme. Mathilde Marchesi, in Paris, was the basic principle of success of this gifted teacher of singing. From her studio came some of the most distinguished artists of modern times—Etelka Gerster, Nevada, Melba, Eames, Calvé, etc.

Broadly speaking, in the female voice the low tones are full and sonorous, the medium tones decidedly lighter and often reedy in quality, while the upper tones approximate the flute quality.

The chest, or lowest series of tones, may be subdivided into upper and lower chest, while the medium may also be considered in its sub-division of upper and lower medium. These with the head register will make five series of tones.

In the male voice, the essential changes are the lower and upper chest registers, and the production of the highest tones which when properly produced are known as the covered tones.

These divisions in the male and female voice should be adjusted and so harmoniously blended as to present the effect of one evenly graduated tonal color to the listener.

It is not the object of training by registers to divide the voice into sections, but to equalize it throughout by the adjustment of vowel color.

Breaks at the transitional note between any two registers will signify imperfection of adjustment, the result often of previous faulty instruction.

Physiologically each series of tones has its own musical action. (Michael.)

To force or overlap one series into the domain of the next higher, results in muscle strain and loss of tonal beauty.

If it were possible for all the teachers of any one country to understand the training of the voice by the five register system, that country would soon become renowned for its unusual singers.

Maverick and Hahn at Syracuse Morning Musical.

Laura Maverick, contralto, and Carl Hahn, cellist, opened their season with an appearance at Syracuse, N. Y., October 7, when they gave a joint recital under the auspices of the Morning Musical Club, of which Mrs. John R. Clancy is the president. These two excellent artists were well received and their concert was much enjoyed.

The following was their program:

Ballade Venitienne ..... Leschetizky
Etude en forme de Valse ..... Saint-Saëns
Aria from Orfeo, Che faro senza Eurydice ..... Gluck
Widmung ..... Popper
Romance sans paroles ..... Hahn
French songs—
Ouvre tes Yeux Bleus ..... Massenet
Novembre ..... Tremisot
Romance ..... Debussy
L'Enamouree ..... R. Hahn
Pour la Chanter ..... Gounod
German songs—
Es blinkt der Thau ..... Rubinstein
Sapphische Ode ..... Brahms
Verborgenheit ..... Wolf
Zueignung ..... Strauss
Vito, op. 54, No. 5 ..... Popper
English songs—
When I Bring to You Colored Toys (from Tagore's Gitanjali) ..... John Alden Carpenter
The Sleep that Flits on Baby's Eyes (from Tagore's Gitanjali) ..... John Alden Carpenter
The Rice Was under Water (from Stars of the Desert), Woodforde-Finden
For a Dream's Sake ..... A. Walter Kramer
'Tis All that I Can Say ..... Hahn

Founded in 1890 by Antoinette W. Sherman, the recitals given by the Syracuse Morning Musical Club have become an acknowledged factor in the social and musical life of that progressive city, and this concert by Mme. Maverick and Mr. Hahn marked the opening of the season for 1914-1915.

David Bispham Starts on Concert Tour.

David Bispham started West over a week ago to fill his engagements under the Redpath Bureau management. The baritone will be gone until October 28, during which time he will appear at Anderson, Ind., October 13; Freeport, Ill., October 14; Waterloo, Ia., October 15; Rockford, Ill., October 16; Peoria, Ill., October 17; Springfield, Ill., October 19, and Elgin, Ill., October 23.

Mr. Bispham has postponed the production of his new play, "Benjamin Franklin," for a short time, to make it possible to fill the engagements which have been arranged for the early season.

Before leaving for the West Mr. Bispham was one of the guests of honor at the opening of the Presser Home, in Philadelphia. In thanking Mr. Bispham for his assistance upon that memorable occasion, Mr. Presser wrote him:

"Your presence was a great inspiration. I never knew you to appear to better advantage and be more appreciated than you were on this occasion; the impression you made was simply tremendous. I myself was almost lifted off my feet."

Recently in Newark, Mr. Bispham gave selections from the oratorio "Elijah" before a very large audience, which manifested the utmost enthusiasm, and October 8 the baritone enjoyed one of the most appreciative audiences of his career. This was composed of the students of Franklin Sargent's American Academy of Dramatic Arts, before whom he spoke upon the necessity of the correct use and pronunciation of the English language on the stage. He then sang several selections from grand opera in English and ended by giving his stirring interpretation of Longfellow's "King Robert of Sicily," set to music by Rossiter G. Cole. Mr. Bispham will give a song recital in Cincinnati, October 27, and upon his return to New York he will have several appearances in the metropolis.

Mr. Bispham will give one of his great lecture-recitals at Columbia University in November. A few days before filling this engagement the baritone will appear in the same sort of program before the members of the University Extension in Philadelphia. This will be Mr. Bispham's third annual concert for that society.

Mr. Bispham has booked a large number of engagements in New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Illinois, and many of these are to be given in educational institutions, which fact again accentuates the comments made generally about the baritone that he is an indefatigable and a great "educational institution" all in himself.

It is indeed extraordinary that an artist should keep such a hold upon the affection of the public as does Mr. Bispham. Whether one speaks of great achievements in opera, in oratorio or in recital, it is not possible to overlook the American who has never had cause to fear a rival of any nationality.

Mr. Bispham is the author of a remarkable article in the current issue of the Opera Magazine. It is entitled "The American Opportunity" and shows the thorough understanding that the artist has of the situation.

Martucci Opens New York Studio.

Paolo Martucci, who spent the summer in England, Switzerland, and Italy, arrived in the United States on September 22, and has opened his studio at 257 West Eighty-sixth street, New York, where he will receive a limited number of pupils.

VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
VICTOR KÜZDÖ
Sole authorized representative (in America) of the system of
LEOPOLD AUER
Studio: 560 West End Avenue, New York City

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Vernon d'Arnalle Is Pleased with America.

A representative of the MUSICAL COURIER called recently on Vernon d'Arnalle, the baritone, who has just returned from war ridden Europe, and spent a delightful hour in conversation with him on all manner of topics. D'Arnalle is a brilliant and charming talker, and it is a matter of surprise to find how broad and far reaching is his interest in things outside his own art. He possesses great personal charm, and it is a pity one could not get verbatim the many interesting and unusual accounts of personal experiences, or viewpoints of life, which his varied experiences all over Europe have given him. Whether on political, literary or artistic subjects, he shows the result of a keen and alert mind, accustomed to think upon all the affairs of life.

VERNON D'ARNALLE IN ROME.

At a chance mention of Rome, Mr. d'Arnalle became all aglow with enthusiasm, for he loves his Italy and there he has his home. "I love Italy and the Italians, and I have been lucky, for my love was not unrequited. They have been always so kind and good to me." With charming simplicity he sat down at the piano and sang a Neapolitan street song. Whether it was the song or the artist is hard to say, but somehow one felt suddenly the golden sunlight and blue sky of Italy, and all the joyousness and passion of the South—and almost that "dolce fa niente," which lies at the very root of Italian romance.

D'Arnalle is delighted to be in America again, and it was interesting to hear his various impressions after his long sojourn abroad. Suffice it to say that he is thrilled by us, by the tremendous pulsation of our life, our activity, our irresistible energy and bigness of conception.

WILLIAM
MAC PHAIL
Violinist
MARGARET GILMOR
MAC PHAIL
Pianist
Available for Concerts Throughout the Northwest
43 So. 6th Street Minneapolis, Minn.

BELLE GOTTSCHALK
Lyric Soprano
ORATORIO CONCERT RECITAL
In America Entire Season
MANAGEMENT
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

Alameda County "1915" Chorus Formed.

Oakland, Cal., October 10, 1914.

As an outgrowth of the success attending the performance of "The Messiah" last July under the direction of Alexander Stewart and the more recent choral concert held recently at Idora Park, Dakland, Cal., a festival chorus has been organized under the name of the Alameda County "1915" Chorus.

Already several hundred singers have enrolled in the chorus, which will meet regularly on Tuesday evenings, at 8 o'clock, at the Chamber of Commerce Hall, Thirteenth and Harrison streets, Oakland, commencing next Tuesday evening, October 13. Mendelssohn's "Elijah" will be one of the principal works to be studied by the chorus, although it is also probable that the performance of Handel's "The Messiah," given last July, will be repeated in the near future.

The Alameda County Publicity Committee, of which Owen E. Hotle is chairman, has the financial arrangements of the chorus in hand. The director will be Alexander Stewart, and the accompanist Mabel Hill Redfield.

An advisory council to have charge of the details of the organization, acting under the direction of the publicity committee, has been appointed as follows: Dr. O. S. Dean, chairman; Roy C. Brown, secretary; E. H. Garthwaite, treasurer; C. H. Coultes, and Mrs. E. H. Garthwaite.

It is likely that the chorus will participate in some of the events in connection with the opening of the Oakland Municipal Auditorium.

Speaking of the organization of the Alameda County "1915" Chorus and of the benefits of choral singing to a community, Alexander Stewart, the director of the chorus, says: "There is no more democratic form of musical endeavor than the assembling of large numbers of people of different classes and tastes in great choruses. No better way could be found to break down some of the narrow bonds of caste that often exist largely in the imagination only than to bring people of diverse social, political and religious views together to make music for themselves and for others. In these choruses the capitalist and employer should mingle their voices in song with the voices of the wage earners.

"Music is the one great common leveler of human prejudice and misunderstanding, the one platform in the world upon which at the present time all classes of people can be united. It is indeed the universal language, and choral music is its one greatest servant of expression for the mass of the people.

"It is hoped to make the Alameda County '1915' Chorus representative in every respect of all classes and elements of people in the East Bay communities. It will doubly serve its purpose if it not only succeeds in providing choral performances on a large scale during the exposition year, but also promotes a spirit of fellowship between its members who come from different walks of life." B.

Keokuk Music Club Announcement.

According to an announcement made by the executive committee of the Monday Music Club of Keokuk, Ia., a series of concert will be given in that city during this coming season by the following: Russian Symphony Orchestra, Jenny Dufau, Felix Hughes, Zoellner Quartet, Glenn Dillard Gunn and the Weber-Larkin lecture-recital on "Parsifal." The three first concerts will be given in the Grand Opera House, and the others in the Y. W. C. A. Auditorium. In addition to the annual year book of the club, the program committee has issued an illustrated circular, for distribution, giving the dates of the different concerts, as well as press comments, etc.

The club announces a membership of between four and five hundred and this season promises to be one of the most successful that the club has yet enjoyed.

The season opened October 5 with a reception in honor of Ella May Smith, president of the Women's Music Club of Columbus, Ohio, and Rupert Hughes, violinist, playwright and writer on musical subjects, of New York City. Both Mrs. Smith and Mr. Hughes addressed the club.

Maud Powell's New York Program.

Maud Powell, the American violinist, whose success in this country as well as in other parts of the world has been striking and lasting, will give a recital in Aeolian

MAUD POWELL.

Hall, New York, on Tuesday evening, October 27. The program will be as follows:

Concerto, D minor, op. 31.....Vieuxtemps
Sonata, E flat major, op. 18.....Strauss
Variations on a theme by Corelli.....Tartini
Larghetto.....Nardini
Præludium e allegro.....Pugnani
Hungarian Dances, A major and E minor.....Brahms-Joachim
Valse Triste and Musette.....Sibelius
Cradle Song.....Florent Schmitt
Dance Espagnole (Tango).....E. Farnandez-Arbos

Borwick Cheered in Australia.

At a recent Adelaide (Australia) Chamber Music Society concert, Leonard Borwick played a Chopin group and the Australia Musical News commented as follows: "It is questionable whether this Australian generation has, so far, heard a player of Chopin like Leonard Borwick. His grace of style, poetic treatment and romantic coloring are Chopinesque to the last touch. The waltz was delightful in its tempo and rare delicacy. At the conclusion of the suite, Mr. Borwick received cheer upon cheer for his great work. He is a great and seductive player."

FLORENCE HARDEMAN
American Violinist Just returned from Europe In America Season 1914-15
Present address: 3514 Washington Avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio

DAVID HOCHSTEIN
Concert Violinist
—IN AMERICA NOW—
Address 10 Carnegie Hall, New York City

HARRIET SCHOLDER Pianist
New York Recital, Jan. 26, 1915, Aeolian Hall
The N. Y. Tribune says: Harriet Scholder has the distinctive gifts of the pianoforte virtuoso.
Management: WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St.
Steinway Piano.

VICTOR WITTGENSTEIN
CONCERT PIANIST
Tour Now Booking
Address: 230 West 107th Street, New York
KNABE PIANO USED

PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY CONCERTS
Auxiliary Club — Six Chamber Concerts, Washington Irving High School — Saturday Evenings at 8. Oct. 24, Nov. 28, Jan. 16, Feb. 6. Mar 6, Apr. 10. Kneisel, Kaufman, Olive Mead Quartets, Tollefsen Trio, St. Cecelia Club, and others
Full season ticket $1.00 to students and workers, etc. (All others $2.00
32 Union Square, Tel. 3382 Stuyvesant

AMERICA'S HOST ABROAD.

[The MUSICAL COURIER is endeavoring to keep the subjoined list up to date. As soon as arrivals are reported in this country their names are removed from this roster. Should there be an oversight, or should any of America's musical personages now abroad not be included in the appended table, the MUSICAL COURIER would be grateful to receive such information so as to be able to keep the reference schedule correct. This list is not confined to Americans exclusively but embraces also all foreign artists resident in this country or who were expected to come here for participation in the musical season of 1914-15.—Editor MUSICAL COURIER.]

A

Arthur M. Abell, J. Allen, Paolo Ananian, Arthur Aldridge, Adriano Ariani.

B

Mrs. A. M. Blair, Clarence Bird, Alice L. Bryant, Norah Brandt, Charles Bowes, Eddy Brown, John Braun, Alice Bingham, Mrs. George Beck, Lillian Blauvelt, Rudolf Berger, Alessandro Bonci, Willy Burmester, Amadeo Bassi, Lucrezia Bori, Grace Burnap, Hope Hopkins Burroughs, Pauline Bachmann.

C

Cleofonte Campanini, Shanna Cumming, Charles Cooper, Lina Cavalieri, Arthur M. Curry, Mrs. Claude Cunningham, Augusta Cottlow, Pauline Curley, Lucy Call, Grace Cole, Marian Clark, Kittie Cheatham, California University Glee Club, Gertrude Cleophas, Jane Noria-Centannini, Maria Cavan, Francis Coppicus, Ernesto Consolo, Andrea Casertani, Sasha Culbertson.

D

Adamo Didur, Norah Drewett, J. F. Delma-Heide, Emmy Destinn, Gaston Duchamel, Camille Decreus.

E

Annie Ellermann, Emma Eames, William Engle.

F

George Fergusson, Truman Fassett, Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Benjamin Fabian, Geraldine Farrar, William Förster, Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana, Sam Franko, Rita Fornia, Adelin Fermin, Carl Flesch.

G

Archer Gibson, Leopold Godowsky, Katherine Golcher, Mrs. Warner Gibbs, Katharine Goodson, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Hedwig Glomb, Mary Garden, Paolo Gruppe, Emilio de Gogorza, Aristodemo Giorgini, Otto Goritz, Dinh Gilly, Elena Gerhardt.

H

Julia Hostater, Sara Hayman, George Harris, Jr., Sue Harvard, Edwin Hughes, Carl Hillman, Edward Hargrave, Elmer G. Hoelzle, Genevieve Houghton, Heinrich Hensel, Frieda Hempel, Hans Himmer, Edna Hoff, Walter Heermann.

J

Anna Taylor Jones, Clayton Johns.

K

Grace Kerns, Mme. Rider-Kelsey, Adele Krueger, Fritz Kreisler, Dr. Ernst Kunwald, Walter Kirschbaum, Mrs. Frank King-Clark.

L

Hans Letz, Kathleen Lawlor, Leslie Loth, James Liebling, Lucille Laurence, Marie White Longman, Josef Lhevinne, Theodor Lattermann, Henri Le Roy, Mario Lambardi, Dr. and Mrs. Lovette, Edwin H. Lemare.

M

Charles Henry Meltzer, Florence Macbeth, Zitella Martin, Marguerite Melville, Alma Moodie, Francis Maclennan, Florence Easton Maclennan, Harry Munro, Marie Mohler, Pietro Minetti, Isolde Menges, Otillie Metzger, Lucian Muratore, Vanni Marcoux, Margarete Matzenauer, Elisabeth Mack, Hans Merx, Leopold de Maré, Laya Machat, Victor Maurel.

N

Hildegarde Nash, Arthur Newstead.

O

H. O. Osgood, W. B. Olds, Professor Otto, Mrs. Charles Orchard, Margarete Ober.

P

Paul Petri, Louis Persinger, Dolly Patterson, Henry Perry, Eleanor Pochler, Alfred Piccaver, May Esther Peterson, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Lucille Peck, Eleanor Peocock, Kathleen Parlow, Giorgio Polacco, F. Parme, Anna Pavlowa.

R

Titta Ruffo, Claude Reddisch, Meta Reddisch, Leon Rains, Elizabeth Reeside, Léon Rothier, Henry Russell, Marie Rappold, Albert Reiss, H. Royer, Leon Rice.

S

Bruno Steindel, Gaston Sargent, Viola Gramm-Salzedo, Gladys Seward, Arnolde Stephenson, Carl Stasny, Wager Swayne, Irma Seydel, Theodore Seydel, Arthur Shattuck, Kurt Schindler, Ernest Schelling, Albert Stoessel, Carlos Salzedo, Katherine Loyal, Phillips Shaw, J. D. Sample, Leo Slezak, Maria Sammarco, Max Smith, Giulio Setti, Ann Swinburne, Arthur P. Schmidt, Umberto Sorrentino, Bertram Shapleigh.

T

Louis Campbell-Tipton, Jacques Thibaud, Luisa Tetrazzini, Otto Tuft, Oswald Thumser, Enrico Tremonti, Isadore Troostwyck, André Tourret.

U

Otto Urack, Josef Urban, Jacques Urlus.

V

Otto A. Voget, Edna ver Haar, Luisa Villani, Constantin von Sternberg.

W

Felix Weingartner, Helen Bixby Wetzel, Edyth Walker, Hermann Hans Wetzler, Clarence Whitehill, Marie Louise Wagner, Nancy White, Helen Warrum, Coral Wait, Carolina White, Frank Waller, Herman Weil, E. Walther, Edith Bower Whiffen, Grace Bonner Williams, Frederic Warren, Mrs. Warren.

Z

Alice Zeppilli, Katherine Ziegler.

Returned and Returning.

A. J. Goodrich, the musical author and theory teacher, arrived in New York last week from Paris.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, arrived on the Cunard liner Mauretania, Friday morning, October 16.

Eleonora de Cisneros, arrived in New York on the White Star steamship Baltic, Friday morning, October 16.

Among musical personages sailing from Naples, October 20, were Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Enrico Caruso, the tenor; Ferruccio Busoni, the pianist; Arturo Toscanini, musical director of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Arrigo Serato, the violinist.

Alberto Jonas, the Berlin pianist and teacher, is en route to New York, being due to reach here October 24.

Albert I. Elkus, the American composer, has returned to New York from Europe.

On the steamship Carpathia, due October 26 in New York, are the members of the Flonzaley Quartet, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, and Clara Clemens-Gabrilowitsch, the contralto.

Edmund Burke, the Irish baritone, has arrived from abroad, via Montreal.

Soder-Hueck Tenor Engaged.

Walter Heckman, tenor, who has appeared successfully in concerts in New York and elsewhere, has been engaged as soloist with the Chaminade Club to appear at the winter concert, April 22, 1915, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Mr. Heckman, who is the possessor of a brilliant tenor voice, and who recently aroused considerable enthusiasm at the Soder-Hueck opening reception by his splendid rendition of the "Pagliacci" aria, received his entire training with Ada Soder-Hueck, one of New York's well known voice trainers.

Alexander Bloch's Program.

A violin recital will be given at Aeolian Hall, New York, on Wednesday evening, October 28, by Alexander Bloch, Miss Bloch at the piano, when the following program will be given: Sonata, No. 10, op. 96, Beethoven; concerto, in D major, Paganini; "Lithauisches Lied," Chopin-Auer; "Serenata Napolctana," Sgambati; "Hungarian Dance," No. 1, Brahms-Joachim; "Romanze," Wagner-Wilhelmj; polonaise in D major, Wieniawski.

Cellist Abbas Here.

Philip Abbas, a London cellist, has come to New York and is negotiating for a permanent engagement in this country.

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave New York

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

FLORENCE LARRABEE
PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

Miss NINA MORGANA
Coloratura Soprano
From La Scala in Milan
Available for Concerts—Musicales
Season 1914-15
Address: AEOLIAN HALL, Rooms 1626-27, N. Y. City

SUNG BY MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, MME. GERVILLE-REACHE, ETC.
Three Songs of the Desert
By GERTRUDE ROSS
Sunset in the Desert
Night in the Desert
Dawn in the Desert
WHITE-SMITH MUSIC PUB. CO.
Boston New York Chicago

THEODORE
SPIERING
CONDUCTOR — VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Ave., New York

American Concert Tour of
—AND—
H. U. MAXWELL
Brilliant Baritone
Ch. De HARRACK
EMINENT COURT PIANIST
Address, Howard Pew, care of Musical Courier, Manager of recent tour of Arthur Nikisch and London Symphony Orchestra; also A. F. Wands—Per. Mgr. Middle West, Cleveland, O

William Thorner
VOCAL TEACHER
Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:
"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.
(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."
Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.
Address 2130 Broadway, New York. Phone: 1050 Columbus.

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM
AMERICAN ENGAGEMENTS
Management ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

Jerome Uhl
BASS-BARITONE

"It is simply gorgeous singing, that is all!"—Oscar Hammerstein.
"This popular baritone is deserving of the epithet great."—Toronto World.
"By far the best in the casts I have attended at the Century."—E. Marzialle (alternate baritone with Titto Ruffo in Spain).
Management, R. E. Johnston
1451 Broadway, New York Phone 608 Bryant

'Ware the Path!

War and its attendant horrors have not affected the activity of Dudley Buck, the vocal teacher of New York, whose season promises to be a very busy one. As shown by the accompanying snapshot of Mr. Buck, he is ready for a big season, and with the assistance of Elsie T. Cowen, is hard at work at his studios in Aeolian Hall, New York.

DUDLEY BUCK ENJOYING CAMP LIFE.

The Boice Studios.

In recent months, the name of Florence Anderson Otis, soprano, has become fairly well known throughout the New England States and New York City. Mrs. Otis, who is a product of the Boice studios, made a splendid success

MRS. HENRY SMOCK BOICE,
Vocal teacher.

at the recent Maine Festival. She has a high soprano voice, under splendid control, and possesses also a very ingratiating appearance.

The Boice studios have at the head Mrs. Henry Smock Boice, one of the most experienced of metropolitan teachers. Her chief assistant is her daughter, Susan S. Boice, who is an expert coach and teaches diction in all languages. Everybody knows that the secret of good singing is based on correct breath control, and this, as well as perfect placing of the voice, is Mrs. Boice's specialty.

Other pupils from the Boice studios are becoming increasingly prominent. There is a Boice Ladies' Quartet, which is heard frequently and always wins hearty recognition. Mrs. Boice has the capacity of illustrating all her vocal ideas in such manner as to make the point perfectly clear to the student. Miss Boice is herself an experienced pianist and knows modern languages thoroughly.

Trinity School of Church Music.

Felix Lamond, the director of the Trinity School of Church Music, New York, has issued a handsome sixteen-page booklet, containing detailed information regarding this school. It is a training school for organists, choir masters, and choristers. The board of examiners consists of Arthur Foote, T. Tertius Noble, and W. R. Spalding. Some of the sub-captions in the booklet are as follows: Boy Choir Department, Full List of the Faculty, Special Short Courses, Organ Practice, and finally, Specimen Time Card, showing the lectures, lessons and practice for this course.

The headquarters of the school are at 90 Trinity place, New York.

People's Symphony Club Quartet Concerts.

The People's Symphony Concerts Auxiliary Club will give the first of six chamber concerts in the Auditorium of Washington Irving High School, New York, Saturday evening, October 24. The Kneisel Quartet will be heard, assisted by Pauline Mallet-Prevost. The program will include Schumann's Quartet in A major, op. 41, No. 3, the "Interludium in Modo Antico," by Glazounow, and Cesar Franck's Quintet in F minor, for piano, two violins, viola and cello.

In pursuance of the educational features of the club's work, Franz X. Arens will deliver the first of a series of lectures on the "Development of Musical Form."

Membership in the People's Symphony Auxiliary Club is open to students and workers, teachers, artists, and professional people, and the cost, including admission to the series of six chamber concerts, is only one dollar. Applications for tickets and information should be sent to the manager, Egmont H. Arens, 32 Union Square.

D'Aubigné in Nice.

Lloyd d'Aubigné, the well known Paris teacher, who has had among his pupils two such prominent artists as Felice Lyne and Lois Ewell, has left Paris on account of the war and established himself for this season at one of the most charming places in the world, Nice, on the French Riviera, where his address is 7 rue Leplante. Mr. d'Aubigné already has a considerable number of pupils with him and his work is continuing as quietly and effectively as if there were no disturbances on every side in Europe.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF
THE RUSSIAN VIOLINIST
In America 1914-15
Personal Representative: Johanna Sherrick, 200 Fifth Ave., N.Y.
Daniel Mayer, London

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
318 WEST 82d ST., NEW YORK CITY Tel. Schuyler 8537

MYRNA SHARLOW
SOPRANO
Boston Opera Company, Boston.
Royal Opera Co., Covent Garden, London.
Anglo-American Grand Opera Co., Paris.
Under the management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

MARCELLA CRAFT
Five years Prima Donna Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS
SOLOIST
Maine Festivals, Portland & Bangor, Oct. 1-5, 1914.
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 6, 1914.
San Francisco Recital, Nov. 8, 1914.
Riverside, Cal., Recital, Nov. 10, 1914.
Los Angeles, Cal., Recital, Nov. 12, 1914.
San Diego, Cal., Recital, Nov. 13, 1914, etc.
Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Arrigo Serato

Italy's Greatest VIOLINIST

First American Concert Tour 1914-15

Starting Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 23rd

FOR AVAILABLE DATES, ADDRESS EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT:

Miss Annie Friedberg, Metropolitan Opera House Building, 1425 Broadway, New York.

KNABE PIANO USED

Five Klibansky Pupils.

Jean Vincent Cooper and Mrs. A. Marefield sang in Buffalo, N. Y., October 13, at a concert in Elmwood Hall. Miss Cooper won unusual success at the recent Maine Festival, in "Elijah," and in songs.

Myrtle Stambaugh sang with great success at a church concert in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., this notice being from the Star of that city:

"Myrtle Stambaugh delighted a large audience by her rendition of several selections. . . . Miss Stambaugh has a powerful, clear soprano voice of rare quality. She sang the solo, 'Hark, Hark, My Soul,' in fine arrangement and with full chorus."

B. Woolff has been engaged as first cantor under very favorable conditions, with the Montefiore Congregation in New York. He refused a still better engagement in Chicago, on account of his studies with Mr. Klibansky.

Badrig Gucochenian gave a song recital at Keuka College, N. Y., when the Chronicle said:

"Mr. Gucochenian has a tenor voice of golden tone, and his interpretations were enthusiastically received by his hearers. He sang compositions by Strauss, Schubert, Debussy, MacDermid, Salter, Kernochan and Huhn."

Marie Louise Wagner, who returned from Europe on account of the war, will give a concert in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 14.

Elsa Fern MacBurney in Recital.

Elsa Fern MacBurney inaugurated a new series of song recitals for the MacBurney Studios on October 12. Mr. MacBurney, whose thought seems ever turned toward some new means of benefiting his students, has taken his recitals to larger quarters than his own studios. The Hamilton Park Field House is not so convenient, but it permits several hundred more persons to hear these remarkably fine programs.

Mrs. MacBurney sang three song cycles, one by Schumann, one by MacDowell and one by Gena Branscombe. The Schumann songs were especially well done. They require maturity in a singer, a complete understanding of theme and feeling for the poems. Mrs. MacBurney gave every evidence of a full equipment for the songs. Her voice is warm and sympathetic, and her shading was excellent.

The MacDowell and Branscombe songs were presented with an ease and finish that found quick acknowledgment from the audience. Mrs. MacBurney was admirably supported by Grace Grove at the piano. Miss Grove's accompaniments were splendidly executed. They had authority, strength and finesse.

ELSA FERN MacBURNEY.

A. I. Elkus in New York.

Albert I. Elkus, the California composer, who has been living abroad for several years, chiefly in Berlin, Vienna and Paris, returned to America last week and purposes to settle in New York, where he will work at composition and also give instruction in theory. Mr. Elkus is completing an important musical work, the details of which will be announced by him later.

CARL FRIEDBERG

THE POET AT THE PIANO

Has Arrived in America and will make his

New York Debut Carnegie Hall Nov. 2, 1914

BALDWIN PIANO USED

Exclusive Management,
MISS ANNIE FRIEDBERG,
Metropolitan Opera House Bldg.,
1425 Broadway, New York.

De Harrack-Maxwell En Tour.

Charles de Harrack, the Russian pianist, assisted by Dr. Howard U. Maxwell, baritone, is now en tour in America, under the management of Alfred F. Wands, Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. de Harrack has won for his work the following European encomiums:

The large and distinguished audience filled every seat and available bit of standing room in the spacious Koloratz Music Hall, followed the performance of the artist with the closest attention, breaking spontaneously into a storm of applause at the end of every number. Crown Prince Alexander was present as representative of his father, King Peter, of Servia.—Vecernje Novositi, Belgrade, November 1, 1906.

Charles de Harrack is a pianist of exceptional gifts.—Strassburg Post, Strassburg, 1905.

A young master of great qualities.—Wiener Leben, Vienna, June 3, 1911.

The young piano virtuoso, Charles de Harrack, recently appeared here in concert with the Badner Orchestra and won a tremendous ovation. Exquisite touch, astonishing technic and a soulful rendition were displayed by the young artist and brought thundering applause.—Wiener Tagblatt, Vienna, December 22, 1910.

Charles de Harrack has attracted considerable public attention the last few days. He played the Liszt concerto in E flat with orchestra with great "bravura" and masterful technic, winning great success.—Wiener Fremden-Blatt, Vienna, April 19, 1910.

Surety, beautiful touch and temperamental rendition were displayed by the young artist.—Neues Wiener Journal, Vienna, December 22, 1910.

His technic is virtuose, but his depth and warmth must also be praised in the characteristic shading of his art which he gives with masterful understanding.—Baden Bote, Baden, April 15, 1911.

Equipped with a fine voice, a wealth of temperament and magnetism, Dr. Maxwell, baritone, has been engaged during the coming season to fill a number of important musical engagements. Dr. Maxwell has won an enviable reputation on the concert platform. His voice is of unusual range, resonance and flexibility, and it responds to every shade of the composer's meaning, simultaneously revealing the singer's own rich individuality. His natural gift for song has been carefully trained under eminent teachers. Along with a voice of charm, nature has endowed Dr. Maxwell with a personality that wins admiration and friendship at sight. His is master of tone and his enunciation is distinct. He sings with much expression and style.

Mme. De Cisneros in Concert.

Eleanora de Cisneros, the operatic and concert contralto, now is in this country, and will start immediately upon her American tour arranged by Antonia Sawyer, which promises to be a long and interesting series of appearances.

Mme. de Cisneros had a busy operatic season booked in Europe and America for this winter (Berlin, Madrid, Barcelona, Chicago Opera, etc.), but the war clouds suddenly swept over everything and cancellation of most of her engagements resulted.

Antonia Sawyer heard that the contralto was in Paris doing Red Cross work and promptly engaged her by cable for an American concert tour. The opportunity to appear in concert was accepted eagerly by Mme. de Cisneros, who by reason of her large repertoire in all departments of song and her mastery of the French, Italian, German, English, Spanish and Russian languages, is peculiarly fitted to place her art in the service of the Lied and its affiliated branches. Previously Mme. de Cisneros has had many advantageous offers for concert tours, but her operatic engagements always prevented her from leaving that field for any length of time. The only exception was a tour in the Antipodes two years ago (following upon her tremendous success with the Melba Opera Company), when Mme. de Cisneros scored an unequivocal series of triumphs. Her most striking receptions of late have been in Barcelona, Paris (Boston-Covent Garden Company), Parma (Verdi festival), Madrid, etc.

Mme. de Cisneros was asked by a MUSICAL COURIER interviewer to relate some of her Paris experiences during the early war days, but she replied: "This cataclysm of the nations is too painful a subject for me to discuss, as I feel every phase of it deeply. I love France, England, Germany and Austria. All those countries have been good to me, and I sympathize with each and every one of them. My fervent hope is that the bloodshed and the political differences may soon be over."

Christine Miller to Sing at Georgetown, Tex.

Southwestern University of Georgetown, Tex., the head of whose music department is Arthur L. Manchester, has engaged Christine Miller, the contralto, through the New York musical bureau of Haensel & Jones. Miss Miller will appear there in February.

Alda and La Forge Engaged for Hartford.

Frances Alda, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Frank La Forge, pianist, have been engaged for a concert to be given Monday evening, October 26, at Parsons Theatre, Hartford, Conn., for the benefit of the Red Cross Society.

OBITUARY.

Frederic Gerhard.

Frederic Gerhard, a musician of note, died at his home in Pottsville, Pa., week before last.

Mr. Gerhard had been associated long with the musical life of that city and had been a strong influence in its musical growth. He was leader of the Pottsville Third Regiment Band; had organized and directed a symphony orchestra and taught classes in piano and violin. He was a pupil of Sevcik.

He leaves a wife (formerly Minnie G. Brown), a daughter, Grace Jane, and a son, Charles William.

Mr. Gerhard was a rare combination of tact and talent, and was a great favorite with all.

Dr. Felix Schreiber.

The death is reported of Dr. Felix Schreiber, the well known German conductor, who was also a reserve officer in the German army and is said to have been killed recently. Of course, this report cannot be positively confirmed at this time. Dr. Schreiber was kapellmeister at the Kiel Opera and conductor of the Kiel Symphony Orchestra. He also conducted upon numerous occasions as guest at Barmen, Elberfeld, Halle, Schwerin, Braunschweig, Wiesbaden, etc. His death is looked upon as a great loss to the German musical world.

Vernona Jarbeau.

Vernona Jarbeau, aged forty-seven, a singer and actress, who formerly had been a favorite in the American comic opera field, died near New York last week. She was liked best in the role of Hebe in "Pinafore," a part in which the critics and the public conceded her superiority over all other interpreters. Mme. Jarbeau, who was a widow, leaves a comfortable fortune.

American Institute Schedule.

The American Institute of Applied Music, Kate S. Chittenden, dean, announces the following calendar of free lectures and classes for this season:

Friday, October 9, 11 a. m.—Normal playing classes, free to students taking the piano teachers' course. Fortnightly. Fee for others, $15 for the year.

Friday, October 16, 11 a. m.—Sonata classes, for the study of musical form, illustrated by piano compositions and colored diagrams. Free to all regular students. Fortnightly.

Wednesday, October 21, 12 m.—First lecture in a course of five by Daniel Gregory Mason. The Melodic Line.

Friday, October 23, 10 a. m.—Elementary harmony. Adults. Weekly.

Saturday, October 24, 10 a. m.—Elementary harmony. Juniors. Weekly.

Wednesday, October 28, 12 m.—History of Music and Musicians. Fortnightly.

Wednesday, November 4, 11 a. m.—First year vocal sight reading and ear training. Weekly.

Wednesday, November 4, 12 m.—Second lecture by Mason. The Co-operation and Conflict of Melodies.

Wednesday, November 18, 12 m.—Third lecture by Mason. The Interpretation of Themes. The Smaller Forms.

Wednesday, November 18, 2 p. m.—Mr. Lanham's vocal class. Weekly.

Wednesday, December 2, 12 m.—Fourth lecture by Mr. Mason. The Larger Forms.

Wednesday, December 16, 12 m.—Fifth lecture by Mr. Mason. Color.

Wednesday, January 13, 12 m.—Course of five lectures by Thomas Tapper. The Distinctive Idea in Education.

Wednesday, January 27, 12 m.—The Distinctive Idea in Art.

Wednesday, February 10, 12 m.—Art in Education.

Wednesday, February 24, 12 m.—The Basis of Art Appreciation.

Wednesday, March 10, 12 m.—Music Appreciation and the Education it Involves.

Strassberger Conservatories Opening Recital.

The Strassberger Conservatories of Music presented for their opening recital of the season 1914-15 Prof. Felix Heink in a piano recital at the South Side Conservatory Auditorium, Shenandoah and Grand avenues, St. Louis, Mo., on Friday, October 16. Professor Heink's program was as follows:

Romance in F sharp major	Schumann
Impromptu, op. 90, No. 4	Schubert
Valse Brillante (MS.)	Heink
Funeral March, from sonata, op. 35	Chopin
Wedding March (MS.)	Heink
Military March, op. 22, No. 1	Heink
Reverie, Isolee (left hand alone)	Ravina
Minuet in A major, op. 11	Heink
Slumber Song	Heink
Grand Valse de Concert	Heink

Professor Heink received his piano training at the Royal Conservatory of Dresden, Germany. He studied composition in Vienna under Dr. Prochazka, and singing with Eugene Hildach and Signor Lamperti, and received his literary education at Count Vitzthum College. He has long been known as an excellent teacher, pedagogue and virtuoso in St. Louis, where since 1908 he has been a professor at the Strassberger Conservatories in the graduating department. Mr. Heink is also a composer of no small attainment, and several of his outputs were placed on his program and played from manuscript. The recitalist won a legitimate success.

TO LET

STUDIO TO SUBLET—21 West Sixty-ninth street. Tel. 2851 Columbus. Handsome parlor floor studio; Steinway Grand, two days weekly. Address M. H. McLewee, 21 West Sixty-ninth street, New York.

CENTURY OPERA HOUSE
Central Park West, at 62d & 63d Sts., New York City
'Phone Columbus 8800
SEASON 1914-15
Grand Opera in English and Original Languages.
SEATS ON SALE TEN WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
CENTURY LYCEUM AND CONCERT HALL
(In the Century Opera House)
Available on Rentals for CONCERTS, RECITALS, THEATRICALS, ETC.

W. O. FORSYTH
Pianist and Teacher of the Higher Art of Piano Playing
COMPLETE TRAINING FOR CONCERT ROOM OR TEACHING
Address: Care Nordheimers, Toronto, Canada

CARLO NICOSIA
Formerly conductor with Century and Hammerstein Opera Companies.
Coaching for Opera in French, Italian and English.
5 West 65th St., New York.

Mrs. HALL McALLISTER
TEACHER OF SINGING
Musical Management
407 Pierce Building - - Boston

HENIOT LEVY PIANIST
Kimball Hall, CHICAGO

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

SUSANNAH MACAULAY
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
Composer of "Allah is Great," "The Butterfly," "Ave Maria"

Mrs. MINNIE M. McCONNELL
Voice Culture and Coach
McConnell Vocal Trio
204 Cathedral Parkway, (W. 110th St.) New York
Phone: River 6439

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID HARPIST
THE FOREMOST WOMAN HARPIST IN AMERICA
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 861

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX
CONTRALTO BOSTON THEATRE OPERA COMPANY.
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Ave., New York

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone, Ravenswood 2319. 849 Lakeside Place, Chicago

GAMBLE CONCERT PARTY BOOKING EVERYWHERE
CHARLES WILSON GAMBLE, Pilot - - East End, Pittsburg, Pa.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
3 NOV 1914

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 17 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1805

Photo by Copperfield, 12-13 Grafton St., Bond St. W., London, Eng.

KATHARINE GOODSON
Pianist

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK — MISS SUSAN S.
Positive Breath Control, Perfect Placing. B O I C E. VOCAL STUDIOS. Expert Coaching. Diction in all languages.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

E. PRESSON MILLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

ELEANOR PATTERSON,
AMERICAN CONTRALTO.
Tel. 880 Morningside. 510 W. 124th St.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN,
Studio: 70 Carnegie Hall.
Telephone, Columbus 5946.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

ELIZABETH PILLOW OLIVER,
SOPRANO.
Art of Singing. Voice building and development.
Available for Oratorio, Chamber Music, Concerts.
Studio: 837 Carnegie Hall, New York.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction — Telephone
Theory of Music — 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City.

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th S

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Stre
Complete musical education given to studen from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MRS. J. HARRISON-IRVINE,
PIANISTE—ACCOMPANISTE.
Instruction in Piano, Teaching, Accompanying Coaching of Operatic Roles, Concert, Oratori Sight Singing and Reading Classes, Harmony.
1013 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Phone, Columbus 13

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOI
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d S

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza

DOUGLAS POWELL
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Special attention paid to
Concert Breathing and Tone Placement.
Studio: 448 Madison Ave., Phone Plaza 5722.

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 17. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1805.

KIEW CONSERVATORY PROSPERS UNDER GLIÈRE.

Famous Russian Composer Heads the Reorganized School Founded in 1913—His Aims and Ideals.

Arbatte, Deneshny 32,
Moscow, October 1, 1914.

Kiew, the largest town of South Russia (the Oukraina), situated on a ridge, which overlooks the Dnieper, a beautiful large river with picturesque land on its banks. This town played a great role in the past of Russia; Christianity and culture were introduced into the country by its wise ruler, Prince Vladimir (called "Sun-Shine"), who died in 1015. A monument was erected to his memory on the top of a hill in Kiew. Churches, monasteries, various buildings and monuments, all of ancient mold, bring to the mind the events history has to tell about this town. At present Kiew prides itself on having a university, a polytechnikum, a military school and many other schools of various kinds demanded by a cultured people. Nor is that all. For thirty-eight years Kiew has had a musical school (a branch of the Imperial Russian Musical Society), which last autumn was reformed into a conservatory.

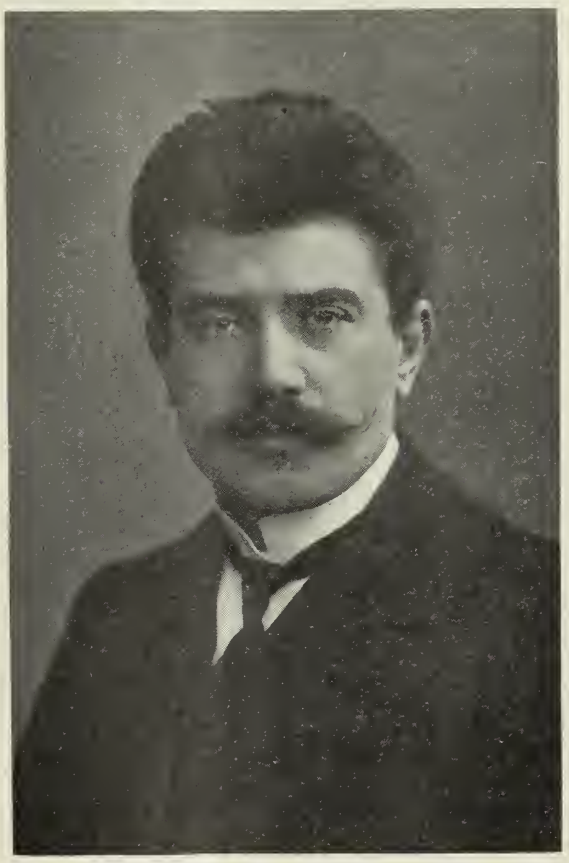
Kiew Decides.

The necessity of a musical institution of a high order was felt keenly by the inhabitants of Kiew, who are great lovers of music. Many talented young persons wished to study seriously, but the limited curriculum of the musical school did not suffice for a complete musical education on broad principles. They desired a conservatory, an institution which stands in Russia in the same rank with a university, the diploma of which makes a pupil a "Free Artist," and gives certain rights in social and political life in Russia.

The inauguration of the conservatory at Kiew took place in the autumn of 1913 in the presence of Princess Elena Georgiewna of Oldenburg, patroness of the Imperial Russian Musical Society in Russia. Last year they had at the musical school ten professors and twenty-four teachers for the great number of 894 students, of which 633 were female. They were divided into 574 for piano study, 172 for singing, 71 for violin, 22 for cello, etc.

How It Was Done.

V. Pouchalski was director of the musical school for thirty-eight years. When it was made into a conservatory, he retired and did not accept the offer to continue his work at the new institution. A committee of eighteen professionals and well informed laymen deliberated the question as to what was to be done in order to change the music school into a conservatory. First of all, they agreed to have an authoritative and energetic man at the head of the project. Reinhold Glière was selected and named director of the Conservatory of Kiew.



Something About Glière.

Glière already had made a name for himself as a composer and conductor. He was born in 1874 in Kiew and educated there. In 1894 he went to Moscow to study instrumentation and counterpoint at the conservatory under Arenski, Taneïew and Ippolitow-Ivanow. After finishing his studies Glière went abroad to Germany. While there he did much to acquaint himself with Western music. He now is a thoroughly equipped and eclectic musician, a highly gifted composer and a skillful conductor, ready in every way to accomplish the great work he has to do at the conservatory at Kiew.

Glière's Plans.

Glière told the Musical Courier correspondent about his plans and his new activities. "I intend to introduce musical culture into Kiew by the various means the conservatory offers me. Musical education must be raised to the heights it has attained in all other cultured countries. That is the aim I have set for myself and I will strive eagerly toward realizing my ideals. The best professors and teachers are wanted for our conservatory at Kiew, and we will have them. All our studies must be based on broad principles. Our conservatory will hold the position musical institutions of this kind have attained at St. Petersburg and Moscow. Once Anton Rubinstein said: 'Kiew is a town where singing could be successfully cultivated; its warm and sunny climate must help to develop the beautiful voices I often have heard in South Russia.' Remembering these words of our compatriot and great man, I will give great care to vocal music especially and to the study of opera singing, although the other branches of a wide musical education dare not be neglected."

Reinhold Glière is a man genial, kind, noble in his principles and warm-hearted by nature. As he also is energetic and has the power and capacity for organizing, the conservatory at Kiew surely will become an art institution of high rank in the musical world.

REINHOLD GLIERE,
Director of the Conservatory at Kiew.

Ellen von Tideböhl.

BALTIMORE NEWS.

213 Prospect Avenue, Roland Park,
Baltimore, Md., October 23, 1914.

A recital is to be given at Lehmann Hall, on November 5, by Merrill Hopkinson, baritone, and Marguerite Maas, pianist. This performance should be of unusual interest to local musicians; first, because it has been many years since Dr. Hopkinson has given a recital here under his own auspices, and second, because it is the debut recital of Miss Maas in this country. This promising young pianist has just returned from a year of study at the Stern Conservatory, Berlin, where she won many laurels. She will play a theme and variations of her own composition, and Dr. Hopkinson will sing two of her songs. Miss Maas is most fortunate to make her debut with the collaboration of so finished an artist as Dr. Hopkinson, who will present a program of wide range, including a group of German classics. Mrs. Henry Franklin will be the accompanist.

Ida M. Shaw and George Pickering at Musicale.

Walter de C. Poultney gave an informal musicale at his home, on Wednesday evening, October 14, at which the artists were Pawloff, the Russian violinist; Arthur Webner, pianist; Ida M. Shaw, soprano, and George Pickering, tenor. Miss Shaw and Mr. Pickering were the Marguerite and Faust of the Melanno Opera Class production of "Faust," last spring.

Symphony Season.

Baltimore will have twelve symphony concerts this year, in place of the usual five or eight; so that the gap left by the lack of an opera season will not be so keenly felt. We will hear the Boston Symphony, the Philadelphia, the New York Philharmonic, and the New York Symphony Orchestras, and the season will begin in October, two weeks earlier than usual.

Choir Notes.

Two new voices are in the quartet at Grace Methodist Church—Sara Williams, soprano, and Jesse Edwards, tenor.

Mrs. Randolph Wilson, contralto, has resumed her work at Grace and St. Peter's. D. L. F.

KANSAS CITY ORGANISTS HEARD IN CONCERT.

War Detains Artists—Symphony Study Programs and Lecture Recitals Announced.

Kansas City, Mo., October 16, 1914.

The Kansas City Association of Organists gave its first public program of the season, Thursday morning, in the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church. Lawrence Robbins opened the program by a scholarly rendition of the sonata, op. 188, by Rheinberger. Margaret Boulter played the "Andante," by Merkel, and "Marche Nuptiale," by Hollins, with good taste. Mrs. George Forsee closed the program with two movements from the Mendelssohn sonata, op. 2, and fugue in D, Guilmant. The entire program made a pleasant and profitable hour not only for the professional musician, but also for the amateurs.

Hans Feil gave a concert Friday evening, on the new organ in the Wabash Avenue Christian Church, where he is organist and choir director. He is growing in his breadth and style of organ playing. Particularly interesting was the "Pastoral Suite," by Demarest. At the end of the organ recital the choir gave Noyes' cantata, "The Village Blacksmith."

Destinn-Gilly Recital Canceled.

Considerable disappointment has been felt here over the cancellation of the appearance of Emmy Destinn and Dinh Gilly, who were to open the Fritchy series of concerts October 27. Mr. Gilly is detained in Europe by the war. However, the series will be opened on the announced date by Johanna Gadski and Clarence Whitehill in joint recital. All will rejoice at the opportunity of hearing Mme. Gadski again for she is a favorite here. Much is expected from Mr. Whitehill, for the musical public here has read extensively of his triumphs.

Symphony Concert Study Programs.

Miss Lichtenwalter has announced her program for the study of the symphony concert programs during the year. Preceding each concert the symphony will be analyzed and played. The following pupils will assist Miss Lichtenwalter in four-hand arrangements: D major, Haydn, Leone Solow; C major, Mozart, Orra O'Neal; F flat major, Beethoven, Mrs. George C. Gray; Italian, Mendelssohn, Nellie Lent; "Rustic Wedding," Goldmark, Virgil Thompson; C minor, Saint-Saëns, Geraldine Shepard; F minor, Tschaikowsky, Nelle F. Troutman.

Sarah Ellen Barnes will give a series of lecture-recitals on the symphony during the season in Drexel Hall.

Boy Violinist in Recital.

Wm. A. Bunsen, violinist, who a year ago came to make this city his home, presented in violin recital, Friday evening, his pupil, Gilbert Jaffy. The boy, only twelve years old, showed an amazing amount of musicianship for his age. While his natural gifts are unusual, yet without the masterly guidance of so excellent a teacher as Mr. Bunsen has proven himself to be, he would probably never have reached the interpretive height he has attained. He gave a splendid exhibition of the fundamentals of good violin playing.

Geneve Lichtenwalter.

MAURICE ARONSON VERA KAPLUN
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Mme. Karweska Discusses Tschaikowsky.

Margarete Karweska, the Russian grand opera singer, who is now in New York, was seen recently by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER and she gave some interesting views upon the difference between Western and Eastern music. Mme. Karweska is a great admirer of the works of Tschaikowsky and she believes that his work forms the connecting link between the music of the East and the music of the West. She says: "Tschaikowsky deserves a place of honor with Schumann and Liszt, who were his prototypes, and yet he was an independent thinker, composer and portrayer of human sentiments. Although his name belongs in the category of the Russian school, yet he leaned toward the schools of the West, especially the Italian. It is to the latter nation that he owes his success in lyrics, both song and piano. The Russians are so chauvinistic to their school and adhere so closely to the Oriental coloring and turbulent rhythms, that they called him a Westerner. But the blend of the two—the East and the West—is not that the true artist? Who can say that Tschaikowsky did not derive his pessimistic spirit from the West? A strain of plaintive melancholy, just like a Westerner, followed by an outburst of primeval passion, just like an Easterner, or a Russian, if you please, chase one another in his compositions.

MME. M. KARWESKA AS AIDA.

"It is this very spontaneity, this heterogeneous inspiration, combined, of course, with labor, that makes him so popular. But of careful study and detail he is sometimes criticised as lacking.

"It was in opera, that he expected to achieve his ideal, but his temperament and methods ignored his inclination and marked a greater success for him in chamber music any symphony. Yet four of his operas rank high among Russian composers, "Eugen Onegin" and "Pique Dame," "Oprichnik" and "Mazeppa," while "The Enchantress" was given last winter in Moscow. In opera he is too subjective, so turn to his songs where that element reveals the individual composer in the true light.

"There never was a Russian but understood the human voice; but it is ofttimes necessary to employ the native tongue properly to depict the passion of the music and the charming elegy. Here the Italian lyricism asserts itself. Here his emotional temperament has full play without having to apply itself to the literary aspect of opera. He bears resemblance to Chopin and occasionally there is a likeness to Rubinstein."

FRANCIS MACMILLEN HAS RETURNED FROM EUROP

American Violinist Tells Musical Courier Representati Some Interesting Things About His Stay Abroad— Opened His Season This Week in Michigan.

Francis Macmillen, the American violinist, is among t latest of his countrymen to return from Europe. He a rived in New York on the steamship Europa of the Itali line, Thursday, October 22, after a two weeks' sail, a was seen a few hours after his arrival by a MUSIC COURIER reporter.

Mr. Macmillen has been spending the greater part of t summer in Dresden, Germany, coaching with Leopold Au but after the present disconcerting troubles in Europe, left for Italy. With his mother he spent three weeks a guest of the Duke and Duchess Lante della Rovere Villa Lante near Rome.

Villa Lante is one of Italy's fine old properties (valu at $3,000,000, and the estate includes seven villages). the Lante family belonged the della Rovere Popes, one whom was associated with the building of the Sist Chapel. The Duchess Lante was formerly Miss Allen, St. Louis, a descendant of Ethan Allen, and is a dau ter of the railroad magnate, Allen. Both she and duke are great patrons of the arts, he himself being artist of merit. A portrait of Francis Macmillen, m by the duke, is to be exhibited at the San Francisco P ama Exposition next year. A fine old music hall belo to the villa and here the concerts are given.

Among other guests at Villa Lante during Mr. M millen's stay there, were Arturo Toscanini and Thor Nelson Page.

Money embarassments seemed to be Mr. Macmill chief trouble at the outbreak of the war, but these, acc ing to the violinist, were effectively alleviated through assistance of Arthur M. Abell, MUSICAL COURIER rep e tive in Berlin.

In telling of his recent numerous interesting experien the violinist emphasized the marvelous strength and nity of the Germans, the order which prevailed in D den; he told of how the regiments marched forth f Dresden with flowers in the muzzles of their guns, spoke appreciatively of the excellent treatment of hin at the hands of the Germans, particularly when it known that he was an American.

"Seven hundred trains were taken off in Italy, so we were five days on the way from Dresden to Ro he narrated.

Mr. Macmillen works with Professor Auer in Dres every summer.

"The German government has sent Leopold Aue Russia. It was a case of now or never," said the violi and continuing, "if he doesn't get to Dresden next sum we shall get him to come down to Villa Lante. I shal back to Italy in May."

Mr. Macmillen was to play this season before the Pope Pius, who was a great patron of music.

Eighty engagements are already booked for this violi He opened his season Monday, October 26, in Michi with the Russian Symphony Orchestra. He is to be s ist on the special tour of the Cincinnati Symphony Orc tra. Twenty orchestral appearances are already boo His New York recital will occur in Carnegie Hall in cember, probably the first week.

Mr. Macmillen is including on his program the Tsc kowsky, Glazounow, Goldmark and Brahms' concertos, "Symphonie Espagnole," Lalo; Bach's sonatas for v alone—and Mr. Macmillen says he prefers to play Bac all others.

Among the smaller pieces will be works by Paul J works by Tor Aulin, not usually played (gavotte and promptu), the "Othello" fantasie of Ernst, based on Rossini opera, etc.

American composers are to be represented on these grams by MacDowell, Arthur Hartmann and Gay Yost.

Mukle-Connell-Jones Trio.

Dean Edmon Morris, of Converse College, Spartanb S. C., has engaged for the opening number of his co course, Monday, November 23, the Mukle-Connell-J Trio, composed of May Mukle, the English cellist; A Jones, pianist, and Horatio Connell, baritone.

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION
and MADAME TERESA EMERICH
PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE

Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:
CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.
INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN
The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich. Telephone Am.tPfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

Mrs. Beach's Symphony.

Irs. H. H. A. Beach's Gaelic symphony is to be per-ned by the Philadelphia Orchestra on March 12 and under the direction of Leopold Stokowski. This is the e work that was performed last winter in Leipsic and nburg with marked success, as the following press ices show:

A possessor of musical gifts of the highest kind." "A musical re touched with genius." Her symphony can successfully assert f with a dozen of the academic symphonies." Thus does Ferd. l, one of Germany's foremost music critics, and a recognized ority on matters musical, refer to the distinguished American poser, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, in an article which appeared in Hamburger Nachrichten following the recent symphony concert Hamburg conducted by Theodore Spiering, upon which occasion works, symphony in E minor and piano concerto, by Mrs. Beach e performed. . . .

he works of Amy Beach performed here yesterday demon-ted, on the other hand, that in her case we have before us unde-bly a possessor of musical gifts of the highest kind, a musical re touched with genius. Strong creative power, glowing fancy, inct for form and color are united in her work with facile and rtless mastery of the entire technical apparatus. To this is added rm of poetic mood, delicacy and grace of melody, and a gift for , soulful harmonization. Her symphony can successfully assert lf with a dozen of the academic symphonies, and with several en of those masculine symphonic productions which in the fruit-years gone by sprang from the old European musical fancy.

Her symphony is a work that compels the highest respect. Free n trivialities, and at times enthralling the listener by the uncom-n intellectual content of its thematic work. Of the four move-nts I regard the second ("Alla Siciliana") as the best. It is tten for woodwind, in song form. With a surprising turn this rges into a vivavious allegro, full of the light joyousness of e music. How charming and how natural is this movement!—lin Continental Times.

The first and second movements of the symphony show warlike rit. The "Siciliana" is beautifully set for the instruments. In lento the solo violin and solo cello hold beautiful colloquy. ere is no lack of melodies in this symphony. It has many.—pziger Tageblatt, November 24, 1913.

Her ever tasteful style, with skillful form giving, shows the com-er as a talent distinguished by warmth and naturalness of in-ration, beauty of idea, strong melodic vein, vigorous feeling for ure, and a notable orchestral writing technic; all of which comes be doubly sympathetic at the present day.—Leipziger Neueste chrichten, November 23, 1913.

Her E minor symphony expresses a very pronounced feeling for ure. Mrs. Beach has strong power of inspiration, and interests the individuality of her melody and by the striking character wn in her instrumentation.—Leipziger Abendzeitung, November 1913.

The symphony is so naturally conceived that one may reflect—low that the men of today compose poorly enough, why may not e women take up the pen?" And the opening is favorable in ith. . . . Particularly the first movement of Mrs. Beach's mphony is to be taken at full value when gauged in standards rrent among men composers. Mrs. Beach does not vacillate, but rdily holds her material together, and it takes real composing to rn out such a symphonic movement as this.—Leipziger Zeitung, vember 24, 1913.

The symphony in E minor, op. 32, revealed a firmly established, sitive gift for detail. One well conceived, well executed detail llowed another.—Hamburger Correspondent, December 3, 1913.

The most charming effect is perhaps achieved in the episodes, hich the composer has limited to the delicate grace, the finer dec-ative art of suite music.—Hamburger Fremdenblatt, December 4, 13.

Relatively speaking, the lento movement, which, like two hers, is written in E minor, gives the most favorable impression the composer's work. The symphony is well written and pos-sses undeniable charm, with a fluent smoothness of orchestration. Neue Hamburger Zeitung, December 3, 1913.

The following analysis of this work is taken from the rogram book of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra:

Mrs. Beach has characterized her symphony as Gaelic, a desig-ation for which ample justification is to be found in the melodic and ythmic peculiarities of a number of its principal themes, several of hich are of genuine Celtic origin. Beyond this no indication is ven as to the symphony having been written from any particular otives save those provided by the fancy of the composer of music ure and simple, which appeals for its comprehension to the mu-cal nature of the hearer and to his responsiveness to the tone nguage only. . . .

The first movement begins with an introductory section consist-ng of a succession of tremulous harmonies, which, with a gradual rescendo, prepare the entrance of a portion of the first energetic rincipal subject in the trumpets accompanied by the trombones nd followed by the double basses in close imitation. This is taken p hy the horns and carried to its completion hy the woodwinds ver pizzicato chords in the strings. A pendant of a lighter, more layful character then joins in and, together with what has gone efore, paves the way for the second principal theme, which the larinet announces at first tentatively, interrupted by a reminiscence f the first subject, then in its entirety. This, too, has a pendant n the shape of a bright little melody with a charming Scotch snap. The material, briefly outlined, is worked out with admirable kill. . . .

The second movement is a graceful Siciliano, the melody of which is given out by the oboe, while the strings provide a flow-ng polyphonic accompaniment upon its repetition later. . . . A rief allusion to the allegro closes this charming and delicately or-hestrated movement.

The third movement begins with a sort of improvisation, includ-ng a recitative for the violin solo, on the opening phrase of the first principal melody, which is sung by the solo cello, and in its plaintive tone might well have come from the Scottish Highlands. (It is very old Irish). . . .

The first subject of the last movement, a remarkably vigorous one, is announced by the full orchestra. . . . After it has been thematically elaborated for a time the second theme, an expressive cantilena, is given out by the violas, cellos and bassoons. After this has been repeated with varying instrumentation and contra-puntally constructed accompanying voices, a majestic unison episode in the trombones prepares the ray for the re-entrance of the first subject. Both are then worked out successively and simultaneously with great skill by means of inversion, augmentation, diminution and the many devices at the command of the experienced composer. After a résumé of the first part the movement closes with a bril-liant peroration based on the second theme. (Advertisement.)

Christine Schutz's Bookings.

Christine Schutz, the young contralto, who met with marked success at the Worcester, Mass., Music Festival on September 24, was equally well received when she sang before the New York State Music Teachers' Association at their convention last June. She sang also at the Saco Valley, Me., Festival on August 3 and 4. Among appear-ances for which she has already been booked are recitals at Halifax, Canada; Albany, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Or-

CHRISTINE SCHUTZ,
Contralto, at the recent Worcester Festival, September 24, 1914.

pheus Club, Providence, R. I.; Arion Society, the Fall River, Mass., Woman's Club, where she will sing on Feb-ruary 15.

The accompanying snapshot of Miss Schutz was taken during her recent appearance at Worcester, Mass.

Fremstad's Popularity.

Since Olive Fremstad opened her concert tour in Se-attle, Wash., many other cities have given her ovations. On a recent Sunday afternoon she sang to a capacity audience at the Columbia Theatre, in San Francisco, and after the performance nearly the entire audience moved around to the stage door, completely filling two blocks, and pelted her with thousands of roses and violets as she came out and entered her automobile. Mme. Fremstad's New York recital will be on the afternoon of December 16 at Carnegie Hall.

REBARER
420 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM
AMERICAN ENGAGEMENTS
Management ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

MORGAN KINGSTON
AS LOHENGRIN

"In face and figure Mr. Kingston surpasses almost any other Lohengrin one sees."
—N. Y. Globe

"The singing of Morgan Kingston as 'Lohengrin' was admirable—thoroughly admirable. Scarcely anyone could have wished it better"
—N. Y. Tribune.

Principal Tenor Century Opera Company
SEASONS 1913-'14-'15-'16

LOUIS KREIDLER
Principal Baritone Century Opera Co.
and formerly of the Metropolitan

Scores Success as "William Tell"

Louis Kreidler's impersonation of the title rôle was excellent, both in singing and in acting.—N. Y. Evening Mail, Sept. 23, 1914.

In the name part, Louis Kreidler sang stirringly and with effect. —N. Y. Press, Sept. 23, 1914.

Louis Kreidler, in the name part, on whom the bulk of the individual work rested, bore himself manfully. Mr. Kreidler has shown us nothing better than his Tell. His conception of the character held dignity, strength and emotion, the latter kept under proper restraint.—N. Y. Evening World, Sept. 23, 1914.

Mr. Louis Kreidler's William Tell was admirable in the dignity of its outline and picturesqueness of bearing.—N. Y. Morning Telegraph, Sept. 23, 1914.

For Concert Dates Address Hotel Monticello, 35 W. 64th St., New York

HERBERT
FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
(Mason & Hamlin Piano Used)
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.
The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The

FLONZALEY QUARTET
Tour 1914-15 Now Booking
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

Helen Bixby Wetzel in London.

Helen Bixby Wetzel is shown in the accompanying snapshot trying to catch the wary International Dove of Peace in London, where she is studying hard with Maestro Blackburn. With him, it is contemplated, she will return to Italy and fill engagements for the fall and winter. If war conditions do not warrant a return to Italy in the near future Miss Wetzel will return to this country, so the

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL TRYING TO CATCH THE WARY INTERNATIONAL DOVE OF PEACE.

MUSICAL COURIER is informed by her father, Elmer Wetzel, of Indianapolis.

Miss Wetzel has met with much success in Italy, where she sings under the name of Elena Antonelli, as the following notices from the Fossano Gazette will show:

(1) We say frankly that the good judgment of the public, with its frequent warm and enthusiastic applause, has been demonstrated.

(2) The beautiful American, Helen Bixby Wetzel, sang her way into the hearts of the public, and won much applause.

W. O. Forsyth's Teaching.

W. O. Forsyth, of Toronto, Canada, celebrated throughout the country and in many portions of Europe as a teacher of piano playing of quite remarkable gifts, and who has always been one of the busiest of pedagogues, will be more in demand this year than ever before, as numbers of pupils who contemplated a European study period are remaining at home and many already have enrolled under the Toronto master.

Mr. Forsyth has been brilliantly successful as an instructor of broad and thoroughly modern principles, his pupils winning always the highest commendations from the press and public by virtue of their musical and finished playing, and their complete technical proficiency. Many Forsyth graduates have appeared frequently in recital in Toronto, and in most of the large Canadian cities, as well as in Berlin, Germany, London, England, New York, Chicago, St. Paul and other American cities, and always with the most gratifying success.

Of fine musical fibre himself and a truly poetic pianist, Mr. Forsyth adds to those qualities a very wide acquaintance with the literature of his instrument, and as a consequence secures unusual results from his pupils in developing the mind and the artistic instinct. Superb muscle control is another characteristic of the Forsyth disciples.

Cecil Fanning in the West.

Criticisms from the Colorado Springs newspapers, which are given below, are examples of the treatment Cecil Fanning has received from Western critics during the three weeks' tour he has just completed in Colorado, Wyoming, and Nebraska. Everywhere Mr. Fanning was received by the musical public with great enthusiasm and appreciation of his unusual ability to present a program of songs:

In the appearance of Cecil Fanning, American baritone, in song recital at the Burns last night, music lovers of Colorado Springs were given a rare treat, which, except in the case of those few fortunate enough to have heard him on his first engagement here last year, was in great measure unexpected. Mr. Fanning established himself firmly among music lovers of this city last night and it is safe to predict that his future appearances in Colorado Springs will be looked forward to as one of the big events of the musical season.

To a rich, warm baritone, of good compass and great smoothness, Mr. Fanning adds a flawless technic and perfect artistry. . . .

He was effective from the start, his opening selection, Beethoven's "Adelaide," giving him a firm hold on his audience at once. The group of German songs with which he opened his program were extremely well done, Schubert's "Der Neugierige," from "Die schöne Müllerin," being sung with exquisite tenderness. In Loewe's "Erlkönig," which Mr. Fanning gave as his first encore, he displayed a dramatic force that was in evidence throughout his program. The rollicking spirit of "Der Musikant," by Hugo Wolf, gave the singer opportunity to prove his versatility, and in a group of old French and English folksongs his histrionic ability was charmingly exhibited. "To Mary," Maud White's setting of Shelley's beautiful poem, was given with great tenderness and delicacy, and "The Sands of Dee," by Frederic Clay, gave the singer opportunity to display marked dramatic power and repression.

In "Mammy's Song," a charming darky lullaby by Harriet Ware, and in "A Thirsty Child," given as encores, Mr. Fanning delighted his hearers with a simplicity of expression and a quaintness of humor that was most refreshing. Ellen Wright's "A Dream," also given as an encore, was one of the favorites of the evening. At the close of his program Mr. Fanning gave "The Last Leaf," singing Sidney Homer's setting to Oliver Wendell Holmes' poem with great dramatic effect. The prologue from "Pagliacci," which Mr. Fanning sang as a second encore at the close of the program, was well received.

Credit for an important share in the success of the evening is due to the sympathetic accompaniments of H. B. Turpin, Mr. Fanning's teacher, to whom the development of the young singer is largely due.—Telegraph, Colorado Springs, October 3, 1914.

The warmth of the reception accorded Cecil Fanning upon his second appearance in this city at the Burns on Friday evening was a glowing tribute to the art of the popular baritone, who in a comprehensive, well chosen program was given a splendid opportunity to demonstrate anew his claim to a secure position among the successful lieder singers of the day.

The noticeable leap forward made by Fanning in the departments of phrasing and shading within the past two years is a pleasurable proof of the fact that he keeps in mind a lofty ideal. Evidences of this artistic advance were perhaps best revealed in his treatment of the German songs, such as Beethoven's "Adelaide," Schubert's "Am Feierabend" and "Der Neugierige," Liszt's "Die Lorelei" and a group of Wolf and Grieg songs. In his interpretation of these songs he did not always adhere strictly to the popular German style of singing, which, as is known, tends to supersede beauty of tone and facility of execution with volume of tone and forcible declamation of the text. As a consequence, his performances, while only partially conforming to the requirements of the German ideal, fully satisfied the lover of beautiful singing. Although in some of his offerings the declamatory style was quite pronounced, a rich, agreeable quality of tone invariably accompanied such expressions. Thus we were treated to a truthful dramatic expression clothed in a beautiful vocal garment.

His tones were ever mellow and well controlled, retaining the same warm quality in all the registers and at the same time conveying musical sense and deep understanding.

Musicianship of a high order was to be recognized in all his interpretations, while his tone coloring indicated a true appreciation of the higher refinements.

Mr. Fanning was sympathetically and conscientiously supported at the piano throughout the evening by his teacher and coach, H. B. Turpin.—The Gazette, Colorado Springs, October 3, 1914.

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

On Organ Consoles.

Hagerstown, Md., October 17, 1914.

To the Musical Courier

My attention was called to an article headed "The Lemare Incident," in the issue of August 5, of the MUSICAL COURIER, particularly to the clause pertaining to the console, which reads as follows:

"From reliable sources the MUSICAL COURIER learns that E. H. Lemare has succeeded in having the Austin firm build the console of the new organ in the manner best suited to his requirements. As the Lemare constructive changes are extremely radical and make it inordinately difficult for any other player to use the same organ employed by him, his influence in the matter of the Austin construction appears to be a very serious question."

We have built two organs under the supervision of Mr. Lemare and after specifications prepared by him, and in those organs the consoles are practically the same as in some other large organs we have built, such as those in the United States Military Academy, West Point; Trinity Church, Pittsburgh; First Baptist Church, Pittsburgh; Euclid Avenue Presbyterian Church, Cleveland, and the two organs we are now building for Washington Irving High School, New York, and the Boys' High School, Brooklyn, or in fact I could name more than one hundred organs which we have built with practically the same type of console as designed by Mr. Lemare for organs for the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Buffalo, and the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Kalamazoo, Mich., which were built by us.

I have not seen the plans Mr. Lemare prepared for the Panama Exposition organ, but I consider the consoles in the organs we built after his plans the most practical that have been used and hope that type will be adopted by the American Guild of Organists.

By the way, this recalls the meeting that I, with a number of other organ builders had the pleasure of attending in New York City in 1908, when the American Guild of Organists gave a farewell dinner to Mr. Lemare, after which we were invited to another room where Mr. Lemare had some models of consoles, and he explained his idea of console arrangement and the advantages and disadvantages were discussed by those present. Of course there was little unity of opinion, as unfortunately almost every organist has his own ideas of console arrangement, but I consider Mr. Lemare's plans as practical as those of any individual organist and there must be quite a large number advancing the same ideas, judging from the number of consoles we have built after the same plan.

It would be a great advantage not only to the organ builders, but to the organists themselves, if the organ console could be standardized, and while the members of the organizations of organists are those whom the organ builders are endeavoring to please, I think they should adopt a certain standard, which would be a great help to organ builders and everybody concerned. Unfortunately, at the present, every organ builder follows his own fancy in designing and arranging of consoles as well as other points, and all have to conform to the ideas of each individual organist.

Should you desire you are at liberty to publish this letter or use it as you may see fit.

Yours respectfully,
M. P. MÖLLER.

Gabrilowitsch's Historical Series.

One of the most important things that Ossip Gabrilowitsch has accomplished in recent years was a series of concerts which he gave in Berlin and Munich illustrating the development of the piano concerto from Bach to the present time. The German critics counted this historical series as an event of unusual interest, several of them going so far as to say that they were the most important achievements of any pianist in twenty-five years, that is, since the famous historical recitals of Rubinstein. The Bayerische Staatszeitung of Munich said:

It is certainly a marvelous fact that this artist played not less than nineteen concertos beginning with Bach and ending with modern works. But still more marvelous is the masterly way in which his ideal art succeeded in bringing the composer to life. This was a task which only Gabrilowitsch, to my mind the most versatile of living pianists, would be able to fulfill, and fulfill in such a way that the performance of every single composition amounted to a great musical event. Whether Gabrilowitsch plays Bach or Beethoven, Chopin or Tschaikowsky, Brahms, Strauss or Rachmaninoff, the same deep interpretation illumines the work of each and all. He has a marvelous capacity for reaching to the depths of every work by every composer. The last evening of the series was accompanied by the most stormy ovation to which even the critics could only add unstinted applause. This was indeed a worthy close to the superb undertaking.

Said the Allgemeine Musikzeitung of Berlin:

This achievement of playing nineteen great works in historical succession within four months, and playing them with ideal mastery, is certainly superb, one which words are inadequate to describe.

The same paper concluded another review by saying, "Gabrilowitsch is without question one of the greatest and most versatile of living pianists."

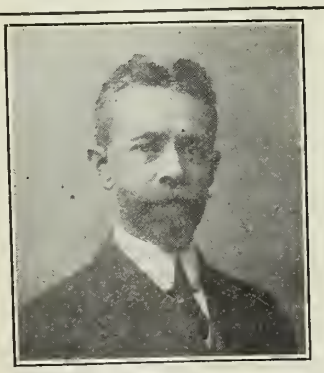
CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
STEINWAY PIANO USED
M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue
New York

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner
1400 B'way, New York

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill



VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

A. CARBONE
MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References.
AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates
GODOWSKY
Will be in America this Season
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.
KNABE PIANO USED

FRANKLIN RIKER
In America Season 1914-15
Personal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York
Phone, 3964 Riverside Studio: 603-4 Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
223 Mathilda St., Apt. 5 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON
AMERICAN PIANIST
Management: Robert P. Strine, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies.
MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

William Thorner
VOCAL TEACHER
Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:
"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.
(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."
Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.
Address 2130 Broadway, New York. Phone: 1050 Columbus.

WICHITA ORCHESTRA'S CONCERT.

Wichita, Kan., October 5, 1914.

The formal opening of the musical season was effected yesterday, October 4, at the first concert of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra, Theodore Lindberg, director, and Louise Jansen Wylie, soprano soloist. This second season for the orchestra is made possible by a list of guarantors, including some of the most prominent musical and social citizens, and by the indefatigable work of Iris Pendleton, business manager.

Last year was more or less an experiment. The ordinances of the city, prohibiting Sunday performances with admission fee, and the impossibility of bringing the necessary business musicians together on any other day than Sunday, was the problem which finally was solved by a guarantee list. This list proved the wants of the people, and this season the concerts will be given on six Sunday afternoons, under Theodore Lindberg's direction, with the following list of soloists: Maud Powell, violinist, November 15; Andrea Sarto, baritone, December 13; Louise Llewellyn, in folk songs, January 17; Ida Gardner, contralto, February 14, and Katharine Goodson, pianist, March 7. The personnel of the Orchestra, while made up largely of student element, is solid in some sections by reason of the professional business players, and as a whole is doing good work. The drawback of a mixed organization (amateur and professional) is evident, but the conductor has done good work with the material at hand, notwithstanding the ambition of the program numbers. Anyway, we have a symphony orchestra, the best we can get under the circumstances (civic, professional and business circumstances). There were fifty performers yesterday. The program opened with Schubert's "Rosamund" overture, which was played very well. The "March Slav" of Tschaikowsky is much too difficult as yet for the orchestra, and was the weakest number. The German dances went smoothly, and the "Trovatore" selection fitted the ability of the orchestra better than some of the other attempted numbers. "Heart Wounds" and "The Last Spring," by Grieg; Chaminade's "Scarf Dance" and "Ballet Symphonique" were pleasing and in better keeping with a young symphony orchestra's ability.

Mme. Wylie, soprano, is no stranger here. A possessor of a beautifully pure voice, of good range and under excellent control, a simple but pleasing stage presence, she re-emphasized her popular standing here. The aria "Leise, Leise," from Weber's "Freischütz," with orchestral accompaniment, which was well played, was her opening number. Several recalls were demanded. A group of songs by Sinding, Ronald, Hugo Wolf, Rummel and Speaks was the second offering, and the list was enlarged by several encore numbers. Lucy K. Forbes furnished the piano accompaniments to the group of songs.

This first program has caused no little interest in the orchestra's work, and with regular rehearsals the forthcoming programs should be of value educationally and a pleasure musically.

The correct list for the Wichita Chorus Course is as follows (corrected to date): Antonio Scotti, October 29; Frances Alda, November 10; Harold Bauer, December 31; Helen Stanley and Frances Ingram, January 13; Gerville-Reache, February 16; Alma Gluck, March 22.

The list for the Redpath Lyceum Series at the Forum is as follows: Mme. Schumann-Heink, October 23; Military Girls, October 24; Alton Packard, October 26; David Duggan Operatic Company, Sidney Landon, Our Old Home Singers, Cavaliers (Elizabethan music); Woodman, cartoonist; Montraville Flowers, Montraville Wood, Beryl Buckley; Congressman Oswell; Riner Sisters, Dr. Bradford, Ben Greet Players, Cathedral Choir, John B. Ratto, recital artists, and the Collegians' Male Quartet.

The Presbyterian and St. Paul's M. E. Churches are also conducing a lyceum course, in which music largely figures.

The Musicians' Club elected its executive committee for this year at its first meeting last week, and the following will serve: Otto L. Fischer, F. A. Power, Reno B. Myers, Harry Evans, T. L. Krebs, Rafael Navas, Mrs. Jetta Campbell-Stanley, Jessie Clark, and Evaline Packer.

The executive committee of the Kansas State Music Teachers' Association, composed of Charles S. Skilton, dean of the University School of Music, Lawrence; F. A. Beach, of the Emporia Music School; H. H. Louderback, of Atchison School of Music; Mrs. H. E. Emerson, of Chanute; R. H. Brown, of the Manhattan College; O. A. Anderson, of Hutchison, and Otto L. Fischer, T. L. Krebs and Theodore Lindberg, of Wichita, met here last week to formulate a standard for private music teachers of the State of Kansas. The outline was drawn up and is now in the hands of all high school principals throughout the State, showing what is to be demanded from those teachers who will be accredited in the music work and allowed to issue credits to apply in high school courses. Considerable work is ahead for the State association, and at their December meeting here all plans are expected to be perfected for this standardization.

RALPH BROKAW.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
NOW IN AMERICA
CONCERT ORATORIO
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martba de Lachmann, Reinbold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

FLORENCE HARDEMAN
American Violinist Just returned from Europe In America Season 1914-15
Present address: 3514 Washington Avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio

DAVID HOCHSTEIN
Concert Violinist
—IN AMERICA NOW—
Address 10 Carnegie Hall, New York City

FLORENCE LARRABEE
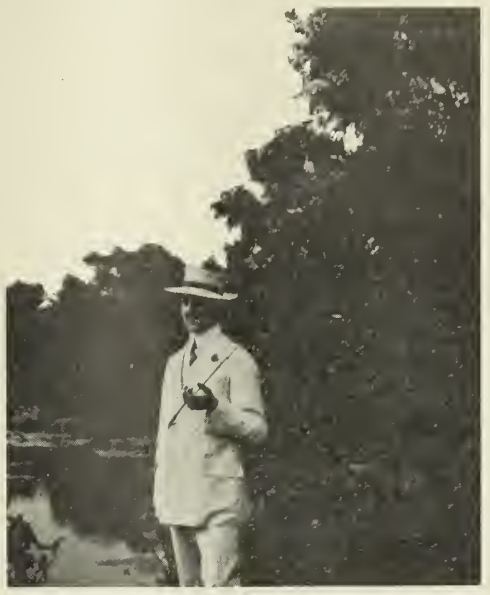
PIANIST
Just returned from Europe In America Season 1914-15

Miss NINA MORGANA Coloratura Soprano From La Scala in Milan
Available for Concerts—Musicales Season 1914-15
Address: AEOLIAN HALL, Rooms 1626-27, N. Y. City

SUNG BY MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, MME. GERVILLE-REACHE, ETC.
Three Songs of the Desert
By GERTRUDE ROSS
Sunset in the Desert
Night in the Desert
Dawn in the Desert
WHITE-SMITH MUSIC PUB. CO.
Boston New York Chicago

After Nine Years in Leipsic
MRS. CARL ALVES
has returned to New York and has resumed the teaching of voice at her Studio,
48 West 90th St., New York



If you would know why it is some grand pianos lose that beautiful tone quality that is so attractive at first, write Kranich & Bach for a booklet that tells just how this is brought about. There is much other information that is of value pertaining to grand pianos in these books, and they can be had free, upon request.

KRANICH & BACH
New York

Some Van Vliet Encomiums.

The accompanying pictures show Cornelius Van Vliet as a child when he started to study the cello in Holland, and as he looks today.

Previous to Mr. Van Vliet's return to Minneapolis, where he is the principal of the cello section with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, he appeared during October in recital. Appended are some eulogies:

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET AS HE IS TODAY.

The Quincy Music Club made its bow to Quincy last evening and established a prestige which sets a high mark for concerts. Cornelius Van Vliet, the Dutch cellist, and Kathleen Shutts, pianist, furnished a program which was a rare treat to the music lovers gathered in the high School auditorium. Mr. Van Vliet is an Amsterdam man, and plays first cello in the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. He is an artist to his finger tips, and a perfect exponent of the art he follows. It is doubted if there is another cellist in this country who is the superior or possibly the equal of this wizard of the bow.—Quincy Daily Herald, October 6, 1914.

It would be difficult for an expert performer on the cello to criticise the playing of Cornelius Van Vliet, and for a layman it is altogether out of the question. He is one of the greatest living cellists and so far above the average that one wonders at his work. It hardly seems possible an instrument so unwieldy can be played in such fashion.

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET AS A CHILD.

The program was high class—of the highest class, in fact—and it included some of the greatest works ever written for cello by masters of all the ages of music as we know it.

At the conclusion of the recital the audience demanded yet another number and was insistent. Mr. Van Vliet thereupon played the "Traumeri" as it is seldom played. Everyone puts words of their own to this wonderful old number of Schumann's. It conveys different thoughts to every hearer, even when played by an ordinary performer, but when Van Vliet plays it there is a world of expression in the music and it is the greatest "lied ohne worte."—Quincy Daily Journal, October 6, 1914.

Seagle's Success in Colorado.

The following is taken from a notice in the Colorado Springs Gazette, October 16, 1914, of Oscar Seagle in joint recital with Harold Bauer, October 15, in Burns Theatre, Colorado Springs, this event being the first number of a course given by the Colorado Spring[illegible] Club:

Seagle's contributions were equally applauded by the enthused audience. The baritone gave an excellent account of himself in his first group of songs, which included "Non piu Andrai," from "Marriage of Figaro," and "Enfant si j'etais roi," by Cui. In these two numbers the full power and warmth of the singer's voice was revealed. His intelligent employment of the head voice, especially on the extreme upper tones in forte, which generally prove so ungovernable in the case of baritones, was a feature of his singing, deserving of hearty commendation. His treatment of the voice in the succeeding group of German songs was equally satisfying from the standpoint of the lover of bel canto. In his encore, the ever popular prologue from "Pagliacci," he was able to inject ardor and intensity without sacrificing musical continuity or tonal balance, which is an art greatly to be encouraged. A pianissimo, produced without effort, and in which the natural, rich quality of his voice is preserved, is one of Seagle's most serviceable attributes.

Mr. Seagle is fortunate in the possession of a very able and conscientious accompanist in Frank Bibb.

Novel Lerner Program.

The Russian pianist, Tina Lerner, has prepared a varied program for her recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Tuesday afternoon, November 3, for, opening with two numbers by Padre Martini, it will likewise contain a gavotte by Sgambati, the Liszt sonata in B minor, a Chopin group and compositions of Rachmaninoff, Tscherepnin and Balakireff.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF THE RUSSIAN VIOLINIST In America 1914-15
Personal Representative: Johanna Sherrick, 200 Fifth Ave., N.Y.
Daniel Mayer, London

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
318 WEST 82d ST., NEW YORK CITY Tel. Schuyler 8537

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

RICCARDO MARTIN
FAMOUS TENOR
Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
October, November, 1914. May, 1915
Management:
CHARLES L. WAGNER, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

MARCELLA CRAFT
Five years Prima Donna Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS
SOLOIST
Maine Festivals, Portland & Bangor, Oct. 1-5, 1914.
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 6, 1914.
San Francisco Recital, Nov. 8, 1914.
Riverside, Cal., Recital, Nov. 10, 1914.
Los Angeles, Cal., Recital, Nov. 12, 1914.
San Diego, Cal., Recital, Nov. 13, 1914, etc.
Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

LOS ANGELES DOMINANT CLUB BEGINS SEASON.

Many Members and Guests Attend Tea and Musical—Veteran Singer Honored—Meeting of Los Angeles Division of California State Music Teachers' Association.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., October 10, 1914.

The first getting together of the Dominant Club members and their friends is always a joyful occasion. Their first tea and musical for this season, given October 3 in the Ebell Club House, brought together a large number of guests and a full representation of the membership. An innovation this season is the giving of the program in the Auditorium. Heretofore both program and reception were given in the parlors. By the new plan enlarged space will permit of more guests and the programs will partake of a slightly more formal nature than before.

There were several features of special interest on this occasion. One was the introductory talk by the incoming president, Mrs. W. H. Jamison, who has a reputation of being especially happy as a public speaker, and her talk, though brief, was to the point and gracefully delivered. The first public appearance of Mrs. W. N. Tiffany since her return from Europe in the early summer was another pleasure of the occasion. Mrs. Tiffany's voice, always one of great beauty, has gained in poise and warmth and her interpretations as well as the vocal beauty of her numbers left nothing to be desired. It was absolutely satisfying and many were the expressions of pleasure and appreciation heard.

The third important event celebrated on this day was the seventy-sixth birthday of Mme. Kempton, who was one of the first American girls to gain laurels abroad as a concert and opera singer. Her first appearance in Los Angeles was in concert with Adelina Patti. Her voice was a rarely beautiful contralto and up to a comparatively few years ago retained its quality. For many years she has been a resident of Los Angeles and to her credit is due the excellent training received by many of the local singers in times past. She is universally beloved and respected and any opportunity to honor her is eagerly sought by her host of friends. At the close of the program Mrs. Jamison, in a beautiful little speech, presented in the name of the club a huge bouquet of Cecil Bruner roses and following that, a jewel containing a coral rose, which she explained would retain its form long after the others had faded, and remain a lasting expression of the love of the club. Just as she finished and Mme. Kempton had taken her seat, a ray of sunshine fell through the window and rested upon the snowy hair of the latter like a benediction. It added the final touch to a most impressive occasion.

Two disappointments on the program were happily overcome on very short notice. Sigmund Beel and Mr. Laparra were to have played a Grieg sonata, but owing to the latter's illness, this was replaced by a group of violin solos played by Mr. Beel, accompanied by Blanche Hennion Robinson, and which were a delight. Walter Olney, a newcomer to Los Angeles and possessor of an excellent baritone voice, sang a group of solos, compositions of Mrs. Jamison, with the composer at the piano, in place of the group scheduled by Anthony Carlson.

MUSIC TEACHERS' STATE ASSOCIATION.

The first regular monthly meeting of the Music Teachers' State Association was held Friday evening, October 2, at the Gamut Club. At this time the new constitution of the Los Angeles division was laid before the association to be acted upon next month. An encouraging report was given of the raising of the funds to liquidate the debts of the association incurred by the People's Orchestra and Artists' Bureau. Already about a thousand dollars is assured and it looks as if there would be no trouble in clearing up the balance in a reasonable time. The board has worked very hard and faithfully to this end, and President Spencer and his associates are to be congratulated on what they have accomplished. An interesting program was given by the following members of the faculty of the College of Music, University of Southern California: Arthur Perry (violin), W. H. Mead (flute), C. Adelaide Trowbridge (piano), and Horatio Cogswell (voice).

JANE CATHERWOOD.

McCormack En Route.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, needs no introduction to readers of the MUSICAL COURIER. The accompanying snapshot of the popular tenor taken en route, is said to be one of the best "likenesses" he has ever had. He evidently finds the camera man amusing.

JOHN McCORMACK EN TOUR.

There was the merit of frank cowardice, at least, in that popular "coon" song entitled, "If War Breaks Out in Mexico, I'll Go to Montreal"—But at present Montreal is not a popular resort except for those who are actually "Going to the Wars."—New York Topics.

Up-State City Hears Scott Works.

Under the caption, "Ovation for John Prindle Scott in Concert of Friday Evening," the Norwich (N. Y.) Sun devotes considerable space to the report of the young New York baritone-composer's recent evening of original compositions given in that musical city, under the auspices of the Monday Evening Musical Club, Friday evening, October 16.

The Sun stated as follows: "Mr. Scott received ovation after ovation, demonstrating not alone the friendliness of his audience, but their appreciation of his own versatility in composition, his own rich baritone voice and his accompaniments. . . . The scope of the program of original compositions was unusual and satisfying to the audience at all times. . . . The enthusiasm of the audience in its first greeting of him was far surpassed after hearing him sing again."

The spacious First Congregational Church was filled on this occasion, for Norwich is Mr. Scott's native city, and his association with its musical life an intimate one. An announcement of a Scott recital there is sufficient to bring out a capacity house on any occasion.

Mr. Scott was assisted by local musicians belonging to the best of "up-state" musical talent.

These were the works given: "The Voice in the Wilderness," "A Sailor's Love Song," "The Revelation," "The Secret," tenor; "My True Love Lies Asleep," "The Death Triumphant," "Ballad of Johnnie Sands," "Meet Me When the Roses Bloom," baritone; "John o' Dreams," "Love Is a Riddle," "Maid of Japan," soprano; "I Know in Whom I Have Believed," contralto; "Nocturne," trio for baritone and strings; "O Where Are the Old Regulations?", "Hail Thee, Alma Mater," college songs, male chorus; "The Shadows of the Evening Hours," duet; "High School Days," chorus.

Mr. Scott writes the words for the greater number of his songs.

Lecture at the Rebarer Studios.

On Sunday, November 1, at 3.30 P. M., Josephine H. Wehn will lecture at the Rebarer studios, 420 Madison avenue, New York, on the great Russian composers, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Moussourgsky. Mrs. Wehn will give a biographical sketch of the lives of the composers, and an analytical discussion of their principal works, illustrated on the piano. This lecture will be followed by a series of six Sunday afternoon lectures, beginning November 8, to be given by Mrs. Wehn at the Rebarer studios.

Mrs. Knight Moves Voice Studio.

Mrs. Franklin Knight, the mezzo-contralto, of St. Louis, Mo., has sent out cards announcing the removal of her voice studio to 4414 Washington avenue, St. Louis. In establishing a residence-studio, Mrs. Knight takes into consideration the atmosphere and exclusiveness of the home, the absence of street car disturbances, as well as the additional advantage of a spacious studio and comfortable waiting room, which will be conducive to the best results in the study of the voice.

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson begs to announce that information has been received from

WILLY

BURMESTER

INDICATING THAT

He will sail for America on October 17th as arranged.

This in reply to many inquiries.

We are still booking dates for Mr. Burmester whose tour will continue until late spring. The Steinway Piano will be used on the tour.

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson 437 Fifth Avenue, New York

Nationalism and Music.

Brooklyn, October 16, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

We have often heard people express the idea that nationalism is necessary to preserve originality and variety in music. Another idea prevails that wars have been so instrumental in inspiring and stirring the efforts of musical genius and almost to make it a belief that the horrors of destruction are necessities, and that order and peace degenerate. As to the first contention of preserving originality by breeding many small nationalities, it must have its effect, but on the other hand will it grow to importance?

The Scandinavian, Slavic, Italian and French national music never grew to any importance until it had been touched by the profundity of the German thought, and after that process the works of the masters of those nations have become universal music. And just as sure as the amalgamation of all races and nationalities in America have brought a general progress, which is impossible by one European nation competing with all the rest in the old world, just as natural it would seem that the United Europe would bring at least as great a progress in music as it now does cut up in so many nations. And if peace should reign and the horrors of war be taken away as an inspiration for genius, the world will always be full of suffering in other ways from which beautiful musical thoughts can be extracted. But why should not peaceful victories and the increased happiness of the many be as inspiring to genius as violence and destruction—why should we not have even more beautiful music thus inspired?

Nationalism or provincialism are in my opinion as much an enemy of progress in music as war is to the cause of justice. Beethoven and Wagner were not merely Germans, they were men of the world—as their works have proven—the world was their nation.

The beauty of scenery, the joys and sorrows of life are always with us, whether we are called Germans, French, or Italians; in abandoning useless wars and the hatred and prejudice which go with national pride, music will have a larger field than ever for its progress.

ERNST BYSTROM.

Opera Concerts.

About one year ago a series of unique opera concerts was inaugurated on Sunday evenings at the Art Institute, of Chicago, being a part of the active movement in that city to bring the best music within the reach of all. That these very artistic concerts were highly appreciated was shown by the fact that they aroused the utmost enthusiasm, while the demand for tickets was so great that hundreds were turned away. The concerts were unique in that each program consisted of vocal and instrumental excerpts from some one opera, the separate numbers being woven together by an informal and entertaining recital of the story.

This unique scheme was developed under the direction of Henriette Weber, the pianist and lecturer, who, with three members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Messrs. Itte, Hillmann and Klammsteiner, has organized the Chicago Piano Quartet, which furnishes the instrumental basis. Among the prominent singers who appeared repeatedly as soloists at these concerts are Lucille Stevenson, soprano; Albert Lindquest, tenor; Louise Harrison Slade, contralto; Marion Green, bass, and others.

CARL HILLMANN, Violinist. HENRIETTE WEBER. CARL KLAMMSTEINER, Cellist. FRITZ WILLIAM ITTE.

Of the personnel of the Chicago Piano Quartet, a few words will suffice.

Henriette Weber is well and favorably known as a pianist and lecturer, and much of the success of these concerts is due to her artistic work.

Fritz William Itte, one of the most talented and brilliant of the younger violin virtuosos, has, since 1900, been one of the first violins of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. During that time he was also for six years the violinist of the Steindel Trio. All this has been subsequent to his study abroad, and his brilliant playing has won him many successes as soloist both here and in Europe.

Carl Hillmann comes from a musical family. He showed his undoubted talent at an early age, and when only fourteen years old was awarded a free scholarship for five years at the conservatory in Frankfort, after being examined by the eminent director, Joachim Raff. He studied violin and composition with various masters to such good purpose that he was given a place with the first violins at the famous Museum concerts when only a lad of sixteen. Subsequently Mr. Hillmann came to America, and for twenty-two years has been one of the first violins of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Carl Klammsteiner is a cellist of brilliant attainments and thorough musicianship. A German by birth, he was graduated with honors from the Dresden Conservatory, and his training has been a wide and comprehensive one. He has met with great success as a solo player, but now devotes his time largely to ensemble playing. He came to America to join the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and later became affiliated with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, of which, for a number of years, he has been a valuable and prominent member.

In addition to programs of chamber music, the Chicago Piano Quartet again will be heard this season in a series of opera concerts at the Art Institute, beginning with "Faust," Sunday evening, November 1.

Fiqué Lectures on Strauss.

Carl Fiqué, the Brooklyn pianist, continued his discussion of the works of Richard Strauss in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Tuesday evening, October 20. This was his fourth lecture-recital on this subject this season, in connection with the Institute of Arts and Sciences, and the subject was treated with Mr. Fiqué's usual skill.

The customary large audience was in attendance. Referring to this occasion the Brooklyn Daily Eagle of October 21 published the following: "His program consisted of two symphonic poems, the first of which 'Symphonia Domestica,' as described by Mr. Fiqué, is the longest and most complicated of any of Strauss' orchestral works. The subject has never before been treated by any composer, for the majority of symphonic poems treat of tragedies, love stories or war episodes, while this symphony glorifies the happy home—father, mother and child—in a melodious and sympathetic manner and with many dashes of humor.

"The second work was 'Death and Transfiguration,' after a poem by Ritter, of which Mr. Fiqué read his own translation. Of all Strauss' works this, he said, appeals most immediately to the emotions, the transition from misery, death and chaos to glorification making the composition a tonal wonder. Mr. Fiqué played the two symphonies in their entirety with force and brilliancy in the heroic parts and with exquisitely tender touch in the lyric passages."

Marie Morrisey's Interesting Program.

Marie Morrisey, contralto, who will give a song recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Monday evening, November 9, has divided her program into four groups, the first including three Italian compositions, the second German songs of Strauss, Schubert, Grieg and Loewe, the third a French group and the fourth songs in English by Kuersteiner, Homer and Smith. An interesting feature will be the first public rendition of a new song cycle, "Love's Triumph," by Bruno Huhn. Elsie T. Cowen will assist at the piano.

Mrs. Morrisey, who has often been heard both in New York and Brooklyn, is a pupil of Dudley Buck, the New York vocal teacher.

MME. BERNICE

DE PASQUALI

World Famous Prima Donna Coloratura Soprano

OF THE

METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Available for Recitals and Festivals. Spring Tour Now Booking

For Dates Still Open Address Immediately

Exclusive Manager G. DEXTER RICHARDSON 501 Fifth Ave., New York

Only New York Recital, Aeolian Hall, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22nd, at three o'clock

"The Successor to Sembrich" as "Gilda" in "Rigoletto" Metropolitan Opera House

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, New York

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN 1451 Broadway, New York

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, New York

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera Management; The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St., New York City Phone, Madison Square 3789

GAREISSEN STUDIO HALL: 64 East 34th St. NEW YORK CITY.

SLEZAK
The Great Dramatic Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

Kerr Establishes Record.

A remarkable record has been made by U. S. Kerr, the basso, this past week, and one which is not often duplicated. Three recitals were given in as many different cities, and each one in turn aroused considerable enthusiasm and favorable comments both from the public and press.

Mr. Kerr sang in Hartford, Conn., on Monday, October 19; in Scranton, Pa., on Wednesday, October 21, and in Bridgeport, Conn., on Thursday, October 22. Two of the press criticisms follow, the third to appear in next week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER:

"Under the auspices of St. Thomas' Church, Ulysses S. Kerr, of Boston, basso cantante, appeared in recital Monday evening, at Unity Hall. He was heard with attention and appreciation by an audience of good size, including many of the singers and music teachers of the city. The recital had been postponed from an early date because Mr. Kerr had been suffering from a cold, but he displayed a resonant voice of excellent range and in perfect control. Many selections were given with excellent dramatic effect.

U. S. KERR.

"The first part of the program included five German songs, all given with commendably clear enunciation. The second song, 'Du bist die ruh,' by Schubert, was very beautifully sung, and the two Schumann compositions which followed, 'Widmung' and 'Die Lotosblume,' were also pleasing. The last of the group of German songs was 'Der Sieger,' by Kahn. The rollicking, merry spirit of this song was as well interpreted as the tender passages in those preceding. The first English song on the program was 'The Asra,' by Rubinstein, which Mr. Kerr gave with feeling and sweetness, and his long experience in church singing showed to advantage in 'Faith,' by Chadwick, which displayed the power of the singer's voice.

"A. W. Burgemeister was an excellent and sympathetic accompanist to Mr. Kerr, and in rhapsodic, No. 12, by Liszt, which he played at the end of the first half of the program, he displayed finished technic, giving the composition excellent rendition. He was enthusiastically applauded and responded with an encore. No encores were given by Mr. Kerr.

"The second half of the program opened, by request, with the prologue to 'Pagliacci,' and this selection fully showed the capabilities of Mr. Kerr's voice. It was sung splendidly. A group of five ballads in English followed, several of them often heard in concert work. The sweetness and feeling in the lower register of Mr. Kerr's voice were displayed to advantage in the Haile composition, 'In the Moonlight,' and 'A Swan,' by Grieg, was also delightful. The concluding number of the program was a contrast to the tender ballads, in 'Two Grenadiers,' by Schumann, which was splendidly sung with magnificent power and force in the finale."—Hartford Daily Times, Tuesday, October 20, 1914.

"Ulysses S. Kerr met with his usual success when he appeared last evening, the concert of the New York artist being given under the auspices of the Girls' Friendly Society of St. George's Episcopal Church in the Stratfield ballroom last evening. There was present to greet him a

JACQUES KASNER VIOLINIST
120 East 85th Street :: :: New York
Phone 2768 Lenox

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
150 West 104th Street, New York
Phone 3832 Riverside
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 West 57th Street New York

Season 1914-1915

SPALDING

Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway
New York City

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personal Representative
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

BLANCHE GOODE PIANIST
AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS
Address: JOSEPH JOINER, 439 Fifth Avenue, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
115 E. 53rd St., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Irls Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

MADAME MOLIÈRE
Grand Opera Prima Donna
Vocal Culture. Special attention to voice placing. Voices tried free during October. Address, 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N. Y. Phone, 3900 New Rochelle, N. Y. Studio also in N. Y.

THEODORE SPIERING
CONDUCTOR — VIOLINIST In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
STUDIO: 327 CENTRAL PARK WEST
Phone, Riverside 3170

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR, large audience, which bespeaks a goodly sum for the organization which brought the famous baritone to the city.

51 West 76th St., New York.

"In all that pertains to a finished interpretation Mr. Kerr is master. He has an unusually sweet and agreeable voice and he sings with rare smoothness and fluency. Few can equal him in beauty of phrasing, in breadth of control, which is a remarkable exposition of true legato singing, in facility of execution and in grace and delicacy of expression in the interpretation of the text.

"The program was rendered in a faultless manner, evoking many handsome compliments from the music lovers present. Mr. Kerr has attained to the highest degree of the old Italian bel canto the writer has ever heard. He has resources for tone gradation, color and messe de voce unheard of by the majority of singers.

"The baritone's magnificent voice, mellow, vigorous, flexible and thrilling, with an individual quality that renders it distinctive, met the requirements of compositions of Schumann, Schubert, Sinding, Schütt, Grieg and Chadwick with a splendid facility and intelligence.

"The accompanist of the evening was A. W. Burgemeister, who also played one solo, Liszt's rhapsodie, No. 12.

"The program in full was as follows: 'Kypris' (Holmes), 'Du bist die ruh' (Schubert), 'Widmung,' 'Die Lotosblume' (Schumann), 'Der Sieger' (Kahn), 'The Ballad of Trees and the Master,' 'Faith' (Chadwick), Mr. Kerr; rhapsodie, No. 12 (Liszt), Mr. Burgemeister; 'Prologue' (Leoncavallo), 'The Gull' (Sinding), 'The Nightingale' (Stephens), 'The Night of Love' (Schütt), 'A Swan' (Grieg), 'In the Moonlight' (Haile), 'Two Grenadiers' (Schumann), Mr. Kerr."—Bridgeport Telegram, October 23, 1914.

Jenny Dufau Back from Alsatia.

The critic of one of Chicago's leading daily papers said, in speaking of Jenny Dufau's opening recital at the Illinois Theatre, that it seemed as though the war she has witnessed, the experiences she has gone through, had deepened and broadened her feeling, given truth and emotion to her artistic conception, animated and ennobled her art.

Photo by Matzene, Chicago.
JENNY DUFAU,
Prima donna, Chicago Grand Opera Company, in Alsatian costume in which she appeared in the first grand concert of the season at the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, Sunday afternoon, October 11.

And, indeed, the Jenny Dufau who received the representative of the MUSICAL COURIER upon her arrival in Chicago, seemed to be another and a better (better is the comparative of good) Jenny Dufau than the one we used to know before destiny brought her to witness, face to face, a part of the most heartrending tragedy Europe has ever lived through. No use repeating here how she and her family, living right at the Franco-German border in Alsatia, happened to find themselves, for days and days, right in the midst of the most terrific fighting; how they were obliged to live for days in a cellar with eight wounded French soldiers to nurse, while the house above was made uninhabitable by the shells, and Mr. Dufau's factory was completely destroyed; how they came out, as soon as the battle line shifted a little, to find all their property lost and gone; how they did not have time to stop to complain; how they began their work of charity, going out to look for wounded on the battlefield, with a white hand-

TODAY for example Busoni and other famous artists are associated with Chickering achievement just as were Liszt, Saint-Saëns, Gottschalk, Gounod and De Pachmann in other periods of this piano's remarkable history.

In other words, the Chickering standard of workmanship has lost not one whit of its old appeal to musicians. On the contrary it has become higher if anything.

When this can truthfully be said of an instrument which has brought delight to generations of music-lovers it means that the

Chickering
Piano

is a product of the best thought of today inspired and informed by yesterday's accomplishments.

Far from resting on their laurels the makers of the Chickering strive constantly to keep that piano in the forefront of the race where fresh fame alone can be won.

Chickering & Sons
Boston
Established 1823 Pianos and Players
Division of American Piano Co.

kerchief on a pitchfork, and nursing them in what had been their home; how, in spite of that, on account of the crazy suspicion of a drunken soldier, aroused by the ringing telephone, they were accused of being spies; how Jenny Dufau, herself, her old father and her sister, on the verge of death, were saved only by Miss Dufau's spirited behavior and the intervention of an old sensible general. No use repeating here what has been already printed in every American paper. But what made upon the writer the deepest impression, when he called on Miss Dufau, was not the narration of the horrible things to which—incredible as it is—we are getting used to day by day, but the unspeakable sadness of it all, a sadness far away from every partisanship, the feminine sadness of which love and charity are such a great part; the unconscious revelation of the grief of the woman, who has no thoughts of hatred for anyone, no joy in victory bought for the price of blood, the deep, almost motherly, grief which makes a young woman such as this one speak of the wounded soldiers of every nation as of suffering children crying for help.

In her loving words, in that trembling voice, there sounded a real echo of Europe's unspeakable misery.

Second Pacific Coast Tour for MacDermids.

Sibyl Sammis-MacDermid and James G. MacDermid will make a second Pacific Coast tour under the management of Alma Voedisch, shortly after the first of the year, reappearing in many cases with the same organizations, while new bookings are being made in cities not visited last year. Returning to Chicago, they will leave immediately to fill Southern engagements.

The following are abbreviated press reports of the first Western tour:

LOS ANGELES WOMEN'S ORCHESTRA.

The singer gave the famous aria of "Il re Pastore" (Mozart). The young vocalist is possessed of a delightful voice, sympathetic, well trained and having the rare quality of naturalness and clarity.—Los Angeles Times.

LONG BEACH ARTISTS' SERIES.

It is an unalloyed joy to listen to such a glorious voice in the full bloom of its power, as is Sibyl Sammis-MacDermid's. . . . His songs, many of which have become famous, were received with sincere and enthusiastic appreciation.—Long Beach (Cal.) Telegram.

PORTLAND APOLLO CLUB.

Of all the women singers who have sung at the Apollo Club concerts, Mme. MacDermid easily holds her own as an artist of distinguished excellence. In presence, she is unusually attractive and has much vivacity. . . . In six songs composed by her husband she received an ovation.—Portland Oregonian.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES G. MacDERMID.

BOISE RECITAL.

In nothing which she sang did this really great singer convey an insincere emotion, but in everything displayed a voice of natural beauty and technical finish.—Boise (Idaho) Capital News.

SEATTLE PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA.

The voice is very rare in quality, having a certain richness in color in every register which makes it not an easy matter to classify. . . . There was an evident desire to hear both more of Mme. MacDermid's charming voice and more of her husband's songs.—Seattle Times.

VICTORIA (B. C.) ARION CLUB.

This gifted singer possesses a pure and brilliant voice of great range. Her accompanist was her husband, the well known song composer, and his assistance in this capacity showed him to be a finished artist.—Victoria (B. C.) Colonist.

SPOKANE MUSICAL ART SOCIETY.

The program which she essayed was one calculated to test the singer's capabilities to an unusual degree, and she met every demand with ease and assurance. Particularly well received were the songs of Mr. MacDermid, which concluded the program.—Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle.

"THE JEWELS OF THE MADONNA" PERFORMED AT THE CENTURY.

Wolf-Ferrari's Opera Has Same Cast That Sang It Last Season.

Wolf-Ferrari's brilliant opera, "The Jewels of the Madonna," was given on Tuesday evening and on the alternate nights following at the Century Opera House, New York, with the same cast by which it was sung last season. The performance was in some respects better than it was last season and in some respects not as good. This especially refers to the work of the chorus and to some of the stage business of the principals. Of the latter certain portions which were considered too broad last season were cut, but there were other matters introduced which might be found objectionable on the same grounds. The chorus on Tuesday evening of last week was out of tune and uncertain of its parts in several places, but this was corrected at subsequent performances.

Lois Ewell's voice is not as fresh this season as it was last season, which is not strange, considering the immense amount of work she has done for the Century. Her acting of this part, however, was improved, and is a powerful and interesting impersonation, although it may be found to lack some of the dash of the Neapolitan. Gustaf Bergman, who has just returned from Europe after various difficulties in getting away, repeated his splendid performance of last season in the role of Gennaro, a part which gives him large opportunity to display his splendid vocal ability as well as his convincing and sincere acting. The same praise is due to the Rafaele of Louis Kreidler, who gave an even finer impersonation upon this occasion than he did last year. In the role of Carmela, Kathleen Howard brought out with skill the character of the old mother of Gennaro, and sang the music with fine interpretation and much feeling.

The many smaller parts were filled capably. The brief ballet part, introduced by Albertina Rasch, was done attractively. The orchestra was conducted by Ernest Knoch with authority and evident knowledge of the intentions of the composer.

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

"She unfolded her extraordinary superior qualities, elegant technic, marked rythmical feeling, and musical temperament."—Breslauer Morgenzeitung.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

Grace Kerns to Sing with Pittsburgh Club.

Grace Kerns, the soprano, is to be the soloist at the concert of the Pittsburgh Apollo Club, Friday, December 18.

Vera Barstow's Engagements.

Vera Barstow, the American violinist, is already booked for appearances in Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Toronto, Portland, Me., and Indianapolis, together with many re-engagements from appearances last season.

VERA BARSTOW.

The popularity of this charming young musician is steadily on the increase.

Myrna Sharlow with Mendelssohn Glee Club.

Myrna Sharlow has just been engaged as soloist at the February concert of the Mendelssohn Glee Club, of New York, of which Louis Koemmenich is director. The fact serves to emphasize afresh the favorable impression which this very young, and until this season, practically unknown singer, has been able to create by the sheer merit and brilliancy of her work in a remarkably short time. Until the first "Carmen" performance of the Century Opera Company last month, Miss Sharlow was but a name to music lovers in New York. Her reputation, it was known, had been built up in a rather sensational fashion as a result of her courageous and brilliantly fortunate action in substituting for Mme. Melba at a Boston Opera performance of "Boheme" last season; and her work in Paris and London had added largely to her good report.

But New York is skeptical and what has often triumphed elsewhere, has failed signally when subjected to its critical scrutiny. But in the present case the local public merely corroborated with impressive finality the verdict of the cities that had first pronounced judgment on Miss Sharlow. She has been found to have a voice of exquisite timbre, and her skill in handling it is widely acclaimed.

Mr. Kommenich engaged her for the Mendelssohn Glee Club after a single hearing. The fact is significant inasmuch as the conductor of the club (who is also director of the New York Oratorio Society) has for years been an experienced judge of vocal art. Moreover the club is known to be exacting in its requirements and its patrons are very critical.

Clarence Eddy in Kansas City.

The Kansas City Association of Organists gave a dinner on Monday, October 19, at the Hotel Baltimore, in honor of Clarence Eddy. This was the first social gathering of the Organists' Association. On the following evening Mr. Eddy gave a brilliant recital at the Grand Avenue Temple, under the auspices of the same association.

Mme. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA—DATES BOOKING SEASON 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

Guido Ciccolini a Gifted Tenor.

At the very beginning of his career as a singer, Guido Ciccolini encountered one of the obstacles that so many vocalists have had to surmount at the outset, parental objection. Both his father and his mother, indulgent in all else, had aspirations that suggested a widely different course for their talented son. He was destined, in their opinion, to become an engineering expert, and it was to that end he entered the Universiti Ragioneris.

GUIDO CICCOLINI AS LIEUTENANT PINKERTON IN "MADAME BUTTERFLY."

But Ciccolini had certain ideas of his own as to the molding of his future, and as "the architect of his own career," he laid the foundation for his subsequent triumphs in the field of grand opera. He entered the Academy of St. Cecilia in Rome in 1903, where he soon became the favorite pupil of Antonio Costogni. It was but a comparatively short time until he had learned all that the distinguished maestro could teach him, and his first appearance in opera in Naples justified the confidence his teacher had reposed in him. The occasion was a signal success.

Hereafter his strides toward supremacy in the European operatic and concert world were rapid. In 1907, his debut in Bologna as Alfred in "Traviata" caused a sensation. Immediately following this he enlisted upon a tour through Belgium, Holland, France, Ireland and England, in which he appeared in leading roles at all the important opera houses of these countries. The year 1910 was partly spent in Russia, where he filled a four months' engagement at the Imperial Theatre of Varsovia; two months at the Municipal Theatre in Odessa, and afterward a season at the St. Petersburg Royal Opera House. During this period he sang with the foremost Russian artists, including Battistini and Mme. Cavalleria and won distinction as an artist.

His subsequent appearances in England were the crowning triumph of his career, and his vocal accomplishments so impressed Mme. Melba, that she enlisted the tenor's valued services in an opera company of her own, with which the Australian prima donna toured her native land. In consequence of his paramount success on this venture, on his return he was engaged for the opening of the Italian operatic season in Paris, and again won fresh laurels.

Here he again attracted Mme. Melba's attention and was persuaded by her to make a joint tour through England. This tour was under the Shulz-Curtius and Powell management, and the first engagement was that held in London at Albert Hall in the form of a jubilee concert commemorating the twentieth anniversary of Mme. Melba's public career. Of note is the fact that two return appearances were given at Albert Hall during the following three weeks.

Last winter a hurried trip was made to Milan, where the young tenor, by special engagement, was called to create the tenor role in Wolf-Ferrari's new opera, "I quattro Rustighi." Later Ciccolini sang the same work in Venice and received warm praise for his artistic creative abilities. The busy young artist again returned to London for another Albert Hall recital, and found further bookings by his managers there for a summer tour of all the fashionable English watering resorts, and this, in conjunction with an extended joint tour with Mme. Melba through the English Provinces.

The war interfered with the last plan, however, and Ciccolini is now in this country. At present he is appearing with the Boston Theatre Opera Company as principal tenor. His activities there, which have already created a furore, are chronicled in the Boston Theatre Italian opera review on another page of this issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

Mlle. De Treville's Program.

Yvonne de Tréville's program for her Costume-Song Recital, "Three Centuries of Prime Donne," to be given in New York, at Aeolian Hall, Friday afternoon,

YVONNE DE TREVILLE
As Mlle. de Maupin in "Three Centuries of Prime Donne" costume song recital.

November 6, and in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening, November 4, appears herewith:

PART FIRST (EIGHTEENTH CENTURY).
Mlle. de Maupin (Period. Louis XIV).

Menuet Chanté ..... Lulli
L'Amour Est Un Enfant Trompeur ..... Martini
Phillis ..... Anthony Young
Pastorale ..... Henry Carey

PART SECOND (NINETEENTH CENTURY).
Jenny Lind (Period, 1850).

Thema e Variazioni ..... Proch
Scandinavian Folksong, No. 1.
Scandinavian Folksong, No. 2.
Scandinavian Folksong, No. 3.
Mad Scene from Camp of Silesia ..... Meyerbeer
(Composed for Jenny Lind.)

THIRD PART (TWENTIETH CENTURY).
Yvonne de Tréville.

Air from Louise ..... Charpentier
Thistledown ..... Charles Wakefield Cadman
(Composed for and dedicated to Mlle. de Treville.)
Song ..... Henry K. Hadley
(Composed for and dedicated to Mlle. de Treville.)
Chanson Provencale ..... Dell' Acqua
(Arranged for Mlle. de Treville by the composer.)
Auf der Bleiche ..... Bungert-Carmen Sylva
(Arranged for Mlle. de Tréville by Her Majesty the Queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylva.)
Aria from Ariadne Auf Naxos ..... Richard Strauss
(First time in America.)

It is hinted that this program will have some surprises and that there will be even more for the music lovers than has been promised.

Klibansky-Cooper Success.

The caption of this brief notice concerns Sergei Klibansky and his artist pupil, Jean Vincent Cooper, contralto, soloist at the Maine Festival. While Miss Cooper did the singing and made a great success at these concerts, it is due to Mr. Klibansky that she was able to attain this success. She has studied faithfully, intelligently and with splendid results with this teacher, and has sung much in and around Greater New York, but this marks an important step in her musical development.

The following notices from Maine newspapers attest to her success:

Jean Cooper, the Southern beauty, is a constant favorite with festival audiences, who revel in her rich contralto tones, which fill the big auditorium. She sang a group of English songs, including one by MacDowell, and several short French songs.—Bangor Commercial.

Jean Cooper has a full, rich, mellow contralto and sings in accepted oratorio style. She charmed her hearers with her vocalism and her appearance.—Portland Evening Express and Advertiser.

Jean Cooper's contralto is of quite unusual quality, deep and mellow of tone, and she uses it with much delicacy of discernment and in artistic style. Her singing of the great aria, "O Rest in the Lord," was a beautiful bit of work without a flaw.—Portland Eastern Argus.

Winsome Miss Cooper was a distinct favorite with her audience. . . . . Miss Cooper sang wonderfully well. Her voice is rich and beautiful, and she sings with good expression. Although but twenty-four years of age, she is fast winning her way to the top.

Her "Rest in the Lord" number was rendered in such an able manner that she was given a double encore. Her voice has a remarkable carrying power and filled the great auditorium with its sweetness.—Bangor Daily.

With Jezebel, the Queen and the Angel Messenger for her burden of the oratorio, dainty, pretty little Jean Cooper came in for much attention and won her audience completely by her really beautiful voice and personal charm. She is a perfect picture to look upon, but showed by her interpretative skill that she has brains as well as a voice, has used both to splendid advantage, and that her training has been with just the right masters. It is evident, too, that she adds to these most worth while qualifications for success upon the concert stage a dramatic instinct that should carry her far to the goal of achievement. The appreciation that her singing called forth and the charm of her presence made her work of the evening strikingly interesting.—Portland Press.

JEAN VINCENT COOPER,
Contralto.

The King has graciously accepted a copy of Sir Frederic Cowen's new song, "Fall In," the words written by Harold Begbie, the proceeds of the sale of which are to be given to the Prince of Wales' Fund. Earl Kitchener has also accepted a copy, and the War Office has issued a request that the song shall be sung at the music halls to aid recruiting.—London Musical News.

Alice SOVEREIGN
Management:
ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, N. Y.

BARONESS
SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Florence Macbeth
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera
DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBER

MME. MARIE
RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

N. Y. COLLEGE OF MUSIC
128-130 East 58th Street
Announces the engagement of THEO. SPIERING, the eminent violinist and conductor
VICTOR BENHAM, the noted pianist
Mme. SCHAFRAM, of the Master School, Vienna, Assistant to Godowsky
RUBIN GOLDMARK, the eminent composer and instructor Head of the Department of Theory
CARL HEIN, AUGUST FRAEMCKE } Directors
Catalog on application

ARTHUR
SHATTUCK
The Distinguished American
PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
Steinway Piano Used

Mme. Alda Talks of Interesting Details.

Frances Alda, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, who in private life is Mme. Gatti-Casazza, was "at home" to a MUSICAL COURIER representative at her Hotel Astor suite, New York, on a recent date.

First of all the writer noticed a conspicuous absence of superfluous "embonpoint," which had evidently been one result of the soprano's summer abroad. "Twenty-six and one-half pounds," admitted Mme. Alda.

Possibly it was due to unusually strenuous work, for Mme. Alda and Frank La Forge, her accompanist, have been laboring hard on concert programs during the summer, and Mme. Alda was fully prepared for her twelve appearances which she was to have made under Arturo

MME. ALDA, FRANK LA FORGE AND R. SCHIRMER IN POMPEII.

Toscanini's baton in "Lorely" at Lucca, Italy. This was, of course, given up on account of the war.

"Then I had the novel experience of being my husband's secretary." (Mr. Gatti-Casazza's regular secretaries were detained in Paris.) "And I am a good one, am I not, Frank (to Mr. la Forge), even if I am not paid yet?"

Mme. Alda motored through Touraine with friends early in the summer. This trip extended as far as Monte Carlo. "We had left our newly furnished home in Paris, July 18, for Italy, where we were when the war broke out," she continued.

Mme. Alda has opened her American season already,

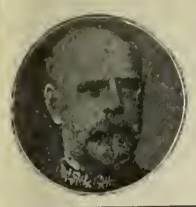
MME. ALDA ON BOARD S.S. DUKE OF GENOA EN ROUTE TO AMERICA.

having appeared in concert with Mr. la Forge at Newark, N. J., New York and Hartford, Conn. Her engagements will take her to the far West before the opera season begins for her.

"My programs are to be decidedly neutral, though I am not neutral," she added, emphatically. "I was born an Englishwoman, have a home in France, and have an Italian husband." Mme. Alda made no allusion to a triple alliance in this.

"But what has music to do with the war?" she proceeded philosophically. "I am singing in several languages, and have many novelties. I am including two new and attractive songs by Mr. la Forge, 'I Came With a Song' and 'In Pride of May.'

"All my gowns are to be made in America this year," resumed the soprano. "I think gowns are made better here, although there is more individuality in the Paris creations. The American woman who gets her gowns in Paris is the best dressed woman in the world." These latter statements go to prove that prime donne think of



HELEN
WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

PAUL
DRAPER
TEACHER OF SINGING
AND THE INTERPRETATION OF SONG
Personal address: 24 East 57th Street
Phone: Plaza 8645
For concerts, recitals, etc., address:
LOUDON CHARLTON,
Carnegie Hall New York

The Sensation of the Year
CARL
FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

BELLE GOTTSCHALK
Lyric Soprano
ORATORIO CONCERT RECITAL
In America Entire Season
MANAGEMENT
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

WILFRIED KLAMROTH TEACHER of SINGING

NEW STUDIO: 124 EAST 39th STREET

Tel. 4421 Murray Hill

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Engaged for Maine Festivals, with Boston Symphony Orchestra; Aeolian Hall Recital, December 3; Norwich Monday Musical Club, etc.

Address M. E. ROGERS, 155 East 18th St., N. Y. C. Phone: Gramercy 6223.

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street

Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER

SOPRANO

Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

MARGARET SHIRLEY

Soprano

Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales

IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY

Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

DRAMATIC MEZZO SOPRANO

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals, also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

3671 Broadway - - New York City

WITHERSPOON

BASS Metropolitan Opera

Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct. 1st. to Jan. 15th

Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau

1 West 34th Street, New York

TINA LERNER

Distinguished Russian Pianist

FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Management, Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York. MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

Mme. KATE ROLLA

Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.

PUPIL OF MARCHESI

Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.

JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE

Studio, 251 West 81st Street, N. Y. Phone, Schuyler, 3960

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition, 1900. Summer School—Point Chautauqua, Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. June 25th to Aug. 27th, 1914.

Tradition Languages Repertoire Diction Special Courses for Teachers. Address, New York Studio, 952 Eighth Avenue

much else than the quality of high C's and the evenness of scales.

Gutia Casini, the young Russian cellist, who was booked to appear en tour with Mme. Alda and Mr. la Forge, is now held in Germany, but they anticipate his being able to join them soon.

The accompanying pictures show Mme. Alda with Mr. la Forge and Rudolf Schirmer at Pompeii, and Mme. Alda on board ship en route to New York.

Mme. Alda's Carnegie Hall, New York, recital will take place January 12.

DENVER MUSICAL SEASON OPENED.

2735 East Colfax Avenue,
Denver, Col., October 19, 1914.

The Cavallo Symphony Orchestra, with Johanna Gadski as soloist, inaugurated Denver's musical season on Friday afternoon, October 3, at the Broadway Theatre. This concert, the first of a series which the orchestra will give during the winter, drew a fine audience, the entire house being sold out. The response of the people was particularly gratifying to Director Cavallo, since he is giving this winter's series of orchestral concerts upon his own responsibility, without a guarantee fund.

The orchestra, numbering fifty-two musicians, is by far the strongest that Cavallo has yet presented. Abram Grenfield, the young Denver violinist, who has recently returned from Berlin, made his initial appearance in Denver as concert master of the orchestra.

Tschaikowsky's sixth symphony opened the program, and was splendidly given. The other numbers by the orchestra were "Le Cygne," by Saint-Saëns, for strings, and "Lohengrin," the vorspiel, by Wagner.

Mme. Gadski was given an ovation. Her contributions to the program were Agathe's aria from "Freischütz," and a group of German lieder, Schumann's "Frühlingsnacht," Schubert's "Mädchen's Klage," and three Franz songs, "Aus meinem Grossen schmerzen," "Liebchen ist da" and "Im Herbst." She graciously added two encores, the cry of "The Valkyrie" and the "Erl König," by Schubert. The famous prima donna sang gloriously, her voice sounding as fresh and beautiful as ever. She was ably supported in the group of songs by Larry Whipp, local accompanist.

The next concert of the series will be given November 6, with Germaine Schnitzer, pianist, as soloist.

An Illustrated Lecture.

An illustrated lecture on the new music education will be given by Josephine A. Osborne at the Knight-Campbell Recital Hall on Thursday evening, October 22. She will be assisted by Mrs. George A. MacDonald, soprano soloist, and Jessie Carman and Charlotte Thomas, at the piano.

Julia Claussen Delights Denver Audience.

The Denver Philharmonic Orchestra presented Julia Claussen at its opening concert on Thursday evening, October 15, at the Auditorium. The program was as follows: Overture, "Le Roi d'Ys," Lalo; "Amour viens aider," from "Samson et Dalila," sung by Mme. Claussen; "Meditation," from "Thais," for violin and orchestra. Solo played by Fritz Schmitt. Songs by Mme. Claussen: "When I Bring to You Colored Toys," Carpenter; "Little Playmates," Tuckfield; "Mia Sposs Sara la mia bandiera," Rotoli; prelude and liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde" (aria sung by Mme. Claussen).

A fine audience was present to hear this superb artist, who was well remembered through her fine singing and acting in the role of Amneris in "Aida," when she appeared here last winter with the Chicago Grand Opera Company. Her Denver appearance was her first this season, and her voice was in splendid condition. It was especially beautiful in the Wagner numbers, the liebestod and also in the "Traume," which she sang as an encore. In all of her numbers she was adequately supported by the orchestra.

Although the concert was principally a vocal affair, the orchestra under Director Tureman, did very good work in the opening number, and also in the Wagner selections. This series of concerts is under the direction of Robert Slack.

Pupils Recitals.

Pupils' recitals are already beginning. One of the first was that given by the piano pupils of Dolce Grossmayer, at the Denver Music Company Recital Hall on October 15. Those taking part were Ethel Levinson, Lenora Phillips, Gladys Garf, Beatrice Feinberg, Hazel Peterson and Mora Wallof.

Dolores Reedy Maxwell.

Maud Powell Aids Red Cross.

Having a bale of cotton in her possession and no idea what to do with it, Maude Powell, the violinist, has decided to have it put up into baby bales of a pound each and sold at a dime a piece at the New York Evening Sun's Cotton Corner in the Grand Central Palace when the Red Cross bazaar and universal market opens there tomorrow night, Thursday, October 29. This will make a unique and attractive souvenir of one of America's greatest artists.

STEINWAY

¶ You no doubt hope to own a Steinway "some day." Perhaps at present you regard its purchase as out of the question. But your possession of a Steinway is easily possible now.

¶ Style V is a new Small Upright, embodying all of the supreme Steinway qualities and offered at a price much lower than ever asked for this world-famous instrument, namely, $500. It has the incomparable sweetness and sonority of tone, the perfect workmanship and durability of every Steinway.

This new Steinway is well adapted to the modern home and apartment.

STEINWAY & SONS

STEINWAY HALL

107-109 East 14th Street, New York

SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
WEEKLY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1914.

No. 1805

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building, Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—Victor Winton, 11 Boylston Road, Fenway. Suite 31.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeh, Box 79.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 312 Menzies St.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, care of G. Schirmer, 18 Berners St., London W. In charge.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arhatte, 34 Deneschny.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.

For the names and addressea of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Hello, 1914-1915!

This is the open season for studios.

Frieda Hempel has sailed for New York on the Canopic and will arrive in New York about November 1.

That gladsome musical sound now being heard in the tonal ranks all over this country is the note of optimism.

English papers bring the news that Mark Hambourg, the Russian pianist, has sued the London Daily Mail for libel for calling him a German.

Augusta Cottlow, the American pianist, gave a recital in Berlin recently for the benefit of the "Society for Helping Indigent Musicians and Artists."

Its seventy-third consecutive season is the one upon which the New York Philharmonic Society will enter on Thursday and Friday of this week with their opening pair of concerts.

Dr. Besl, one of the conductors at the Berlin Royal Opera, is an officer in the Bavarian Reserve Army, and for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle last month was decorated with the Iron Cross.

The annual auction of Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra seats, held last week, resulted in the sale of 973 seats at a total premium of $5,621. The average premium was $5.78, slightly higher than last year. The Cincinnati Conservatory of Music took thirty seats at a dollar premium each, ending the sale.

Last week the Chicago Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra played Strauss' "Don Juan" in their home towns. This week the Philharmonic will play the same work here, and next week we are to have it from the visiting Boston band. Why this sudden popularity of "Don Juan"? Has Strauss written no other symphonic poem? We are puzzled to account for the unanimous attack on "Don Juan."

Vienna reports that its Royal Opera remains closed, although it may reopen later on, if the singers are willing to accept reduced salaries. The Tonkünstler (under Nedbal) Philharmonic (Weingartner) and Konzertverein (Löwe) Orchestras, the Rosé Quartet and the Society of Music Lovers (which has a chorus under the direction of Franz Schalk), all have announced their series to take place as usual.

Sailing from Naples, October 22, on the Canopic, were the Metropolitan Opera ensemble Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Polacco, Farrar, Toscanini, Destinn, Bori, Hempel, Caruso, Urlus, and Didur. Others to follow shortly are Weil, Goritz, Braun, Ober, Reiss and Rothier. Gilly, a prisoner of war, is to be released shortly and will then sail for America. The Canopic is due in Boston on November 2. Emma Eames, Emilio de Gogorza, Margarete Matzenauer and Adriano Ferrari-Fontana arrived in New York last Saturday from Genoa on the Duca d'Abruzzi.

As usual in all matters relating to music—and this paper does not handle other matters—the Musical Courier was right in its assertion that Vanni Marcoux had not been killed in battle, although the rest of the American press published cablegrams reporting the "news." It now appears from a letter written by Mrs. Marcoux to friends in Boston (and dated October 6) that the man mistaken for the singer was a soldier named Jean Marcoux. Up to the present moment no well known musicians except Magnard, the French composer, and Felix Schreiber, conductor of the Kiel Opera, have lost their lives in the European fighting. Sanguinary press agents, however, dispatched Rothier, Crabbe, Kreisler and Marcoux. All of them are alive and well.

Singing peace anthems in the churches on Thanksgiving Day, as has been suggested, even if it does not stop the European war, at least does not aggravate it.

Educational opera continues at the Century Theatre. This week "Boheme" and "Jewels of the Madonna" are being heard there. The two works deal with lust, betrayal, robbery, sacrilegiousness and suicide. It is not the fault of the Century Opera enterprise that it is compelled to educate the public with material of such kind; it is the kind of material the public demands and pays for and that is why the composers write it.

Aboard the Rotterdam last Saturday, Marcella Sembrich, soprano, and Marie Hertenstein, pianist, arrived from Europe. The two will take an active part in the American musical season, and their presence here is a source of large relief to their managers and the expectant public. Nearly all the European artists expected here now have arrived or are en route or about to sail. Therefore what threatened to be a debacle now becomes a normal state of affairs.

Word received from our Los Angeles correspondent says that the judges in the $10,000 prize opera contest were Adolph Weidig, of Chicago; Wallace Sabin, of San Francisco, and R. H. Seeger, of Berkeley, Cal. Of this trio, only Mr. Weidig is known in the East. The Musical Courier still does not understand why the names of the judges were kept secret until after the award had been made. This is contrary to all custom in the case of public musical prize competitions, which always turn out to be delicate affairs, causing much apprehension and some grief.

Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, in a recent interview said, that among the new works he is introducing to Philadelphia and elsewhere this season, one of those which had made the deepest impression on him was the symphony in C minor by Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. To quote from the interview: "This symphony is planned on large lines, and by its profundity of musical thought, its intensity of expression, and its elastic and masterly treatment of the orchestra, is a work which stands out as a remarkable creation."

The program for the first concert of the New York Philharmonic Society this season at Carnegie Hall, on the evening of Thursday, October 29 (when the entire receipts are to be given to the American Red Cross Society) is strictly "neutral," Austria, Russia, Germany and France being represented. It begins with the "New World" symphony of Dvorak, the tone picture, "Fireworks," by Stravinsky, Strauss' "Don Juan," and three orchestral numbers from Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," the "Dance of the Sylphs," the "Will-o'-the-Wisps," and the "Rakoczy March."

It will be good news to piano students and lay keyboard connoisseurs to hear that Rafael Joseffy is at work on a monumental new edition of Chopin's complete works, which will begin to make its appearance shortly. This is a much needed piece of musical labor, for the Kullak, Mikuli and Klindworth editions of Chopin all contain many faults and no longer are in touch with modern keyboard reforms and general twentieth century musical phases. No one is better equipped both as a pianist and a musician to undertake the revision of the works of the greatest piano composer of all time, than Rafael Joseffy.

DIRECT MUSICAL NEWS FROM PARIS.

[H. O. OSGOOD, REGULAR PARIS CORRESPONDENT OF THE MUSICAL COURIER, WHO HAS BEEN A REFUGEE IN LONDON FOR SOME WEEKS, WAS COMMISSIONED BY THIS PAPER TO PROCEED TO PARIS ON A TOUR OF PERSONAL INVESTIGATION AND REPORT AS TO MUSICAL CONDITIONS THERE. MR. OSGOOD, AT SOME RISK AND INCONVENIENCE ACCOMPLISHED THE TRIP AND THE RETURN TO LONDON SUCCESSFULLY, AND THE APPENDED INTERESTING NOTES ARE THE RESULT OF HIS DASH ACROSS THE CHANNEL. NO OTHER DIRECT MUSICAL NEWS FROM PARIS HAS BEEN PUBLISHED IN ANY AMERICAN PAPER. IT WILL BE SEEN FROM THE FOLLOWING THAT DURING HIS PARIS STAY, MR. OSGOOD WAS IN ACTUAL DANGER FROM THE BOMBS DROPPED OVER THE CITY BY A GERMAN TAUBE.—EDITOR MUSICAL COURIER.]

London, October 16, 1914.

Paris never was such a pleasant place to live in as it is at the present moment. There are no crowds, no rush of traffic on the boulevards, and there is always a seat for everybody in the street cars. All of them are running, too, and all the underground lines as well, that is up to about eight o'clock in the evening; but in all Paris there is not an omnibus to be seen. Only on the boulevards from the Madeleine to the Bastille the big charabancs which, in ordinary times, fly off to a different race course each afternoon loaded with a horde of bettors, now soberly ply in place of the omnibuses and charge only twenty centimes for saving you a very long walk.

In the parks the autumn foliage is at the height of its beauty and Paris never looked more pleasant and beautiful except—well, Sunday noon Martinus Sieveking and I came up out of the underground station at the Concorde and went around the corner into the rue Duphot, where is Preunier's, the restaurant beloved of all fish eaters and especially of Americans. But Preunier's was closed, so we went on up toward the Boulevard. A cyclist had stopped by the gutter to speak to the concierge at one of the houses. He said that he heard the whirring of an aeroplane engine. Sieveking and I stopped to listen, but even the pianist's sharply trained ear could not detect the noise of a propeller. But he said, "This is just the weather for them. I think they will come over some time today"—"they" of course, being the Germans. It was a beautiful day, blue sky with fleecy white clouds, just the thing to offer the necessary concealment to a daring aviator. We went around the corner to the Taverne Royale and had hardly had time to order before everybody began to rush out into the street, and sure enough they were already there, the Tauben. Scarcely had we been able to distinguish one of them when "boom!"—a distant explosion proclaimed that the big white butterfly which looked so beautiful there aloft was a most nasty sort of a neighbor. In a few moments the machine dived into a cloud and disappeared, while everyone in the restaurant returned quietly to his or her luncheon, seasoned now with a fresh subject for conversation. If the Germans imagine that they are striking terror into the Parisians with their bombs they never were more mistaken in their lives. One of the ladies made the remark, "Je préfère les bombes á la fin du dejeuner," rather a good French pun on the word "bombe," which is used also as the name of a certain kind of ice cream. This very bomb which we had just heard dropped, happily did no damage, but another one dropped that day by one of the two machines which flew over, killed three men, two of them civilians, and two women.

With all due respect to neutrality, go to Paris in a perfectly peaceful way as I did and then see how you would feel when you realize that a bomb is just as likely to drop on yourself or any of your friends as upon any one else.

Now as to musical matters in Paris. There is absolutely nothing going on at present, and I see no prospect of anything at all for the coming season. Not a concert of any sort up till now and all the opera houses closed, with no talk of reopening. But on the day I left Paris I noticed the announcement in the paper to the effect that the Concerts Touche intended to begin again this week, partly for the sake of helping the poor artists to earn something, fifty per cent. of any profits to go to some war funds. The Concerts Touche are similar in plan to the Concerts Rouge; they take place every evening at their own hall in the Boulevard Strassbourg. There is an orchestra of about eighteen to twenty men who play programs of popular music of the better class. You pay a franc and then are entitled to a cup of coffee or a glass of beer with the music. The most optimistic man whom I found among the musicians there was Martinus Sieveking, the eminent pianist. He intends to stay in Paris all winter and to keep on teaching there; in fact has two or three pupils now, even including one American. I had the pleasure of looking through the manuscript of Sieveking's new book, his own piano method, the publication of which has unfortunately been delayed by the war. It is a most interesting work, with a number of new ideas, and I shall write a special article about it later on.

Last Tuesday I had the pleasure of lunching with Monsieur and Madame Jean de Rezske at St. Germain-en-Laye, where they are staying to be near their son, who is in camp at that place just now with his regiment of cuirassiers. Although a Pole young Mr. de Reszke is a Russian subject, he volunteered at the very beginning of war for service in the French army, and as he was already an excellent rider and a good swordsman he was sent out at the battle of the Marne at his own request with his regiment after only four days' preparation in camp. He was slightly wounded, but made a quick recovery, and now is only waiting to be ordered forward once more. M. and Madame de Reszke are immensely proud of their boy and they well have a right to be. It is good to know that M. de Reszke, who I think may rightfully be called the dean of the teaching forces in Paris, intends to resume work there in his studio just as soon as the war is over and earlier if conditions should permit.

I called at the home of Jacques Thibaud, but was informed that he is not in Paris at present. I understand that he is not among the soldiers, but as a "reformé" will have to subject himself to another examination in order to determine his physical fitness, and it will be decided after that whether he will be kept in France in view of being called up for military service or whether he will be able to leave to carry out his concert plans. All the "reformés"—that is, those men not in the regular course of things accepted to do the required military service on account of some physical unfitness—will be examined between now and the end of November and those who come up to the required standard will be called on for service.

Among them, for instance, is my friend, Jean Verd, the young pianist, whom I found at home. But in the meanwhile he is doing all he can to help his country in a quiet way, and is orderly at one of the military hospitals from half past ten in the evening until seven o'clock in the morning. In order to fill in the quiet hours of the long night watches he has learned to knit as well, and he showed me his skill on a muffler which he was then making. His fingers fly over the needles almost as fast and nimbly as over the piano keys at other times.

I also found still in Paris Elizabeth Mack, the teacher of gesture and dramatic action, who, however, expects to return to America in November or December, to work there until the end of the war, and Wager Swayne, teacher of piano, who was out when I called, but who, so his housekeeper informed me, already contemplates returning to America before long for the winter.

I was in Paris only a very few days and did not have time to call on all, but at last account Julia Valda and J. Delma-Heide were among the friends who were still living in Paris. Of the other vocal teachers, Frederick Ponsot is a soldier, Lloyd d'Aubigné is at Nice, Regina de Sales in America, the Marquis de Trabadelo probably in Spain, and Gabriel Lapierre is a soldier.

But make no mistake. The minute the war is over you will find more activity—at least in the teaching branch of music—than Paris ever before has witnessed, and, unless I am a bad prophet, there will be more pupils than ever, all those who are now kept away by the war being bound to come over in one grand rush. H. O. Osgood.

FINE MUSICAL OUTLOOK.

A rare spirit of confidence animates the entire musical profession of this country at the present time, in spite of the foreign troubles, the influx of European artists and teachers, and the uncertain conditions in some lines of American commerce. New York and Chicago managers who have returned from their early fall tours report no falling off in the demand throughout the United States for good concerts and no decrease of prices available for the services of capable artists. "There are more music clubs and music courses than ever," says one well posted managerial observer, "and this additional demand will take care of the extra supply."

Music is fortunate in that its nature does not change from season to season, like the theatre, for instance. There, while romantic or swash-buckling drama may be all the rage one season, the next twelvemonth will find the public attending only crook or detective plays, and a third winter bring profitable popularity exclusively for business farces or problem pieces dealing with the sex question. Even Shakespeare has his on and off periods in the theatre, and sometimes depends for successful revival on the elaborateness of outfitting or the personal popularity of a "star" or two.

Not so with music, however. Does any one ever hear of a season when Beethoven is neglected, or Bach, or Chopin, or Brahms, or Wagner, or Verdi, to mention only a few standard names. The new men come and go, and some of them still are waiting for a final disposition regarding the length of their stay with us, but the old masters have secure niches in the temple of enduring fame, and their sway continues to be supreme and popular.

It is not necessary for the musical artist to change his interpretative medium constantly, as the actor generally is compelled to do. The standard repertoire once acquired, the lieder singer and the performer on the piano or violin can go through a whole career without fear that the public will tire of Schubert, Schumann and Brahms songs and the best known compositions for the piano and the violin. Opera singers are even better off, for in many cases they make and maintain a brilliant reputation through the singing of only three or four roles.

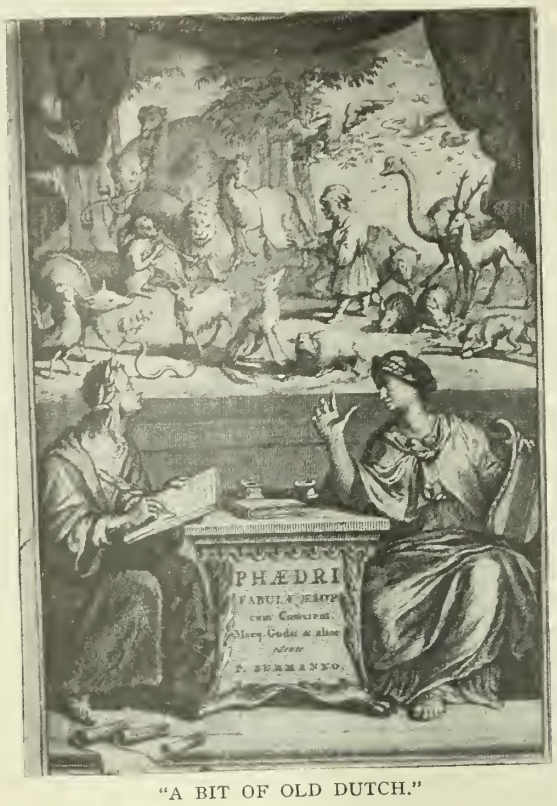
A musical public feels the need of music, and that is why it cannot be regarded merely as a luxury so far as concerts are concerned. "Hard times" rarely affect the hunger of musical enthusiasts for the art they love, nor does a period of general commercial depression lessen the ambition of those who are studying for a professional musical career—even though it oftentimes makes them slower in their payments to the teachers.

There is every indication that the 1914-1915 American musical season will equal the most successful of previous musical years and perhaps even go beyond that liberal estimate. New York is the heart and pulse of the musical life of this country, and already the number of concerts announced here for the next two months equals the most favorable November and December records of the past.

A BIT OF OLD DUTCH.



This is a Dutchman's art. The most striking feature in it is the stability of the lady's hand. Why such a weapon of offence and defence should be devoted to the gentle task of twanging lyre strings we cannot imagine. We might easier believe that the weight of just such a hand as that had stunted the growth of the dwarf in the upper picture. Both he and the ostrich behind him seem amazed to see the monkey playing a posthorn—as well they might be!

This picture is the frontispiece of Burmann's edition of the fables of Æsop translated from the original Greek into Latin by Phædrus. The book was published in Amsterdam in 1745, and is a masterpiece of printing on imperishable Dutch paper. But as a work of art, however, this copperplate frontispiece is hardly worthy of the land that had given the world a Rembrandt, a Hobbema, a Cuyp, and a Ruysdael. The garment which hides the athletic shoulders of the lady with the lyre is certainly not Greek, and the goose quill which the scholar holds is entirely wrong. In classical times writers wrote with a split reed or a stilus.

There are so many old Dutch pictures of musical subjects that we can only look upon this aberration as a joke. Rembrandt's "Night Watch" has a drum in it, as has also Van der Helst's "Banquet of the Civic Guard." Perhaps the most famous Dutch musical picture in existence is the "Jester Playing the Lute," by Frans Hals. Anthoni Palamedes has left a splendid picture of a "Concert," which now hangs in a gallery at Hague. Adrien van Ostade's "Villagers" are dancing to a fiddle, and the same painter's "Wandering Musicians" are playing this familiar instrument. Cornelis Dusart has a boy playing what looks to be an oboe, and a woman with a hurdy gurdy, in his "Village Fair." Gaspard Netscher's aristocratic "Concert" is one of the loveliest pictures in The Hague gallery. In the National Gallery in London is Pieter de Hooch's "Merry Song," and near it in the same gallery today are Godfried Schalken's "Duet," J. M. Molenaer's "Musical Party," and Jan Vermeer's "Girl at the Spinet."

These, and many more Dutch pictures of musicians, concerts, dancers, village festivals, ought to have taught the designer of Burmann's frontispiece not to give a lady lyre player a hand like a leg of mutton, and put a brass posthorn to a monkey's lips.

But the great school of Dutch painting had passed away when this comparatively modern freak of art was handed in by the printer's clerk and made to do duty as pictorial introduction to the fables of Æsop.

"A BIT OF OLD DUTCH."

As musicians the Dutchmen were never brilliant. Here and there one of the sturdy race made music, but it was not until our own day that the music makers of Holland came into their own. Such a conductor as Willem Mengelberg, singers like Julia Culp and Jeanne Jomelli, and a cellist like Anton Hekking are in themselves enough to show that Holland can produce musical artists.

But when we speak of the great Netherland school we can hardly include the Dutch among the Flemish composers of the many schools which flourished at Antwerp and other towns in Flanders between the years 1370 and 1590. "If the Netherlanders were not the earliest composers, they were, at least, the first musicians who taught the rest of Europe how to compose," says W. S. Rockstro.

And yet, in spite of all the musical and art environment of the ancestors of the Dutch publishers, this badly drawn, historically incorrect, musically impossible picture was foisted on the world in 1745, four years after the death of the famous scholar, Peter Burmann, who had edited the text of Phædrus.

RAINS, AN AMERICAN.

A long cablegram published in the American newspapers last week from Professor Leon Rains, protesting against "the unfair treatment of Germany" in our press, seems to have misled several commentators into the error that Professor Rains is a German university instructor. As a matter of fact, he is an American basso who was connected for many years with the Dresden Opera and visited this country some three or four years ago for a song recital tour. His professional title was bestowed upon him by the King of Saxony for valuable pedagogic work done in the field of vocal instruction.

PAVLOWA PRIZE.

Several inquiries have been made regarding the Pavlowa Dance Music Prize Contest. A letter from the MUSICAL COURIER, addressed to Max Rabinoff, managing director of Mme. Pavlowa, on this subject has been replied to by Mr. Rabinoff as follows, under date of October 20, 1914: "Thanks for your letter of the 20th. The result of the competition will be announced within a few days when Mme. Pavlowa arrives, at which time I will take great pleasure in forwarding to you a copy of the official announcement. I am, sincerely yours, Max Rabinoff."

WHY "FAIRYLAND" WON.

An interview with Adolf Weidig, which Karleton Hackett publishes in the Chicago Evening Post, throws some characteristic sidelights on the recent Los Angeles $10,000 prize opera contest. Mr. Weidig corroborates the fact that of fifty-six works submitted, only twelve were seriously considered by himself and the other two judges. Practically all the contestants, according to Mr. Weidig, "had no idea of what an opera should be." The winning composition, he announces, "had stood apart from the others from the very first because of the obvious grasp of orchestral and stage technic, the reason for which is plain enough now, since both these gentlemen had received the benefit of practical experience in writing for the stage. . . . In coming to our decision we had to keep firmly before our mind that this work must be not merely a good bit of musical workmanship, but, above all things, must have in it the elements for successful public performance. . . . The work would have to be interesting from the point of view of the general public or the award would have been a failure. . . . We feel that we have chosen, by all odds, the best work offered, but personally I am by no means sure that a contest held under the rules of the one just finished is best adapted to produce the result desired. . . . A number of works had to be thrown out of the contest immediately, and some with genuine worth in the music, because the librettos chosen were absolutely out of the question for stage production.

"I am somewhat inclined to doubt the wisdom of compelling the judges to make an award, especially where the sum in question is as large as $10,000. An opera to be entitled to such a reward ought to have merit of the very first order, ought not to be merely the best of those presented, but should be of most distinctive artistic worth. . . .

"No award should be made until the judges are positively of the opinion that a work has been found worthy of such a generous honorarium."

DR. KUNWALD ARRIVES.

Dr. Ernst Kunwald, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, arrived here on the Rotterdam last Saturday from Europe and left immediately for Cincinnati, after calling telegraphically a rehearsal of the orchestra for Monday evening. Dr. Kunwald came directly from Berlin, where he found conditions to be almost normal, and the only excitement is the martial enthusiasm of the Berliners.

During the winter Dr. Kunwald will produce the following orchestral works, which have hitherto not been on the programs of the Cincinnati Symphony concerts: Bruckner's fifth symphony, Reger's "Serenade," Grieg's "Variations on an Old Norse Theme," Wagner's "Columbus" overture, Goldmark's "Prometheus" overture, Wolf's "Penthesilea" and Edgar Stillman Kelley's "New England" symphony, which met with such an excellent reception last spring in Altenburg, Germany. Several other American compositions are to be brought forth under Kunwald's direction, and there will be also the Bach "Brandenburg" concerto, the "Concerto grosso" of Handel, Mahler's fifth symphony and Brahms' third symphony.

Dr. Kunwald was in Vienna and Bayreuth during the very early war days and after that remained in Berlin. He says that he is looking forward with keen delight to his season in this country.

THE BISHOP'S MISTAKE.

Bishop Heber must have had the present war situation in mind when he wrote his famous hymn

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
To India's coral strand."

The rest of the poem, however, is wrong, for it talks about the pleasures of peace.

"THE MANAGERS' FORUM."

A correspondent writes: "In glancing over the multitudes of articles that appear in your journal and those of Europe, I often muse over the fact that among them one rarely finds a word or two from the manager. Why is not an intelligent effort made to dwell on the subject of concert managing, a subject so vital in every phase and action of our musical life? Why is there such a sad lack of interest shown in a field so fascinating and vital? Surely there are many managers who at a pinch could write as good an article on their business whether from a cold commercial standpoint or a psychological viewpoint, as some of our musicians who expound on themes that are of interest to them in their own line of endeavor."

The MUSICAL COURIER thanks its correspondent for a very valuable suggestion, and agrees with him that more should be written and generally known about musical management and the potent role it has come to play in the tonal affairs of this country. Believing that wide interest attaches to the subject, the MUSICAL COURIER will in its next issue, November 4, begin a department called "The Managers' Forum," which is to be conducted for the benefit of the musical managers all over this land and for the aid and instruction of the artists with whom they come into business contact. Full details of the wide ground to be covered will appear with the first installment of "The Managers' Forum," to which all persons who have something to say on the subject of musical managing in relation to general musical expansion in America are asked to contribute opinions, suggestions, experiences and grievances. It should be remembered, however, that the aim of the MUSICAL COURIER is not to dedicate this new department to destructive criticism, but to keep its purpose and nature strictly helpful and constructive.

MRS. TAFT ASKS NEUTRALITY.

When the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra met for rehearsal last week, Mrs. Charles P. Taft, president of the Orchestra Association, in a few tactfully worded sentences requested that the men of various nationalities in the orchestra refrain from discussing the present trouble in Europe, and keep their thoughts fixed on harmony at home, rather than discord abroad. Mrs. Taft said: "I want to say just a word to you this morning. We are entering upon this season under peculiar circumstances. Nearly the whole of Europe is engaged in war, and every country in it is represented in this orchestra. Each man is passionately interested in the success of his country and absolutely sure that her cause is the only just one. No one can blame him for this, or wish it otherwise.

"I beg of you that when you meet at rehearsals, or are together in town or on tour, you will lay aside all thoughts of the war—or if that is impossible, at least refrain from discussing it. The President of our country has asked all Americans to exercise self control, and I ask the same of you. Artists, especially musicians, feel things more keenly than other people. But will you not let the warmth of your feeling show itself in the excellence of your playing and so make this the most successful year artistically we ever have known?"

UNPOPULAR FICTION.

Some time ago, Henry T. Finck, musical editor of the New York Evening Post, complained that the musical press agents send him too much matter for publication and asked them to use the brake on their imagination and the blue pencil on their manuscript. The plea did not avail, however, for in his column of last Saturday, Mr. Finck minces no words in telling the press romancers that henceforth he intends to amputate their passionate epistles mercilessly. "A single one of the gentry, according to Mr. Finck, "sent in stuff this week which if printed as received would have filled a whole column; and several others vied with him." Mr. Finck concludes very pointedly: "Please don't be pigs. Let others have a chance, too." The MUSICAL COURIER endorses Mr. Finck's stand unreservedly.

CHICAGO PIANO PRIZE DECIDED.

Pasquale Tallerico, of Wilton, N. H., last week won the national pianists' contest in Orchestra Hall, Chicago, and was awarded the privilege of an appearance with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, in the American program to be given under the direction of Glenn Dillard Gunn. The honor carried with it a cash prize of $200 donated by Charles G. Dawes. But the standard of artistic excellence maintained throughout the contest was so high that Mr. Dawes, on the spur of the moment, increased the financial rewards to a total of $600, to be divided between the six contestants who participiated in the final event.

Second honors went to Carol Robinson. The other participants were Marie Kryl, Sarah Suttel, Belle Tannenbaum and Joseph Wynne, all of Chicago.

All the contestants have been trained in America. The winner, Mr. Tallerico, though born in Italy, has studied in this country since his eighth year. The remaining contestants in the final event are products of Chicago schools and studios.

Nineteen cities from Boston to San Francisco sent twenty-eight participants to the competition. All but six were eliminated in the preliminaries held at Fullerton Hall, Thursday and Friday. Five of the six chosen represented Chicago.

A large and interested gathering listened to the final contest. The judges were Peter C. Lutkin, of Evanston; Carlisle M. Scott, of Minneapolis, and Samuel Bollinger, of St. Louis. The judges of the preliminary contest were Ludwig Becker, Herbert Butler, and Hugo Kortschak, of Chicago.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR AFTERMATH.

As is stated elsewhere in this issue, the $10,000 Los Angeles opera prize and the award of the decision recently have left in their wake some very mixed feelings and reflections. Doubtless some of the composers look upon the outcome as a tragedy, chiefly because they did not get the $10,000. But several consider the real sadness of the affair to lie in the fact that Horatio Parker won again after failing so dismally with his "Mona." At any rate, some amusing happenings are the outgrowth of the contest. Our Chicago office reports that two composers who had sent in their scores assert that they will go to Los Angeles to hear Parker's "Fairyland" and that if it is not superior to his "Mona," they will protest energetically, as they know positively that their own operas are better than "Mona." One of those composers went even further and said that he had sent in a one-act opera which in his own estimation is superior to "Cavalleria" or "Pagliacci." Chicago reports also that at least six composers of that city are known to have competed for the $10,000, and five of them them are not only despondent but also bitter toward the winner, whom they do not acknowledge as being able to write an opera worth $10,000.

BORWICK EXPECTED.

Leonard Borwick arrived in Vancouver from Australia, October 22, and proceeded east at once, being due in New York today, Wednesday, October 28. Borwick's first recital here will occur at Carnegie Hall, November 5.

N. F. M. C. BIENNIAL AND CONGRESS, 1915.

Los Angeles makes public the programs for the N. F. M. C. Convention, Biennial and American Music Congress of 1915. The full schedule of exercises in Los Angeles will include the following:

June 24—Reception to visiting delegates.
June 25 (forenoon)—Opening session of convention.
June 25 (afternoon and evening)—Programs by Los Angeles public schools.
June 26 (morning and afternoon)—Convention sessions.
June 26 (evening)—Symphony concert.
June 27—American music in all church services.
June 28 (morning)—Convention session.
June 28 (afternoon)—Recital.
June 28 (evening)—Choral concert.
June 29 (morning and afternoon)—Sessions, recitals and lectures.
June 29 (evening)—Orchestral concert.
June 30 (morning and afternoon)—Sessions and recitals.
June 30 (evening)—Artists' concert.
July 1 (morning and afternoon)—Convention work.
July 1 (evening)—First production of prize grand opera.
July 2 (morning and afternoon)—Convention session.
July 2 (evening)—Second production prize grand opera.
July 3 (matinee)—Third production prize grand opera.
July 3 (evening)—Grand musical pageant and electrical display.
July 4—Rest.
July 5-10—Opera productions.

END OF THE BOSTON OPERA?

Eben D. Jordan, one of the executive directors of the Boston Opera returned to that city last week from a European trip. He not only confirms the report that the Boston Opera will not open this season, but says also that the possibilities of having opera there next season are remote and that so long as the European war continues it will be out of the question. Henry Russell, manager of the Boston Opera, now is in London and is expected to remain there for the time being.

BEFORE THE TANGO.

When Byron wrote his "Beppo" in 1817 he described what might have been a tango tea:

They went to the Ridotto—'tis a hall where people dance and sup and dance again.

It was only a Venetian masked ball he was describing.

In those early days of terpsichorean development the super-hyper-finical and ultra-delectable tango had not yet been revealed to the waiting world.

ORCHESTRAL PROSPERITY.

The high cost of symphony will be reduced considerably in America this winter, to judge by the big advance subscription sale which all the large orchestras have enjoyed this fall.

EAMES RETIRES.

Upon her arrival from Europe last Saturday, Emma Eames announced that she has retired permanently from the stage and will do no more public singing.

SERATO ON THE CANOPIC.

Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, is a passenger aboard the steamship Canopic, due in Boston this week.

Musical War Talk.

These are great days at the Aschenbrocd'l Club, where the musicians hold forth with acumen and conviction about the war and its doings. An average conversation runs somewhat along these lines:

Schmiergeiger—"Vell, ve intend to take Dunkirk soon."

Blasspust—"Who iss 've'? Since ven has de Kaiser tooken you into de firm?"

Schmiergeiger—"I always said de Choimans vould get England. Dis makes de commencing."

Kratzfritze—"Vat part von England iss Dunkirk?"

Schmiergeiger—"Somewheres on de Channel, in de south."

Blasspust—"It's on de same side as Dover—aboud twelf and a half miles to de left."

Schmiergeiger—"Sure."

Kratzfritze—"How soon vill dey be in London?"

Paukendicker—"Dey don't go to London, you Dummkopf; dey stay in Dunkirk vere dey can sit and look acrost de Channel to vatch de French."

Flötenschlingel—"How big is that Channel acrost?"

Kratzfritze—"About six miles."

Schmiergeiger—"Dat's right."

Paukendicker—"Vell, how vill dey get London?"

Blasspust—"Dey bring de big siege guns over from Belgium und shoot London from Dunkirk. Den comes de Zeppelins und drops cannon balls. See?"

Schmiergeiger—"Dat's vat dey'll do."

Brummgrunzer—"How far does de big guns shoot?"

Kratzfritze—"About sixty or eighty miles."

Paukendicker—"As much as dat?"

Kratzfritze—"Even furder—on a clear day. When it's foggy dey use de howitzers.

Flötenschingel—"Vat iss a howitzer?"

Schmiergeiger—"It's a gun vat turns around on a axle."

Kratzfritze—"It ain't; it's a gun vat fires centimeter shots."

Blasspust—"I don't agree vit you. A howitzer iss on a fort und comes up und down out of de ground."

Paukendicker—"Dat iss a machine gun. A howitzer iss ven dey shoot in de air at aeroplanes."

Brummgrunzer—"All of you iss wrong. A howitzer belongs to a torpedo boat und goes under de vater. It fires off shells."

Flötenschlingel—"Vell, vat iss a shell?"

Brummgrunzer—"Um Gotteswillen, don't you haf been on a beach in de summer?"

Flötenschlingel—"You don't mean shells like dem clam und oyster shells, do you?"

Kratzfritze—"Sure, he does."

Brummgrunzer—"The edges of de oyster shells iss made sharp und they stick dem in de cannon balls. Don't you often read 'de enemy vas cut to pieces?' Vell, dat's it. Am I right, gentlemens?"

All—(Grunt and gulp Pilsener.)

Organically Speaking.

An old friend is on hand again. Listen. "The largest pipe organ in the world will be installed at the Festival Hall of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition." That organ does an amazing amount of traveling.

Enharmonic War Change.

From London Truth comes this retort courteous, following upon Dr. Richter's renunciation of his English titles:

"Dr. Richter, if report may be credited, has thought fit to dispossess himself, following an illustrious precedent, of all his British degrees and distinctions in consequence of the war. So far, however, he has not yet considered it necessary to return also any of the filthy and contaminating lucre (as a well known native composer neatly put it the other day) which he has extracted from the British public during his long and profitable residence in our midst; so perhaps it is permissible to cherish the hope that rumor has maligned him. Dr. Richter has a daughter married to an Englishman, and a youthful British subject calls him grandpapa."

That ought to be the least of Dr. Richter's troubles. Presumably he now will teach the infant to lisp "Grossvater."

Beethoven's Secret Life Revealed.

"A very old man died in Vienna the other day, who treasured a few vague memories of Beethoven, whom he had known in his youth. The composer 'wore a gray silk hat. He always answered kindly when we greeted him. He was a man of medium height and of athletic build. He generally had a little book with him in which he wrote.'"—Boston Transcript.

Without Prejudice.

At this time, when the various monarchs are making known their secret alliances with the Almighty, it is not inapropos to remember that in 1770 Voltaire wrote: "It is said that God is always on the side of the heaviest battalions."

Shrapnel.

It is all very well to talk of banishing German music out of England, but what would happen if the German music were banished out of the English compositions?

Damned?

"Berlin's flood of mediocre concerts has been dammed almost entirely."—Exchange.

Helen Ware's $10,000 Fee.

Helen Ware, the violinist, tells an amusing story about a fee she received, the largest ever paid to any artist for a single appearance. It was at the Kirksbridge Insane Asylum, where she played at a concert while still a student some eight years ago. After the music she was being shown around the building by the superintendent when an earnest eyed man approached her, shoved a piece of paper into her hand, and said: "Your fee, Miss Ware." Then he scuttled off. The violinist looked at the paper; it was a check for $10,000. Hardly daring to believe her eyes, the young girl showed her prize to the superintendent. "Oh, yes," he said, rather wearily, "we have to supply that fellow with a new check book every day. He thinks he's John D. Rockefeller and gives away several billion dollars before luncheon every morning."

France Gets a Setback.

Oscar Hammerstein and a friend were arguing about the war and had reached the question of national finances when the impresario became heated and a passerby heard him yell at the top of his voice: "What do you know about finances, eh? Just tell me one thing. Who owes more money, France or Oscar Hammerstein?"

Apropos.

Nobody has quoted Tacitus on the subject of the war. Here is a tip for the Germans. In "Germania," chapter 35, Tacitus says: "Without lust for expansion, without arrogance, of quiet and reserved demeanor, they provoke no alien nation to war and molest none by plundering and robbery. It is the best proof of their worth and their might, that they do not owe their preponderance to deeds of violence. At the same time they all are prepared to strike and in case of necessity, the army is ready, horse and man, in imposing numbers."

The Moulting Dove.

Why not change the title to Noble Piece Prize and award it to the army that shall have the largest piece left by January 1?

Music of the Sole.

Next to Bruckner's symphonies, what is worse than an office boy with shoes that squeak?

Info.

Do you know who is responsible for Germany's increase in naval expenditure from $30,000,000 in 1898 to $125,000,000 in 1913; who raised the profits of the Hamburg-American Line from $625,000 in 1886 to $14,125,000 in 1912; who beside the Kaiser stands in the way of Germany's acquiring real parliamentary institutions and truly representative government; what unofficial personage is the power behind the German throne and the Kaiser's closest adviser and yet refuses to become Imperial Chancellor, who controls $400,000,000 of bank deposits in Germany and publicly alluded to the United States currency system as a travesty; that Count Zeppelin was in our Civil War and made his first aerial flight in a captive balloon raised by a Federal corps; that a Zeppelin dirigible can carry four and one half tons of explosives if necessary; that the Crown Prince is a passionate admirer of Napoleon I; that there is a little five foot politician in Germany who has more power than the Chancellor; that a Berlin newspaper proprietor revolutionized the entire daily press of that city in 1885 by adopting American journalistic methods; that the passages of Bismarck's memoirs relating to his dismissal are being preserved in the Bank of England, to be kept until the last person mentioned therein is no more; that the German navy has one of the best press agents in the world; that the steel king of Germany started business with $6,000 and sixty workmen and today is worth $100,000,000, and employs 50,000 men; that the recent Colonial Minister of Germany was a Wall Street apprentice; that Krupp von Bohlen, head of the cannon works, has American blood in his veins, his parents having been born in Philadelphia, and that he served for awhile at the German Embassy in Washington? If you do not know all these things and would like to learn hundreds of others equally interesting about the personages who are playing the leading roles today in Germany, read Frederic W. Wile's "Men Around the Kaiser," a remarkably fascinating and exceptionally well written series of thumbnail sketches of thirty famous men. To musicians, the descriptions of Richard Strauss, Max Reinhardt, Gerhart Hauptmann and Max Liebermann will be found to have especial value. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, of Indianapolis, publishes the book.

Dark Days.

In a letter received from Ernest Newman, the famous English musical writer, he says: "How is the war affecting you over there? Here it is playing the very devil with music and with things of luxury generally. I had it in mind some time ago to spend this winter in America on a lecturing tour. I wish I had arranged it now; the conditions are all against any serious work here at present."

Our Prize Offer.

When the Metropolitan Opera singers land in Boston from Naples about November 2, there will be a goodly band of newspaper reporters on hand to meet them. The artists may be expected to narrate intense and beguiling experiences. Most of them will begin with that favorite word "I." This column offers a prize of a postage stamp, only slightly used, to that one of the singers who will say on disembarking: "I am here to sing, not to talk. I know nothing of war and therefore refuse to discuss it. What I experienced is interesting to no one but myself. Please do not mention my name."

Redivivus.

Among those who sailed from Naples last Thursday was Leon Rothier, killed recently.

LEONARD LIEBLING.

MINNEAPOLIS ORCHESTRA WILL OPEN ITS SEASON.

Symphony Popular and Children's Series to Be Resumed—Other Mention and Notes.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 19, 1914.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra will open the music season in this city October 23, with Louise Homer as soloist.

The first popular concert of the season will be given at the Auditorium, October 25, at 3.30 p. m., with Irene Jonani, of the Boston and Chicago Opera, as soloist.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra will also give a series of children's concerts. Emil Oberhoffer, conductor, has arranged and announced the numbers to be played, and the music teachers in the public schools will play these numbers for the children and give lecture-recitals until the children become thoroughly acquainted with the music. In this way Mr. Oberhoffer will have an appreciative and well versed audience.

A six number Beethoven cycle will also be given by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, beginning November 24.

APOLLO CLUB CONCERTS.

The Apollo Club will give a series of three concerts this year, with Evan Williams, Margaret Keyes and Olive Kline as soloists.

PHILHARMONIC CLUB SEASON.

The Philharmonic Club will give a series of three concerts this season. "The Messiah" will be presented on Christmas night, with Frederick Martin as the Messiah. Schumann's "Ruth" will be sung, also "Samson and Delilah" with Mildred Potter and Marion Green.

NOTES.

After a year's study in England with Oscar Seagle, Harry Phillips will give a recital with William MacPhail, violinist, at the First Unitarian Church on November 13.

The Arpi Singing Society (Swedish) will give a concert at the Auditorium, November 5, assisted by Marie Sundelius, of Boston, and Christine Chindblom, of Chicago.

NORTHWESTERN CONSERVATORY NOTES.

The ensemble class of the conservatory violin department made its first appearance at the student hour the past week. The work is under the personal direction of Gladys Conrad, assistant in the violin department.

Katherine Gardner, Beatrice Konchal, Minnie Ledbetter, pupils of Ethel Alexander, Anne Hughes and Franz Dicks, of the piano, voice and violin departments of the conservatory, were presented in concert in Conservatory Hall on Wednesday. They were assisted by Marguerite McCoy, of the expression department, and the conservatory quintet, under the direction of Gladys Conrad, of the violin department.

The most recent mode of training for public appearance utilized by the conservatory management is the recital rehearsal. This concert training will form an important adjunct of student work and is free to all students who are to appear in concert throughout the season, and is in charge of John Seaman Garns, instructor in stage deportment. He will be assisted by other members of the faculty. The first rehearsal was held on Tuesday last, and will be held regularly each week on Tuesday at 4.30 o'clock.

Lillian Riske, 1914 graduate of the piano department and department of public school music, has opened a private studio in Doland, S. Dak.

One of the most important events of the conservatory season thus far was the recital given on Saturday, October 17, by Josephine Retz-Garns, reader, associate professor of the expression school. Mrs. Garns is well known as a reader and teacher throughout the Northwest through her recital tours. She resigned her position as instructor in expression at the Lawrence University to accept the appointment at the conservatory.

MINNEAPOLIS SCHOOL OF MUSIC EVENTS.

The regular Saturday morning faculty recital was given October 17 at 11 o'clock in the school auditorium by Esther Jones-Guyer, contralto, a new acquisition to the vocal department. Mrs. Guyer was not a stranger to many in the audience, as she has been frequently heard the past several years during her studies with William H. Pontius, director of the department of music and head of the vocal department. Mrs. Guyer's program was varied and well calculated to display her versatility in style and interpretation. Her voice is of wide range, rich and warm, and her clear diction was especially pleasing. She had the good fortune to be accompanied at the piano by Margaret Hicks, also of the faculty, whose seriousness and musicianly skill enable her to support the voice with rare effectiveness.

Alma Ekstrom, pianist and member of the faculty, is announced to give a program in the school hall, Tuesday evening, October 20. Miss Ekstrom, well known as a brilliant player, will offer a program of varied numbers.

Alma Shirley, soprano, pupil of William H. Pontius, and Olga Hesse, pupil of Signor Fabbrini, are to appear in concert in Cameron, Wis., under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U.

Charles M. Holt began rehearsals with the University Dramatic Club last Friday. The play selected for the first performance of the year is Arnold Bennett's London success, "Milestones." The club is said to have unusually good material this year.

George Duthie, a graduate of the dramatic class two years ago, appeared here in Minneapolis last week in "Within the Law."

The regular Saturday morning faculty recital for October 24 will be given by Alma Ekstrom, pianist.

Theodore Presser, publisher, of Philadelphia, whose catalogue contains about fifteen songs of the many compositions of William H. Pontius, reports that "Crossing the Bar," a setting of Alfred Tennyson's poem by that name, is in large demand, and its popularity is on the increase. It is issued for high and low voice.

Mrs. Kane, soprano pupil of William H. Pontius, has been in the city during the past week, reviewing her studies, preparatory to her work as instructor of a large class in Sauk Center, Minn.

Clarissa Carr, of Sauk Center, Minn., former pupil of William H. Pontius, was among the guests at the school during the past week.

The office of the school is open each Monday evening from 7 to 8.30 o'clock to accommodate those who desire to register for evening study.

Helen Aitken, contralto, pupil of Stella Spears, has been chosen as soloist for the Fremont Congregational Church Choir.

RUTH ANDERSON.

CINCINNATI NOTES.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 23, 1914.

Hans Schroeder, baritone, made his local debut Tuesday night at the Odeon before an audience of splendid proportions, which followed the program with interest and close attention. Mr. Schroeder acquitted himself nobly in his first song recital, and it is to be hoped he will be heard often this winter. Louis Victor Saar assisted Mr. Schroeder at the piano, his accompaniments adding materially to the success of the occasion.

DR. ERNST KUNWALD,
Conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 1914-1915 season this Friday and Saturday, October 30 and 31.

The first concert of the series by the College of Music Chorus and Orchestra will be given November 3. The orchestra is considerably improved in numbers and in material since last year, both the strings and winds being greatly reinforced, but especially in the cellos and reeds. As usual the orchestral numbers and the violin solo will be conducted by Johannes Miersch. A notable improvement is also noted in the Ladies' Chorus, Louis Victor Saar, director, being much impressed with the voices. The chorus will present two songs by Haydn, "Even Song" and "Thanksgiving Hymn," both to be sung with the orchestra, and with the assistance of the following trio: Florence Hawkins, Cora Nash and Minna Dorn. The chorus will also sing Mr. Saar's nocturne, op. 45, which is for ladies' chorus, tenor solo, flute obligato and orchestra. Walter Vaughan will sing the tenor solo, and Ellis McDiarmid will play the flute part. The piano numbers and vocal trio will be given under the direction of Albino Gorno.

With an excellent program the season of the Conservatory Orchestra concerts will be opened (Pier Adolfo Tirindelli, conductor) on Wednesday evening, Nov[illegible]. The program is not only a very interesting [illegible] been well prepared and no doubt will be given [illegible].

Talent from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music will give a program in Calvary Church, Clifton, Friday evening, October 23, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross Fund to be used in Europe. The following young ladies will give the program: Etta Mastin, soprano; Lena Palmer, pianist, and Mozelle Bennett, violinist.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

Florence Hinkle's Recital Program.

Florence Hinkle's New York recital will take place in Aeolian Hall, Monday afternoon, November 2. The soprano will present the following attractive and interesting program on that occasion:

Dal sen del caro sposo, from "Vologeso".....R. da Capua
Amor che cieco sei, from La Gerusalemme liberata....V. Rhingini
Ariette: Il regardait mon bouquet, from "Le Roi et le Fermier"
Monsigny
Du bist die Ruh'.....Schubert
Auf dem Wasser zu singen.....Schubert
Meine Rose.....Schumann
Der Kukuk.....Loewe
Wiegenlied.....Hans Hermann
Schlagende Herzen.....Richard Strauss
L'Oasis.....Fourdrain
Serenata Francese.....Leoncavallo
Jardin d'amour, Chansons populaires.....Vuillermoz
Les trois princesses, Chansons populaires.....Vuillermoz
Le Baiser.....Goring Thomas
All in the April Evening.....Diack
Life and Death.....Coleridge-Taylor
The Hour of Dreams.....Ward-Stephens
Under the Lindens.....Marschal-Loepke
A Pretty Ducke.....Old English
Sing to Me, Sing.....Sidney Homer

Sterner Institute's Concert in Plainfield.

Ralfe Leech Sterner, the director of the New York School of Music and Arts, expresses himself as gratified with the concert given by artist pupils at Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, Plainfield, N. J., October 16. This was the 387th concert by this institution and was attended by a splendid audience, warmly appreciative of the fifteen numbers given. Every item on the program, of vocal and piano music, excepting two, was encored with such enthusiasm that the young artists had to give another number. The fine acoustics of this auditorium, no doubt, contributed greatly to the success of all concerned.

The following young artists, all of whom were heard in the Wanamaker Auditorium concerts of last season in New York, furnished the program at this affair: Rocco Carcione, Ramee Rivas, Frederick Maroc, Eleanor Lois Fields, Blanche Mabelle Kelley, Raymond W. Walsh, Marguerite Claghorn, Louis Ferraro, Emma Mae Hamilton, Florence Brusche, Andrew Martin and Marguerite Zacharias. Helen Wolverton was the accompanist.

Prizes for Songs.

Song writers may be interested to learn that two prizes of $25 each will be given for songs to be published in the new "College Song Book" of Ohio University. One prize of $25 will be given for the best alma mater song; the other $25 prize will be given for the best football song. For any song not winning first prize, but accepted, $5 will be paid. Both the words and music are desired. A catalogue and circular of information will be sent to any one wishing information that may be helpful in the composition of the songs. The college colors are green and white; Ohio University, supported by the State, is over a hundred years old. The songs must be in the hands of Dean Edwin W. Chubb, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, by January 1. 1915.

Boston Music School Settlement Concert.

This telegram from Boston is published just as received:

Boston, Mass., October 25, 1914.

To the Musical Courier,
Fifth Avenue, Thirty-ninth Street, New York:

First Sunday concert of Boston Music School Settlement unprecedented event in musical Boston. Maud Powell, Felix Fox. Three thousand in Boston Theatre. Hundreds turned away. Admissions mostly fifteen and twenty-five cents. Serious program two hours, Vieuxtemps, Strauss, Tartini, Chopin, Liszt, Sibelius, Schmitt. Reverent attention, unflagging interest. Ovation to artists means Daniel Bloomfield's faith is justified and these concerts for the people become institution. Serato, November 6.

(Signed) ROWLAND THOMAS,
Chairman Music School Settlement Publicity Committee.

Bouquet for "Mona."

Many of those who heard "Mona" in this city are probably relieved to learn that the new prize opera by the same author and composer will be produced in the Far West.—New York Evening Telegram.

The PROGRESS of AMERICAN MUSIC

[This department is designed by the MUSICAL COURIER to be as complete a record as possible of the public performance all over the world of the works of composers born in the United States. The department will be published weekly and contributions are solicited from any source whatsoever to help make the record all-encompassing. The clippings and programs sent must report concerts which have actually taken place and must be of recent date. However, advance notices and advance programs will not be considered. The data submitted must also include the place and date of performance and the names of the performers, and, before all things, it should be remembered that composers not born in the United States are ineligible for the MUSICAL COURIER list. All communications referring to this department must be addressed:—"American Composition Editor," MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.]

Bassett, Charles Olmstead—"Reverie," "Fishing Song" (songs), sung by the St. Cecilia Choral Club, Bronx Church House, New York City, June 11, 1914.

Bauer, Marion—"Send Me a Dream" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis., April 7, 1914.

Beach, Mrs. H. H. A.—"Sea Fairies" (cantata), sung by the St. Cecilia Choral Club, Henrietta Speke-Seeley, director, Bronx Church House, New York, June 11, 1914.

—"The Year's at the Spring" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

—"My Star" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 6, 1914.

Bliss, Paul—"Butterflies" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis., April 7, 1914.

Bollinger, Samuel—Two movements from suite "The Sphinx" (orchestra), played by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Glenn Dillard Gunn conducting, Orchestra Hall, Chicago, April 27, 1914.

—"Danse Melancolique" (piano), played by Robert Stewart Keller, De Paul University College of Music, Chicago, May 16, 1914;—played by Robert Stewart Keller, De Paul University College of Music, Chicago, May 18, 1914;—played by Mamie Schaeffer, Strassberger Conservatories of Music, St. Louis, Mo., April 24, 1914.

—"Impromptu" from "Chopinesque" (piano), played by Estelle Carl, Strassberger Conservatories of Music, St. Louis, Mo., April 30, 1914.

Bond, Carrie Jacobs—"A Perfect Day" (song), sung by Raye Lissner, Opera House, Lockhardt, Tex., May 2, 1914.

Brown, Mary Helen—"Just You" (song), sung by Mrs. W. T. Wisdom, Muskogee, Okla., June 12, 1914.

Cadman, Charles Wakefield—"With Rushing Winds," "I Martius Am," "The Brooklet Came from the Mountain," from the song cycle, "The Morning of the Year," "The Place of Breaking Light," "The Thunderbirds Come from the Cedars," "At Dawning" (songs), sung by Ernest Hesser, Neighborhood House, Pasadena, Cal., June 2, 1914.

—"Far Off I Hear a Lover's Flute," "From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water," "From the Long Room of the Sea," "Ho, Ye Warriors on the Warpath" (songs), sung by Mrs. Walter Raymond, Neighborhood House, Pasadena, Cal., June 2, 1914.

—"At Dawning" (song), sung by Ethel Whittemore, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, June 15, 1914.

—"Ho! Ye Warriors on the Warpath" (song), sung by Genevieve Church Smith, Hotel Green, Pasadena, Cal., April 21, 1914.

—"From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

—"The Pompadour's Fan," "I Passed a Stately Cavalcade" (songs), sung by Leila Frances Manson, Muskogee, Okla., June 9, 1914.

—"The Wist" (song), sung by double vocal trio, with violin, violoncello, and piano, Muskogee, Okla., June 9, 1914.

—"The Moon Drops Low" (song), sung by Sylva Derdyn, Pittsburgh Conservatory of Music, Pittsburgh, June 16, 1914.

—From "Wigwam and Tepee": "The Place of Breaking Light," "From the Long Room of the Sea," "Ho, Ye Warriors on the War Path," "The Thunderbirds Come from the Cedars" (songs), sung by Christine Miller, Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis., April 7, 1914.

—"The Geranium Bloom" (song), sung by Grace Hall Riheldaffer, Detroit, Mich., May 5, 1914.

—"At Dawning" (song), sung by Philip Spooner, Racine, Wis., September 28, 1914.

—"From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water," "I Hear a Thrush at Eve," "A Song of Joy" (songs), sung by Carrie Hamilton, C. A. C. Conservatory of Music, Fort Collins, Colo., May 27, 1914.

—"The Thunderbirds Come from the Cedars," "From the Long Room of the Sea," "From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water," "The Moon Drops Low" (songs), sung by William Conrad Mills, Cheyenne, Colo., August 10, 1914.

Campbell-Tipton—"A Spirit Flower" (song), sung by Ruby M. Beeching, Wanamaker Auditorium, New York, June 15, 1914;—sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914;—sung by Wm. Lavin, Twentieth Century Club, Detroit, Mich., May 14, 1914.

Carpenter, John Alden—"The Cock Shall Crow," "Looking Glass River," "Don't Ceäre," "Il Pleure Dans Mons Cœur," "En Sourdine," "Dansons La Gigue," "When I Bring You Colored Toys," "The Sleep That Flits on Baby's Eyes," "On the Sea Shore of Endless Words," "Clouds of Autumn" (songs), sung by Christine Miller, Chicago National Federation of Women's Clubs, The Art Institute, Fullerton Hall, Chicago, June 11, 1914.

Daniels, Mabel—"The Desolate City" (song), sung by Reinald Werrenrath, Music Festival, Syracuse, N. Y., May 4, 1914.

Downing, Lulu Jones—"Only a Rose" (song), sung by Leila Frances Manson, Muskogee, Okla., June 9, 1914.

Foote, Arthur—"The Hills o' Skye" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis., April 7, 1914.

Gilbert, Henry F.—Indian scenes from "The Story of a Vanishing Race": "By the Arrow," "The Night Scout," "In the Kutenai Country" (piano), played by Lilli Mae Davis, Muskogee, Okla., June 12, 1914.

Gilberté, Hallett—"The Little Red Ribbon," "A Night Song," "Song of the Canoe" (songs), sung by Louise Mercy Crowell, Millersville State Normal School, Millersville, Pa., May 15, 1914.

—"Serenade" (song), sung by Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, Masonic Temple, Boston, Mass., April 23, 1914.

—"Two Roses" (song), sung by Albert Edmund Brown, State Normal School, Lowell, Mass., May 12, 1914.

—"For Ever and a Day" (song), sung by Frederick Gunther, Cleveland, Ohio, August 22, 1914.

—"Ah! Love but a Day," "Canoe Song" (songs), sung by Claude Warford, The Casino, Loomis, New York, August 6, 1914.

—"A Maiden's Yea and Nay" (song), sung by Florence Anderson Otis, Yonkers, N. Y., May 9, 1914.

—"Song of the Canoe," "Ah! Love but a Day" (songs), sung by Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, Jordan Hall, Boston, Mass., May 22, 1914.

—"The Little Red Ribbon," "An Evening Song," "Ah! Love but a Day," "Les Deux Roses" (songs), sung by Claude Warford, "Melody Manse," Lincolnsville, Me., August 16, 1914.

—"Ah! Love but a Day" (song), sung by Grace Henry, Akron, Ohio, June 23, 1914.

Grant-Schaefer—"The Sea" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis., April 7, 1914.

—"A Lament" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 6, 1914.

Huss, Henry Holden—"La Nuit," op. 21 (piano), played by Lilli Mae Davis, Muskogee, Okla., June 12, 1914.

Kroeger, E. R.—"Dance of the Elves" (piano), played by Eva Sue Fray, Howard-Payne College, Okolona, Miss., April 21, 1914.

—"The Rivulet" (piano), played by Velma Reeder, Opera House, Tupelo, Miss., April 17, 1914.

—"March Pittoresque" (organ), played by Arthur Davis, Christ's Church Cathedral, St. Louis, Mo., April 20, 1914.

—"Prelude from Op. 41" (piano), played by Alida J. Koch, Musical Art Hall, St. Louis, Mo., May 1, 1914.

MacDowell, Edward A.—"Prelude" from "First Modern Suite" (piano), played by Mrs. John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

—"A Village Festival" from "Indian Suite" (orchestra), played by The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Glenn Dillard Gunn conducting, Orchestra Hall, Chicago, April 27, 1914.

—"An Old Love Story," "A Haunted House," "From a German Forest" (piano), played by Lulu E. Griffiths, C. A. C. Conservatory of Music, Fort Collins, Colo., May 27, 1914.

Mayhew, Grace—"The Woodbird's Song" (chorus for mixed voices), sung by chorus, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"An Old Fashioned Dance" (song), sung by Myrtle Penniman with violin and cello obligato, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"Laddie O'er the Sea" (song), sung by Marion Watson, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"Kismet" (song), sung by Evelyn Snow, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"If Only Love Is There" (Song), sung by Virginia Hicks, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"Because of You" (song), sung by Lucia Spargo, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"Father Take My Hand" (song), sung by Ralph Keyes, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"Slumber Song" (song), sung by Mrs. Ruggles, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

—"Shoogy Shoo" (song), sung by the Liederheim Trio, Liederheim School of Vocal Music, Auburndale, Mass., May 11, 1914.

Nevin, Ethelbert—"The Nightingale's Song" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Music Festival, Syracuse, New York, May 6, 1914.

—"Oh! That We Two Were Maying" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

—From "Water Scenes": "Water Nymph," "Barcarolle" (piano), played by Lilli Mae Davis, Muskogee, Okla., June 12, 1914.

—"The Nightingale's Song" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Lawrence Conservatory, Appleton, Wis., April 7, 1914.

Parker, Horatio—"The Lark Now Leaves Its Watery Nest" (song), sung by Alice Nielsen, Music Festival, Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1914.

Rogers, James H.—"The Sweetest Flower That Blows" (song), sung by Mrs. Harry A. Wingo, Muskogee, Okla., June 11, 1914.

Salter, Mary Turner—"Come to the Garden, Love," "A Sky of Roses" (songs), sung by Philip Spooner, Guild Hall, Racine, Wis., September 28, 1914.

Speaks, Oley—"For You" (song), sung by Mrs. W. T. Wisdom, Muskogee, Okla., June 11, 1914.

Spencer, Vernon—"Consolation" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914;—sung by Anthony Carlson, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 6, 1914.

—"The Sea Hath Its Pearls" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914;—sung by Anthony Carlson, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 6, 1914.

—"Out There the Dune" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914.

—"Good Night" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914;—sung by Anthony Carlson, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 6, 1914.

—"In the Home Town" (song), sung by Anthony Carlson, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914;—sung by Anthony Carlson, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 6, 1914.

—"Six Poetic Children's Pieces," op. 21, "Scherzo," Etude in double sixths, op. 18 (piano), played by the composer, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914.

—"A Scotch Romance," op. 22, No. 1, "Valse Fugitive," op. 22, No. 2 (violin), played by Oscar Seiling, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914.
—"Thou Art So Like a Flower," "Night Gossip," "Longing," "Summer Night," "At the Cradle" (songs), sung by Catharine Shank, Gamut Club, Los Angeles, Cal., June 5, 1914.
—"At the Cradle," "Thou Art So Like a Flower" (songs), sung by Ramona Rollins-Wylie, Chickering Hall, Los Angeles, Cal., June 12, 1914.

Truette, Everett E.—"Mediation and Grand Chœur," from "Suite in G minor" (organ), played by Gertrude Ensigh, Jordan Hall, Boston, May 28, 1914;—played by Mary Chappell Fisher, Convention of the N. A. O., Ocean Grove, N. J., August 11, 1914.

Ward, Frank E.—"Love's Devotion" (song), sung by John W. Nichols, Normal Chapel, Fredonia, N. Y., May 1, 1914.

Whiting, Arthur—"A Birthday" (song), sung by Christine Miller, Music Festival, Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1914.

New York Commercial Tercentenary Concerts.

New York is celebrating the 300th anniversary of Chartered Commerce, by speech, parade, illumination and music. The chairman of the series of important musical events is Dr. Henry T. Fleck, of Hunter College, who conducted the "Meistersinger" vorspiel, opening number, at City College, October 26. His authority and true American verve are always noticeable in all his doings. Bernice de Pasquali, coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sang the "Mignon" polonaise with utmost finish, her scales and trills being a veritable delight. Resounding applause would not cease until she sang the old time "Kiss Waltz."

Albert von Doenhoff played Liszt's E flat concerto in most effective manner with combined dash and delicacy. The audience fairly "rose to the player," whereupon he played the G flat study by Chopin.

Leo Schulz conducted all the numbers excepting the first, and played a Chopin nocturne and a salon piece (in C major). His encore piece was a spinning song.

Further numbers were sung by Andrea de Segurola, basso of the Metropolitan Opera, the duet "La ci darem," by Bernice de Pasquali and De Segurola, and, for orchestra, Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" suite, daintily played, and Wagner's "Rienzi" overture.

A tremendous audience, completely filling the beautiful Tudor Hall, listened and applauded with every manifestation of great enjoyment.

These festival concerts continue evenings as follows, under the direction of Dr. Fleck:

Thursday, October 29, Erasmus Hall High School, Flatbush and Church avenues, Brooklyn.
Friday, October 30, Commercial High School, Albany avenue, Brooklyn.
Sunday, November 1, East Side Forum, P. S. 17, Manhattan.
Monday, November 2, C. C. N. Y., 139th stret and Amsterdam avenue.
Tuesday, November 3, Manual Training High School, Seventh avenue, Fourth and Fifth streets, Brooklyn.
Wednesday, November 4, Eastern District High School, Marcy avenue, Brooklyn.
Thursday, November 5, People's Institute, P. S. 41, Manhattan.
Friday, November 6, Morris High School, 166th street and Boston road.
Saturday, November 7, Washington Irving High School, Sixteenth street and Irving place.

Century Opera Sunday Concert.

An unusually large and enthusiastic audience filled the Century Opera House, New York, October 25, to enjoy the Sunday night concert. Helen Stanley's beautiful voice was heard to good advantage in "L'Altra Notte," from Boito's "Mefistofele," and she was most enthusiastically received and heartily applauded. That she is a great favorite with the audiences at the Century was not hard to determine and it is a favoritism justly merited. Orville Harrold sang an aria from "William Tell" with his usual splendid voice and excellent delivery.

Another excellent artist who appeared on this program was Thomas Chalmers, who was heard in an aria from Ponchielli's "Prodigal Son," which he gave with his usual fine finish, much to the delight of those present. Other artists on the program were Alfred Kaufman, Elizabeth Campbell, Hardy Williamson and Augusta Lenska, who were heard in selections by Verdi, Saint-Saëns, Handel and Thomas.

The orchestral numbers included the overture to "Fra Diavolo," Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" suite, a waltz by Johann Strauss, the "Entrance of the Gods to Walhalla," from "Rheingold," and the two charming intermezzi from Wolf-Ferrari's "The Jewels of the Madonna," the second being repeated before the audience was satisfied. The conductors were Josef Pasternack and Hugo Riesenfeld.

European War versus Music.

[From the Pacific Coast Musical Review.]

We do not believe that this war will seriously affect the musical season in America. As will be seen from articles reprinted in this issue from Eastern musical journals, grand opera will be more affected than concerts. This is no doubt owing to the fact that an operatic cast requires more artists than a concert company. Besides there are now many American artists active in concert work. That this lack of European artists will give the American public an opportunity to listen seriously to the artists of this country cannot be doubted, and that such serious attention will unquestionably raise the American artist in the estimation of his countrymen is also certain. With the beginning of the musical season thousands of American students have been in the habit of going abroad to study and quite frequently they have left their American teachers prior to the completion of their primary education. Under the circumstances these American students will now remain at home, and if they desire to utilize their time to prevent artistic stagnation they will be obliged to continue their work with their American teachers. They will find that they are just as well taken care of in their own country as they would be in Europe, and this conviction will no doubt contribute toward a better appreciation of the educational advantages to be obtained in America. So it will be seen that our teachers, especially those of the Pacific Coast, ought to look forward to this coming season with more than usual optimism, for California has been particularly generous toward Europe in the past. It is to be hoped that music studying people will not consider the European situation as an excuse to discontinue music study, for it would be deplorable if some of those efficient students would now lose a year or two of their valuable time in the acquiring of musical knowledge. So far we were not aware of any grand operatic enterprises for San Francisco, except possibly that of an Italian opera company which was to appear at the Cort Theatre next February. We understand that none of the artists that were to appear with that company are in this country. They may, however, return before the time for which this engagement has been booked.

It is now definitely decided that there will be no postponement of the exposition. Even the European countries which had decided to make exhibits have not countermanded their orders for the erection of their pavilions, and they informed the authorities that the exhibits will be forwarded just the same. George W. Stewart is now in Europe, but his whereabouts are not exactly known. He is either in Berlin or Paris, most likely in the latter city. The musical part of the exposition will be affected in case the war is still in progress by next February. Several military bands, among them an Austrian and French government band, also a private German military band, had already been engaged. These will of course be unable to come. Edwin H. Lemare, the organist against whom his American brother organists are leveling their envious glances, is now in London, and may possibly be unable to come. In case these bands and the organist should be detained there will also be a chance for American musicians to take their places. It will also be difficult to secure a foreign symphony leader for the orchestra, in which case a capable American may be entrusted with that position. This paper is fully in sympathy with the movement that insists that American artists secure opportunities to appear at the exposition, but it is not in sympathy with any campaign that would make the engagement of American artists an exclusive proposition, without considering foreign artists also. We advocated the principle of the recognition of our California and Pacific Coast artists in general, not only as members of bands or orchestras, but also as soloists and recognized authorities in the art. But we did not advocate any principle which could possibly exclude the engagement of other American artists. So, broadly speaking, we believe that from a musical point of view the war will prove of advantage to America.

Songs for the Soldiers.

An article in the London Standard tells how English soldiers and sailors are to have their voices trained. In other words, the men are to be taught to sing in order to increase their military effectiveness by keeping their spirits up and making their steps keep time to enlivening strains of soldier manufacture. It is news to us that either soldiers or sailors, especially in war times, must be taught to sing. Stories, poems and even pages of history, tell us how in camp and on the march for all times soldiers have sung, and how on shipboard sailors not only have been given to singing, but to hornpiping.

According to the British newspaper, a marching song book has been prepared for the soldier. Presumably the men will select their own songs and hang on to those which suit best a marching, a fighting or a camping occasion. Is it possible that this plan to provide many songs for the British army is the result of the recommendation of authorities of the old poem beginning, as we remember it, "Give us a song, the soldiers cried, the outer trenches guarding," and then all the men on the long line began to sing "Annie Laurie," this presumably being the only song that they knew. If the British troops have had no song except "Annie Laurie," and, of course, "God Save the King," they have been worse off, musically speaking, than the soldiers of the other armies of the world.

There is not a story of the war between the States in this country which does not tell of soldier choruses and also of solos here and there all along the line or through the camp. Moreover, the armies of the world have their bands, and what man need to sing to keep his spirits up when the brass instruments are crashing out "Garry Owen," "Dixie," "Yankee Doodle," or, for that matter, "The British Grenadier"? Soldiers can sing any song except, perhaps, "Home, Sweet Home," as a means of keeping the heart up and the feet moving forward. The British Naval and Military Local Union may prove its use, but confessedly it seems to us that taking songs to soldiers is like lugging coals over to Newcastle.—Exchange.

A Singer of Songs.

It is not necessary at this late day to tell the American musical public much about Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, for it knows him through many hearings to be one of our best interpreters of song from the ancient vocal forms to the most advanced output of the minute.

In his Aeolian Hall recital last Monday evening, October 26, the Werrenrath art and the Werrenrath versatility again were demonstrated convincingly, for he covered a wide range of song styles and mastered each one superbly. English, German and Italian were the languages employed by the performer, his diction in the three tongues being beyond criticism. In mood the numbers constituted a gamut embracing the deeply serious, the lyric, the tragic, the romantic and the humorous. Smooth and sympathetic as is Reinald Werrenrath's voice, the manner in which he employs it constitutes the chief charm of his singing so far as the ear and the mind of the connoisseur are concerned. Musicianship, interpretative resource and infallible taste are the remaining qualities that make up the artistic stature of this sterling artist, who though he is young in years may be said to have reached a remarkably high stage of maturity.

To report that he delighted his large audience rapturously last Monday with his song ministrations is but to state an actual happening, for the reviewer was able to note a degree of intensiveness in the applause and to count a number of encores that left no doubt of the measure of favor extended to the popular recitalist, whose wholesome, winning manner and attractive personality play no small role in engaging the affections of the auditors.

He sang Brahms' "O wüsst ich doch den Weg zurück" and "Tambourliedchen," Weingartner's "Hochsommer," Sinding's "Licht," Hinton's "Sonnenuntergang," "Die Hexe" and "Der Brunnquell" (well made and characteristically conceived songs), E. Del Valle de Paz's "Fior di dolcezza," Spier's "Ultima Rosa," Costa's "Sei morta ne la vita mia," Santoliquido's "Tristezza Crepuscolare," H. O. Smith's "The Place of Dreams," M. W. Gallup's "You, My Dear," F. Morris Class' "The Little Ghosts," Deems Taylor's "Song Magic" (a subtly harmonized and deeply felt piece), Ferrata's "Night and the Curtains Drawn," Bruno Huhn's "Sometimes I Watch Thee" (an exceptionally spontaneous and effective ballad), Smith's "Romany Love Song," H. W. Loomis' "In the Foggy Dew" and Whiting's "Fuzzy Wuzzy."

Unfortunately, press exigencies prevent a detailed account of the singing of the separate numbers, in every one of which there were individual phases of delivery deserving of praiseful comment.

Century "Opera Talks."

Havrah Hubbard, assisted by Floyd Baxter at the piano, gave another of his interesting "Opera Talks" at the Century Lyceum, New York, on Sunday afternoon, October 25. His theme was "Boheme," and this charming and pathetic story was treated in a most sympathetic manner by Mr. Hubbard, who prefaced his remarks with a short discourse relative to the subject of technical knowledge as a requisite in order to enjoy music. Mr. Hubbard will speak next Sunday on "The Tales of Hoffmann."

OBITUARY.

Felix Meyer.

Felix Meyer, the Berlin violinist (and brother of Waldemar Meyer), died in the German capital on October 3. He had been a prominent soloist and teacher for many years and also was a veteran member of the Berlin Royal Opera orchestra.

BOSTON SEASON OF PIANO RECITALS HAS BEGUN.

Italian Opera Continues at Boston Theatre—Harvard's New Music Department Building—Handel and Haydn Society to Celebrate Its Centennial.

11 Boylston Road, Fenway,
Boston, Mass., October 23, 1914.

Boston's official piano recital season was fittingly ushered in last Saturday by the Swiss pianist, Rudolph Ganz, with a duplication of his recent New York program. He is one of the few favored pianists who has a real following here, and consequently his reception was inspiring to say the least. Ganz is verily a modern pianist with individual ideas of interpretation as well as of the art of pianism. He is an authority in every detail of the newer schools and a master also of the old. His technic is admirable and his tone full and firm at all times, but not incapable, however, of the most delicate phrasing when such is required. This last phase was beautifully represented in the singing second theme of the opening movement of the Chopin sonata. The romance, which was woven into this composition, disclosed the pianist's passionate and highly colored imagination. Ganz brought out successfully also the thunderous Busoni transcription of the Bach chaconne, and the might of his interpretation gave new interest to the piece.

Martin-Bloch Recital.

Alexander Bloch and Frederic Martin participated in the first of the subscription concerts of this year's series at Billings Hall, Wellesley College, on Friday evening. The subsequent concerts there will continue, as in this case, to present foremost artists now in America, and the management deserves praise for the fine array of talent it has succeeded in booking. Mr. Martin, the basso, who can be heard each Sunday in New York at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, opened the program with a group of old classics in English. His voice was in ideal condition, and the paramount facilities he possesses served in his interpretations to reveal the Beethoven, Haydn and Handel numbers in their best light. A second group contained Schubert's "An die Leyer" and "Wohin"; "Paysage," by Reynaldo Hahn, and Bizet's chanson, "Le Jolie de Perth." In these the singer's admirable diction in German and French alike was satisfactory. His final group comprised four modern songs in English, which were most happily chosen. Elgar, MacDowell, Spross and Orlando Morgan were here represented, and, best of all, an additional phase of the basso's ingenious versatility was shown. Mr. Bloch, the American violinist, caused a sensation in this country last season (his first), and if I may judge from his performance on this evening he is going to increase his popularity throughout the present season. For his concerto number he chose the Paganini D major, a risky undertaking apparently for a young violinist, but not so in his case, because his technical facilities easily surmounted the usual elusiveness of the number, and his well trained musicianship brought out the real beauty of the composition. Bloch plays with a vigor and a surety which is confidence inspiring. His tone is rich and noble and the instrument in his hands is the most fitting medium for the portrayal to his auditors of his innermost vision of the composer's thought. The Wieniawski "Polonaise" in D major and the Wagner-Wilhelmj "Albumblatt" were played in a final group, to which an exquisite "Humoresque" by Tor-Aulin was added as an encore. Both artists were enthusiastically received. Blanche Bloch accompanied in a skillful manner, and added all that was needed to round out the work of the two solo artists.

Boston Theatre Opera Activities.

The Boston Theatre opera season continues to attract much attention, but the attendance remains generally poor; this is unfortunate, too, for most of the performances are of real merit. The company is developing into a worthy opera giving unit, and with such artists as Ciccolini, the new tenor of European fame; Ramon Blanchart, the Spanish baritone, known in opera houses the world over; Dora de Phillipe, the distinguished prima donna soprano; Blanche Fox, Alice Gentle, Johanna Kristoffy, Cara Sapin and Millo Picco, it will be a pity if the Boston public allows the organization to disband before the end of the proposed twelve week season.

On Monday evening, Sylvia Bloomfield, an opera patron and civic service worker in the North End, one who is also interested in the Boston Music School Settlement, made her operatic debut with this company as Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana." Mrs. Bloomfield's step in this direction was merely for charity purposes, as she has her own ideas as to the promotion of opera for Boston at popular prices. She served one purpose at least very nicely, that was the adding of funds to the management's coffer. However, it is feared that the society element she drew out cares very little at heart whether or not the public gets its opera at prices within its reach.

Revival of Verdi's "Masked Ball" Tuesday Evening.

Strange it is that only after so many years has this work been given in the city around which its tragedy is supposed to be woven. One cannot call it a great music drama, but it contains much enjoyable music. Be that as it may, an unusual amount of attention was aroused by the performance and some fine work witnessed by the participating principals. Ramon Blanchart as Reinhart was the feature of the evening. His work is far too well known by the public to make further comment necessary. He is an artist throughout and stands in the spotlight with this company. He has much more than a voice; he has temperament, fine dramatic ability and the power to depict every character falling to his lot. Blanche Fox, as the astrologer, was interesting from both the vocal and the dramatic viewpoint. Kathryn Lynbrook, as the wife of Reinhart, sang effectively. Biasi and Florian, the two bassos, upheld, or rather kept down, their parts of the mysterious proceedings in good style, while Opezzo, as the Count, was fair.

"Rigoletto," Wednesday Matinee.

Ramon Blanchart again carried off most of the honors at the matince performance. His Rigoletto was strenuous, sympathetic and truly original. Every moment of his presence on the stage is filled with dramatic intensity and he is the refined artist throughout. The Duke was effective under Crescenzo's guidance, and Miriam Ardini made a pleasing Gilda. Alice Gentle was heard as Maddalena, Joseph Florian as the Count and Pietro di Biasi as Sparafucile.

"La Boheme" Wednesday Evening.

Much attention was attracted by the widely heralded announcement that Guido Ciccolini, the young Italian tenor who toured Europe and Australia with Mme. Melba, was to make his Boston debut as Rodolfo on Wednesday evening. This was honestly warranted for young Ciccolini proved himself an exceptional artist in every sense of the word. He was heavily cast with the best principals the company has to offer and the outcome was a performance surprising at such prices. Ciccolini's vocal equipment is luxurious in its many winning phases. The voice is exquisitely fine and beautiful and in its simple but attractive usage vivid proof of the underlying artistic nature is shown. His performance was most refined and the audience accepted it as such. Vociferous applause greeted his singing of "Rodolfo's Narrative" in the first act, but it was not until the quartet in the third act that Conductor Bovi allowed an encore. Dora de Phillipe was a lovely voiced and captivating Musetta and scored a deserved triumph in this role which she essays to perfection. Johanna Kristoffy as Mimi, and Corradetti as Marcello, are deserving of much credit.

"Barber of Seville" Thursday Evening.

Rossini's opera was very well performed and the comedy brought out in particularly refreshing fashion. Gallazzi was the Barber, having substituted for Picco at short notice. He sang his jovial role with much spirit and action, in fact he used the action too much. Crescenzo, as the Count, was credible but he lacks force for such florid music. As Rosina, Miriam Ardini again revealed the brilliancy of her voice in the upper register. Miss Sapin was agreeable as Marcellina and Corrucini made an acceptable Don Bartolo.

Boston Basso to Tour West.

Willard Flint, the active Boston basso-cantante, will be heard on an extensive Western tour under the Briggs Musical Bureau management later in the season. This distinguished member of the oratorio world has heretofore been heard mostly throughout the New England States, but it is safe to say that once the West finds out his worth a general demand will be forthcoming for his services. Among his earlier dates a Chicago recital will be given. The "Damnation of Faust" in German at Milwaukee, the "Messiah" in Boston with the Handel and Haydn Society, the "Requiem" at Concord, N. H., and "Samson and Delilah" at Lowell, Mass., are included in a list of other engagements.

Mr. Flint has identified himself prominently with the Boston teaching world, as his instructive services are in constant demand. His musicianship is thorough, and above all he is sincere. Splendid proof of this can be seen in the many pupils who have already successfully appeared in public.

Irma Seydel Remains Abroad.

Theodore Seydel, one of the latest members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to arrive from Europe, came just in time to participate in the concert on Saturday evening. Mr. Seydel serves the orchestra in the capacity of first double bass. He came on the steamship Baltic from Liverpool, October 7, arriving in New York, October 17. His daughter, Irma Seydel, the young violinist, had intended returning to America with her father thinking that the concert tour booked in Europe would naturally be cancelled on account of the war. However, shortly before her contemplated sailing she received word from various conductors of European orchestras persuading her to remain in that country as they expected her to fill her engagements as originally planned.

Some of the engagements were cancelled but following is a partial list of those that will be played: As soloist with the Royal Orchestra in Hannover; with the Grand Ducal Orchestra in Mannheim; the Symphony Orchestra at Heidelberg; the Grand Ducal Orchestra at Darmstadt; with the Berlin Philharmonic, and a recital program at Wittenberg. Other engagements are still pending and the young artist will remain in Germany until the first of December.

Her sixth appearance with the Cologne Orchestra early this last summer led to two return engagements for this fall. Miss Seydel will be available for American concert after December 15. Among bookings already made for this American tour, are appearances as soloist with the Bosto

RAMON BLANCHART

The great artist of operatic fame and master of vocal instruction :: ::
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS
For Coaching or Private Lessons, Address 53 University Road, Brookline, Mass.

FELIX FOX PIANIST
WESLEYAN BUILDING
581 Boylston Street - - Boston

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

Priscilla WHITE Teacher of Singing
602 Pierce Building
BOSTON - MASS.

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address. THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

CICCOLINI
Exclusive Management
Schulz, Curtius & Powell
Aeolian Hall, New York

Symphony Orchestra, with the Harvard Musical Association, the Hartford Philharmonic, Baltimore Philharmonic Chorus and in recital programs at New York, Chicago, Boston and many other leading cities.

A Newcomer.

Among the more prominent newcomers to the Boston music world, resulting from the European war, is Hans Ebell, the Russian-German pianist. Mr. Ebell may be comparatively little known in this country, but such is not the case either in England or on the Continent. There he has been heard extensively in concert during the past five years. For a time he identified himself exclusively with Leopold Godowsky in Vienna and served as an understudy to that master. For the past two seasons he was in charge of the piano department at the Cracow Conservatory. Mr. Ebell has played at six concerts in London during the past two seasons and as many tours through Russia, Germany, France, Belgium and Holland have marked his brilliant career up to date. The young artist had gone to Ostend to enjoy a brief rest after his last London appearance, but his vacation was very suddenly terminated; an early fall Russian tour was as hurriedly cancelled, while the pianist departed hastily for this country.

Moving Pictures at Boston Opera House.

The Boston Opera House threw open its doors last Monday evening to the first performance of the Allied Arts Association. It is a kind of refined moving picture show, in which a few singers appear in operatic extracts, assisted by an orchestra said to be composed of members of the original Boston Opera Orchestra. Feature films and feature modern society dances composed the best part of the show.

Amato a Guest of New Tenor.

Ciccolini, the Italian tenor, entertained Pasquale Amato, leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, as a box guest at his (Ciccolini's) Boston Theatre debut on Wednesday night. Mr. Amato is remaining in Boston for his appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra next week.

Harvard's New Music Department Building.

The Music Department of Harvard University now occupies its new building, designed by John Howells and erected by the contribution of $80,000 made by James Loeb, Paul Warbur and Dave Morris. A maintenance fund of $50,000 has also been raised. The building includes ample accommodation for classes and for all concerts and recitals given by the different music departments. The concert hall will seat about six hundred and fifty.

The Liederheim School of Vocal Music.

"Liederheim" (home of song) is the name of the home of May Sleeper-Ruggles, in Auburndale, Mass., which is very near Boston. It is, to give the title in full, the Liederheim School of Vocal Music. There young women of earnest purpose go to live with the principal and study voice and its affiliated branches under the Liederheim method and the personal attention of Mrs. Ruggles. This teacher has become prominent all over the country for her successful maintenance of this exclusive vocal school and her worth as a voice expert has been proved beyond all doubt by the many young ladies graduated from the school, who now hold some of the most prominent church positions New York has to offer. Others have chosen the concert field and here, too, success has not eluded them.

Handel and Haydn Society Celebrate.

The Handel and Haydn Society will celebrate its centennial this year, at the same time proving itself to be the oldest choral society in America, which has given consecutive annual concerts since its founding. The society will give its usual four concerts this winter, counting the two performances of "The Messiah." A festival week is planned to open on April 11 with a performance of Verdi's "Requiem." During this same week a new work by Horatio Parker, composed for the occasion and enlisting the services of chorus, orchestra and two vocal quartets, will be produced. The festival will last five days and will close with a performance of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." Eminent soloists will be engaged to assist the society.

Boston Symphony Concerts.

As the feature number of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's second pair of concerts on Friday afternoon, October 23, and Saturday evening, October 24, Guy Ropartz's symphony, No. 4, in C major, made a favorable impression. The work, playing about twenty-five minutes, was given for the first time here. It shows thoroughly the splendid understanding of orchestration which the composer uses to novel effect. Ropartz conceived a vivid picture of his symphonic subject and has succeeded well in explaining it tonally. Mozart's "Masonic Funeral Music" was played in memory of Gardiner M. Lane, the Boston banker and philanthropist. Chadwick's "Symphonic Sketches" ("Jubilee," "Noel," "Hobgoblin" and "A Vagrom Ballad") also were on the program. The Jean Sibelius numbers "Karelia," "The Swan of Tuonela" and "Finlandia," marked the close of the concert.

Victor Winton.

Mary Gailey, Successful Violinist.

Under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival Association, Mary Gailey, the young American violinist, appeared before the music lovers of Georgia's capital city on September 27. On this occasion Miss Gailey was heard in joint recital with Edwin Arthur Kraft, and their efforts were crowned by unusual success. Miss Gailey scored a veritable ovation, being recalled several times after her rendition of the "Romance" and "Finale a la Zingara" of the Wieniawski second concerto. Her other numbers included Schubert's "Ave Maria" and "Variations on a Theme of Corelli," by Tartini-Kreisler. In all these compositions Miss Gailey displayed her excellent technic and broad musicianship which add much to her delightfully painstaking interpretations. Miss Gailey is the possessor of a charming personality, and although a young woman, has already won for herself hosts of friends and admirers during the few years of her public appearances.

The press of Atlanta was enthusiastic over the quality of Miss Gailey's playing as is evinced by the trend of the following reviews of the concert, which appeared in the papers the day following the recital:

An audience of several thousand people at the Auditorium-Armory yesterday afternoon expressed an appreciation that amounted to a real ovation for the playing of Mary Gailey, of New York, violinist, who assisted City Organist Edwin Arthur Kraft in the Sunday concert. Miss Gailey played the romance and finale à la Zingara, by Henry Wieniawski; "Ave Maria," by Franz Schubert, and variations on a theme by Corelli, arranged by Tartini-Kreisler.

Her technic and phrasing won the highest criticism from trained musicians, who were numerous in the audience, while the color and beauty of her tones made strong appeal to the trained musical ear and to the popular ear alike. Her bowing showed strength and precision, and she manages to get as broad a tone as a man violinist. Among women artists she is to be compared, if compared at all, with Maud Powell. The rare personal beauty and grace of Miss Gailey, added to her admirable musical qualities, established her at once as an Atlanta favorite, as well as an accomplished and finished artist.

MARY GAILEY.

Miss Gailey's fine technic and the thoroughly intelligent and artistic character of the rendition, free from crudity, mannerism and girlishness, show the spirit and thoughtfulness of a master.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

Several thousand Atlantans Monday were praising Mary Gailey, of New York, as a violinist of great charm, having heard her in the recital Sunday at the Auditorium-Armory. She was accorded many encores.

City Organist Edwin Arthur Kraft rendered several organ selections.—Atlanta Georgian.

Mary Gailey scored a brilliant success by her masterly playing. It is seldom that an artist receives such applause as was accorded Miss Gailey.

Miss Gailey is one of the most satisfying violinists that has visited this city in years. She plays with a large tone, together with beautiful phrasing and a splendid sense of rhythm.—Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

Miss Gailey recently played a return engagement at Milledgeville, Ga., where she was heard in recital before the Georgia Normal College. This is but one of the many return engagements at which she has appeared, for as the above papers state in substance, after once hearing her play, the hope is formed that she may be listened to again at no very distant date.

On October 24, Miss Gailey played at a concert at Raleigh, N. C., and on October 29 she will play at Wilmington, N. C. In the meantime she has been filling engagements in smaller towns, where the enjoyment of her art was greatly demonstrated.

Harold (whose call has been a protracted one)—Won't you sing something?

Miss Stradbrooke—Why, Mr. Lingerlate, don't you know it's considered unlucky to sing before breakfast.—Winnipeg Town Topics.

Mason & Hamlin

The Stradivarius of Pianos

Although the most costly Piano made in the world, the Mason & Hamlin offers a musical worth and durability beyond comparison.

Our patent Tension Resonator system of construction—a radical departure from the usual method—has largely contributed to the marked superiority of our Pianos.

MASON & HAMLIN CO.

492 BOYLSTON ST. Boston

313 FIFTH AVE. New York

CHICAGO APOLLO CLUB SINGS ELGAR'S "CARACTACUS."

Famous Organization Starts Brilliantly Its Forty-third Season—Sunday Recitals Reviewed—St. Louis to Have Popular Grand Opera—News of the Music Schools—Amateur Musical Club Opens Its Season—General Chicago Items of the Week.

Chicago, Ill., October 24, 1914.

At the first concert of its forty-third season the Apollo Musical Club, under the direction of Harrison M. Wild, presented, at the Auditorium Theatre on Sunday afternoon, October 18, Edward Elgar's "Caractacus." The soloists were Marie Sundelius, Paul Althouse, Theodore Harrison and Gustav Holmquist. "Caractacus" had its premiere here some two years ago and at that time a complete review of the work appeared in these columns, so that nothing remains to be added to the opinion then formulated by the same writer.

The chorus, well drilled, again gave new proof of the diligence of its conductor, Mr. Wild, to whom great credit is due for a homogeneous performance. The Apollos long ago reached a place among the leading choral societies of the land, and so long as their singing maintains the high standard shown at the opening concert, they may feel assured that they constitute one of Chicago's big musical assets. The soloists divided with the chorus the honors of the afternoon. Marie Sundelius, soprano, of Boston—a newcomer in Chicago—won a well deserved success at the hands of a very critical audience, made up largely of local talent. Her voice, large in volume, sweet of quality, was heard to splendid advantage in the part of Eigen, which she sang with great poise, finish and musicianship. Mrs. Sundelius is to give, in the very near future, a song recital at Orchestra Hall, and her appearance already is anticipated with great expectancy. Paul Althouse as Orbin delighted his hearers with his large and fresh tenor voice, and he, too, scored heavily. Theodore Harrison in the title role gave a good account of himself at this, his debut in Chicago, where from now on he will be counted among the popular baritones engaged by the Apollo Club. Gustav Holmquist, a local basso, sang well, although at times a little off pitch—a defect not as yet remedied and now the only drawback in this artist's splendid vocal equipment. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra supplied worthy accompaniments.

Harold Bauer at Orchestra Hall.

Harold Bauer appeared at Orchestra Hall on Sunday afternoon, October 18, and was heard in a program well fitted to bring out the artist's various moods and versatile musicianship. The numbers included Brahms' waltzes, op. 39, Beethoven's sonata, op, 111; Schumann's "Kinderscenen," op. 15, and toccata by the same composer; Cesar Franck's prelude, chorale and fugue; Liszt's etude in D flat, Schubert's impromptu in G flat and Chopin's scherzo in C sharp minor, in all of which Mr. Bauer won the admiration of his public through beauty of touch, clarity of tone, remarkable technic and sane readings. Such playing makes the work of a critic most enjoyable and profitable.

Gadski Opens Neumann Series at Illinois Theatre.

The third concert of the Sabbath took place at the same hour in the Illinois Theatre, where Mme. Gadski appeared in a song recital which opened most auspiciously the twenty-eighth year of F. Wight Neumann's musical attractions. The soprano was acclaimed to the echo and deservedly so, for she gave of her best and what that means, artistic America has known for many years. Her program was interesting and afforded an opportunity in the American group to hear "The Little Grey Blue Dove," by Saar, and Max Liebling's charming and melodious "Love Came in at the Door," both of which won a striking success.

Briggs Opens Second Season.

With a pleasing recital last Sunday afternoon, Ernest Briggs opened his second season of Metropolitan Artists' concerts. The soloists were Virginia Thomson, contralto, and George Riecks, pianist. There are many commendable features about Miss Thomson's efforts, including a pleasing personality and manner, a splendid enunciation, and, above all, a thorough understanding and portrayal of her numbers. Her chief fault lies in her high range, where she seems unable to attain quality or pitch. In the "Song of the Shepherd Lehl," of Rimsky-Korsakow, and "Heimliche Aufforderung," of Richard Strauss, Miss Thomson proved that, temperamentally, she is essentially an artist.

Mr. Riecks was somewhat less convincing. His rendition of Brahms' F minor sonata was listless. Not until the Chopin group did Mr. Riecks interest his audience. Here, however, he showed depth of feeling, combined with a mastery of technic.

Lucille Stevenson Busy.

On October 12 Lucille Stevenson sang in "The Messiah" at the opening of the Chicago Culture Club in the ball room of the La Salle Hotel, and she has been engaged to furnish the program before the Evanston Musical Club on December 17.

The Bergeys Present Pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore S. Bergey presented two very interesting pupils, Florence Benson, pianist, and George Simons, tenor, at a reception and musicale given in the studios of the Bergey Chicago Opera School, Sunday evening, October 18. The work of these two pupils clearly demonstrated that artistic piano playing and recital singing of the highest caliber are being accomplished by the Bergeys as well as operatic work. The Schumann and Franz songs were given by Mr. Simons in a faultless manner, his beautiful tone production and diction being worthy of an artist. Miss Benson shared honors with Mr. Simons in her playing of the Chopin numbers.

First Concert of the Amateur Musical Club Season.

The Amateur Musical Club opened its season at the Blackstone Theatre on Monday afternoon, October 19. The soloists of the afternoon were Naomi Nazor, Marion Taylor Hobbs and Louise Harrison Slade, who sang the Rhine Maidens' trio from "Götterdämmerung"; Wally Heymar, who played the elegie and rondo of Sauret; Elsa Harthan Arendt, who gave two vocal numbers, and Marie Hoover Ellis, who rendered Grieg's A minor concerto in good style.

Sherwood School Items.

Georgia Kober and Mabelle Church van Alstyne, of the faculty of the Sherwood Music School, gave the program for the Coeducational Club on Tuesday, October 20.

The Sherwood Music School held its opening reception in the new studios, Fine Arts Building Annex, on Saturday, October 24, from 4 to 10 o'clock.

Florence Hinkle and Reinald Werrenrath Open Kinsolving Series.

The morning musicales at the Evanston Woman's Club were auspiciously opened on Tuesday, October 20, under the able direction of Rachel Busey Kinsolving, by a joint recital in which Florence Hinkle and Reinald Werrenrath covered themselves with glory. It has seldom been the pleasure of the writer to hear anything more satisfactory than the work of these two artists. The program was varied and interesting, and in the duet numbers the perfect blending of the voices was a joy. Miss Hinkle's French group revealed her singing at its best. Her phrasing and perfect French pronunciation, together with her intelligent rendition, showed the results of much fine work. Her voice is of beautiful quality and her pianissimo work is lovely.

Mr. Werrenrath was in splendid voice. His German songs were exceptionally well done. His enunciation is

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4439 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

HENRIETTE WEBER
Lectures. Opera Talks, Opera Concerts
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.
Or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

HERDIEN Soprano | GANNON Contralto
MABEL SHARP | ROSE LUTIGER
SINGLE OR JOINT RECITALS
5132 Kenmore Avenue, Phone: Edgewater 7252
715 Kimball Hall, Phone: Lawndale 1335

MARION GREEN
BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY
BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
KENNETH M. BRADLEY, President

LEADING SCHOOL OF
Expression, Public School Music — MUSIC — Languages, Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:

Julie Rive-King	Harold von Mickwitz	Justine Wegener
Guy Herbert Woodard	Frank B. Webster	Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter	Eleanor Smith	Edward Dvorak
Mae Julia Riley	Emile Leclercq	Adelaide G. Lewis
Abigail Raymer	Ernest O. Todd	Robert Yale Smith
Roland Leach	Dr. Charles Allum	Anna McPherson

The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone. CHARLES W. CLARK and DAVID BAXTER, the famous Scotch baritone from the Royal College of London.
The Bush Conservatory is the only Conservatory in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.
For catalogue and further information address EDWARD H. SCHWENKER, Secretary.

superb, his breath control splendid, and each of his numbers showed careful study and much thought. His group of English songs was delivered in splendid style and showed him to be in exceptional mood, as each song carried the composer's message. Both artists were well received and had to give encores after their various groups. Edgar Nelson, at the piano, proved himself as usual an excellent accompanist.

HERMAN DEVRIES' PUPIL'S SUCCESS.

Hazel Dell Neff, professional pupil of Herman Devries, with whom she has worked up all of her programs since last May, won an overwhelming success in Sioux City, Ia., on Thursday, October 1. On the following day, O. A. Morse, critic of the Sioux City Journal, voiced his opinion of the young soprano as follows:

Hazel Dell Neff, the soprano, easily was the star of the evening. Her voice is high and clear, of very pleasing quality and handled with the greatest of skill. Indeed, she seemed to have the knack of imparting some real meaning to the floridity of an operatic excerpt, which is not the case with many concert singers who essay to entertain their audiences with selections of this kind.

Her rendition of the aria and polonaise from "Mignon" was an immediate success. She appeared later in two groups of songs from Russian composers, which were made doubly interesting by her appearance in Russian costume.

CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE ITEMS.

The Chicago Musical College Saturday morning rehearsals and lectures have proved the most attractive offerings ever given under the auspices of this school. The first lecture two weeks ago on "Primitive Music," by Felix Borowski, was attended by the entire teachers' class, together with numerous non-student visitors. The Ziegfeld Theatre was crowded. Karl Reckzeh gave the first piano recital of the season. The subject of the second lecture of the series was "Music of Ancient Egypt," and the best recital program given in many seasons was heard by the usual Saturday morning crowd of students and music lovers. A new student, Claudia Page, who has previously studied in Europe with Auer, made a most favorable impression upon her audience, and gave promise of becoming a most proficient artist. She is but sixteen years of age, and is now studying under the direction of Leon Sametini. The third recital given October 17 immediately following a lecture on "The Rise of Polyphony," was provided by pupils of the advanced piano, vocal and violin department and the School of Acting. The students under the direction of Mr. Flood presented a drama, "The Return," and upheld the usual high standard of the college.

The Chicago Musical College Orchestra held its first rehearsal of the season, Wednesday morning, October 14, under the direction of Karl Reckzeh, in the Ziegfeld Theatre with seventy-one players. Public rehearsals will be held each week at half past ten o'clock, and students and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

The Bach Choral Society, John W. Norton, conductor, will hold its weekly rehearsals every Monday evening in Recital Hall, Chicago Musical College.

ELIZABETH CUENY IN CHICAGO.

Elizabeth Cueny, who represents in St. Louis the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, of New York, was one of the callers at this office this week. Miss Cueny reported that the season in St. Louis looks very bright, and naturally she waxed enthusiastic about the Hanson artists and also the San Carlo Opera Company, whose interests she is looking after in Missouri. Through Miss Cueny, a MUSICAL COURIER representative was furnished with a prospectus of the San Carlo Opera Company, which will present popular grand opera at the Odeon for two weeks, beginning November 9. Among the best known singers engaged are Constantino and Gerville-Reache. Giuseppe Angelini, advertised as the "scoreless maestro," will conduct all the performances, which will include the following operas: "Rigoletto," "Traviata," "Tales of Hoffmann," "Carmen," "Lucia," "Martha," "Cavalleria," "Pagliacci," "Barber of Seville," "Aida," "Masked Ball" and "Trovatore."

The Odeon has also been engaged for other events, Tuesday evening, November 10, Saturday evening, November 14, and Thursday evening, November 19, and Saturday evening, November 21. These evenings are not included in the series of performances mentioned above.

ORIENT CLEANER AND POLISH.

This office has used every day in the year the Orient Cleaner and Polish to best advantage, as indicated by the beautiful luster on the furniture. (Adv.)

RECEPTION AT THE SPRY MUSIC SCHOOL.

The reception given last Saturday afternoon at the Walter Spry Music School attracted several hundred patrons and friends of this well known institution. The new quarters were greatly admired and the guests were entertained by incidental music.

The first rehearsal of the orchestra class to be conducted by Hugo Kortschak will take place at the school, Suite 712, Fine Arts Building, Saturday afternoon, November 7, at 4 p. m. Mr. Kortschak will give a training to the class in the standard symphonies.

LOUISE ST. JOHN WESTERVELT APPEARS IN CONCERT.

On Thursday evening, October 22, Louise St. John Westervelt, the soprano, appeared in concert at Assembly Hall, Fine Arts Building. Miss Westervelt rendered the Louis Victor Saar Browning song cycle. These songs had on this occasion their first hearing in Chicago. Miss Westervelt, who is one of the Middle West's most popular and busy singing teachers, appears but too rarely in public. Annually she gives in Chicago a song recital and fills some thirty or forty dates out of town during the season. She would accept many more dates, were it not that her time is so much occupied with her large class as to deprive the general public from hearing with more frequency an artist in the best sense of the word.

Miss Westervelt's singing of the Saar songs was most interesting and the full message of the composer was beautifully expresed by the soprano, who won a big success with a large audience. The Cincinnati composer's output was worthy of its interpreter.

CHICAGO MUSICAL COLLEGE CONCERT.

The Chicago Musical College announces a concert to be given by its full orchestra of seventy members at the Ziegfeld Theatre, next Saturday morning, October 31. Preceding the program a lecture, "The Beginning of Opera," will be given by Felix Borowski. During the month of November Mr. Borowski will give a lecture on the "Rise of Instrumental Music" and one on "Bach and Handel." These lectures, which have proved most instructive, have always been well attended.

MU PHI EPSILON SORORITY PROGRAM.

A program of American folksongs, given by the Iota Alpha Chapter of the Mu Phi Epsilon Sorority, was performed on October 21. The program was furnished by Irene Campbell, Mabel Sharp Herdien, Daisy Jones and Natalie W. Price. The next concert by the same organization will take place on November 19.

MARIE YAHR BACK FROM THE EAST.

Marie Yahr, the contralto, who went East with Mr. Yahr for a vacation, after a strenuous summer, has just returned to Chicago and is now ready to take up her engagements.

F. WIGHT NEUMANN CONCERTS.

Margarete Matzenauer, dramatic soprano of the New York Metropolitan Opera, will make her first appearance in Chicago in recital, under the direction of F. Wight Neumann, at the Blackstone Theatre, Sunday afternoon, November 1, at 3.30 o'clock.

Rosa Olitzka, the contralto, and Ludwig Schmidt, the Chicago violinist, will give a joint recital at the Illinois Theatre, Sunday afternoon, November 8, under the direction of F. Wight Neumann.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler will give a piano recital at the Illinois Theatre, Sunday afternoon, November 15 at 3.30 o'clock, under the direction of F. Wight Neumann.

CHICAGO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA'S SECOND CONCERT.

The second concert of the season by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under Frederick Stock, brought out for the first time by that organization the Reger "Ballet Suite." The novelty had been presented previously in Chicago by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under Emil Oberhoffer, at their annual Chicago concert, in Orchestra Hall, last season. At that time the work was fully analyzed in these columns and again the "Valse d'Amour," which is the fifth number in the suite, pleased the most. The orchestra, under the masterly baton of Stock, played the work exceptionally well; likewise the Mozart overture to "The Magic Flute," the Bach concerto, No. 3, in G major, and the Brahms symphony, No. 1, C minor, which formed the other numbers of the program. A witty but unmusical person compared Reger's "Ballet Suite" to a dinner course divided in six parts, and he added that the "Valse d'Amour" is very syrupy and easily digestible. This young person probably has culinary ability and should make a good cook in an unmusical hotel.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY NOTES.

Mabel Woodworth, violinist, and Marie Bergersen, pianist, will appear in joint recital Saturday afternoon, October 31, at Kimball Hall. Miss Woodworth will play with Miss Bergersen the Grieg sonata in G minor and a concerto by Paganini, and Miss Bergersen will play the Beethoven sonata, op. 81, and a group of modern compositions.

The American Conservatory Students' Orchestra has begun its rehearsals on Monday afternoon, under the direction of Herbert Butler.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

People's Symphony Quartet Club Concerts.

The Chamber Music Club, under the management of the People's Symphony Auxiliary Club, Egmont H. Arens, manager, announces the following organizations and dates for the concerts of this season: November 28, organization to be announced later; January 16, St. Cecilia Club; February 6, Kaufman Quartet; March 6, Olive Mead Quartet, and April 10, Tollefsen Trio. For these concerts there is a reduced price of $1 to students, workers, etc., for full season ticket and membership. Price to all others, $2.

Bona fide students and workers, teachers, artists and professional people may become members.

Members only have the privilege of securing admission of friends to the single concerts at 25 cents each.

Membership tickets will be on sale at box office on the night of concert to those presenting application blanks properly filled in.

Members have the privilege of reduced rates to many of the season's most notable musical events, including Century Opera, the recitals of Spalding, Maud Powell, the Kneisel Quartet, Margulies Trio and other chamber organizations.

Albert Spalding's Program.

At his Carnegie Hall, New York, recital, Thursday afternoon, October 29, Albert Spalding, the American violinist, will play this program:

Sonata in G.....Nicolo Porpora
Adagio and Fugue in G minor.....Johann Sebastian Bach
(For violin unaccompanied.)
Concerto in D major.....Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
Prelude.....Albert Spalding
Waves at Play.....Edmund Grasse
Mazurek.....Anton Dvorak
Nostalgie.....Albert Spalding
La Campanella.....Paganini-Spalding

André Benoist is the accompanist.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
Available for Chautauqua Engagements Summer 1915
Tour Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

KATHARINE GOODSON, THE WOMAN.

English Pianist Is a Charming Character Who Appeals to Old and Young Alike—Loves Out of Door Sports—Will Make Another American Tour This Season.

Probably there is a no more winsome personality before the musical public today than that of Katharine Goodson, the English pianist. The gods were unusually kind to Miss Goodson in bestowing upon her rare musical gifts, and they were consistent in their endowment of unusual physical attractions, for Katharine Goodson, especially at the piano, in her grace of form and contour presents a picture which is a delight to the artistic eye. And all her personal charms are combined with a delightful manner, innately womanly and refined, which is doubtless, after all, that which, next to her art, makes and holds in such a marvelous manner hosts of friends wherever she goes. Indeed, so many are the friends which this artist has made in America that it would never be necessary for her to stop at hotels en tour should she wish to accept her many invitations. So great, too, have been her social demands, that she has been obliged to refuse more than one-half of her numerous invitations.

It is not only the "grown-ups" who succumb to the spell of the Goodson charm; wherever the pianist appears there is a notable following of young people—often entire girls' schools have bought up reservations at her concerts. And they flock about her at the conclusion of the program. In one notable instance, in Montreal, Canada, they are said to have followed her even to her hotel, where they showered bouquets upon the pianist and were loath to let her go.

Letters pour in upon Miss Goodson from these numerous and sincere admirers. And it is much to the credit of this artist that she endeavors to give personal answer to each of these. Her letters are said to be works of art, disclosing a literary ability of rare order, and these, it may well be added, are always written in painstaking, neat, legible handwriting.

An intimate friend of the pianist, in referring to Katharine Goodson, told the writer that she is "just the same with everybody," that "her kind thought of others is an unusually marked characteristic," and that "she exerts not only a wonderful artistic influence, but a strong moral one among both old and young," and that "hers is indeed a wonderful personality, simple and sincere."

Everything about Miss Goodson suggests the artistic, and especially is this noticeable in the appointment of her beautiful home in St. John's Wood, London.

Like all Englishwomen, she is athletic and enjoys out of door sports to the full. Switzerland is said to be one of her favorite playgrounds.

Perhaps, however, no better illustration could be given of her fidelity to truth and sincerity of purpose than the loyalty and genuineness with which she interprets the work of the great masters and her attempts to give of her very best whenever she appears before an audience.

It is indeed with pleasure that Americans are looking forward to Katharine Goodson's appearance among them again this season.

Lily Strickland, American Composer.

Lily Strickland, one of the most prolific as well as one of the youngest of American composers, has published between fifty and sixty works, and has in manuscript a hundred or more varied compositions, including three operas. She has given special attention to negro folk music, and is at present working on a symphony built upon original African themes.

Her versatility is remarkable, which is indicated by the fact that, in addition to her negro music, she has written many pieces in the Scotch, Irish, Indian and Egyptian veins. Her works in general show unusual melody, individuality and freshness of conception.

Miss Strickland was born in Anderson, S. C., of a musical family, of which Reed Miller is a member. She is of a very modest disposition, and in the four years of her stay in New York has quietly taken her place in the forefront of American composers.

LILY STRICKLAND.

Her latest songs are "My Lassie," "Mammy's Prayer," "Because of You" and "To Anthea."

Maverick-Hahn Recital at Syracuse.

As announced in last week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, Laura Maverick, mezzo-contralto, and Carl Hahn, cellist, were heard in recital before the Syracuse Morning Musical Club. They presented a varied and interesting program. The following notice appeared in the Syracuse Post Standard regarding the recital:

In opening its season of 1914-15 the Morning Musicals presented Laura Maverick, mezzo-contralto, and Carl Hahn, cellist, both of New York. It was an enjoyable recital and was given in the presence of an audience which filled the ballroom of the Onondaga.

Mme. Maverick opened her part of the program with the aria from Gluck's "Orfeo," in which she made a good impression, and later sang a group of French, German and English songs. The number in which Mme. Maverick displayed the greatest artistic finish was "L'Enamouree," by R. Hahn.

The real treat of the recital was afforded by Mr. Hahn when he gave the Popper composition for cello. Both composition and execution were appealing. His dexterity of bowing and superb tonal effects combined to make his performance as thoroughly enjoyable as that provided by any cellist in Syracuse in a long time.

Kindler Joins Leefson-Hille Faculty.

A notable addition to the staff of teachers at the Leefson-Hille Conservatory of Music, Philadelphia, is Hans Kindler, who is the new head of the cello department. Mr. Kindler, who is a member of the Philadelphia Orchestra, was formerly solo cellist at the Royal Berlin Opera and was principal teacher of that instrument at the Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, Berlin. He has played with great success with many of the European orchestras and has been heard at the palace of the Queen of Holland.

The Leefson-Hille Conservatory of Music is to be congratulated upon its success in securing the services of so excellent an artist.

What Is an American Composer?

Fort Worth, Tex., October 15, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Upon examination of the conditions governing the contest to be held by the Illinois State Teachers' Association for a symphony or orchestral suite—one clause in the requirements is brought very forcibly to my mind and this clause is the one which states that the contest is open to naturalized foreigners. This clause is very pertinent just at this time when such a splendid spirit is being shown by you in carrying forward the slogan of "America for American musicians."

I spent a number of years abroad as a music student and I do not recall any contest for musical composition in Germany, France, Italy or even England wherein naturalized citizens were admitted. Only native born Germans, Frenchmen, etc., are permitted to enter the contests held for the promotion of national music. I do not believe that this point is ever thought of when the conditions of most American contests are formulated. In the German contests only Germans compete—while in the American contests held presumably for the purpose of encouraging American composers, representatives of all the other European nations may compete. In fact the requirement that the foreign contestant must be naturalized means nothing at all. A foreign composer may write his work abroad. Under the influence of European art and European masters, the work may be absolutely un-American, written under the influence of an art life and art thought centuries older than ours—and the composer may not really be able to speak our language and yet if he has lived here long enough to secure his naturalization papers (which is surely a short enough time) he is considered to be American enough to join hands with the American composers in striving for something which should be entirely American, and he might possibly win the American contest with a work absolutely foreign to American thought.

American composers are surely paid a wonderful compliment for they are required to enter the lists of the world.

Is this fair to the American composer or will it ever develop to encourage a distinctive thought in American music?

Incidentally there are probably some excellent American composers who would be greatly benefited through winning a prize of $500, and who would be worthy to win it with an American work, but with all of America's wonderful advancement we can hardly expect to compete with geniuses who have lived in the atmosphere of art centuries older and more mature than our own.

It is, of course, necessary that we lean to a certain extent on the tradition which Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Brahms, Wagner and many others have given us, but is it necessary for Americans to pay a foreigner to write a work for the advancement of American music? Our work will not be perfect at first, but encouragement and fair play will make the American composer do far better work than you or I now think him capable—though his work now is splendid.

Trusting that you can find a place in your columns for this letter, I am Respectfully,

GEORGE E. SIMPSON,

Graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Leipsic Germany.

Bauer's Program.

At his recital in Aeolian Hall, Saturday afternoon, November 7, Harold Bauer will play the Bach toccata and fugue in C minor, Beethoven sonatas in F sharp major and A flat major, the Brahms variations and fugue upon a theme by Handel, and a Bach group, including seven inventions.

PAUL ALTHOUSE
TENOR METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
Exclusive Management:
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York City

WILLIAM WADE HINSHAW
Now in America
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIO RECITALS
Address Personally Residence, Hotel Ansonia, New York

MYRNA SHARLOW
SOPRANO
Boston Opera Company, Boston.
Royal Opera Co., Covent Garden, London.
Anglo-American Grand Opera Co., Paris.
Under the management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

SONG RECITAL
HAMISH MACKAY
Famous Scottish Baritone
Assisted by FAY FOSTER
American Pianist and Composer
AEOLIAN HALL, West 43rd Street
Thursday, November 5th, 8.30 P. M.

Art songs by leading British and American Composers, Irish folksongs arranged by Dr. Charles Wood, a group of Scottish folksongs arranged with artistic pianoforte accompaniments by leading Scottish musicians. Mr. MacKay will sing the Scottish group in the beautiful Jacobite Highland costume, as worn by "Bonnie Prince" Charlie. Miss Foster will play piano pieces composed by Hamish MacCunn, the famous Scottish composer.

During the past four years assistant to
FRANK KING CLARK
WILHELM AUGSTEIN
From Berlin
VOCAL TEACHER
Voice Culture, Placing and Development, Style, German, French, Italian and English Opera, and Concert Repertoire
Studio: METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
1425 Broadway - - New York

Brahms Is Played Raggedly.

At Aeolian Hall, New York, on Friday afternoon, October 23, the Symphony Society, under the direction of Walter Damrosch, gave its first New York concert this season.

An occasionally ragged and spiritless performance of Brahms' D major symphony opened the program. The applause which followed the termination of the symphony was as reserved as the performance. But when Efrem Zimbalist appeared on the platform with his violin to reveal the inner nature and melodic beauties of Bruch's G minor concerto he was greeted with an enthusiastic demonstration of delight, which was surpassed only by the prolonged applause at the end of the concerto. Never has the warm, pulsating tone of this genial artist been heard to greater advantage than in the ingratiating adagio of this popular work. The Russian artist's sweep of bow and breadth of manner were notably conspicuous in the stately introduction and vigorous allegro, and the impetuous brilliance of the violinist's playing in double note passages was irresistible in the finale. The world of music lovers ought to feel grateful to the Russian Czar for excusing this superb artist from the drudgery and danger of military service. And the Czar ought to be proud of a subject who is doing so much for the renown of musical Russia.

"Le Festin de l'Araignee," by A. Roussel, had its first American performance on this occasion. The work is thoroughly modern French in harmony, manner, spirit and scope, but it is not likely to take a permanent place in the repertoire of symphony orchestras. It is hardly great enough in a classical way, or uncommon enough in a sensational way to create much of a stir in the world. With neither this work nor in a nocturne by Debussy (with which the concert ended) is the conductor much in sympathy by temperament.

The performances appeared to give satisfaction to the audience, though there was a considerable exodus of auditors after the concerto and during the remainder of the concert.

The proceeds both of this and the Sunday concert are to be given to the American Red Cross Society.

Two More Successful Dudley Buck Pupils.

A delightful and edifying musical afternoon was enjoyed by those in attendance at the Thursday afternoon salon of Amy Grant, New York, when Enrichetta Onelli and Edgar Schofield were the soloists.

Mme. Onelli, who has just come to New York from abroad, where she was very successful in opera, en tour with the Quinlan Opera Company, was in fine voice, and she was obliged to respond to several encores.

As for Mr. Schofield, he had what might be termed a "busy day," having also sung at the faculty recital of the Colgate-Pickett School of Music, where he afforded much pleasure, and at the Majestic Hotel, where he sang a fine program for the German Literary Society. He possesses a baritone voice of excellent quality, which is rapidly winning for him merited recognition. He gives all the credit for his work to his teacher, Dudley Buck, with the deepest appreciation for his invaluable instruction.

Gregorian Conservatory Concert.

On the evening of October 18, the first faculty concert was given at the Gregorian Conservatory of Music and Arts, 180 Madison avenue, New York, when the following program was heard: Quartet from "Rigoletto," (Verdi) quartet; preludium and fugue (Bach-Liszt), Marguerite Volavy; "L'Enfant Prodigue" (Debussy), Mariska Aldrich, Romilly Johnson at the piano; violin sonata, F major, op. 24 (Becthoven), André Polah, Marguerite Volavy at the piano; address, Dr. Frank Miller; quartet from "Trovatore" (Verdi), quartet.

This school, which is under the directorship of Elsa Gregori, has an examining board of ten members and has sixteen instructors, all of whom have proven their merit.

Carl Friedberg's New York Program.

Carl Friedberg's first piano recital in New York will be given on Monday afternoon, November 2, at Carnegie Hall, when the following program will be presented:

Fantasie and fugue, G minor ..... Bach-Liszt
Sonata, op. 109 ..... Beethoven
Symphonic Etudes ..... R. Schumann
Ballade, G minor, op. 118 ..... Brahms
Intermezzo, E flat major, op. 117 ..... Brahms
Rhapsody, op. 119, E flat major ..... Brahms
Ballade, G minor ..... Chopin
Valse, C sharp minor ..... Chopin
Etude ..... Chopin
Polonaise, F sharp minor ..... Chopin

College of Music Faculty Additions.

Hein and Fremcke, directors of the affiliated institutions the New York College of Music and the German Conservatory of Music, announce the engagement of the following well known professors: Theodore Spiering, violinist and conductor; Victor Benham, pianist; Mme. Schaframm, of the Meisterschule of Vienna, assistant to Godowsky, and Rubin Goldmark, the composer, who is to be head of the department of theory. All these artists are too well known to need comment. It speaks well for the enterprise of the directors of these institutions when they attract such leading musical lights and are able to assure them of pupils.

"Down East" City Praises Cuyler Black.

Cuyler Black, the tenor, sang at the recent Maine Music Festival. The Bangor daily press praised his work as follows:

To many the voice of Cuyler Black, the tenor, brought back memories of Evan Williams, when he was first brought to Bangor by the Chapmans. Mr. Black has a robust tenor and expression. He has a full, big voice and in the aria, "If With All Your Hearts," he was heard to splendid advantage, the audience breaking forth in spontaneous applause, which, with applause so infrequent when this great religious oratorio is going on, was a distinct compliment and appreciation of his splendid ability. He has studied abroad and has done excellent work in Germany.—Bangor Daily Commercial, October 3, 1914.

And the audience would like to have heard more of Cuyler Black, who has a tenor of fine sweetness and exceptional volume. He has versatility of expression, too; and it is a pleasure to record that here is one singer who evidently does not despise, and hence is willing to enunciate, the English language.—Bangor Daily News, October 3, 1914. (Advertisement.)

Praise for Mme. Artha Williston.

Mme. Artha Williston, by her singing at the recent Maine Music Festivals, won these encomiums:

Mme. Artha Williston has a high, clear, pure, rather powerful soprano; she is a mistress in the art of dramatic singing.—Bangor Daily News, October 3, 1914.

Mme. Artha Williston, the gifted dramatic soprano, a pupil of the noted Anna Ziegler—singing the soprano parts—made a splendid impression on the audience. The great solo, "Hear Ye, Israel," which is the test of all soprano singers, was seldom sung better than Mme. Williston sang it Friday night. Her voice is big and full and even throughout, her enunciation good, and her upper notes, which the critics have often praised, displayed a roundness and quality that is unusual.

Mrs. Williston is a beautiful woman. . . . Mme. Artha Williston scored a triumph in "Elsa's Dream."—Bangor Daily Commercial, October 3, 1914. (Advertisement.)

MUSIC OF THE WEEK.

A Courtesy Extended to Our Advertisers.

NEW YORK.

October 28, evening, Alexander Bloch, Aeolian Hall.
October 28, evening, "Lilac Domino," Dippel Opera Company.
October 29, afternoon, Albert Spalding, Carnegie Hall.
October 29, afternoon, Harold Henry, Aeolian Hall.
October 29, evening, Philharmonic Society, Carnegie Hall.
October 29, evening, Caroline Hudson-Alexander, Aeolian Hall.
October 30, afternoon, Philharmonic Society, Carnegie Hall.
October 31, afternoon, Alma Gluck, Carnegie Hall.
October 31, afternoon, John Prindle Scott with Women's Press Club, Waldorf-Astoria.
October 31, evening, John McCormack, Carnegie Hall.
November 1, evening, Edmund Burke, Aeolian Hall.
November 2, afternoon, Carl Friedberg, Carnegie Hall.
November 2, afternoon, Florence Hinkle, Aeolian Hall.
November 3, afternoon, Tina Lerner, Aeolian Hall.
November 3, evening, Pavlowa, Metropolitan Opera House.
November 4, evening, Yvonne de Treville, Brooklyn Academy.
November 4, afternoon, Blanche Goode, Aeolian Hall.
November 4, evening, Mme. Schnabel-Tollefson and Horatio Connell, Aeolian Hall.
November 5, afternoon, Leonard Borwick, Carnegie Hall.
November 5, evening, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carnegie Hall.
November 5, evening, Hamish Mackay, Aeolian Hall.
November 6, evening, John McCormack, Orange, N. J.
November 6, evening, Harold Bauer and Mme. Hudson-Alexander, Morristown, N. J.
November 6, evening, Amato with Boston Symphony Orchestra, Brooklyn.
November 6, afternoon, Yvonne de Treville, Aeolian Hall.
November 7, afternoon, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carnegie Hall.
November 7, afternoon, Harold Bauer, Aeolian Hall.
November 7, afternoon, Yvonne de Treville, Brooklyn.

"Mr. Hemus does not confine his work as a singer to mere vocal demonstration, he has developed that talent which in itself is striking enough, to one of peculiar, fascinating, histrionic interpretation. Every vocal number is a sketch from the manifold phases of life, perhaps only a touch humorous or sombre, but still a picture complete and convincing, until you forget that it is only a singing of songs."

AEOLIAN HALL, 34 W. 43d Street, New York
FRIDAY EVE., NOV. 6
AT 8.15 O'CLOCK

PERCY HEMUS
"AMERICA'S BARITONE"
SECOND NEW YORK
RECITAL

OF SONGS BY AMERICAN COMPOSERS INCLUDING SONGS BY WOMEN COMPOSERS SONGS ACCOMPANIED BY STRING QUARTETTE

CHAS. GILBERT SPROSS at the Piano

What Composers Say of Percy Hemus

"A Superb Artist." Arthur Bergh.

"America should be proud of you—you are one of the few recitalists who make a thorough study of the text with the music, so as to obtain a full understanding of the author's and the composer's ideas." Chas Gilbert Spross

"Thank Heaven that there are artists like you before the public. Recital-giving is not to you the mere singing of a lot of songs and that is why you really deserve the success you have won. Here's to your coming recital." A. Walter Kramer

"Your virile grasp of the composer's inner meaning, and power of merging your individuality therein, constitutes you the ideal interpreter. Both the American public and the American composers owe you a deep debt of gratitude." Fay Foster

"It isn't your beautiful voice, dramatic power and sincere, comprehensive musicianship that makes your interpretations so grateful to a composer, but it is your vision, your pursuit of the ideal, which shines through and illumines all three." Gena Branscombe

"I cannot tell you how glad I am to have you sing these songs of mine, because you sing with deep understanding of text and music." Harriet Ware

"I have no doubt that in your program of 'many moods' as you term it, the songs will be interpreted to the complete satisfaction and joy of both the composer and audience. Thank you for complimenting your humble servant by using 'Mexicana.'" Ward-Stephens

"My mind constantly reverts to the remarkable scope of your art, reaching as it does to the depths of pathos and tragedy, on through to the heights of light, even fantastic treatment. Always with a breadth of temperament and understanding which is the hall-mark of the artist." Mary Helen Brown

TICKETS NOW ON SALE AEOLIAN HALL BOX OFFICE, 34 WEST 43d STREET
$1.50, $1.00, 75c., 50c. Boxes (seating six) $12.00
Mail Orders with Check will receive prompt attention at Hemus' Studios, 64 East 34th Street. KNABE PIANO USED
Teaching this season at 64 E. 34th St. SPRING TOUR NOW BOOKING

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Frederic Ponsot Soul professor de chent diploma per Mme. Mathilde Marchesi
151 Rue de Rome

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse • Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care New York Office, Musical Courier)

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

E. BERTRAN 28, RUE COPERNIC PARIS
Specialist in Voice Placement
Opera Concert

ELISABETH LECTURE—RECITALS MACK Gesture Dramatic Action
French and English Readings America—October to April
Address, care Musical Courier
(Especially for opera students)
Courses Begin April 1, 1914
Paris, 43, rue Michel Ange

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
(Formerly of Paris)
Will teach in N. Y. after Dec. 1st.
Address care of Martha Greason, Sec'y, 506 W. 111th St., New York

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
who will sing to his own accompaniment is now available for recitals.
First Chicago appearance December 14.
New York Studio, No. 100 Carnegie Hall
A Few Pupils Received
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Choosing a Church Soloist—Dickinson at Cornell—Noble's Three Programs—Ida Woodbury Seymour—Successful Morris Pupils—Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Eleanor Patterson—Von Horst Introduces Sarah Core—Leginska's Chopin Programs—Notes.

The soprano position in a certain New York church becoming unexpectedly vacant, an advertisement in the MUSICAL COURIER resulted in personal application of fifteen singers of various kinds and voices. From these fifteen, three were selected to sing for the music committee of the church, who then selected one to sing at both services on Sunday, and which finally resulted in an engagement for the year. The organist of the church on whom fell the initial responsibility of hearing all these singers relates some of his experiences as follows: Number One was a Southern lady having experience, but whose voice had a disagreeable huskiness. Number Two was an experienced young woman with a powerful and true voice, who subsequently sang for the committee. Number Three was a young woman who had a high coloratura voice, so was barred because that style of voice was not desired. Number Four was an excellent singer and teacher living at the other end of Long Island. Number Five applied too late to be heard by the committee. Number Six was a pupil of a teacher whose personal standing with the organist was such that she was precluded from consideration. Number Seven had an excellent dramatic soprano voice and had recently returned from Berlin, after several years' residence there. She also was asked to sing for the committee. Number Eight had a very inferior voice, nothing more to be said. Number Nine was a young woman originally from Baltimore, Md., possessing a very smooth dramatic soprano voice, modest personality, and winning manner, who also sang for the committee. Number Ten was a Texas girl, at present singing in a New Jersey church, but who applied too late to appear before the committee. Number Eleven sang decidedly off the key. Number Twelve "preferred not to compete with others, but was willing to meet the committee privately if desired"; and others applied too late.

When the committee trial occurred only two of the three singers appeared, and of these the former Baltimore girl was unanimously pronounced the most desirable. She accordingly was engaged for one Sunday and now continues indefinitely. The young woman who did not appear at the church trial later notified the organist that she was singing at some theatrical trial and was detained there until too late to sing at the church. This illustrates the common run in the experience of New York organists and choirmasters. Women naturally vary so greatly that all opinions and rules are abrogated in connection with the so called "artistic temperament." As a result, singers are mighty sensitive people and have to be handled with very tactful patience and unending kindness.

DICKINSON AT CORNELL.

Clarence Dickinson, organist and choirmaster of the Brick Presbyterian Church and Union Theological Seminary, New York City, was one of the four organists engaged for the dedicatory recital of Bailey Hall organ, Cornell University, October 8. Mr. Dickinson, who, in addition to the foregoing positions ooccupied by him, is an organist and composer of extended reputation, played the following numbers:

Fantasia and fugue on B-A-C-H.....Liszt
Ave Maria .....Arcadelt-Liszt
Norwegian Rhapsody .....Sinding

There were addresses delivered by the president of the university, Andrew Dickson White, and Andrew Carnegie. This event occurred on the eightieth birthday of President White and was of particular interest to an extended circle of educational people.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE PLAYS THREE PROGRAMS.

October 25 and 28 and November 1, T. Tertius Noble's organ programs contain standard classical and modern compositions. October 25 at St. Thomas' Church, New York, Mr. Noble played works by Rheinberger, Barnes, Bach, Guilmant, Mendelssohn and Elgar. October 28 (tonight) he gives an organ recital at Trinity Church, Pittsburgh, when he will play works by Bach, Pleyel, Karg-Elert Noble, Mendelssohn, Wagner and Matthew Camidge. These programs played by Mr. Noble invariably contain annotations concerning the music performed by him. These are always brief and to the point and afford the listener a good idea of the composers and their works. The following is the program for his recital at St. Thomas' Church on November 1:

Concerto in B flat.....Handel
Pastorale Sorrentina .....Pietro A. Yon
Scherzo-Caprice .....Alec Rowley
Requiem Eternam (by request).....Basil Harwood
Allegro Vivace (Symphony No. 5).....Widor
Andante Cantabile .....Widor
Vision .....Rheinberger
Morgenstimmung (from Suite for Orchestra).....Grieg
Ases Tod (from Suite for Orchestra).....Grieg
Finale (from Suite for Orchestra).....Grieg

IDA WOODBURY SEYMOUR.

Ida Woodbury Seymour, soprano, appeared in a song recital at the Irving School of Music, Hoboken, N. J., October 17. She sang the following songs: "It Was a Dream" (Cowen), "Echoes" (Clark), "Fairy Lullaby" (Beach), "With Verdure Clad" (Haydn), "Take Thou My Life" (Metcalfe), "Be Ye in Love with April-tide" (Ward-Stephens), "Song of India" (Rimsky-Korsakoff), "Pierrot" (Rübner), "Un doux lien" (Delbruck), "La Matin valse chantec" (Benoist), "Goodby, Sweet Day" (Vannah). Mrs. Seymour sang in excellent taste, with distinct enunciation, and revealed good tone quality. The difficult song by Rimsky-Korsakoff was especially well done, and Haydn's "With Verdure Clad" was greatly enjoyed. Assisting her were C. Irving Valentine, organist; Lois Pinney Clark, pianist, and Lottie Farr Valentine, harpist. Miss Clark is an excellent pianist and made a fine impression with Fiqué's "Danse Caprice." This was the debut of Mrs. Valentine, the harpist, who acquitted herself with credit. The School of Music seems to be a busy and successful institution.

SUCCESSFUL MORRIS PUPILS.

Emilie Steinbach, the soprano, recently receiving flattering mention in the MUSICAL COURIER, certainly knows how to sing. It almost seems like an invariable function with her, so easily does she sing, having very marked personal ease and entire breath control. An aria from Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and Pamina's aria from "The Magic Flute," one in French, the other in German, showed her complete facility in these widely different styles. Hattie Clapper Morris, her teacher, says she is a "voracious learner," and is sure to make her mark in the vocal world.

Martha J. Woodsum, the soprano, is another Morris artist-pupil possessing a beautiful voice, who is successful already as a teacher. She has a good class in Brooklyn and is a great credit to the Morris teaching.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX AND ELEANOR PATTERSON.

The foregoing caption relates to Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the author and journalist, and Eleanor Patterson, the con-

REGINA de SALES Teacher of Singing
124 West 82nd Street Phone, Schuyler 7511
Tuesdays, 3-4
STUDIO: 1013 CARNEGIE HALL
Thursday mornings

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN PARIS ENTIRE SUMMER
119 Rue de la Tour (XVI) Paris

ARNOLDE STEPHENSON SOPRANO
Management: Daniel Mayer, London A. Dandelot, Paris

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

THE DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France
(Champs Elysées)
LANGUAGE, ART, MUSIC
Until War Is Over—Branch School, New York City
Address, Care Musical Courier

SHEET MUSIC IN PARIS
The only store carrying a large stock of German, Russian, English and American music as well as French music.
MAX ESCHIG
TWO STORES—
13 Rue Lafitte (Near Boulevard des Italiens)
48 Rue de Rome (Near the Conservatory)

OSCAR SEAGLE
In America Season 1914-1915
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

tralto. A recent issue of the New York Evening Journal contained the following relating to these public persons:

Eleanor Patterson, who has recently returned from a successful tour through the Middle West, gave a concert at the home of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, at Granite Bay, Short Beach, Conn., last week.

Miss Patterson has been described as six feet of contralto voice. She is just six feet tall in her stockings, and her splendid voice seems to find heights and depths thereby. Her tones are simply gorgeous.

Miss Patterson was photographed with Mrs. Wilcox at her seashore residence. The accompanying picture (which was shown with this notice) shows the singer ascending the stairs and Mrs. Wilcox coming out to meet her.

Von Horst Introduces Sarah Core.

Baroness Carita von Horst, of the Coburg (Germany) Opera School, introduces Sarah Core, soprano, to friends in America with words of warm commendation. Quoting the Baroness: "Miss Core has a very beautiful dramatic voice, and the teachers of this opera school have the highest opinion of her ability. We expected her to be surely placed in a good opera house." Miss Core was recently heard by a member of the staff of the Musical Courier, who admired her beautiful singing of the aria from "Thais." Miss Core learned many lyric and dramatic soprano roles of prominent operas during her stay at the opera school. She is also well versed in oratorio singing and is ready for such work on short notice. Miss Core is likewise of handsome appearance, which goes a long way.

Leginska Chopin Programs.

An all-Chopin program has been chosen by the young pianist, Ethel Leginska, for her Acolian Hall recital on Monday afternoon, November 16. There will be two groups of twelve etudes each, op. 10 and op. 25, and the sonata in B flat minor, op. 35.

Notes.

George A. Wedge is the organist of the Madison Avenue M. E. Church, this being his third year in that position. He plans to give organ recitals in November and December at that church, corner of Sixtieth stret and Madison avenue. He is a composer also, having finished a course under Dr. Goetschius.

Pearl Beh, soprano, once a member of the choir of Central Baptist Church, New York, was recently married. By simply adding the letter "r" to her family name she assumed her new married name, being now Mrs. Behr. Mrs. Behr is a member of the Tuesday Musical Club, of Detroit, her new home, and is frequently called upon to sing at the cathedral of that city.

W. Ralph Cox is organist and choirmaster of the First Presbyterian Church of Morristown, N. J. He is a member of the American Guild of Organists, the National Association of Organists and the Musicians Club of New York, and is a graduate of the Guilmant Organ School. Mr. Cox's compositions have passed the scrutiny of the examining board of the Manuscript Society and will be heard during the present season at concerts of this organization.

The first general meeting of the National Association of Organists was held at a dinner given at the Hotel Gerard, New York, Tuesday, October 27. The guest of honor was Francis Cuyler van Dyck, Jr.

A beautiful "double story" studio, with anteroom, connected with two other rooms and bath, are to be had at Carnegie Hall. For further information regarding this unexpected opportunity, see the advertisement at end of the Musical Courier, in reading column, labelled "X. Y. Z."

Hudson-Alexander Engagements.

On October 22, Caroline Hudson-Alexander, soprano, gave a recital at the Hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio, meeting with her customary success. Tomorrow evening (October 29) she will give a recital at Aeolian Hall, New York. November 5 will find her at Wilmington, Del., where she is to give a joint recital with Harold Bauer. She will appear as soloist with the Maennerchor Society, of Indianapolis, on November 20. The month of January will find her on tour in the State of Kansas. Among her bookings for February is a return engagement at Concord, N. H. Numerou other engagements are being booked by Mme. Alexand r. which will be announced later.

A Reminder of the Maine Festival.

These jovial gentlemen are William Rogers Chapman and the Hon. F. O. Beal. It is needless to introduce Mr. Chapman, as he is well known to readers of the Musical Courier as the conductor and organizer of the Maine Music Festivals, held annually at Bangor and Portland. Mr.

F. O. BEAL, PRESIDENT BANGOR FESTIVAL ASSOCIATION, AND WILLIAM R. CHAPMAN, FESTIVAL CONDUCTOR.

Beal is the president of the Eastern (Bangor) Association of the Maine Music Festival.

This snapshot was taken at Bangor during the festival held there October 1, 2 and 3.

Lavoie-Herz Conquers Toronto.

Djane Lavoie-Herz, the interesting and highly gifted Canadian pianist, gave her first recital in Toronto on October 13, and all accounts agree that it was a remarkable success. The program included Brahms' F minor sonata, Mozart's C minor fantasie, two numbers by Corelli, four by Scriabine, two by Chopin and the prelude and fugue in G minor by Bach-Kwast.

The Toronto Globe alludes to the event as "a brilliant triumph," and declares that the professional and amateur musicians of the city "united unanimously in the verdict as to Mme. Lavoie-Herz's exceptional gifts as executant and interpreter." She revealed "temperamental expression, free from spasmodic eccentricity, poetry of conception, a touch that had elasticity, producing by turns elemental power and delightful delicacy of tone, and an intellectual grasp of her music that controlled the impulse to run into license. These remarks cover the playing of her whole program." Other points praised by the Globe in Mme. Lavoie-Herz's performances were "freedom of nuance," "grace and power," "personal magnetism," "sustained singing power" and ability to "range from poesy to virile dynamics."

In the Toronto World the pianist's "great reception" is spoken of. "Charming personality," "virility and power," "masculine vigor," "delicacy and gentleness of touch," "dramatic force," "original feeling," "caressing gentleness," "surety of touch," "delightful legato" are some of the laudatory expressions used in the World.

Says the Toronto News: "A strong emotional nature schooled by a highly trained intellect, poetic vision and the curb of experience, insight and the power of expression given by a most delicate touch—these are the impressions given by Djane Lavoie-Herz." The same journal emphasizes also the player's "perfected technic" and "brilliance of original spirit." She "saved the Brahms sonata from tediousness" by exerting her "poetic personality."

"A brilliant triumph," says the Toronto Sunday World; "full of grace, esprit and technically admirable was her playing of a widely varying program. Her tone is clear, mellow and of glorious beauty. She has a great reserve force to draw upon—a true and refined musician with alert intelligence and sensitive conceptions. Her most passionate utterance the young pianist gave in Brahms. It is here, too, that her technic and emotions are under such marvelous control, the whole performance of the great work being remarkable for its nobility, lucidity and masterly style." The Sunday World admires also the performer's "dignified grace and elegance" at the piano. She played the Mozart number with "entrancing tonal effects."

From the Toronto Star one learns that Mme. Lavoie-Herz's technic and sweetly singing tones are more than brilliant. The drawbacks found in most women pianists are absent. "The Chopin A flat polonaise was [illegible] finish that left the audience still seated and thundering for more—a unique compliment." A very significant passage in the Star review is this: "So conservative is musical taste in Toronto that a new figure is not accorded a triumph till after at least half a dozen performances, but in the case of Djane Lavoie-Herz the custom was laid aside. A critical audience of the best known musicians in Toronto joyously accepted her into their midst."

All the Toronto papers speak of the unabated enthusiasm of the listeners, of lavish floral offerings received, and of the wish expressed on all sides that Mme. Lavoie-Herz soon would give another Toronto recital.

Bauer-Ware Joint Recital.

This joint recital of Harold Bauer and Helen Ware will bring together two artists who at the beginning of their musical career hardly surmised how their plans would be changed by Dame Fate. The story of how Harold Bauer left the fingerboard to become a master of the keyboard is well known to all his admirers. It is strange that now he should be sharing a program with a violinist who started out as a pianist, and by mere chance joined the violinistic ranks.

It was Ernest Schelling's father, Phelix Schelling, who discovered what he termed "musical bumps" on Helen Ware's head when she was still quite a child. He forthwith volunteered to teach his little protégé on the old square piano left for safe keeping at her father's home by a man who went abroad for a while. The little pupil made astonishing progress. Her ambition was greatly fired by the wonderful music of the little "Wunderkind," Ernest Schelling, whom his father would proudly point to as an illustration of what talent plus work could accomplish.

All went well in the Ware household until one day the absent friend returned from abroad, and promptly took back his old square piano. Those were gloomy days for little Miss Ware. Her father, who himself was a good musician, soon realized that something had to be done to give the child an instrument to take the place of the piano. Another piano was out of the question, for he had many children and but little money.

A few weeks after the loss of the square piano, Helen's father bought a cheap piano, and during his spare hours, early morning and late at night, he brushed up his violin technic. When he had made a good bit of headway, a few dollars were invested in a small violin, and soon the little pianist was lured over to that instrument. After a few months the master was striving hard to keep abreast of his little pupil, but the day came when the father realized that it was all in vain—he was not equal to the task of instructing the ambitious youngster.

As the little student grew she had the good fortune to receive better instruction from well known teachers. At last her dreams came true, and through the good will of the patrons of the Philadelphia Orchestra she was sent abroad to complete her studies, under Professors Sevcik and Hubay.

And so it happened that the same unforeseen powers that have changed Harold Bauer's career from the violinistic to the pianistic have strayed Helen Ware from the domain of the keyboard to the narrow but endless path of the fingerboard.

Eleanor Everest Freer's Compositions Sung.

Chris Anderson is to sing Eleanor Everest Freer's "Golden Eyes" in a group of three songs at Glenn Dillard Gunn's concert, Chicago, November 2. Her "Old Love Song" was sung at the Chicago Amateur Club by Ethel Edith Jones, October 12. The Freer works, both vocal and instrumental, are making their way in the United States. Several of the songs are to be had with German text.

Haensel & Jones Artists' Bookings.

Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, has engaged the following artists from Haensel & Jones, New York: December 11, Horatio Connell, baritone; February 12, Carl Flesch, violinist; March 5, Christine Miller contralto.

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave New York

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

The Kate S. Chittenden Scholarship.

Last January 200 former pupils of Kate S. Chittenden, dean of the American Institute of Applied Music, New York, subscribed to a fund to be known as the "Kate S. Chittenden Scholarship." The fund has been put in trust and the annual income from it will be used for the free instruction of a pianist of marked ability. The first competition was held October 2 and 5, and from a group of

GRETCHEN THAYER,
Pianist.

talented young aspirants the scholarship was given to Gretchen Thayer, of Franklin, Mass.

Miss Thayer is a graduate of Vassar College and a musician of excellent attainments. The donors of the scholarship will watch with keen interest this new candidate for honors.

Hamish MacKay Recital, November 5.

Hamish MacKay, the Scottish baritone, will give a song recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Thursday evening, November 5. He will be assisted by Fay Foster, the American composer and pianist.

His program includes art songs by Sir Hubert Parry, Sir Charles Stanford, Charles Wood, Arthur Somervell, Fay Foster, Hamish MacCunn, William Wallace, Learmont Drysdale, S. Coleridge-Taylor, etc.; a group of Irish songs arranged by Dr. Charles Wood which have not been sung here before, and a group of Scotch folksongs arranged with piano accompaniments by Scottish musicians.

Mr. MacKay is a pioneer for the development of the Scottish folksong; he has done much to place it on a more musical and artistic level. His repertoire is not confined to the often sung and hackneyed numbers, and in his program will be found songs of exquisite beauty, hitherto quite unknown in this country.

Mr. MacKay will sing the group of Scotch songs in the beautiful and historic Jacobite Highland costume as worn by "Bonnie Prince" Charlie. This is one of the very few genuine copies of Prince Charlie's costume in existence. Fay Foster will play accompaniments, and will give a group of piano pieces by Hamish MacCunn, the Scottish composer. Much interest is manifested in this recital, not only for its national appeal, but also because of the artistic and unusual makeup of Mr. MacKay's program.

Mildred Potter's Worcester Festival Success.

One of the successful artists at the Worcester (Mass.) Music Festival, which was held September 23, 24 and 25, was Mildred Potter, the contralto, whose singing in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" won for her special praise.

The following press notices bear eloquent testimony of her work at this important festival:

Mildred Potter, a newcomer to the festival, proved possession of a voice of the true contralto quality, which is not always to be said of all singers whose range has placed them among those scheduled as contralto. She, too, has excellent technic.—Worcester Post.

Mildred Potter, the contralto, sang well all her part, the charming obligato duet with the soprano, her numerous recitatives, and the beautiful aria, "O Rest in the Lord," which she took at just about the tempo Mendelssohn indicated by his metronome mark, a tempo which adds appreciably to its effectiveness.—Worcester Gazette.

Mildred Potter revived Liszt's rather infrequent dramatic scene depicting Joan of Arc confronting the torture of the funeral pyre.

Photo copyright by Franck C. Bangs, New York.
MILDRED POTTER,
Contralto.

It gave her sufficient opportunity to show the flexibility, emotional character and fine dramatic possibilities of her voice. She sings with the authority of the artist, with that command of her voice which makes it expressive in a wide range of moods.—Worcester Telegram.

The big Liszt song, "Joan of Arc," which the composer called a "dramatic scene," fitted Miss Potter admirably, and her singing of it should be given high praise. In response to great applause she gave a ballad with piano accompaniment.—Worcester Gazette.

Mildred Potter sang the aria from Liszt's "Joan of Arc" with richness of tone and much breadth of feeling, and well deserved the enthusiastic applause to which she responded with a ballad with piano accompaniment.—Worcester Post.

Mildred Potter, who is well known as an oratorio contralto, seems to be discovering new possibilities in her voice. She has very brilliant and telling high notes, and in some of the impassioned phrases of Liszt's "Joan of Arc" the effect was thrilling. Her singing today made a decided impression.—Springfield Republican.

She (at the ball game)—Why does he make those motions with his arm before he pitches the ball?

He—Those are signals to the catcher. The two men work in concert.

She—Dear me! Is that the "concert pitch" I've heard about so often?—Exchange.

Florence Austin's Maine Success.

Florence Austin, the American violinist, had wonderful success at the Maine Music Festival, where her playing created a distinct impression, as her many recalls and encores proved. The critics and public were enthusiastic in their praise, and Miss Austin has received a number of personal letters highly commending her playing at both Bangor and Portland.

Following are a few notices from some of the leading Maine papers:

Florence Austin, the famous New York violinist, made her initial appearance in Bangor, and was given an ovation at the afternoon performance. Miss Austin manifests superb control of the greatest of musical instruments, the violin, and her rendition of the various selections she played Saturday afternoon was most excellent.

While Pierre Henrotti, concertmaster of the Festival Orchestra, conducted the orchestra in place of Dr. Chapman, Florence Austin was given applause that indicated the approval of the audience in her art and talent. At the afternoon performance, she contributed largely to the success of the entertainment. Her technic was splendid and the whole effect very pleasing. She demonstrated wonderful breadth of tone, especially in the slower movements.—Bangor Daily Commercial, October 3, 1914.

Florence Austin made her initial appearance in Portland on this occasion and her first number was a romance and allegra à la Zingara (from concerto in D minor) by Wieniawski. At the start she played herself straight into the hearts of her listeners, and at the close was greeted with tremendous applause. She was recalled again and again, and at the insistent demand of the enthusiastic audience she graciously responded with an encore, playing a "Caprice Viennois" by Kreisler, and in this, as in her program number, were revealed all the characteristics requisite for giving her merited recognition among leading virtuosi. Her playing displayed wonderful breadth of tone and technic, and particularly in the slower passages she played with strikingly luscious and melodious legato tone. This young violinist seemingly had absolute mastery of all technicalities, and her playing most assuredly merits the highest praise for the artistic manner in which she interprets the works of the great masters. Her personality is especially pleasing and the audience was held spellbound while listening to this gifted violinist; then at the finish burst into prolonged applause and repeated recalls. Miss Austin made a distinct impression and her playing will long be remembered by all who were privileged to hear her.

The bow used by the talented violinist, Florence Austin, whose playing created such a furore at the Wednesday afternoon concert, cost $500. Her violin is of Giullaume make and is considerably over one hundred years old.—Daily Eastern Argus.

Florence Austin had for her first number the difficult Wieniawski romance and allegro from the D minor concerto, while her second group included the "Slumber Song" of Weitzel and Wieniawski's polonaise in A, and her renderings fully justified all that had been said of her. She has an even tone of fine quality . . . and played with an artistic sense of restraint that was most convincing, while her interpretations were exceedingly finished and distinctive. That she pleased her audience was evidenced in her many encores, in which she gave a Kreisler "Caprice," Weitzel's "Souvenir" and "The Bee," by Bahm.—Portland (Me.) Daily Press.

FLORENCE AUSTIN.

Miss Austin's violin recital occurs December 3, at Aeolian Hall, New York.

Students' Euterpean Club Social.

Students of the New York College of Music and the New York German Conservatory of Music, forming the Students' Euterpean Club, have issued invitations as follows:

HALLOWE'EN DANCE.

You are cordially invited to attend an informal dance and musicale, to be given by the Students' Euterpean Club, Thursday evening, October 29, 1914, 8.15 p. m., at College Hall, 128 and 130 East Fifty-eighth street. Extra tickets for friends may be obtained at the office.

Hoping that you will honor us with your presence, we remain,
Cordially, THE EUTERPEAN CLUB,
Consuelo Clark, President.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Werrenrath's Valuable Views.

Under the caption, "The Construction of a Recital Program," Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, expressed his views on that subject in the New York Tribune of October 11. Excerpts from the article follow:

"Program making is a frequently discussed art, but one that has scarcely received the attention demanded by its importance. The singer of today is launched on his career, often with a well-trained voice and with a good interpretive faculty, but with absolutely no idea of how to build a recital program. . . . The singer, while presenting a program constructed along conventionally correct lines, neglects two important factors, contrast and climax. . . .

"A favorite method of constructing a recital program, and one having much to recommend it, is the chronological, beginning with a group of folksongs or old Italian arias, following with songs from the classic writers of the German or French schools, concluding with a group of modern songs. Of course, when a special program is presented, as one entirely of lieder, this system cannot be employed; but it is a safe one for general recital work, and a good foundation on which to build.

"Now enters the all-important element of contrast. With rare exceptions, two songs written in the same vein if placed together will neutralize the effectiveness of each other. . . . A dramatic number may be followed by one of humorous or romantic mood, but never by another dramatic song. . . .

"The quality of climax is more often obtained than that of contrast, most singers preferring to place the 'biggest' song at the end of the group. Even this arrangement may be changed to advantage, a quiet little number with a high mezzo-voce ending often proving very effective as a conclusion; but it is safe to depend on enthusiastic appreciation if the most stirring song is placed last, the rest of the group consisting of songs in varied moods.

"A mistake frequently made by some of our best known vocal artists is the adoption of one or two programs to be used during an entire season. The songs that thrill audiences of small towns in which only three or four concerts are held each year, will often fail to tickle the jaded musical palates of metropolitan critics; then, too, the obvious inference when the program remains unchanged during an entire season must be that the singer is downright lazy or that he lacks a comprehensive repertoire. . . .

"It might be well at this point to mention the fact that, while an extensive repertoire of from five hundred to one thousand songs is an undeniable advantage, the knowledge of from seventy-five to one hundred should prove sufficient for the construction of programs for an entire season. . . . The beginner who is clever will learn a few songs from the old Italian masters, Lieder of Schubert, Schumann, Franz, Brahms and Grieg, some of the best of our American compositions, and a few songs from modern German, French or Russian composers, according to the taste and ability of the singer. Armed with a moderate sized repertoire of this character, he should be able to devise programs satisfying alike to musician and layman.

"Young singers are often harshly criticised by the erudite gentlemen of the press for presenting novelties in the shape of songs by unknown composers, to the apparent neglect of the classics. Granted that the singer's art has been well founded on the great songs that have come down to us from ages past, who is to discover and encourage the unknown composer, if not the young American artist? Some novelties of today are, of course, the banalities of tomorrow, but Bach, Händel, Beethoven and others bearing great names we revere were considered heretical and revolutionary in their times, and who shall say which of the composers now striving for recognition shall receive the homage of future generations?

"Let our artists place novelties on their programs together with songs of recognized worth; let them seek to develop in their groups the attributes of contrast and climax; let them select songs neither solely for their intrinsic musical value nor for their effectiveness, but rather those which combine both elements; let them, above all, seek to display to advantage the song rather than the singer. Then will the artist be in a position to give of his best; and then will the 'tired business man' find enjoyment in entertainment other than in the 'girl-and-music shows' of Broadway."

Anne Stevenson Resumes Teaching.

Anne Stevenson wishes to announce the reopening of her vocal studios, Carnegie Hall, New York, for the season of 1914-15. She has engaged assistant teachers to take charge of her pupils' study of sight singing and ear training, in English, Italian, French and German diction, dramatic action, and stage deportment. This special instruction, essential to the training of real artists, is given without extra charge.

Miss Stevenson can now give her entire attention to the scientific production and development of the perfectly balanced tone, to artistic interpretation, and the development of the personality, following the unique system she has formed, which is producing such rapid and intelligent results. In later issues of the MUSICAL COURIER she will give an outline of her entire system.

A Polite Protest.

Boston, Mass., October 20, 1914.

To the Musical Courier Company:

In your issue of August 5 I read: "When Lemare was municipal organist of Pittsburgh he had the console rebuilt according to his wish. Visiting organists always had trouble with the instrument. As soon as Lemare's successor was installed the latter had the Pittsburgh console ripped out entirely and another substituted, which answered to average needs."

Permit me to say that Mr. Lemare's successor commenced his duties in October, 1907. The contract for a new console and extensive enlargement of the instrument was not signed until May, 1910. Anything Mr. Lemare had done to the instrument had not the remotest connection with the installation of the new console or other work done at the same time the console was installed.

FRANK
GITTELSON
The Distinguished American
VIOLINIST
New York Debut, New York Symphony Orchestra, November 8th
Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 W. 34th St., N.Y.

The organ originally had the registers arranged in terraces. Mr. Lemare had them arranged on oblique jambs, so they might be easily reached, which was a most decided improvement on the original condition. You will, therefore, see that the statement regarding Mr. Lemare's connection with this organ is most unjust to him, and not according to the facts in the case.

The controversy regarding his engagement for the Panama Pacific Exposition I regard as ill advised and harmful. Why is not complaint made that organists from other countries are filling other positions in America? Are not American builders equally justified in complaining that an Englishman is building the organ for the Panama Pacific Exposition?

Mr. Lemare was not engaged on account of the fact that he was an Englishman, but because his transcriptions, compositions and ability as a player make him so widely known.

It seems to me it should be borne in mind that while the builder of the organ is permitted to regard his instrument as an exhibit, the organ and organists are there primarily for the purpose of entertaining visitors, and even if Mr. Stewart committed an error in appointing him (about which there is a difference of opinion), it would seem that the present controversy can result in no good, and may very likely be harmful, and is quite useless, if you know Mr. Stewart.

I have met Mr. Lemare in a number of transactions where he acted as adviser in the purchase of instruments. His influence has always been sound and reasonable. I believe Mr. Lemare's influence on the console for the Panama Pacific Exposition organ has resulted in draw stops being used instead of stop keys. This change may be held by some to be to the disadvantage of visiting organists. This is also a matter of opinion.

Yours very truly,
ERNEST M. SKINNER.

P. S.—There is no municipal organ or municipal organist in the city of Pittsburgh.

The Virgils' Southern Plans.

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Virgil, unable to pursue their work in Berlin this season on account of the war, have found a field which promises to be an ideal one for their activities. It has long been their intention to establish a school in the South, which should work in close touch with their New York headquarters, but it is only now the opportunity has been given them to carry out this intention.

Instead of founding an independent school they have joined forces with Southland Seminary, St. Petersburg, Florida, a college which promises to become one of the leading educational institutions of the country.

St. Petersburg, known as Sunshine City, is situated on Pinellas Peninsula, between the Gulf of Mexico and Tampa Bay. A fine building is being erected for Southland Seminary in the most beautiful residential section. In the meanwhile the college is being conducted in very comfortable and picturesquely situated quarters.

The institution is endowed and has a large faculty, the members of which are graduates of leading American and European universities.

Dr. and Mrs. Stevens, the principal and vice-principal, are well known educators, practical and progressive, and Southland Seminary is "singularly unfettered by preconceived and ancient methods."

Because the broad educational views of those in authority at the college are so thoroughly in harmony with those of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil, it will be possible, they feel, to build up a school of music upon correct educational and artistic principles in connection with the seminary.

Music students will enjoy college life, will have ample opportunity, in connection with their special line of study, to make also a practical study of modern languages and literature, will be able to swim and enjoy other outdoor exercise daily, and will have ample opportunity to develop in a rational way, morally, mentally, physically and musically.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil will remain at Southland Seminary until May 1, conducting classes of all grades. Instruction will be given in classes and privately.

A special teachers' session will be held from December 15 to January 15 for the benefit of those who are unable to take the regular courses.

The dean of the School of Music, Professor Harold A. Loring, will work in cooperation with Mr. and Mrs. Virgil. His views coincide with theirs, and he is proving himself, by his energy, intelligence and earnestness in the cause of "education in music," a very capable head of the music department.

Music pupils, who in connection with their studies wish to build up their health, will find St. Petersburg an ideal spot for this purpose, as it has a fine climate and is one of Florida's most beautiful cities.

Giordano Renews Favorable Impression.

Salvatore Giordano won his share of favorable commendation at the recent Bangor, Me., Festival, as is indicated by the following:

Festival audiences are always kind to those who have won favor at previous festivals, so it was not strange that Chevalier Salvatore Giordano, the Italian nobleman who is gifted with a noble tenor voice, should meet with typical festival applause. His first selection was "Celeste Aida," from "Aida," by Verdi, and the warm, velvetlike tones that are yet sturdily masculine, and sound even more so because of the manly, erect and strong figure of Giordano, were a source of pure delight and unstinted approval. It was plain to see that Giordano knew he was among friends, that he was happy to be here, and that he was out to please his friendly audience. He succeeded even better than he could have anticipated. Giordano was given a double encore, and then the audience did not have enough of him. He sang "Vieni," by Denza, and "La Donna e Mobile," from "Rigoletto," which fairly swept the audience from its feet.

Signor Giordano's splendid tenor voice was heard to advantage behind the scenes with Miss Craft in "Ah Fors e Lui."—Bangor Daily Commercial, October 2, 1914.

The audience was again glad to see Chevalier Salvatore Giordano, the handsome, tall Italian nobleman tenor, who rehearsed "Cielo e Mar," from "La Gioconda," also the quartet and other chorus songs which he will render Saturday evening. Signor Giordano always does his best, whether at rehearsal or concert, and he was at his best Saturday morning. The patrons of the festival are promised a fine treat in his singing Saturday evening.—Bangor Daily Commercial, Saturday, October 3, 1914.

Then there was Giordano, who, on a memorable night two years ago, leaped full grown into festival favor—Giordano, the tall, straight, handsome Italian tenor. He has gained a few mannerisms; but he has lost none of the golden beauty in his upper notes, or the certain soft, velvety, lovely quality which makes every note a delight. Perhaps he has gained in breadth and power—it is hard for a provincial reviewer to tell. He sang with all the tenderness and sweetness of a woman, all the strength and virility of a man. Especially, perhaps, was he effective in his encore, "La Donna e Mobile," from "Rigoletto," which first won for him recognition here.—Bangor Daily News, October 2, 1914. (Advertisement.)

ELEONORA DE CISNEROS In AMERICA
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y. Entire Season

Returned and Returning from Abroad.

On board the steamship Canopic, which sailed from Naples, October 22, were Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Arturo Toscanini, Giorgio Polacco, Geraldine Farrar, Emmy Destinn, Lucretia Bori, Frieda Hempel, Enrico Caruso, Jacques Urlus, Botta, Setti, Romei, Schuman, and Adamo Didur.

Marcella Sembrich arrived in New York on the steamship Rotterdam, Saturday, October 24.

Margarete Matzenauer, the Metropolitan Opera Company dramatic soprano, was a passenger on the steamship Duca d'Abruzzi from Genoa, which reached New York, October 25, likewise Adriano Ferrari-Fontana, the tenor, Mme. Matzenauer's husband.

Emma Eames, the American soprano, and her husband, Emilio de Gogorza, the baritone, were passengers on the Duca d'Abruzzi also.

Otto Goritz, Margarete Ober, Albert Reiss and Leon Rothier are among the Metropolitan Opera Company principals who are due to arrive in New York soon.

Rita Fornia, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, returned from Europe on the steamship Adriatic, of the White Star Line, Thursday, October 22.

Carl Braun, the German basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is on his way to America on steamship the Nieuw Amsterdam.

George Harris, Jr., the tenor, returned to New York from England on October 10.

Canada Busy Musically.

[From the Vancouver (B. C.) Saturday Sunset.]

The leading teachers in piano, violin and voice work, so far as I can learn, are as busy as ever, notwithstanding the hard times, and the reason for such a condition of affairs is easily understood.

In the first place the nucleus of every serious teacher's clientele is from among young teachers who come from a class which is always looking toward improving itself along educational lines, and which forms the "warp and woof" of the nation.

Now, when so many forms of lighter entertainment have been eliminated, people have more time for study, and in nerve straining times nothing will quite take the place of music, so all absorbing, mentally and emotionally is the greatest of the arts.

Alberta Carina in America.

Alberta Carina is another American girl who has won operatic honors abroad, having achieved marked success during the last eight years in France, Belgium and Germany.

It was eight years ago that Hans Gregor, now director of the Vienna Royal Opera, while hearing her sing in Paris was so much attracted by Mme. Carina's beautiful voice and rare qualities that he had her sign at once a three years' contract for the Komische Oper, Berlin, in order to create the roles of Lakme, Manon, etc., in their first German production. Mr. Gregor predicted at that time an unusual stage career for this talented young artist. Mme. Carina studied with various teachers in Paris, and later with the famous master, Frank King Clark, in Berlin. Later she was a pupil of Wilhelm Augstein, one of the young and successful Berlin voice teachers, who quite recently has transferred his studio to New York.

ALBERTA CARINA.

Mme. Carina has not only a voice of rare quality, but she is an unusual artist, combining with her fine musicianship an extraordinary warmth of temperament as well as a rare interpretative ability and great personal charm. Her interpretations of the roles of Manon, Traviata and Susanne in "The Marriage of Figaro" have brought forth emphatically favorable comments.

Hofrat Kaim, manager of the Kaim Orchestra in Munich, hearing Mme. Carina sing, was very much surprised to learn that she was an American, and is said to have exclaimed, "Judging from your temperament, I took you for a warmblooded Sevillian Carmen."

Mme. Carina is a talented linguist; she speaks German, French and Italian as fluently as her native language. Her diction is such that a leading Brussels critic said: "Who would have thought that Mme. Carina is an American, hearing her pronounce our French so beautifully."

Before entering her operatic career Mme. Carina had established quite a reputation as a concert violinist, having appeared in public at the early age of eight years, awakening surprise and admiration as a child violinist of great promise.

Mme. Carina will tour the United States and appear in concert and costume recitals.

Czar's Chamberlain Entertains White.

During Roderick White's trip to Russia as a student, a singular and fortunate incident occurred. While en route from Paris he made the acquaintance of a large and austere gentleman, manifestly Russian. As the journey progressed the young violinist told of his reasons for taking such a long journey from home, saying that he was on his way to study with Leopold Auer at St. Petersburg, now Petrograd. The stranger, however, told little concerning himself, beyond the fact that he was bound also for the same place.

This was the state of affairs when the Russian frontier was reached. The stranger then turned and said: "We have at last reached my own country and I now offer you its hospitality." Whereupon he pointed to a luxurious private car which stood on a track nearby, guarded by soldiers.

RODERICK WHITE.

"But who are you?" exclaimed Mr. White in astonishment. "I am chamberlain to His Majesty, the Czar of Russia," was the reply. The young man's belongings were transferred to his companion's car, in which the balance of the journey was made. The chamberlain requested young White to play, and was so delighted that he took a great interest in the young artist's work and entertained him frequently at the palace during his sojourn in the Russian capital.

Augstein Locates in New York.

Wilhelm Augstein, of Berlin, Germany, an authorized representative of the late Frank King Clark, has transferred his Berlin studios to the Metropolitan Opera House building, New York.

Mr. Augstein received his musical education at the Royal Academy of Music, Berlin, and at the Conservatory of Music, Paris; he is a graduate of these institutions. At first a vocal student of the most prominent Italian and French voice teachers, he later became a pupil of the late Frank King Clark, of Berlin.

Owing to his unusual pedagogic talents, his remarkably keen ear in judging voices, Mr. Clark advised him to become a voice teacher and offered Mr. Augstein quite an unusual opportunity to learn his system of teaching voice in connecting him with his studios for many years and giving him a chance to assist in all the lessons given therein. Mr. Clark predicted a brilliant future to Mr. Augstein, and used to call him "The future voice teacher." Mr. Augstein made a thorough study of the real Italian bel canto, and is an authority on scientific voice placing and development.

Two years ago Mr. Augstein opened his own studios in Berlin and soon enjoyed a wide reputation as one of the most successful of the younger voice teachers. Among his pupils are many leading opera and concert singers of the prominent European stages and concert platforms. One of Mr. Augstein's specialties is the restoring of voices which have been injured by false training, and quite a number of his pupils who had imperiled their voices were enabled through him to regain them and continue their careers.

WILHELM AUGSTEIN.

Mr. Augstein is also a thorough musician and an authority on the French, German, Italian traditions and style; he makes a specialty of coaching and interpretation of the French, German, Italian and English opera and concert repertoire.

Mr. Augstein has recently established himself at the Metropolitan Opera House building, 1425 Broadway, and will undoubtedly prove to be a valuable acquisition to the singing profession of this country.

Spooner Recitals.

Philip Spooner, the young American tenor, who gave two recitals recently in Wisconsin at Racine and Kenosha, received most complimentary comments from the press. The Kenosha Evening News stated that Mr. Spooner "not only has one of the leading tenor voices in America, but a winning personality as well, impressing his audience with the fact that he thoroughly enjoys singing" and the Racine Journal observed that he "has a lyric tenor voice which shows the decided influence of training under Italian methods," and in the aria from "Rigoletto" "not only was the width and range of his voice shown best, but timbre and warmth was marked," and "a decidedly dramatic quality was evident."

On October 14, Mr. Spooner gave a recital before the Ogontz School, Ogontz, Pa., and was received most cordially by a large and appreciative audience.

Eva Egerter's Wheeling Recital.

Eva A. Egerter gave a recital at the Elks Club, Wheeling, W. Va., on Tuesday evening, October 13, assisted by Mrs. Edward Stifel, pianist. The Wheeling Intelligencer speaks of the marvelous clarity of her voice and her clear articulation and notes especially her success with three of Campbell-Tipton's splendid compositions, "Flowing Water," "Spirit Flower" and "Rhapsody." The Wheeling News and the Wheeling Register also dedicate columns articles to this recital, and refer in the highest terms to Miss Egerter's performance.

Miss Egerter is to be heard in Steubenville, Ohio, on November 12, and there are plans for another recital in Wheeling and other points in the Middle West.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Ries & Erler, Berlin.

SECHS ERNSTE LIEDER (six serious songs), with piano accompaniment. Composed by Reginald Lindsey Sweet to lyrics by Heinrich Heine.

These are art songs of the best class, with difficult accompaniments, which in no way help the singer to find his notes. Only thoroughly equipped artists can do anything like justice to such works as these. The melodies are in the nature of impassioned recitatives, and the accompanying harmony is of the richest modern texture. On a recital program and in proper surroundings these songs cannot fail to impress by reason of their earnestness, elevated style and emotional sweep.

Unfortunately, however, there is no English text, and unless the singer is able to accomplish the double task of pronouncing Heine's words and singing Reginald Lindsey Sweet's exacting melodies at the same time, he must perforce omit these six serious songs from his programs. Their names are: "Warum sind denn die Rosen so blass," "Zum Polterabend," "Ich hab' euch im besten Juli verlassen," "Die blauen Veilchen der Augelein," "In meiner Brust, da sitzt ein Weh," "Ja du bist elend, und ich grolle nicht."

Albert Stahl, Berlin.

"CHACONNE," by J. S. Bach, transcribed for piano solo by Martinus Sieveking.

This clever and musicianly transcription makes an imposing concert solo of fourteen pages in length, bristling with many difficulties, and yet preserving the general spirit and characteristics of Bach's famous violin solo. Students of Bach will find this piano arrangement of a violin classic full of interest. This is by no means the only piano version of the chaconne that we have met with, but we believe that this one is the most brilliant and difficult.

"SOUFFRANCE" (Suffering), a piano solo by Martinus Sieveking.

Is in the form of a prelude or poetic etude and it is an attempt to portray by means of music the grief of heart suggested by the title. The composer has achieved his purpose by means that are purely artistic and has written an admirable little composition of four pages in length which is perfect in form and unity of style, as well as musical.

D. Rahter, Leipsic.

Eight songs: "THE YEAR'S AT THE SPRING," "BY THE WAYSIDE," THE HALF-RING MOON," "SHE IS FALSE, O DEATH, SHE IS FAIR," "THE DREAM GARDEN," "IN APRIL," "CHRISTMAS LYRIC," "THE NIGHTINGALE." Composed by W. H. Pommer, op. 22.

These melodies have almost a folksong simplicity, and the piano accompaniments are not difficult. They are singable and playable to a degree that is not common among most of the songs of modern Germany. But these songs appear to have been written to English words which were afterwards translated into German. That may account for the simple English ballad style behind the German exterior.

E. Demets, Paris.

"MIRAGES" (Fancies), three poetical piano pieces: "PAVANE DES AMANTS FRIVOLES" (Pavane of Frivolous Lovers), "TRISTESSE DEVANT LA MER" (Sadness by the Sea), "LA HALTE AU BORD DU LAC" (Tarrying by the Lake), by René Chansarel.

These short and moderately difficult compositions are thoroughly French in contour and character. Those who like French melodic forms and modern French harmonies will find in these clear and sparkling pieces much to suit their tastes. There are many changes of tempo, and the expression marks are very full. In addition, the passages are fingered. The compositions are therefore ready to be used as teaching pieces.

Boosey & Co., New York.

"When I Do Wrong," a child's song in the form of an English ballad written and composed by Edward Teschemacher; simple, artless, melodious and pretty.

"All That I Ask," song, with words by John Yorke Bailey, and music by James Coleman; a straightforward and tuneful ballad with a short vocal range and an easy accompaniment which make it within the powers of amateurs everywhere.

"Amaryllis at the Fountain," song composed by Roger Quilter; an unconventional setting of an old lyric, and the work of an excellent musician who knows all the modern harmonies, but who has purposely kept his accompaniment simple.

"Bird Lullaby," song, words by Edward Teschemacher, music by Wilfred Sanderson; a sprightly and ingratiating melody by one of the most popular English song composers of the day.

"Birth of Spring," song, words by Charles Hanson Towne, music by Elmer Andrew Steffen; very simple, but with a good deal of genuine feeling.

"The Rhyme of the Four Birds," words by Mary Dolores Mapleson, music by Elsie Marian Nye; effective, with plenty of contrast, and offering much scope for an accomplished singer who can interpret the inner meaning of an imaginative song.

"The Blackbird," song, words and music by Fred E. Weatherly; simple to the verge of childishness, and without any depth of feeling, but smoothly written and pleasant.

"I Arise From Dreams of Thee," duet, words by Shelley, music by Edmund Yates; a good deal of atmosphere and fine feeling, as well as many effective melodic passages for the two voices, make this duet a worthy addition to the list of duets with permanent value.

G. Schirmer, New York.

"TROUVÈRES AND TROUBADOURS," a popular treatise by Pierre Aubry, translated from the second French edition by Claude Aveling.

This book of 174 pages deals with the musicians and the music of the people of the middle ages. The table of contents is as follows:

The Trouvères and Troubadours were musicians as well as poets. How the melodies have come down to us.
Nine various classes of lyrical poetry.
Three periods of the lyrical activity of the Troubadours and Trouvères.
The Jongleurs.
The mensural theory of music in the thirteenth century.
Old tonalities and the first steps in modern tonality.
The measured rhythm of the thirtenth century.
The notation of the Troubadours and Trouvères.

There is an extended list of books dealing with this subject which will prove of value to anyone desiring information on a subject which is not only almost forgotten, but also without interest to most musicians. It is fortunate, however, that there are those who are willing to devote time and patience to the research of historical information which might otherwise be lost.

Pierre Aubry, to whom all antiquarians are indebted, died in 1910 from a fencing accident at the early age of thirty-six.

Cigarettes.

Dinard, October 5, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Many people are wishing to do something for the soldiers in France who are so bravely defending their country. A cigarette to them is a consolation; not to have it is one of the greatest privations, particularly to the convalescent, who, far from home in a hospital without money, waiting impatiently to rejoin his regiment, finds the hours long with nothing to do. A small amount of money goes far in this matter, and so I am asking all who will, to send a contribution, no matter how small, for this fund in Dinard, where convalescents number thousands. Any sum will be gratefully received and the public is assured that it will not be used for anything else, not having to pass through the hands of committees or societies. A postal order sent to the Banque Boutin, Dinard, France, or to me personally is all that is necessary. Fifty centimes (ten cents in American money) buys twenty good cigarettes.

CHARLES HOLMAN-BLACK,
Prompt Secours,
Dinard, France.

Cecil Fanning in Cleveland.

Cecil Fanning's reputation as a lieder singer is so rapidly extending throughout the country that he is developing a fine ability to draw a full house. On Friday evening, October 16, the beautiful ball room of the Hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio, was packed by a representative audience of Cleveland's people, both musical and social. The greatest demonstration was given Mr. Fanning throughout the evening, and before he had finished his exacting program he was made to sing six encores. The Cleveland Leader of October 17 says: "It was the most creditable performance that a Cleveland audience has listened to 'in some moons.'"

This was the twelfth recital given in Cleveland by Mr. Fanning and Mr. Turpin.

1914-1915 1915-1916

We are booking dates for both this season and the next for :: ::

CHARLES W.
CLARK

Who has cancelled all European dates :: ::

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

Alma Gluck's New York Recital.

At her Carnegie Hall, New York, recital, Saturday afternoon, October 31, Alma Gluck will sing the following program:

Rossignols amoureux, from Hippolyte et Aricie....Jean P. Rameau
Zeffiretti lusinghieri, from Idomeneus.....Mozart
Come Beloved, from Atalanta.....Handel
The Mermaid's Song.....Haydn
Intermezzo.....Schumann
Er ist's.....Schumann
Der Nussbaum.....Schumann
Botschaft.....Brahms
Sonntag.....Brahms
O liebliche Wange.....Brahms
Little Russia Folksongs.....Arr. by Efrem Zimbalist
Frühlingsfluten.....Rachmaninoff
The Nereid.....Glazunow
Les cloches fêlées.....Charpentier
Crépuscule.....Massenet
Tout gai.....Ravel
Vaer Daer.....Max Vogrich
De ol Wichel.....Max Vogrich
Wenn fromme Kinder schlafen gehen.....Max Vogrich
The Bird of the Wilderness.....Edward Horsman
Long ago.....Sidney Homer
To a Messenger.....Frank la Forge

Butt and Rumford Aid Queen's "Work for Women" Fund.

The Queen of England is said to have accepted an offer made by Clara Butt and Kennerley Rumford to give a concert in Royal Albert Hall, London, and to hand over the entire receipts to a relief fund to be named by Her Majesty.

"The Queen," states the official letter, "is much touched by your wish that she should mention the cause for which the proceeds of the concert should be given, and Her Majesty would suggest that they should be in aid of the Queen's 'Work for Women' Fund. Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to grant her patronage."

The concert was fixed for Saturday, October 10. The contralto and her husband were to be assisted by the Royal Choral Society and Sir Edward Elgar, Sir Frederick Cowen and other conductors. Mr. and Mrs. Rumford will likewise give patriotic concerts in Aberdeen and Peterhead, Scotland.

Mildred Potter in Elgar Work.

Mildred Potter, contralto, has been engaged to sing one of the leading roles in Elgar's "Music Makers," which is to be given by the Columbia University Chorus at Carnegie Hall, New York, on December 2. Last spring Miss Potter sang in the work when it was given for the first time by this same chorus. During the season she appeared in it also at Toronto, Boston and Chicago, scoring everywhere an immediate success.

FESTIVAL CHORUS PROGRAMS ANNOUNCED.

Gigantic Newark Chorus Ready to Begin First Rehearsal—Jersey City and Elizabeth to Organize Individual Choruses in Conjunction with Newark—Numerous Concerts Given—Musical Notes.

Newark, N. J., October 24, 1914.

With remarkable jumps and bounds the music festival chorus, which is to sing at the three day music festival in the First Regiment Armory, on May 4, 5 and 6 next, has increased in numbers so rapidly during the last two weeks that the Newark Music Festival Association is now wondering where to find a hall large enough in which to hold the rehearsals. Over five hundred singers have already enlisted and the daily registration is constantly growing. If one can judge from the present daily increase in number and the individual enthusiasm being shown in all parts of the city and suburbs, there can be little doubt that Newark is to have one of the greatest choruses of its kind in the entire country.

In connection with the Newark chorus, it has been decided to organize a second body of singers in Jersey City. These members will hold their meetings there, going to Newark once a month to sing with the entire body. C. Mortimer Wiske, director of the festival, has consented to spend one evening a week in Jersey City, training the singers in the same chorus numbers to be used in Newark. Singers are now being gathered together from all parts of Jersey City, Hoboken, Hackensack, Weehawken Heights and other surrounding cities, so that a second large chorus will soon be rehearsing for the three day festival.

It is the plan of the Newark Music Festival Association to start a similar organization in Elizabeth, N. J., which is only a short distance from Newark. Many Elizabeth singers have already joined the Newark chorus and a large number of others would like to, if it were not for the inconvenience of traveling back and forth. Arrangements are under way to try and secure Mr. Wiske's services one day a week in Elizabeth also, and to conduct the chorus on a similar plan to the one in Jersey City, the members rehearsing with the other singers once a month in Newark. If this scheme is carried out, as it is hoped, a gigantic and magnificent chorus can be looked for when the festival takes place next May.

Because of the numerous requests received at the offices of the association from the singers, for the list of chorus numbers to be sung at the festival concerts, it has been decided to make public this part of the program. The chorus numbers follow:

"WAGNER NIGHT," TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 4.
Spinning Chorus, from the Flying Dutchman.
Choral, Awake, from Meistersinger.
Choral fantasie, from Lohengrin.
March and chorus, from Tannhäuser.
"OPERA NIGHT," WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 5.
Kermesse scene, from Faust.
Soldiers' chorus, from Faust.
Finale, second act of Aida.
(Also two other numbers not yet selected.)
"CONCERT NIGHT," THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 6.
Hymn to music (unaccompanied), by Buck.
Blue Danube waltzes, by Strauss.
Lost Chord, by Sullivan.
(Also one other number to be decided upon later.)

The first rehearsal of the chorus will be held Wednesday evening, October 28, at 8 o'clock, in the parlors of the South Park Presbyterian Church, corner of Broad street and Clinton avenue, Newark. It is very important that every member be present at this time, as several announcements are to be made, the music distributed, and a chance will be given the members to change their seats if they so desire.

Because of the short time left before the first rehearsal, Director Wiske has arranged to be in Newark, at the office of the association, Lauter Building, 593 Broad street, Monday and Tuesday, October 26 and 27, from 1 p. m. to 3 p. m., in addition to every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m., as heretofore. Singers desiring to join the chorus can apply here at these times, or send applications by mail. Names sent in must be accompanied by the address, what the voice is, and whether voice is high or low must be stated. Those who intend becoming members but have neglected to do so are urged to secure their membership cards before Wednesday evening if possible.

Eliot Street School Artists' Concerts.

Charles Grant Shaffer, principal of the Eliot Street School, and who for seven years has given the Newark public a large number of splendid concerts, has completed arrangements for the eighth series of artists' concerts to be given in the assembly hall of the school this season. It has been Professor Shaffer's purpose to give his audiences the best music possible at the very lowest prices. Many artists of note have been heard there, and the concerts have not only been delightful to listen to, but also educational in every respect.

When one reads the list of soloists booked to appear and then realizes that the price of admission for adults is only twenty cents and for the young people only five cents, it will be better understood what a remarkable work and what unestimable good Professor Shaffer is accomplishing.

The first concert will be held Friday night, November 13, and the soloists on this occasion will be Florence Austin, violinist, and the Schubert Quartet of New York, comprising Mildred J. Reardon, soprano; Alice Mertens, contralto; Horatio Rench, tenor, and George Reardon, baritone. The Russian Symphony String Quartet, with Florence Mulhollen, contralto, has been engaged for the second concert, December 11. On the third night, January 22, the New York Music School Symphony Orchestra of fifty players, with Paul Petry, tenor, of this city, as soloist, will play. The Manhattan Ladies' Quartet of New York, and Lillian Jeffreys-Petry, pianist, of Newark, will furnish the program on February 19, and the final concert, Friday night, March 19, will offer the Kriens' Symphony Club, of New York, with Marie Stoddard as soprano soloist.

The Alda Concert.

Krueger Auditorium, on Tuesday night, October 20, was well filled when Frances Alda, soprano, assisted by Frank la Forge, pianist and accompanist, was heard in concert. Gutia Casini was to have appeared, but, having been detained in Europe, the program was given without him. The concert was given for the benefit of the Eighth Avenue Day Nursery and Baby Shelter.

Mme. Alda delighted her hearers with a variety of numbers, and Mr. la Forge at the piano was at his best.

Music Notes.

On November 11, at Krueger Auditorium, Ernestine Schumann-Heink will give a song recital, assisted by Edward J. McNamara, the policeman-singer, who achieved such a tremendous success two years ago in Paterson, when he appeared at the Paterson Music Festival.

The First Regiment Armory has been selected for the John McCormack concert on November 24, no other hall being large enough to hold his audiences. Last year he packed the Palace ballroom, and while the armory will hold nearly ten thousand persons there seems to be little doubt but that the noted tenor will fill it to capacity.

The first concert of the Arion Society will be held in Krueger Auditorium on December 7.

The first meeting this season of the Music Study Club was held on Thursday morning, October 22, at Lauter Hall. An enthusiastic audience was present and listened to a well rendered program. Those who took part were Mildred Steele Allen, Mrs. van Keuren, Mrs. Douglas, Florence Bucklin Scott, Mrs. John Krueger, Mrs. Baney, Miss Wrigley, Mrs. Stephens and Mrs. Musk.

Tina Lerner, the pianist, will give a recital at Miss Beard's School, Orange, on Friday afternoon, October 30.

The first concert course of the Maplewood Lecture Association course to be held in the Maplewood High School will be given on Wednesday night, November 18, by Francis Rogers, baritone; Salvatore de Stephano, harpist, and Bruno Huhn, pianist. The second concert will be given by the Schill String Quartet, comprising Otto K. Schill, first violin; Herbert C. Corduan, second violin; Herbert Boradkin, viola, and Russell B. Kingman, cello, on Wednesday night, January 20. The third concert will be given by a vocal quartet on Wednesday night, March 17.

For the benefit of Gladden Hall Hospital in Irvington, a concert will be given in Olympic Park Opera House next Tuesday night. The contributors to the program will be Arturo Nutini, pianist and violinist; John B. Hamilton, baritone; De Witt Paxton, humorist, and J. Louis Minier, accompanist.

T. W. A.

Wittgenstein's New York Program.

Victor Wittgenstein, the young American pianist, who will be heard extensively in a concert tour arranged by the Briggs Musical Bureau for the United States and Canada during the present season, has already announced the date of his New York recital. It will take place on the evening of November 20, in Aeolian Hall. The following interesting program will be given on that occasion:

Ballade, D minor	Brahms
Rhapsodie, G minor	Brahms
Cappriccio, B minor	Brahms
Sonata, op. 31, No. 2	Beethoven
Prelude, Aria et Finale	César Franck
Etudes, op. 25, Nos. 1 and 3	Chopin
Chant Polonais, No. 5	Chopin
Scherzo, B minor	Chopin
Restless-Ceaseless	Rubin Goldmark
Trauerweiden	Rubin Goldmark
Concert etude	MacDowell

By special arrangement Loudon Charlton has taken charge of the New York recital. Mr. Wittgenstein will use the Knabe piano exclusively in his concert activities this season.

Emil Polak's Success.

Emil Polak, the New York pianist and accompanist, came again into important notice on Sunday evening, October 18, when he was the official accompanist at the Hippodrome at the debut of the Spanish violinist, Manuel Quiroga. Throughout the whole program, in which Jeanne Jomelli, the soprano, and Nahan Franko's Orchestra also participated, Polak's authoritative musicianship was in evidence. For a pianist of his age to meet so successfully all varieties of demands made upon his art, and at the same time be able to impart true individuality and a fine sense of versatility into his share of the entertainment, is a factor well worthy of the undivided attention of the music public. Mr. Polak's pianistic abilities alone might easily place him in a coveted position in the newer generation of solo artists, and hence his added abilities displaying his specialty, tend only to add merit to his reputation.

Mr. Polak will be heard in Newark, N. J., on October 28, when he will accompany the Bohemian tenor, George Dostal. One of the numbers on this program is a new English ballad, entitled "Proclamation," which has been written by Polak and dedicated to Mr. Dostal.

A Correction.

Owing to an inadvertence, in the October 14 issue of the Musical Courier the name of Florence Anderson Otis was mentioned in a list of artists at the Maine Music Festivals as being under the management of Antoni Sawyer. It so happens that Mrs. Otis is under the very capable direction of Messrs. Foster & David.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
COLORATURA SOPRANO, Grand Opera Prima Donna
Now in America Season 1914-15 Booking
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
New York Recital, Aeolian Hall, Afternoon, Nov. 6
Brooklyn Recital, Brooklyn Institute, Evening, Nov. 4
Washington, D.C., Recital, Columbia Theater, Nov. 13
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

FLORENCE MULFORD CONTRALTO
Of the Metropolitan Opera Company
HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, 27 West 42d Street NEW YORK
Personal Address:
1104 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Phone, 525 W-Market

Philadelphia Orchestra Concerts.

Philadelphia, Pa., October 24, 1914.

Before audiences which filled every seat in the big Academy of Music, the Philadelphia Orchestra gave its second pair of concerts of the current season under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week. Alma Gluck was the soloist.

Stokowski and his men, as well as the celebrated soprano, were received by both audiences with pronounced enthusiasm. At the close of her final number, Miss Gluck was recalled eight times at one of the concerts, and both audiences made quite as ample recognition of the work of the orchestra and its able director. All of which is, of course, only another corroboration of the frequently heard statement that the local symphony season is not long enough to satisfy local music lovers.

Though the public is, doubtless, more or less music hungry, there were numerous other factors which contributed to the success of this week's concerts. In the first place, skilled program maker that he is, Leopold Stokowski never planned a more effective concert than this week's. It was one of those concerts that arouse, equally, the enthusiasm of the professional musician, the amateur, and the purely sensual average concert goer; and the presence of Alma Gluck, first soloist of the year, gave the final touch of novelty. Stokowski hit a happy note in his opening overture, "The Marriage of Figaro," with its bubbling sparkle. Miss Gluck followed with Biondina's aria from "Entführung aus dem Serail." The third number was the Schubert "Rosamunde" music. The simple effective style which sets this composition among the most valued gems of German music was beautifully brought out by Stokowski.

In the three numbers of her final contribution to the program, Alma Gluck gave graphic evidence of her versatility. They were Rachmaninoff's "Peasant Song," and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Chant Hindou" and "Shepherd Lehl." The flitting moods of the last composition (sung in Henry G. Chapman's translation) were perfectly achieved by the singer. The concert was closed with the fourth symphony of Tschaikowsky. Without regard for one's previous conception of this work, it is hard to believe that after hearing Stokowski's reading of it one could doubt it is the real tragic symphony of the great Russian. And though I have heard the work many times before I never heard the widely separated moods of its two parts set out so clearly as Stokowski presented them.

Frank Gittelson, the young Philadelphia violinist, who has been creating considerable comment in Europe, will be the soloist at next week's concert. H. P. QUICKSALL.

Lucy Gates Gives New York Recital.

Lucy Gates, the American soprano of the Royal Opera of Berlin and Cassel, who returned recently from abroad, gave a recital at Chickering Hall, New York, on Friday afternoon, October 23. Assisted by Edward P. Kimball at the piano, she was heard in the following program:

Caro Nome, Rigoletto.....Verdi
Maria's Wiegenlied.....Max Reger
Solvejslied.....Grieg
Heidenröslein.....Schubert
All Through the Night.....Old Welsh
Pastorale.....Old English
My Lovely Celia.....Old English
Bell Song "Lakme".....Delibes

Miss Gates has a beautiful voice, which she uses with ease and judgment. There is a remarkable clarity and smoothness to her tones, and throughout her program her selections were marked by much individuality and thoughtful interpretation. So great was the enthusiasm and so insistent the applause that she was obliged to add two numbers to her program.

Under the management of Foster & David, Miss Gates will be heard frequently in recital in this country.

Vernon D'Arnalle in West.

Vernon d'Arnalle, the noted American baritone, who has just returned from a long residence in Europe, gave a recital at the People's Church, St. Paul, Minn., October 22. He sang a varied program, beginning with the very early Italian composers and passing through almost the whole field of classical music, and including some American compositions. He also sang some old folksongs of lower Brittany, which he has himself collected. His concert was a pronounced success.

Mr. d'Arnalle is booked for a large number of successive appearances under the management of Antonia Sawyer.

Blanche Goode Plays at Smith College.

Blanche Goode, the pianist, played an interesting program at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., on Wednesday, October 21, before a large and enthusiastic audience. Her success is recorded in the Springfield (Mass.) Daily Republican as follows:

Blanche Goode, of Smith College music faculty, presented the following program of piano music in John M. Greene Hall yesterday: Schubert, sonata, op. 143; Brahms, intermezzi and rhapsodie, op. 119; Chopin, etudes, op. 10, Nos. 3, 8, 7; op. 25, Nos. 2, 9, 12. As a whole, Miss Goode's performance was marked by enthusiasm, fine perception of tone values, and a high order of musical intelligence. She was probably at her best in the Schubert sonata, which she interpreted with charming appreciation of its lovely melodic and lyric content; the second of the Brahms intermezzi, and the etudes from Chopin's op. 25, the ninth one of which, played with enviable lightness and speed, she was obliged to repeat, as well as to respond at the end of the program to continued applause with Leschetizky's well known "Arabesque." Her work has warmth and color, which she uses with intelligence, and she is in command of splendid technical resources. She should win her way to recognition as one of the leading women pianists of the country.

McCormack's New York Program.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, will sing this program at his Carnegie Hall recital, New York, Saturday evening, October 31:

Aria, Il mio tesoro (Don Giovanni).....Mozart
Mr. McCormack.
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
L'abeille.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Mr. McBeath.
There's on Earth But One True Precious Pearl, Hungarian folksong.....Arr. by Korbay
Sylvelin.....Sinding
Oh! Thou Billowy Harvest Field.....Rachmaninoff
Mr. McCormack.
Romance in G.....Beethoven
Mr. McBeath.
Irish songs—
The Bard of Armagh.....Arr. by Herbert Hughes
The Banks of the Daisies.....Arr. by Stanford
The Banks of the Suir.....Arr. by Milligan Fox
Mr. McCormack.
Wiegenlied.....Max Reger
Tambourin.....Kreisler
Mr. McBeath.
Pluck This Little Flower.....Landon Ronald Lovely Kind and Kindly Loving.....Cyril Scott
Life and Death.....Coleridge-Taylor
Mr. McCormack.

Donald McBeath, violinist, and Edwin Schneider, pianist, will assist.

Quiroga Plays Again.

Manuel Quiroga, the Spanish violinist, made his second New York appearance (assisted by Maude Klotz) at the Schubert Theatre, on Sunday evening, October 25. The house was only partly filled, but there was much enthusiasm. Mr. Quiroga's opening number was the Bruch concerto, in G minor, followed by six compositions and arrangements by Kreisler, which the young artist played with extraordinary brilliancy and lightness of touch. Quiroga is possessed of a facile technic and has excellent intonation. His last group consisted of two Sarasate numbers, Bazzini's "La Ronde des Lutins" and Paganini's "La Clochette."

Miss Klotz sang Oley Speaks' attractive "Morning," and the "Little Gray Dove" of Louis Victor Saar, and the brightness and clarity of her voice and the perfect coloratura were especially well displayed in the latter. This was followed by "Chanson Indoue" of Rimsky-Korsakoff, which Miss Klotz interpreted with admirable sentiment. Her second appearance on the program, following Quiroga's Kreisler group, was in an aria from Charpentier's "Louise," in which she displayed breadth of feeling and delicacy.

The accompaniments were played by E. Romayne Simmons with fine discrimination.

People's Symphony Auxiliary Club Concert.

The first of six concerts to be given this season by the People's Symphony Auxiliary Club, occurred Saturday evening, October 24, in the auditorium of Washington Irving High School, New York. The Kneisel Quartet, assisted by Miss Mallet-Prevost (daughter of the club's president), presented a program, consisting of the Schumann A major quartet, op. 41, No. 3; "Interludium in Modo Antico," by Glazonnow, and quintet in F minor of César Franck.

The place of Hans Letz, second violin, detained for military duty in Germany, was taken by Samuel Gardner.

The climax of the evening was the sublime Franck quintet, in which Miss Mallet-Prevost gave splendid assistance at the piano, keeping her instrument well in its proper relation to the others, and playing with breadth and beautiful tone.

Between the numbers Franz X. Arens, musical director of the club, gave a scholarly talk on The Essence of Musical Form, the first of a series he will deliver at these concerts. The large audience evinced the greatest appreciation and enthusiasm.

D'Aubigné to Locate in New York.

L. d'Aubigné, the singing teacher of Paris and St. Cloud, who removed, at the outbreak of hostilities, to Nice, where he has a permanent home, has decided to return to New York. His arrival here is expected at an early date, and he may be addressed at present in care of Martha Greason, secretary, 506 West 111th street, New York.

The Legal Standardization of Music Teaching

Moritz E. Schwarz, Supervisor of Music in the Jersey City Public Schools, assistant organist of Trinity Church, New York City, and instructor in the Trinity Church School of Organ, when requested by the MUSICAL COURIER correspondent in Jersey City for an expression regarding legal standardization of music teaching, made the following reply:

Thursday, October 22, 1914.

MY DEAR MISS LOCKHART:

In reply to your request for an expression regarding legal standardization of music teaching I have this to say:

The standardization of any kind of teaching is not the business of a body of legislators, but essentially belongs to the colleges, who, by their courses naturally set a standard which may or may not be lived up to. Music not being one of the essential points of education, but purely a cultural subject, ought to be left to the individual taste of the one studying the subject.

A number of other academic subjects are being declared elective, such as algebra, biology, etc., so music should be left entirely elective, since, being a purely cultural subject, it therefore partakes of the nature of a luxury corresponding to a love of pictures. It therefore seems to me illogical to attempt to standardize our luxuries.

I proposed at one time to our Board of Education and our high school heads to formulate a set of examination questions for our local music teachers with the object of allowing their pupils credits in high school for work done in music outside of school hours. These credits would be allowed for periodic examinations by me, and would, of course, be based on evident progress made by the pupil. The school authorities did not view the proposition favorably, contending that this would be un-American, and that it would put a premium on wealth, as only those who had the money to spend could or would spare it for music lessons.

Let me say in conclusion that I consider what we are giving the children in the public schools now (with the exception of what is done in the high schools), is a sufficient foundation to arouse the ambition of the truly musical to continue and specialize, and to give the unmusical or musically indifferent an academic knowledge of the subject to permit them to appreciate in a normal measure, as they would appreciate other things out of their own specialties, the music performed by those who have made it their business.

Yours truly,

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ.

Such a Difference!

Nikolai Sokoloff tells a good story on himself apropos of a country bumpkin's appreciation of art. Before his return to America Mrs. Sokoloff opened their little farmhouse in Westport, Conn., and the "boy of all work," desiring to show a little friendly interest, remarked between gum chewing lips: "Say! Mrs. Sokoloff, what does your husband work at?"

"He plays the violin," answered Mrs. Sokoloff. Then, seeing a look of astonishment and contempt on his face at the thought that "fiddle" playing could be called work, she added impressively, "He is a very, very great artist."

"Huh!" answered George, "I had an aunt once who was in the circus," and continued triumphantly, "she ate fire," which settled forever the possibility of any one attempting to compete with such an accomplishment.

Emma Nagel's Vacation.

Emma Nagel, who is under the management of Walter Anderson, took her warm season recreation at her summer home in Merrill, in the Adirondacks. Her time, however, was not entirely occupied in holidaying, for she has prepared several recital programs and a large list of arias and works to be used on her Southern tour.

Miss Nagel has just filled a week's engagement at the Virginia State Fair, Richmond, Va.

Olive Kline's Bookings.

Among the early engagements booked for Olive Kline, soprano, are appearances at Lewiston, Me., on November 9; Portland, Me., November 12; Minneapolis, Minn., November 17; Olean, N. Y., November 25; Harrisburg, Va., December 4. Miss Kline reports that the season will in all probability prove a busy one for her, judging by present indications.

Von Ende School Engages Minnie Tracey.

Minnie Tracey, the American soprano, who has been living in Paris during the greater part of her career and who returned to her native country recently, has been engaged at the von Ende School, New York, where she will teach opera and French song interpretation.

Gadski's New York Recital.

Johanna Gadski will return from a Western tour to give a recital in Aeolian Hall, Wednesday afternoon, November 11. The prima donna's program will include songs in German, Italian and English.

IN ALL THE KEYS.

Henri Castellanos Varillat, of The D. K. G. Institute, Rochester, N. Y., is planning for the public performance of a grand opera by a cast entirely made up of Rochester singers during this coming winter.

Howard Middleton has become a faculty member of the California Conservatory of Music, Los Angeles. He teaches voice and organ.

Irma Clark, of Wellesley College, won the fellowship of $150 awarded by the Boston Music School Settlement.

J. J. Shea, for many years a resident of Montreal, Can., has gone to Ottawa, Can. He was formerly musical director of the Princess Theatre, and for two seasons the principal mover in a plan to give the city a symphony orchestra.

B. Witmer Breneman, of the Utica Conservatory of Music, gave a song recital recently composed of German, French and English songs at the New Century Auditorium, Utica, N. Y.

At a recent meeting of the Elmira Symphony Orchestra, Elmira, N. Y., W. A. Falck was elected president; Mrs. Field, vice-president; G. Kinnon, secretary; and A. Freudenheim, treasurer. F. A. Cheesewright will continue as director.

Iole Pastori, a young lyric soprano, sang with the Pacific Musical Society at its introductory recital of the season, San Francisco, Cal.

The Washington, D. C., Harmony Improvement Club, insists upon original compositions or a thorough study of interpretation, for membership.

Edla I. Peele, pianist, and Ruth James, soprano, appeared on the musical program given at the Naval Y. M. C. A., Norfolk, Va., recently.

Topeka, Kan., has arranged for free organ recitals to be given every week day during the fall and early winter. D. H. Seymour is to furnish these recitals.

The Behrens Opera Club, Philadelphia, is scheduled to open its season with "Martha" at the Academy of Music on the evening of October 20 with the following cast: Lady Harriet, Jenny Kneedler Johnson; Nancy, Mary Josephine Comerford; Lionel, Joseph S. McGlynn; Plunkett, Franklin L. Wood; Sir Tristan, William M. Goodwin; Sheriff, Charles D. Cuzner.

Houston, Tex., has an Arion Club. Dr. W. O. Sauerman is the president.

Emilie Rose Knox, of Raleigh, N. C., gave a program of violin numbers at Chapel Hill, N. C.

Frederik Frederiksen, violinist, has been appointed director of the Wisconsin School of Music, Madison, Wis.

Seattle, Wash., has a flourishing Musical Art Society. The program topic for the season is "The Music of Modern Composers."

Frederick Knight-Logan, formerly musical director for Maude Adams, has written a song which was given prominence by Alice Nielsen, the soprano, at Nielsen day at a Chautauqua gathering in Oskaloosa, Iowa. The song by Mr. Logan, who is a local composer, was accorded a flattering reception by the audience, which numbered about 3,000.

Emily Fitzroy, the English actress, head of the dramatic department of the Ganapol School of Musical Art, is introducing an innovation to the Detroit, Mich., public in the organization of classes in general deportment and diction, a study very much in vogue in social London.

Louisville, Ky., organized a male chorus recently. Frank Buerck is the president and Carl S. Lackleton the director.

Directors of the New People's Orchestra, St. Paul, Minn., are planning to popularize high grade compositions to educate the people in symphony music.

The Rochester, N. Y., Symphony Orchestra will give its opening concert at the Lyceum Theatre, October 19, with Edmund Burke, Irish baritone, as assisting artist.

Austeene Clifford, a Rochester, N. Y., contralto, has been awarded two diplomas from the Ithaca, N. Y., Conservatory of Music.

Ivor A. Thomas, formerly of Tabor College, will locate in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Carrie Schmidtt gave the opening piano recital of the season in Steinert Hall, Providence, R. I. Felix Fox, her former teacher, of Boston, assisted.

John Marquadt, violinist, is the conductor of the New Liberty Theatre Orchestra, Salt Lake City, Utah.

SPOKANE GIVES FREMSTAD KEY OF CITY.

212-213 Auditorium Building,
Telephone, Main 4479.
Spokane, Wash., October 11, 1914.

The Spokane Musical Art Society has announced its program for the season, 1914-15. At the open meeting, October 12, the following was given: "Love Is the Wind" (MacFadyen), "Robert toi que j'aime," from "Robert le Diable" (Meyerbeer), "My Laddie" (Thayer), Myra Arlen Wilcox; Sam Lamberson at the piano; "A Winter in Musical Boston," Mrs. Robt. A. Glen; "Heidenröslein" (Schubert), "Im Kahne" (Grieg), "But Lately in Dance" (Arensky), "Will o' the Wisp" (Spross), Myra Arlen Wilcox; nocturne, F major; etude, C minor (Chopin), Mary Ella Cook; "Un bel di Vedremo," from "Madame Butterfly" (Puccini), "The Robin Sings in the Apple Tree" (MacDowell), "Parla" (Arditi), Myra Arlen Wilcox.

At the November meeting, Augusta Gentch will have charge, when the evening will be devoted to the early Russian composers. Mary Ella Cook will prepare a Tschaikowsky program in December, and one made up of selections from later Russian composers will be presented in January under the direction of Luther B. Marchant. There will be another open meeting in February. Then in March a program of early American composers, in charge of Mrs. Eugene W. Smith; in April, a MacDowell evening, presided over by Lillian S. Ross; and in May, with Katherine Finn-Kelley in charge, selection will be given from later American composers.

A well filled house greeted Olive Fremstad at the Auditorium, Monday night, October 5. It was indeed a happy occasion, this opening concert of the fifth annual series under the local direction of Mrs. H. W. Allen. The gracious prima donna, with her magnetic personality and excellent voice, aroused the enthusiasm of the audience, and encore after encore was called for. It seemed almost that the Scandinavian numbers were sung with a little more sympathy than the others—or could it have been art? At any rate, these particular songs were the ones that caught the fancy of the listeners. Assuredly Mme. Fremstad has won many admirers in Spokane—music lovers who hope to hear her again soon.

A reception for Mme. Fremstad was held at the new Davenport Hotel, Saturday night, October 3, under the auspices of the Scandinavian Societies. Mayor Hindley made a speech of welcome, after which he presented the singer with a floral "key of the city."

For the second artist concert, Mrs. H. W. Allen will present Evan Williams, the tenor, November 2.

Sam Lamberson arrived in town late in September. He tells a story of hardships encountered on his way from Berlin, where he was studying with Josef Lhevinne.

Clara Wagner, after a summer spent in New York, studying with Mme. de Serrano, the vocal teacher has returned and reopened her studio in the Auditorium.

E. C. Rowdon, the baritone, who opened a studio in the Jamieson Building late last season, announces the organization of an oratorio society. It is the aim to have a chorus of from 125 to 150 voices, and to present "The Messiah" at Christmas time.

The Mendelssohn Club has reorganized under the direction of H. W. Newton. The club will give two concerts, one probably in January, and another in April.

Norine W. Harris, pianist, organist, and singer, is a recent addition to the local musical colony.

Considerable interest is being manifested over the appearance at Pantages Theatre of Annabelle Moore, prominent in the younger society set. She and John Laraway, a Spokane boy, will present "The Slave Dance," a fantasy of old Egypt. Miss Moore has always been in great demand at entertainments, where her dancing met with instant approval; but it was not until last year that she slipped away quietly and signed a contract with the Pantages people. Her bookings carried her to the coast cities, so this is the first opportunity local people have had to see her professional work.

ELMO M. MINEHART.

Bloch's Aeolian Hall Program.

Alexander Bloch's New York recital will occur in Aeolian Hall, Wednesday evening, October 28. The violinist will be accompanied by Blanche Bloch.

These are to be the numbers:

Sonata, No. 10, op. 96	Beethoven
Concerto in D major	Paganini
Lithauisches Lied	Chopin-Auer
Serenata Napoletana	Sgambati
Hungarian Dance, No. 1	Brahms-Joachim
Romanze	Wagner-Wilhelmj
Polonaise in D major	Wieniawski

Koelling-Connell Joint Recital.

Helene Koelling and Horatio Connell will give a joint recital at Olean, N. Y., on November 9. In addition to solo groups, the two artists will unite in duets for the opening and closing of the program.

WANTED

WANTED—A lot in Musicolony, R. I., or bungalow and lot. Address, stating location, lowest price and best terms, "A. B. C.," care MUSICAL COURIER, 437 Fifth Avenue, New York.

TO LET

CARNEGIE HALL STUDIO TO LET—furnished, very large and desirable Studio, newly decorated, with ante room, also two rooms and bath, Steinway grand piano. Telephone 1350 Columbus, ask for "X. Y. Z.," or write "X. Y. Z.," Carnegie Hall, New York.

LILY STRICKLAND
430 West 118th Street, New York
COMPOSER of My Lassie, Because of You, Pickaninny Sleep Song

W. O. FORSYTH
Pianist and Teacher of the Higher Art of Piano Playing
COMPLETE TRAINING FOR CONCERT ROOM OR TEACHING
Address: Care Nordheimers, Toronto, Canada

Mrs. MINNIE M. McCONNELL
Voice Culture and Coach
McConnell Vocal Trio
204 Cathedral Parkway, (W. 110th St.) New York
Phone: River 6439

Mrs. HALL McALLISTER
TEACHER OF SINGING
Musical Management
407 Pierce Building - - Boston

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone Ravenswood 2319 849 Lakeside Place Chicago

HENIOT LEVY PIANIST
Kimball Hall, CHICAGO

ANNIE LOUISE DAVID HARPIST
THE FOREMOST WOMAN HARPIST IN AMERICA
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX
CONTRALTO BOSTON THEATRE OPERA COMPANY.
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Ave., New York

ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC in LEIPSIC
Own building with one large concert hall and two small halls, also fifty teaching rooms. Founded by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in 1843. Yearly attendance, 950 students of all countries. Students received at Easter and Michaelmas each year, but foreigners received at any time, in accordance with page 9 of the regulations.
The course of tuition includes every branch of musical instruction, namely: Piano, all stringed and wind instruments, organ, solo singing and thorough training for the opera, chamber music, orchestra, and sacred music, theory, composition, history of music, literature and æsthetics.
Prospectus in English or German sent gratis on application.
Director of THE ROYAL CONSERVATORIUM of MUSIC DR. ROENTSCH

N. Y. School of Music and Arts
RALFE LEE H STERNER, Director
56-58 West 97th Street Tel. 679 Riverside
Dormitory or out-of-town students

CARLO NICOSIA
Formerly conductor with Century and Hammerstein Opera Companies.
Coaching for Opera in French, Italian and English.
5 West 65th St., New York.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

HENRY P. SCHMITT
VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
Residence Studio: 203 W. 81st St., New York. Tel. Schuyler 951

Emily Church BENHAM Pianist
Concerts Recitals Lessons
Studio: 1299 Bryden Road, Columbus, Ohio

SUSANNAH MACAULAY
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
Composer of "Allah Is Great." "The Butterfly." "Ave Maria"

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ITS ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 18 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1806

LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
10 NOV 1914

LORETTA DEL VALLÉ

Coloratura Soprano

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK,
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK — MISS SUSAN S.
Positive Breath Control, Perfect Placing. BOICE. VOCAL STUDIOS. Expert Coaching. Diction in all languages.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

E. PRESSON MILLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

ELEANOR PATTERSON,
AMERICAN CONTRALTO.
Tel. 880 Morningside. 510 W. 124th St.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN,
Studio: 70 Carnegie Hall.
Telephone, Columbus 5946.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7498 Bryant. New York.

LENOX ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
H. H. Reppert, Director. All Branches Taught.
Terms very reasonable. Free Scholarships.
172 E. 117th St., Tel. 6039-J, Harlem.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals. Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ, Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5469-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

ELIZABETH PILLOW OLIVER,
SOPRANO.
Art of Singing. Voice building and development.
Available for Oratorio, Chamber Music, Concerts.
Studio: 837 Carnegie Hall, New York.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction — Telephone
Theory of Music — 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Riheldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West, Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 609 West 114th St., New York.
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City.

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th St

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d Street
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors.

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MRS. J. HARRISON-IRVINE,
PIANISTE—ACCOMPANISTE.
Instruction in Piano, Teaching, Accompanying, Coaching of Operatic Roles, Concert, Oratorio, Sight Singing and Reading Classes, Harmony.
1013 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Phone, Columbus 135

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York.

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition.
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST.
Nine years of successful teaching and concertizing in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Diamond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Pla

DOUGLAS POWELL
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Special attention paid to
Concert Breathing and Tone Placement.
Studio: 448 Madison Ave., Phone Plaza 5722

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Sing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 18. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1806.

MUSICAL DOINGS IN THE GERMAN CAPITAL.

Berlin Hears Numerous Concerts, Chiefly for Charitable Purposes—Many Musicians at the Front—Musical Activity Throughout Germany—Gewandhaus Reduces Fees—New Kaun Suite.

Berlin, October 2, 1914.

In my previous Berlin article I mentioned a list of important concerts to be given here during the winter, and this list, which was already remarkable, considering the times, is to be augmented by the following important events: Ten symphony evenings by the Berlin Royal Orchestra under the leadership of Richard Strauss; four concerts given in the large hall of the Philharmonie by Max Fiedler with the Philharmonic Orchestra; as both these concerts are to be preceded by public rehearsals or matinees, this makes twenty-eight symphony concerts in addition to those already mentioned by me. The rest of the impending concerts are shown in the fascimile advertisements reproduced on the next page of the MUSICAL COURIER.

CONCERTS FOR CHARITY.

Among the artists who already have announced concerts and recitals for the Red Cross and other charitable purposes are Busoni, Scharwenka, Oskar Fried, Willy Hess, Burmester, Slezak, Sauer, Lilli Lehmann, Frieda Hempel, Franz von Vecsey, Heinemann, Wüllner, Schnabel, Knüpfer. Our distinguished countrywoman, Augusta Cottow, is the only American artist thus far who has announced a concert for the German cause. She will appear at the Singakademie on October 10 with the Philharmonic Orchestra under the leadership of Ferruccio Busoni, playing Beethoven's C minor and MacDowell's concertos, also Liszt's "Spanische Rhapsodie" in Busoni's arrangement. The proceeds are to be given to needy musicians, of whom there now are great numbers in Germany, because they lack employment. Busoni himself is to give a recital October 5 for the same purpose. He will play a Bach program, and as the illustrious Italian is a Bach performer par excellence, a full house is assured. Busoni also will conduct a concert given for the benefit of needy musicians, on October 13, by Xaver Scharwenka. Weber's "Jubilee" overture, Busoni's "Geharnischte Suite," and Scharwenka's two concertos, op. 32 and 82, played by the composer, will make up the program. On Sunday the 11th and Monday the 12th, Busoni will be the soloist of the first Philharmonic concert under Nikisch, at which he will play Beethoven's C minor concerto. Thus the great pianist is developing a remarkable activity here in Berlin prior to his departure for America.

HUMPERDINCK'S "MARKETENDERIN."

Berlin's première of Humperdinck's new opera "Die Marketenderin" took place at the Charlottenburg Opera House on Monday evening, September 28. Grim war was more romantic a hundred years ago than today. Such a charming figure as Humperdinck's "Marketenderin" seems all right with Blücher's army, but she would be sadly out of place on the Marne. The libretto, which is written by Robert Misch, is pleasing, though very harmless. Various members of the regiment are in love with the girl, but she finally marries the field cook, and that is what it should be, for he sings tenor. Humperdinck's music, like the text, is pleasing, charming, but innocuous. There are some very pretty solos and ensemble numbers and one love song that MONUMENT ERECTED TO THE MEMORY OF CARL WILHELM, THE COMPOSER OF "DIE WACHT AM RHEIN," AT SCHMAL-KALDEN, IN THURINGIA.

The song was composed in 1854 and first sung on June 11 of that year at the silver wedding of King William of Prussia, later Emperor William I. It did not become famous till 1870-71.

may become popular. By weaving into his chorus some old Prussian patriotic tunes, the composer has given color to the whole. The performance was excellent and earned warm applause for the singers. Moericke conducted.

HEMPEL-VECSEY RECITAL.

Last evening Berlin's largest concert hall, the Philharmonie, was filled to overflowing, thanks to the drawing powers of Frieda Hempel and Franz von Vecsey, who kindly offered their services for their less fortunate brothers and sisters in art, so many of whom now are sadly in need of the wherewithal to keep the wolf from the door. The concert was given by Dr. Leopold Schmidt, the well known music litterateur and critic of the Berlin Tageblatt. Dr. Schmidt opened the program with Beethoven's "Egmont" overture and closed it with the "Meistersinger" vorspiel, revealing himself as a conductor of great ability. He led the orchestra with a sure, firm hand, and he interpreted the two overtures in a manner that proclaimed him to be a superior musician. I was particularly astonished at the remarkable facility and fidelity with which Dr. Schmidt followed the soloists. Many a musician can get up and give a very good account of a well known overture, but it is quite a different matter to render a musical and faithful accompaniment to a violin concerto or an operatic aria. Dr. Schmidt covered himself with glory last evening.

Frieda Hempel was in magnificent voice and her singing of arias from Gluck's "Orpheus" and "Alceste" and from Mozart's "Abduction" held her listeners spellbound. Her voice was as sweet as honey and pure as crystal, and in the Mozart aria her coloratura was a thing of joy. Von Vecsey, who has been a great favorite in Berlin ever since he made his debut here as a ten-year-old boy, played the Bach concerto in E major and the Mendelssohn concerto, scoring (with the latter particularly) a rousing success. It was a cleancut, artistic and satisfactory performance. Concerts of this kind bring in large sums for the unfortunate musicians.

A NEW ORCHESTRA.

Of special interest among the numerous offerings of the week was the debut of the new symphony orchestra, the members of which have been recruited from well known Berlin musicians and music teachers—artists like Anton Hekking, Nicolas Lambinon, concertmaster of the Blüthner Orchestra; Franz Spaznowski, former concertmaster of the Philharmonic Orchestra; Laura Helbling, the well known violinist soloist; Paul Elgers and his wife, violin teachers; Oskar Schubart (now the greatest clarinetist in Germany), for many years the first clarinet player of the Berlin Royal Orchestra, and many other musicians of note. The first concert of this new orchestra, which was given, of course, for the benefit of musicians in need, was conducted by Oskar Fried. It was a pronounced success. A Beethoven program was presented, consisting of the "Egmont" overture, the C minor symphony, the "Klärchen" lieder, sung by Claire Dux, of the Royal Opera, and the triple concerto for piano, violin and cello, played by Georg Schumann, Willy Hess and Hugo Dechert.

This new organization, it is true, is made up of heterogenous elements. Nevertheless it is a first class orchestra, and although there have been few rehearsals, there were noteworthy technical finish, precision and rhythmic

THE AMERICAN LUNCHEON CLUB ENTERTAINING CHIEF MAYOR WERMUTH, OF BERLIN, AT THE HOTEL ADLON ON OCTOBER 1, AMBASSADOR GERARD PRESIDING.

Arthur M. Abell (X) also was present, being a member of the association.

No. 504.
Sonntag, den 4. Oktober 1914.

Berliner Tageblatt.

4. Beiblatt.
Druck und Verlag von Rudolf Mosse in Berlin.

Konservatorium der Musik

Klindworth-Scharwenka

Berlin W., Genthiner Str. 11. Zweiganstalt: Charlottenburg, Uhlandstr. 14.
Eintritt jederzeit. Aufnahme von 11–12½ und 5–6 Uhr.

Stern'sches Konservatorium

Vollständige Ausbildung in allen Fächern der Musik und Dartellungskunst sowie Seminar für die Ausbildung von Musik- u. Schulgesangslehrerinnen u. Lehrern
Gegr. 1850 — Direktor: Professor Gustav Hollaender. — Gegr. 1850
Berlin SW, Bernburger Str. 22a, 23 | Zweiganstalt: Charlottenburg, Kantstr. 8
Eintritt jederzeit — — — Sprechzeit: 11–2, 4–6.

Theater-Konzerte Vergnügungen

Königliches Opernhaus.
135. Abonnements-Vorstellung.
4½ Uhr: Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg.
Marie, die Tochter des Regiments.
Königliches Schauspielhaus.
117. Karten-Reservat.
Das Abonnement ist aufgehoben.
8 Uhr: Bunter Abend.

Theater für Sonntag, den 4. Oktober 1914:
Deutsch. Opernhaus. Charlottbg.
3 Uhr: Freischütz.
8 Uhr: Der Troubadour.
Deutsches Theater.
7½ Uhr: Was ihr wollt.
Kammerspiele.
8 Uhr: Jedermann.
Deutsches Künstler-Theater.
8 Uhr: Gewonnene Herzen.
Gebr.-Herrnfeld-Theater.
8 Uhr Er kommt wieder. Zwei leuchtende Punkte. Ende gut — alles gut!
Komödienhaus.
8 Uhr: Es braust ein Ruf!
Lessing-Theater.
8 Uhr: Der Bibliothekar.
8 Uhr: Mein Leopold.
Luisen-Theater.
8½ Uhr: Die Anna Liese.
8¼ Uhr: Eroder Er. D. heilig. Krieg.
Lustspielhaus.
8¼ Uhr: Graf Pepi.
Residenz-Theater.
8 Uhr: Der Kaiser rief .....
Rose-Theater.
8 Uhr: Am Alter.
8 Uhr: Die Waffen hor.
Schiller-Theater O.
8 Uhr: Das Glück im Winkel.
Schiller-Theater Charlottenburg.
3 Uhr: Weh' dem, der lügt.
8 Uhr: Grüne Ostern.
Thalia-Theater.
7½ Uhr: Kam'rad Männe.
Theater am Nollendorfplatz.
8 Uhr: Immer feste druff!
Veltbühne (Montis Operett-Th.).
3 Uhr: Minna von Barnhelm.
8¼ Uhr: Minna von Barnhelm.
Walhalla-Theater.
8 Uhr: Berlin im Felde.

Theater a. d. Weidendammerbrücke.
Täglich 8 Uhr 10:
Anfang gut — Alles gut.

8 Uhr Casino-Theater. 8 Uhr
Mein Leben dem Vaterland.
Vorher das grosse Spezialtäl.-Progr.

~~Theater Folies Caprice~~
6¾ Possen-Theater 6¾
Blinkfeuer. Londwehrleute.

Theater des Westens.
„Patriotischer Kunstabend"
Sonntag, den 4. Oktober, 8¼ Uhr.
Mitwirkende:
Helene Fehdmer. — Kammersängerin Annie Gura-Hummel. — Ella Jonas-Stockhausen. — Emmy Zimmermann. — Rudolf Christians. — Wilhelm Grimming, Königl. Opernsänger. — Kammersänger Hermann Gura. — Feliz Philippi. — Kapellmeister Bertrand Sänger. — Hermann Sudermann.
Preise d. Plätze: 0.50, 1.—, 1.50, 2.—

Theater am Nollendorfplatz.
Direktion: Anne-Lise Kurmärker u. Pikarde.

Apollo-Theater.
8 Uhr: Die Barbaren, Lustsp. u. Cläns. Buntes Programm.

Urania

Wissenschaftliches Theater.
4 Uhr: Lüttich und das belgische Land. (Halbe Preise.)
8 Uhr: Die Weichsel und die masurischen Seen.

Kaiser-Panorama.
Neu: Besuch von Waschau, Kiew etc. Letzte W.: Belgien.

Kammerspiele, Telloverstrasse 1—4.
Sonntag, den 4. Oktober, Abds. 8 Uhr:
Vaterländischer Vortragsabend
zum Besten notleidender Künstler.
Mitwirkende:
Vilma v. Mayburg, Maria Schneider-Plaut, Lotti Wiek, Dilmar-Dehmel, Kammersänger Kurt Frederich, Professor Hammel, Hermann Valentin, Hans Mühlhofer. Bolo-Bundos-Quartett u. a. m.
Preise d. Plätze: 0.50, 1.00, 1.50, 2.00
Vorverkauf: A. Wertheim, Bote u. Bock, Invalidendank.

UT Lichtspiele
Friedrich-Ecke Taubenstr.
Kurfürstendamm 26
Alexanderplatz
Weinbergsweg 16–17
Moritzplatz
Sohneberg, Hauptstr. 49

Neueste Film-Kriegsberichte
Parade der deutschen Truppen in Brüssel. Kriegsbeute der Armee von Hindenburg. Zerstörungen der Russen bei Augerburg in Ostpreussen und acht andere interessante Kriegsszenen.
Ferner das
erfolgreichste Filmstück, das gewaltige Schauspiel von 1914:
„Es braust ein Ruf wie Donnerhall!"
In der Hauptrolle:
Leo Peukert.

Mozartsaal
Nollendorfplatz
Der erstklassige
Eröffnungs-Spielplan
u. a.
Unser Kaiser —
Unser Stolz.
Markelaine aus dem Leben d. Kaisers, a. Heer u. Marine.
Durch Pulverdampf und Kugelregen.
Die Schlachtgemälde.
Aktuelle Filmkriegsberichte der Lichtspielo.
Sonntags 9—11 Uhr Vorstellung. Eintritt liederzeit.
Eintrittspreis von 50 Pf. an.

Palast-Theater am Zoo.
Täglich 8 Uhr abends
„1914"
Zeitbild mit Gesang in vier Akten von
Otto Reutter u. Max Reichardt
Gesangs-Texte von Otto Reutter.
In Szene gesetzt von
Oberregisseur Valy Arnheim.
Orchester-Leitung:
Kapellmeister Bruno Gellert.
Mit Guido Thielscher
vom Metropol-Theater in der Hauptrolle.
Personen:
Geheimrat Ulrich v. Rödicke, Major d. Landwehr . . Karl Zickner
Helmut, s. Sohn . . . . .
Reg.-Assessor, Paul Ludwig
Fr. Lydia Rossow, Rentiere . . . . . Mary Scheller
Luther, ihr Sohn . . . . . Albert Paulig
Gottlieb Fischer, Gastwirt . . . . . Guido Thielscher
Bertha, s. Frau . . . . . Klara Berger
Hilde } seine Grete } Töchter . . . . . Henny Loges
Paul Fonrnaçon . . . . . E. Pittschau
Erna Flemming, Sprachlehrerin . . . . . Hilde Förster
Fritz Berger, Monteur . . . . . Hans Stock
Kneppke, Schlosser . . . . . Adolf Calvo
Fabian, Klavierspieler . . . . . Ernst Ludwig
Jean, Kellner . . . . . Heinrich Peer
Jette, Dienstmädchen . . . . . Lucie Feis
Knorr, Unteroffiz. . . . . Adolf Schiele
Xaver Brandl-Huber . . . . . Otto Eggerth
Heinrich Krause . . . . . Ernst Fiedler-Spiess.
Preise der Plätze: 3.00, 2.50, 2.00, 1.50, 1.00 M. 50 Pf.
Vorverkauf bei A. Wertheim Invalidendank und an der Theaterkasse von 11—1 Uhr Beethovensaal: Sonntag, den 4. Oktober 1914.

Reinertrag für das Rote Kreuz.
I. Vaterländischer Kunstabend
unter gütiger Mitwirkung von: Hofopernsängerin Emmi Leisner, Pianistin Emilie Lüdemann, Kammersänger J. v. Raatz-Brockmann, Prof. Herm. Deckert (Harmonium), Kgl. Kammervirtuos Otto Lüdemann (Cello), Dr. Alfred Daniel (Rezitation), James Simon (Klavier).
Karten à t. 2, 3, 4 Mk. bei Bote u. Bock, Wertheim und an der Abendkasse.
Veranst. Otto Sauer, Kunstm.

Konzert-Dir.
Konzert i. d. Singakademie am Dienstag, 6 Okt., 8 U. z. Besten d. O. Barnay
Ostpreussen
m. gut. Mitw. v. Martha Stapelfeldt (Ges.), Marie Bergwein (Klav.), Edgar Reinhold (Ges.), Jul. Thornberg (I. Konzertmstr. d. Philh. Orch.), A. W. Leupold (Orgel), Ed. Behm (Begl.)
Kart. z. M. 2, 1½, 1 b. Bote n. Bock, A. Wertheim u. Abendk.

Dom. Donnerstag, den 8. Oktober, 7½ Uhr:
Zum Besten der Nationalstiftung für die Hinterbliebenen der im Kriege Gefallenen und der notleidenden Musiker Berlins.
Konzert
gegeben vom Königl. Hof- und Domchor
unter Leitung seines Direktors Herrn Professor H. Rüdel.
Mitwirkende: Frau L. Rumpler (Sopran), die Herren: Kammersänger K. Sommer, Konzertsänger A. Bietermann, Professor B. Irrgang und das Blüthner-Orchester.
a) Stabat mater (mit deutschem Text) . Franz Schubert
b) Ein deutsches Requiem . . . . . Johannes Brahms.
Karten à 4, 3, 2, 1,50 u. 1 M. bei Bote u. Bock, A. Wertheim, Invalidendank.
Domkäsierei, Portal XI (8—2) und abends an der Kasse

Singakademie. Sonntag, d. 11. Oktober, abends 7½ Uhr:
I. Konzert Notleidender Berliner Künstlerinnen
(Sängerinnen und Gesanglehrerinnen)
Chorleiter: Fritz Rückwerd, Kgl. Musikdirector.
unter gütiger Mitwirkung von Frl. Cebrgie Wietrowetz (Violine) und der Herren Prof. Robert Kahn (Klavier), Max Laurischkus (Klavier u. Orgel), Leo Schrattenholz (Cello).
Programm: Frauenchöre von Mendelssohn (mit Orgel), von Schubert (mit Klavier) u. von Brahms (mit Hörnern u. Harfe), Trios für Klav., Viol. u. Cello von Mozart (G-dur) u. Beethoven (D-dur), Karten zu 3, 2, 1 Mark im Vorverkauf nur in den Musikalienhandlungen von Simrock, Tauentzienstr. 7b u. Breitkopf u. Härtel, Potsdamerstr. 21.

Konzertdirektion Leonard
Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde zu Berlin.

Philharmonie: Donnerstag, den 22. Okt. abds. 8 Uhr:
I. Konzert m. d. Philh. Orch. zur Unterstütz. durch den Krieg in Not geratener Künstler
Beethoven-Abend
Dir. Prof. Ernst Wendel. Sol.: Franz v. Vecsey
Progr.: Egmont-Ouv. — Violinconcert D-dur — V. Symphonie C-moll.
Karten 3, 2, 1 M. b. Bote u. Bock und Kaufhaus des Westens.

Sing-Akademie: Mittwoch, d. 4. Nov., 8 Uhr:
Zum Besten der Kriegskasse des Buhnenvereins.
Erstes Konzert (im Abonnement) d. er.
Kammermusik-Vereinigung der Königl. Kapelle
Mitwirk. Claire Dux, Kgl. Hofopernsangerin.
Bach, 5. brandenb. Konz., Prinz Louis Ferdinand Octett, Beethoven 2 Quintettsätze (Uraufführung).
Abonnem.: 7, 5 M., Einzel: 3, 2, 1. Bote u. Bock, Wertheim, Abendk.

Reichshallen-Theater

Stettiner Sänger.
Anfang 7½ Uhr.
Reichshallen Saal
Grosse Konzert des Reichshallen-Orchesters.

KAMMER LICHT SPIELE
Potsdamer Platz Tauentzienstr.
Neue Kriegsberichte
neue Ost u. West.
Die Kriegsbereitsch. uns. Heeres. Deutsche Militär-Manöverbilder.
„Einer, der nicht wieder kam."
Ein Kriegsbild 1870/71.
m. Henny Porten und das übrige glänzende Programm.
Humor. Kriegs-
Karikaturen.
Die ermässigten Preise bleiben bestehen.
Anfang 3 Uhr.

CINES
Nollendorf-Theater
Täglich:
Deutsche Kriegsmacht
in Wort, Bild und Film.
Vorverkauf bei A. Wertheim.
Täglich 2 Vorstellungen.
Beginn: nachm. 5½ Uhr
abends 8½ Uhr
Kassenöffnung 1 Stund. v. Beginn

Tanz-Institut. Bülowstr. 105 — Egon Mendelsdorff, — Oktoberk. Erwachsene, Kinder. Tel.
Beethovensaal: Sonntag, 4. Oktober, abends 7½ Uhr:
Philharmonie.
Konzert d. Philharmon. Orch.
Dirig. Camillo Hildebrand
m. Benutzg. d. gr. Konzertorgel.
Sol.: Thornberg (Viol.), Sachs (Cello).
Anf. 7 Uhr. Eintritt 1 Mk.

Blüthner-Saal.
Heute Sonntag, den 4. Oktober:
Eröffnungs-Konzert
des Blüthner-Orchesters
zum Besten der Frauen u. Kinder der im Felde stehenden Musiker.
unter gütiger Leitung von Oscar Fried.
Solisten: Nic. Lambinon (Viol.), Ottfr. Zelander (Cello).
Anfang 7½ Uhr. Entree 75 Pf.

Wohnungswechsel:
Felix Dahn
kgl. Regisseur
Dramatischer Unterricht
f. Oper und Schauspiel
Berlin-Halensee Nestorstr. 7 — Tel.: Amt Pfalzb. 6913.
Ecke Kurfürstendamm.

Den Zeitverhältnissen entsprechend
habe ich das Honorar f. Einzelunterricht u. Klassen herabgesetzt.
Sophie Heymann-Engel.

Sinfonie-Abende,
2 Abonnements, 17. Reihe, für diesen Winter zu vergeben. Off. Rh. 4398 bs. d. Expod. d. Bl., Berlin W. 35.

I. K. D.
Meisterabend, Freitag, 9. Oktober, abends 8 Uhr:
zu Gunsten des „Roten Kreuzes"
Altdeutsche Lieder gesungen von
Willi Kewitsch, Martha Oppermann
o. Otto Werth, Unter Mitwirkung von Paul Schramm.
Kart. zu 3, 2 u. 1 M. b. Bote u. Bock, Wertheim, Stahl. Abendk

Konzertdirektion Sachs
Voller Ertrag für notleidende Musiker. Philh. 9 Okt. 8 U.
BURMESTER m. d. Philh. Orch.
Konz.: Bach e-dur, Mendelssohn e-moll, 2 alte Tänze etc.
Dir. C. Hildebrand
Singakademie. 9. u. 12. Okt. 8 U.
Geheimrat Prof. Dr. WILHELM OSTWALD
„Deutschlands Zukunft"
1. 9. X. „Europa unter deutscher Führung"
2. 12. X. „Deutschlands innere Neugestaltung".
Voller Ertrag f. d. Rote Kreuz.
Kammersänger Leo SLEZAK Philharm.
Arien a. Constantin der Meistersinger, Walter Stolzing, Tannhäuser, Lohengrin, Tristan, Siegfried, Tristan verve noticeable in the performances. Further concerts of this new orchestra will be awaited with interest.

Needy Musicians.

Much is being done to relieve the suffering of the thousands of musicians in Germany, who, owing to the war, have lost their positions and means of getting a living. The Berlin Royal Academy of Arts, the Allgemeiner Deutsche Musik Verband, the Verband Konzertierender Künstler Deutschlands, at the head of which is Xaver Scharwenka, have formed committees with the purpose of raising funds to be distributed among the most needy. Of course money is raised most easily and quickly when artists like Culp, Busoni, Hempel, Wüllner, Burmester, and other public idols sing and play for the good cause.

Birth of a Trio.

A new trio has been formed in Berlin by Max Fiedler (piano), Leopold Premyslav (violin), concertmaster of the Royal Opera, and his wife, Eugenie Stoltz-Premyslav (cello). The ability and standing of these three musicians are such that the artistic success of the new organization is assured at the start. Three concerts will be given at Bechstein Hall.

An Operatic Bandmaster.

Richard Sahla, the well known violinist and conductor of the Schaumburg-Lippe Court Orchestra, although sixty years old, has volunteered, and will soon be called to the front at the head of a new military band which has been formed under his direction. Sahla's wife is an American.

Concert and Opera Resumptions.

The Bremen Philharmonic Choir, under the leadership of Ernst Wendel, announces that it will give its regular series of concerts. The program of the first will consists of one of the big Bach cantatas. The Bremen Opera resumed activities September 1, and the receipts of the performances have been very satisfactory.

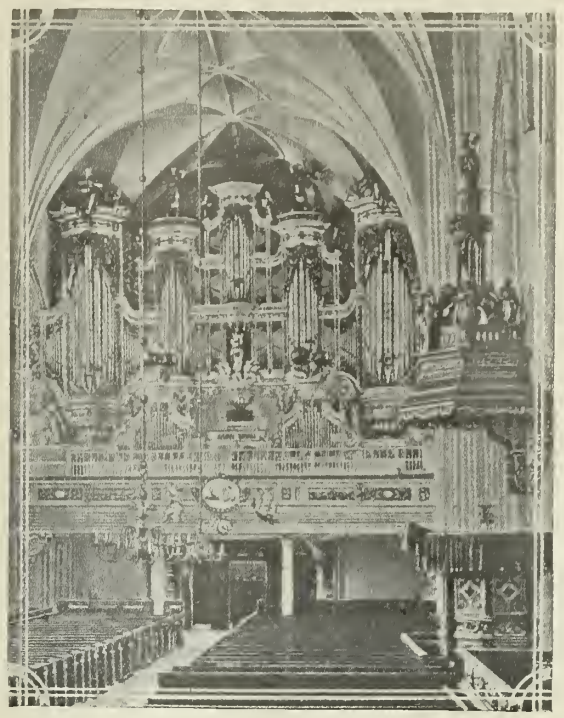
The famous Gewandhaus Concerts of Leipsic are also to be resumed. The management already has decided to engage celebrated artists during the winter, as in ordinary times. The fees, however, are to be reduced one half.

Dresden has sent its quota of artists to the front, the following members of the personnel of the Royal Opera having been called to the army: Soomer, Vogelstrom, Soot, Lötgen, Zador, Staegemann, Emmoldt and Tauber. These men are solo singers. Nevertheless, the performances are being continued, although it is found to be difficult at times to obtain suitable substitutes for the absent ones.

The opera houses of Hamburg and Brunswick have resumed operations, and also from these, numerous prominent members of the vocal and instrumental forces have been called to the field.

Ignatz Waghalter, conductor of the Charlottenburg Opera, having become naturalized, has volunteered his services to the German army and has been accepted.

Most of the opera houses of the cities of Thuringia have reopened, as Weimar, Erfurt, Meiningen and Coburg.



Kaun Violin Suite.

A suite of five charming short pieces for violin by Hugo Kaun have just been published by Zimmermann, of Leipsic. The first, a lovely nocturne, is entitled "Am Gardasee." The second, called "Capri," illustrates in a very characteristic manner the Blue Grotto. This piece is harmonically very interesting in the treatment of the piano, while the violin part consists chiefly of effective cantabiles of a real lyric nature. The third, entitled "Venice," takes us through the lagoons and is a charming gondoliera. The fourth is called "Genoa" and depicts a lively street scene in a very characteristic manner. The final number is called "Naples" and is, of course, a tarantelle, but it is written with an inspiration and a mastery that elevates it far above the commonplace. These five novelties are a most welcome contribution to the current violin literature and they should become popular with the artists.

The American Luncheon Club gave its first luncheon since the outbreak of hostilities at the Hotel Adlon yesterday noon. A surprisingly large number of Americans still are in Berlin, and most of them will remain here during the war. Fully three hundred were present yesterday. There were two guests of honor who were introduced by the American Ambassador, Judge Gerard—Consul General J. C. Lay, who has just succeeded Robert Skinner, and Chief Mayor Wermuth, of Berlin, who delivered a speech in excellent English on the friendly relationship which always has existed between the United States and the fatherland, and expressing his great satisfaction at being a "guest of honor of the Luncheon Club, which represents the most distinguished members of the American Colony in Berlin."

Arthur M. Abell.

The Barmen-Elberfeld Opera repertoire for the past few weeks included "Boheme," "Tosca," "Prophet," "Samson and Delilah," "Rosenkavalier," "Freischütz," "Königskinder," etc.

THE CATHEDRAL IN KOENIGSBERG, PRUSSIA.

Cecil Fanning at Carnegie Hall, Pittsburgh.

No singer could ask for a more sincere demonstration of appreciation than that which was given Cecil Fanning at Carnegie Hall, Pittsburgh, on the evening of October 12. This was Mr. Fanning's second appearance in Carnegie Hall during the past six months. His first appearance had made such an unusual impression that the musicians of Pittsburgh gathered in force to hear this singer. His program, which was of wide range and up to his usual standard of program making, included compositions by Monteverde, Gretry, Schubert, Schumann, Löwe, Liszt, Wolf, Grieg, etc. Throughout the entire evening Mr. Fanning was greeted with round after round of applause, the audience recalling him fourteen times, and before the evening was finished he was made to sing six extra songs. The newspapers were unanimous in their praise of Mr. Fanning and his sympathetic accompanist. The following were selected from many articles regarding this Pittsburgh recital:

There are few more finished or consumately artistic singers of songs or chamber singers before local music lovers today. Not only has he a voice of pleasing quality and a thorough handling of his natural resources, but splendid command of styles, a finesse of delivery, emotional grasp and understanding, and a consistent, finished and admirably planned scheme of interpretation that is the joy of the connoisseur.—Pittsburgh Dispatch, October 13, 1914.

This gifted young baritone sang in Pittsburgh a number of years ago. His artistic growth has been rapid. There was a time when it seemed that Mr. Fanning was satisfied simply to be a prodigy. But now he has passed far beyond this danger line and has entered the field of the elect. On the technical side he has acquired a fine mastery, a beautiful pianissimo and perfect diction being among his achievements in this respect. And on the interpretative side there is shown imagination controlled by a keen sense of artistic values.—Pittsburgh Post, October 13, 1914.

His enunciation in Italian, French and German as well as English is unusually clear and distinct, enabling him in the dramatic songs of Carl Löwe to make some unusual effects. Indeed, it is by his dramatic qualities that Mr. Fanning makes his greatest appeal. It is obvious that the singer is in close sympathy with Loewe, and in this composer's dramatic masterpieces, "Edward" and "Der Erlkönig," he made his strongest impression.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, October 13, 1914.

Katharine Goodson at London Concerts.

Katharine Goodson, who made her first appearance of the season at the first of the symphony concerts in the Royal Albert Hall, London, on October 4, will be heard at Queen's Hall, on October 24, at the ballad concerts, and again on November 21 in the same series. November 23 she will start on a short tour of ten concerts in a few of the most important Provincial cities. Her final appearance in England before sailing for America will be on December 10, when she is engaged to play at the third concert of the Royal Philharmonic Society. A few days later she will sail for New York, where she will give the first recital of her forthcoming American tour at Carnegie Hall on January 2.

Of Miss Goodson's recent performance at the Albert Hall of the ever popular Grieg concerto, the Daily Telegraph speaks of the solo part being "played [illegible] sense of its beauty and poetry."

Pilzer Will Give New York Recital.

Maximillian Pilzer, violinist, will be heard in recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, Sunday evening, December 6.

The Brunswick Opera has been open uninterruptedly since August 28. The works heard were: "Lohengrin," "The Flying Dutchman," "Freischütz," "Waffenschmied," "The Tales of Hoffmann," "Fidelio," "Tannhäuser," "Iphigenie" (Gluck), etc.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERTI
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

King Clark Studios
Kurfürstendamm 63, Berlin, W.
Cable Address: KINGARK, BERLIN

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent. For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, :: :: :: :: Berlin, W., 9

PAUL ALTHOUSE
TENOR METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
Exclusive Management:
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York City

WILLIAM WADE HINSHAW
Now in America
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIO RECITALS
Address Personally Residence, Hotel Ansonia, New York

American Concert Tour of
—AND—
H. U. MAXWELL
Brilliant Baritone
Ch. De HARRACK
EMINENT COURT PIANIST
Address, Howard Pew, care of Musical Courier, Manager of recent tour of Arthur Nikisch and London Symphony Orchestra; also A. F. Wands—Per. Mgr. Middle West, Cleveland, O

VICTOR WITTGENSTEIN
CONCERT PIANIST
Tour Now Booking
Address: 230 West 107th Street, New York
KNABE PIANO USED

DRAMATIC COSTUME SONG RECITAL

HENRIETTA FOSTER WESCOTT
SOPRANO
AMERICAN INDIAN SONGS
OLDE SONGS
CLASSICS - ORATORIO
TEACHER OF VOICE PLACEMENT
100 CARNEGIE HALL - - NEW YORK

Jerome Uhl
BASS-BARITONE

"It is simply gorgeous singing, that is all!"—Oscar Hammerstein.
"This popular baritone is deserving of the epithet great."—Toronto World.
"By far the best in the casts I have attended at the Century."—E. Marzialle (alternate baritone with Titto Ruffo in Spain).
Management, R. E. Johnston
1451 Broadway, New York Phone 608 Bryant

WINNIFRED BAMBRICK
Canadian Harpist
"—she has enormous virtuosity."
New York Herald
"—exhibits surprising vigor of style."
New York Times
"She aroused sincere enthusiasm."
Brooklyn Daily Eagle
Management: M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue -:- New York

Harold Henry's Recital in New York.

Harold Henry gave a piano recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Thursday afternoon, October 29. Combined with a cleancut technic were a seriousness of purpose and a scholarly grasp of his tasks.

The opening number of the program, the Schumann sonata, op. 22, served to introduce Mr. Henry as a good technician and a versatile interpreter of mood.

Grouped together and immediately following were the Brahms intermezzo, op. 116, No. 6, which was given with dignity and feeling; the Schubert impromptu, op. 90, No. 4, and the Chopin fantasie, which require and received a more delicate degree of shading and tonal color.

In the imposing prelude, choral and fugue of Cesar Franck, the pianist found a still greater task. This he met with much feeling for its intrinsic beauty.

The final group included the Debussy "Les sons et les parfumes tournent dan l'air du soir." The usual Debussy dissonances and unusual harmonies in this were delivered by the pianist with ease and clarity. "To Mount Monadnock" (Lewis M. Isaacs) was greeted with especial applause by the audience, and "Tabatière á Musique" (Friedman) and "Kobold" (Grieg) struck the fancy of the listeners, particularly through their "characteristique" nature and insinuating and picturesque presentation.

Enjoyable readings of the Grieg nocturne, Dohnanyi's rhapsody, op. 11, No. 2, and "Vallee d'Obermann," Liszt, concluded the program.

A good sized and appreciative audience listened to this recital of Mr. Henry, although he is only fairly well known in the East. It is a good indication, indeed, when a young artist can interest and hold his audience through a program such as he presented on this occasion.

Mr. Henry was particularly fortunate in his selection of the piano, a Baldwin, which he used on this occasion.

Koemmenich Resumes Oratorio Rehearsals.

Louis Koemmenich, safely returned from the war zone with his entire family, has resumed rehearsals of the New York Oratorio Society. The attendance at the opening rehearsal was larger than at any other first rehearsal, and the members of the chorus responded enthusiastically to the demands of their conductor. December 3, Mendelssohn's "Elijah" will be performed, Florence Hinkle, Margaret Keyes, Paul Althouse and Clarence Whitehill appearing as soloists.

LOUIS KOEMMENICH.

$1,425 for "Irish Love."

A substantial demonstration of the popularity of "Irish Love," a musical sketch written and arranged by Cecil Fanning and H. B. Turpin, was given in Columbus, Ohio, on the evening of October 21 and 22, when the receipts for two performances of this musical sketch amounted to $1,425 and were only limited to this amount by the seating capacity of the hall.

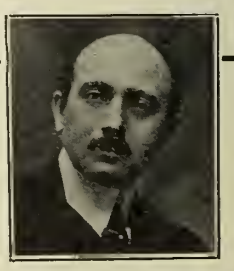
Messrs. Turpin and Fanning say that this play is only an excuse for the presentation of a program of the best Irish songs and duets, but the dialogue is so cleverly written that the whole is an hour and a half of unalloyed pleasure. The characters are taken by Cecil Fanning and Greta Torpadie, with appropriate costumes and stage setting.

This play has proved such a success that it has been secured for many of the prominent concert courses throughout the States for this season.

Hermann WEIL
Great Wagnerian Baritone
Metropolitan Opera House, New York
Hans Sachs—Amfortas—Wotan
Roles in Bayreuth Festivals
For Concert Dates Address Exclusively
ANNIE FRIEDBERG
Metropolitan Opera House Building, - - New York

GEORGE DOSTAL
DISTINGUISHED BOHEMIAN TENOR
First American Concert Tour Season 1914-1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, NEW YORK

MADAME
Artha Williston
Dramatic Soprano



First appearance this season at the Maine Music Festivals in October, singing Elijah
Management:
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

ELEANOR SPENCER
PIANIST

SECOND AMERICAN TOUR THIS SEASON
Management, Antonia Sawyer
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

BARITONE

Concert, Oratorio, Recitals, Etc.
BERNHARD STEINBERG
Mr. Steinberg is not a novice in the concert hall. He was heard in the Hippodrome last year, in conjunction with his famous colleague, Sirota, and last summer created no little stir in London.—New York Press.
The artist possesses a splendid baritone voice, well schooled, and with such breath control that he is enabled to produce grand effects.—Evening Staats-Zeitung. (Translation.)
Lecture Recital on HEBREW TRADITIONAL MUSIC
For terms and dates address
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.

NEW YORK BREVITIES.

Lenox Academy of Music Concert—Tonkünstler Society Concert—Elizabeth Topping Plays—Hattie Clapper Morris Artist Pupils Sing—Mary T. Williamson Busy—Mme. Dambmann's Pupil Sings—A Klibansky Artist Pupil—Ziegler Quartet in Philadelphia—Mary Wagner Gilbert Plays—Noble Recital—Organ Items

The opening concert of the Lenox Academy of Music at Carnegie Chamber Music Hall, October 28, brought forth a program of eighteen numbers, consisting of vocal, instrumental and orchestral compositions. The director of this institution, H. H. Reppert (a Dvorák pupil), conducts a very successful and busy school in the midst of the musical Italian quarter of New York, at 172 East 117th street. The visitor is impressed with the seriousness and thoroughness of the work. Classes in sight reading in musical dictation, harmony, etc., supplement the individual instruction.

At this concert an orchestra of boys from nine to eleven played, and another orchestra of boys from thirteen to fifteen appeared. They combined in several numbers, consisting of standard music, such as the march from "Tannhäuser," "Lucia," potpourri, etc. Of the soloists, those who especially deserved mention are: W. Johnson, baritone; Laura Simmons, soprano, who sang very well; Elsie Lawson, pianist, who seems an ambitious young pianist with a musical touch; and Leopold Alberti, a young violinist, who played Artot's "Souvenir de Bellini" very well. Francis Marino played a piccolo solo effectively, and Louis Biamonte deserves mention for his playing of a flute solo. Miss Lambert's first appearance as soprano soloist was succesful. Other soloists were Pauline Cocquelet, Louis d'Agostino, Minnie Person, Alfonso Avvisati, John Pospisil, Sarah Rothman, Stella Lambert and Frances Vetter.

Mr. Reppert conducted the orchestra and showed a thorough understanding of desired effects.

Tonkünstler Society Concert.

At Assembly Hall, October 27, the first musicale of the Tonkünstler Society took place, with the following artists, who participated in solo and ensemble music: Ludmilla Vojacek-Wetche, Alois Trnka, Adelaide Fischer, Herman Martonne, Mabel Phipps, August Roebbelen, August Schmidt, William Ebann, and Ward Lewis as accompanist. Mr. Trnka's playing of a Schumann sonata was careful and conscientious. A quintet by Dvorák was delightful, Mr. Ebann's work being particularly good. Ward Lewis showed himself to be an expert pianist, as might be expected from one who has been associated with David Bispham.

The next concert of the society will take place on November 10 at Memorial Hall, Brooklyn.

Elizabeth Topping at Exposition.

Elizabeth Topping, the pianist, played the following solos at the Country Life Permanent Exposition, Grand Central Terminal, October 31: Ballade, Chopin; "Hark, Hark, the Lark!", "The Erl King" (Schubert-Liszt) and "La Campanella, (Liszt). Miss Topping's brilliant playing is well known to New Yorkers. She gains extended reputation with every successive appearance, for she is entitled to a high place among the piano virtuosa of America. She has the poetic temperament to play a Chopin ballade well, and the technical force and aplomb necessary for Liszt's "Campanella." The Saturday afternoon recitals at this Exposition are always interesting and worth attending.

Two Morris Artist-Pupils.

Hattie Clapper Morris is happy over the reports which come to her of the success of Margaret Keyes, contralto, at Springfield, Ill., where she gave a recital October 13. An artist of Miss Keyes' caliber shows her thoroughness in preparing for public appearances by constant coaching, such as she does with Mrs. Morris. In fact, all artists are continually studying. At Akron, Ohio, October 20, Miss Keyes also had very great success.

Addie Howell, of Charleston, S. C., has a lovely voice and charming personality. She, too, has made successful public appearances, and has for ten years past studied periodically under Mrs. Morris. Quoting Mrs. Morris, "Her singing is a perfect joy."

Mary T. Williamson Busy Teaching.

Twice a week the Leschetizky exponent, Mary T. Williamson, teaches in the Hartridge School, Plainfield, N. J., where she instructs a good sized class of pianists. Miss Williamson's superior piano playing is too little heard in public, and this is because she is so busy and successful as a teacher, both in Greater New York and suburbs.

Angeline Cappelano Sings.

Mme. Dambmann's soprano pupil, Angeline Cappelano, recently sang at a bazaar, given at the Church of the Lady of Mount Carmel, Tenth avenue, Mt. Vernon. Miss Cappelano is an ambitious young artist who makes good. Her name has been mentioned frequently in the columns of the Musical Courier, in connection with successful artistic appearances. She plans to give a New York recital soon, assisted by her brother, who is a cornet virtuoso. Edwina Davis was the accompanist at the bazaar.

Cooper-Marefield in Buffalo.

Two artist-pupils of Sergei Klibansky, Jean V. Cooper and Mrs. Marefield, appeared at a recent concert under the auspices of the local Red Cross organization of Buffalo, with very pronounced success. Some splendid press notices of their singing will be later reproduced.

Ziegler Quartet in Philadelphia.

Lucille Love is the soprano of the Ziegler Quartet, now appearing in "Ireland, a Nation," at Philadelphia and elsewhere. Miss Love, who is not to be confused with the moving picture actress of the same name, sends her friends miniature cards from various cities visited by the quartet.

Mary Wagner Gilbert Plays.

At Carnegie Hall, October 17, Mary Wagner Gilbert, pianist and instructor, gave a studio recital with a program made up of works by classic and modern composers. Mrs. Gilbert played with that animation and verve associated with all she does. A technic, capable of interpreting the most difficult music, is, in her case, combined with thorough appreciation of the composition. Furthermore, she plays with decidedly intellectual appreciation, and these qualities as a pianist she naturally passes on to her pupils.

Noble Organ Recital.

T. Tertius Noble's organ recitals at St. Thomas' Church, New York, Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue, are given every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. The programs are never more than an hour in length and are invariably made up of standard original works and transcriptions for the organ. At the recital on All Saints' Day, a Handel concerto was the opening number. To this Mr. Noble composed an original cadenza, which is still in manuscript. "Pastorale Sorrentina," by Pietro Yon, was also played by Mr. Noble, and the following program note by this organist is quoted concerning the composition:

"This charming and plaintive piece by the eminent organist of St. Francis Xavier, New York, is an example of the modern Italian school."

Mr. Noble is very happy in his New York work, and radiates that spirit at all times and in all places.

Organ Items.

Twenty-eight students are this year registered at the Trinity School of Church Music, Felix Lamond, director. Seven of these are graduates from the following universities: Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell, and two are women. Considering that this is only the second year of this training school for organists and choirmasters, this is indeed a particularly good record.

Eleven or twelve hundred people listened to the opening organ recital at Ethical Culture Auditorium, November 1, when organist Gottfried H. Federlein played a program of works by Guilmant, Grieg, Massenet, Wagner, Friml and Baldwin. He expects to continue the recitals Sundays at 4 o'clock during the present month.

An unusually good program has been prepared for the special mid-day musical services that are held each season at St. Paul's Chapel, Trinity Parish, by Edmund Jaques, organist and choirmaster, in cooperation with the vicar, Dr. W. Montague Geer. Attendance at this series has grown year by year as is shown by the totals for the last three years. In the season of 1912-1913 the congregations at ten services totalled 8,079; nine services in 1912-1913 had a total attendance of 9,181; while last season, when there were nine services, the attendance was 11,491.

The first service will take the character of Thanksgiving and an English harvest festival, when a new anthem by T. Tertius Noble, dedicated to Mr. Jacques, will be sung for the first time. Then comes the "Christmas Eve service," Wednesday, December 23, at noon. Following that, nine cantatas will be performed, in most cases the composer assisting at the organ. Mr. Noble's "Gloria Domini" is one of these, and seems to be a regular annual feature at this church, having been given there regularly.

The 389th public organ recital at City College by Prof. Samuel A. Baldwin, on November 4, had on the program works by Edward F. Johnston and J. Frank Frysinger, both of whom are active in American musical life. Works by Rheinberger, Bach, Mozart, Hollis and von Weber were played. Next Sunday, November 8, some of the same composers with Dvorák, Thiele and others appear on the program.

Notes.

Tomijiro Asai, the Japanese tenor, has issued a four-page leaflet with pictures of himself and eight press notices from Washington, Augusta, Portland, Asbury Park, etc. Mr. Asai gives a unique recital in costume. He has appeared at many prominent colleges and summer resorts of America, from Palm Beach, Fla., to the White Mountains, N. H.

Mrs. Lowell Thayer Field issued invitations to meet Havrah Hubbard, of Boston, at one of his interesting "Opera Talks" at 1013 Carnegie Hall, November 1. The card of Jessamine Harrison Irvine was enclosed.

Clara E. Thoms, of Buffalo, arranged an evening of song for the Syrian Church, of Buffalo, under the patronage of Bishop Colton, at the Hotel Statler ballroom, October 8. Clara Druar, contralto, bore the brunt of the program, singing works by various composers, concluding with two songs by Mrs. Thoms. Over a thousand people attended this recital, so it was a wonderful success. It was recently remarked in a group of society leaders, "We used to be invited to Mrs. Thoms' recitals, but now we cheerfully pay a dollar to hear her pupils sing. The fact speaks for itself." Another Thoms pupil, Marion Dohney Cole, is singing in Chicago. Frances Schofield is engaged for grand opera and is coaching with Mrs. Thoms, following which she goes to the Pacific Coast. Mary Tennant has recently assumed a position as church soloist in Buffalo.

These items show the success of the Thoms artist-pupils.

Marta Milinowski, pianist, gave a recital at the Twentieth Century Club, Buffalo, which was a very enjoyable affair. Beside her program of fourteen piano compositions, she had to play encores, including pieces by Schumann and Mendelssohn. Miss Milinowski's coming recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, is attracting attention.

Wesley Weyman, the well known American pianist, owing to the war complications, has cancelled his European concert tour. He plans to give a course of six weekly discourses on the "Theory of Piano Technic" based on the laws formulated by Tobias Matthay. Mr. Weyman expects also to teach the piano until his departure in midwinter for his concert tour in South America.

Evelyn Starr, the young Canadian violinist, pupil of Leopold Auer, will give a recital at Aeolian Hall during the latter part of this month.

Hemus Recital.

Following is the program of Percy Hemus' second New York recital of songs by American composers, at Aeolian Hall, Friday, November 6, at 8.15 P. M.:

Hail, Ye Tyme of Holiedays (Chrystmasse).....Gena Branscombe
There was a King of Liang (from the Chinese)..Gena Branscombe
I am the God Thor (King Olaf).....Carl Busch
How Lang and Dreary (from Sprays of Heather) Edna Rosalind Park
There was a Bonnie Lass (from Sprays of Heather).....
Edna Rosalind Park
Invictus .....Bruno Huhn
The Day Is Done.....Charles Gilbert Spross
The Pirate Song.....Henry F. Gilbert
When I Bring to You Colored Toys.....John Alden Carpenter
When to Sleep I Must.....Mark Andrews
The Fiddler of Dooney.....Mark Andrews
The Forgotten Land.....Harriet Ware
(Accompanied by string quartet.)
Flower Rain.....Edwin Schneider
The Drink of Life (MS.).....Mary Helen Brown
Mexicana (MS.) .....Ward-Stephens
Identity (MS.) .....Emil Hahn
Mother o' Mine.....Arthur Claassen
(Accompanied by string quartet.)
Con Amore.....Fay Foster
Peace, Ye Martyred Ones.....Fay Foster
(Written for and dedicated to Mr. Hemus.)
I Dreamed and Wept a-Dreaming.....A. Walter Kramer
Two Trivial Songs.....Harriet Ware
Wind and Lyre.....Harriet Ware

Anderson Artists' Bookings.

Attached below are a few Anderson artists' bookings:

Marie Kaiser, soprano, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, November 12; Worcester Oratorio Society, in "St. Christopher," November 20.

Emma Nagel, soprano, New Brunswick, N. J., November 10; Jersey City, N. J., November 12.

Christine Schutz, contralto, Albany, November 24; Pittsburgh, November 27; Fall River, February 15; Halifax, N. S., February 16; Buffalo Orpheus Club, April 12.

William H. Pagdin, tenor, Boston, April 4.

Andrea Sarto, bass-baritone, Halifax, N. S., November 23; Syracuse, November 30; Minneapolis, December 6; Topeka, December 8; Salina, December 10; Wichita, December 13; Lindsborg, December 14; Chicago Apollo Club, February 22; Chicago Art and Travel Club, March 23; Boston, April 13.

Morse-Rummel, violinist, Jersey City, November 12; Buffalo, December 10.

Rebecca Davidson, pianist, Greensburg, January 10.

Nothing Doing.

"Jim offered to bet me he could pronounce Przemysl, Czestochowa-Kalisz and Eydtkuhnen more correctly that I could."

"Did you take the bet?"

"Certainly not. Where do you suppose we were going to get a referee?"—Baltimore American.

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse • Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care New York Office, Musical Courier)

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Universite - - - PARIS

ELIZABETH MACK
GESTURE DRAMATIC ACTION
FRENCH AND ENGLISH READINGS
Returning to America November 1914.
ADDRESS, CARE OF MUSICAL COURIER

Wager SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
39 Rue de Prony (Parc Monceau) - - PARIS

THE DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France
(Champs Elysées)
LANGUAGE, ART, MUSIC
Until War Is Over—Branch School, New York City
Address, Care Musical Courier

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter, 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
(Formerly of Paris)
Will teach in N. Y. after Dec. 1st.
Address care of Martha Greason, Sec'y, 506 W. 111th St., New York

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
who will sing to his own accompaniment is now available for recitals.
First Chicago appearance December 14.
New York Studio, No. 100 Carnegie Hall
A Few Pupils Received
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

MINNEAPOLIS SYMPHONY SEASON INAUGURATED

Orchestra Gives Fine Account of Itself—Conductor and Players Receive Cordial Welcome—Pop Concerts Also Started—Thursday Musical Program.

Minneapolis, Minn., October 27, 1914.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra opened its twelfth season on Friday evening, October 23, at the Auditorium. The program consisted of the F minor symphony of Tschaikowsky, overture "Rienzi," Wagner, and the suite, op. 19, by Dohnanyi, for orchestra. Louise Homer, contralto, was the soloist.

The orchestra has been materially improved by twenty new men. Emil Oberhoffer has worked carefully and conscientiously for twelve years to get a perfect orchestra and he is nearing that high goal. The "Rienzi" overture was played with great spirit and finish, revealing a decided improvement in the brass section. The suite of Dohnanyi was a most delightful number. This was, according to the program statement, played in America for the first time; it has individuality and a charming character, and will bear many repetitions at these concerts. The symphony of Tschaikowsky was played here for the third time.

The orchestra was the recipient of tremendous applause when the curtain was raised. Emil Oberhoffer bowed again and again and motioned for the men to stand and receive their share of the plaudits.

ORCHESTRAL POP CONCERTS.

The first concert of the first series of the popular concerts given by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra took place at the Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, October 25. The program opened with the "Coronation March," by Svendsen, followed by Haydn's "Military" symphony. Though but the second concert of the season, the men played as one individual and the ensemble was splendid. The "Peer Gynt" suite of Grieg was given a beautiful reading. Ross Jungnickel's arrangement of the Romance from the second concerto of Wieniawski for violins was played by all the first violins of the orchestra. The effect was sonorous and pleasing; the tone quality was beautiful. The "Kaiser" waltz, by Johann Strauss, closed the program. The orchestra under its able director acquitted itself with great credit. It is constantly bringing honor to itself, to its director and to the city.

THURSDAY MUSICAL PROGRAM.

The second program of the season was given by the Thursday Musical at the First Baptist Church the afternoon of October 22. In this report I wish to mention first the accompanists, Kate Mork, Mary Allen, Meta Fust-Willoughby and Louise Chapman. These excellent players are invariably spoken of at the very end of a program, and I wonder how so good a program could have been given without the real background supplied by these fine pianists.

Marion Austin-Dunn opened the program with an organ solo, Dethier's "Theme and Variations" (which Dethier himself played at the dedication of the pipe organ in the auditorium) and a nocturne composed by Spaulding Stroughton. Mrs. Dunn is a sister of Florence Austin, the violinist of New York, and she always acquits herself in a finished and musicianly manner. The second number consisted of two beautiful songs, Brahms' "Sapphic Ode" and Tschaikowsky's "Pilgrim Song," both pleasingly sung by Mollie Gleason-Mulheran. Carolyn Clark, violinist, followed. She chose as her numbers three compositions by Kreisler, "Liebesfreud," "Liebeslied" and "Schon Rosmarin." She played well. Alice Widener Colwell sang in a sweet soprano voice a group of songs by Monroe, Schindler, Gretchaninow, Rogers, Leoni and Rummel. Ethel Alexander, pianist, played Balakirew's "The Lark" and Rubinstein's "Valse Caprice" in a brilliant and expressive manner. The program was concluded by a vocal duet, sung by Kathleen Hart-Bibb and Alberta Fisher-Ruettel. This charming selection from Delibes' "Lakme" was sympathetically rendered and these two altogether charming singers were accorded a hearty round of applause.

NORTHWESTERN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

Ethel Alexander, of the conservatory piano department, who has, for the past two years, been studying with Josef Lhevinne in Berlin, made her first public appearance this season at the regular fortnightly concert of the Thursday Musicale at the First Baptist Church, October 22. Miss Alexander also appeared upon a program at the Stanley Hall vesper service on Sunday last on the occasion of the peace address of Dr. John W. Powell.

The most important conservatory event of the coming week is the expression recital by John Seaman Garns, director of the school of expression, in Conservatory Hall, Saturday morning, October 31, at 11 o'clock. Mr. Garns will be assisted by Ethel Alexander, pianist. The recital is free to the public.

Marguerite Mathieson, Selma Anderson, Alpha Kelsey, Ethel Carlson, Ardis Lofgren, Maude Knight, Margaret Bopp and Margaret Zeney, pupils of the piano, expression, violin and voice departments, will appear in a student recital on Wednesday afternoon, October 28.

Franklin W. Krieger, director of the conservatory piano department, appeared in a recent concert given by the Daughters of the American Revolution, at the University Club. He also played at the annual Schubert concert, Tuesday evening, at the Town and Country Club. Mr. Krieger was also the artist at a private musicale given by Ella Richards at her home on Dayton avenue, October 21, Brahms compositions being the feature of the program.

Credits are given conservatory students for attendance upon symphony orchestra concerts and is obligatory in the case of those who are completing any course in the music school.

John Beck, assistant in the conservatory organ department, has organized a boys' choir at St. Stephen's Church where he is organist and choir director.

The first of David Patterson's series of illustrated lectures bearing on the programs of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra took place on Wednesday evening at Conservatory Hall. He was assisted at the piano by Ethel Alexander and John Beck. The lectures will be given every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and will be based on the symphony programs and the Beethoven concerts to be given by the orchestra this season, and are open to the public at a merely nominal fee.

The Northwestern Repertory Players, which organization last year presented a series of six plays at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium and six programs under the auspices of various churches and clubs, has reorganized with the following officers: President, John Holbrook; secretary-treasurer, Carrie Rolph; stage director and manager, John Seaman Garns.

RUTH ANDERSON.

Flonzaley Quartet Ready for Eighth Tour.

The members of the Flonzaley Quartet have arrived from Europe for their eighth American tour. Loudon Charlton, the quartet's manager, states that the subscription for the New York series is larger than ever before, while the bookings throughout the country will keep the organization in America until the close of the season. The Flonzaley Quartet's first concert will be given in Aeolian Hall, New York, Monday evening, December 7.

Adela Bowne Goes to Europe.

Adela Bowne, soprano, with her husband, Henry Philip Kirby, the well known architect, will be passengers for Europe on the steamship Carpathia today. Their ultimate destination is the Island of Capri, where the Kirbys have a beautiful villa. Mrs. Bowne expects to remain in Europe a short time, and plans to give several concerts under Red Cross auspices. She has won many warm admirers for her beautiful art and gracious personality.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN AMERICA ENTIRE SEASON
MANAGEMENT, HARRY CULBERTSON, CHICAGO

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

OSCAR SEAGLE
In America Season 1914-1915
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

REGINA de SALES
TEACHER OF SINGING
Formerly at 40 rue de Villejust, Paris
NOW LOCATED IN NEW YORK
Studios: 124 West 82nd Street, 'Phone Schuyler 7511
Reception hours: Tuesdays, 3-4
1013 Carnegie Hall, Thursday mornings.

An Open Letter From

PAUL SAVAGE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Carnegie Hall New York City

Because of many written requests, I am making this effort to condense into a single article, the principles that I use in my work

I wish to identify myself with those teachers who believe that no person, who cannot himself sing, has the slightest right to attempt to teach singing, and that those now attempting to teach singing because they have had musical training, such as violinists, church organists, choir directors, pianists, accompanists, and orchestral leaders, who cannot themselves sing, are doing untold harm and are nearly bringing to naught the efforts of the real teachers.

The foundation of artistic singing is laid by the pupil's striving to imitate the example set him by the teacher. If the teacher cannot sing, he cannot create the example, and there is no other form of instruction that is of the slightest value in foundation work. Suppose, for instance, that the pupil has a bad quality. Only a person, who sings well, can create for him the example of a better one. This example he should follow up to the time that his development is marked enough for his voice to take on a distinctly individual quality and character of its own. For an accompanist to claim that he can create an example for the pupil to follow, by use of the piano, or to claim that any amount of argument or explanation will suffice, in place of the sung tone, is to brand himself as unfit to be relied upon from the standpoint of either his intelligence or veracity. Such a teacher should be made to attempt the study of languages with a dumb person. Instrumentalists, who do not sing yet attempt to teach singing, may be, if they have had excellent cultivation, good coaches, but singing teachers they are not, and they should not be allowed to accept money, unless working in their legitimate fields as coaches, accompanists, etc.

I have proven to my own satisfaction that so called instruction, which attracts the pupil's attention to the throat, is not only misleading but harmful; that conscious efforts to open the throat, hold the tongue in certain positions, perform something that is called a register, or to go through any of the thousand and one tricks suggested by the mechanical teacher, are not only wrong but stupid, and will most certainly bring failure.

Education is not the accumulation of facts but the development of one's faculties, and the development should be such that the effort of to-day prepares one for the performance of to-morrow. If the performance is to be artistic, then the technical preparation must be arranged so that, from the very start, the germ of the art is there. If I define art as expressed in singing, I might say that a mental appreciation or understanding of the text and music, of that which I am interpreting, causes certain emotions to be experienced by me, which I control by the will, and attempt, through the use of words, rhythm, and differences in time, qualities, volumes, and pitches of tone, to perform for the listener.

As all performance is by means of our physical make-up, that is the first thing to be considered. Instead of its being a complicated, consciously controlled effort, that, even in the early stages, fixes the mind on the throat, tongue, lips, palate, diaphragm, resonators, etc., the physical part can all be comprised in a standing position, which, because it perfectly balances the physique, relieves it of all strain. In this position the entire equipment, necessary for either health or singing, will instantly answer all demands made upon it by the mind, whether of diaphragm, larynx, throat, tongue, resonators, palate, or lips, without the mind's concerning itself, even in the slightest degree, with anything mechanical, and the mind can absolutely lose itself in the things it wishes the machine or physique to perform. These I will immediately describe under their separate headings:

The mind wishes the machine, or physique, to perform in the realm of art not mechanics. Therefore the mind will be fixed not on the muscles of the body or throat, or on any position or shape that it would like them to take, but instead on the things that constitute the art, namely 1 pronunciation, 2 enunciation, 3 pitch, 4 rhythm, 5 qualities, 6 differences in time, 7 differences in volume.

I believe therefore, that any technical training, that is to equip one for artistic singing, must be based on these principles.

Any effort to consciously control the muscles is purely mechanical and must be controlled by a precise mechanical frame of mind, which is exactly opposite to the ever varying plastic frame of mind necessary to artistic effort.

When we stand to sing, two kinds of work must be done, physical and mental. If, as I claim, the mind must lose itself in the psychological or mental side, how is the physical side to be looked after? Purely by a standing position. What is this standing position? Merely a straight backbone. To attain this, let us first do the opposite. Stand with feet together, with nose and chin pointing upward, because the back of the neck has fallen in, causing the back of the head to be lowered. Allow the body to slump so that the chest is flat and the abdomen sagging and protruding. The arms may hang in any way. Now, without breathing, begin to straighten the back of the neck by raising the back of the head as if to stretch out the backbone until the back of the neck presses firmly against the collar and one begins to go through the process of imitating a double chin without quite making one. This will lower the nose and chin to a point where the eyes look exactly on a level. The chest will come up as a result of straightening the backbone, from the back of the head to the middle of the shoulders, and the abdomen will be drawn up and back in response to the lifting of the chest.

Then breathe. If the action has been followed accurately, the chest is quiet and the diaphragm, or MOTOR, is active, going out to cause inhalation and contracting to expel the air. This is the precise action of the MOTOR for singing, and it need not be a bit more strenuous at any time, at least not consciously so. The most dramatic phrases are simply reflected as emotional climaxes, and not in the form of muscular rigidity or effort. The full grown person, standing this way to breathe, does work equivalent to lifting 500 pounds from the floor an inch with each breath. This knowledge should forever dispose of the ridiculous and oftimes harmful antics that teachers pass on to their pupils as necessary to tone support.

After the physical part of singing, as represented in the standing position, has accounted for the MOTOR or diaphragm, the remaining work of singing is purely psychological or mental, and can be separated under the following heads:

The VIBRATOR, or larynx, which turns the air, sent upward by the motor, into a sound on a certain pitch.

The RESONATOR, which enlarges the sound and is the chief factor in changing the sound of the pitch from the realm of noise into the realm of tone by giving it quality.

The ARTICULATOR, which is the last point of control before the tone leaves the performer and goes to the audience, and which shapes the tone into words by use of the mouth, tongue, and lips.

The vibrator, resonator, and articulator, if employed artistically, are used in the following manner:

We think a pitch and the vibrator or larynx is instantly ready to give it to us.

We think a quality and the idea travels over the nerves to the palate, resonators, and throat, which instantly shape themselves into a mould, which, when filled by tone, stamps on the tone the shape of this mould, therefore the idea that created the mould.

We think a word and another mould is formed, which in turn is filled with the tone now imbued with quality.

In this manner the mental processes of pitch, quality, and pronunciation are carried out as a purely psychological process, and are a result not of tone production but of thought production, and will take place at the instigation of the mind, whether tone is produced or not.

As I said before, the mechanical thing is the standing position and this should be watched for a time in a mirror. Because this standing position is a perfect poise of muscles, there is no antagonistic strain in the singing apparatus to be overcome by the mind, or to attract the attention of the mind.

It is scientifically true that, in thinking mechanically, we have in the mind a picture of what we want the body and throat muscles to do, or shapes that we hope we have been able to cause the body, throat, mouth, pharynx, resonators, etc., to take. By constant repetition of these thoughts we form functions in the brain, whose only use can be to reproduce the above stated muscular actions or shapes. The more we persist in these processes of thought, the stronger and more automatic the functions become.

Let us put a song before one of these deluded students, mechanically taught in the above way, and see what happens. He has an equipment for putting his throat into a few shapes, and the functions in the brain, that control these processes, can do absolutely nothing else but repeat the formula that developed these functions. You can take out of the functions only what you have put in in their upbuilding. The song demands that we sing different volumes of tone, changing qualities, many words, unusual intervals, varying pitches, strong clear rhythms, etc., and the functions in the brain, that should have been built up to do these things, through, first imitation of the teacher, second patient painstaking repetition by the student, have never been started in their development. The functions in his brain, so carefully developed by pictures of what he wanted his throat to look like, etc., he finds are useless, because he should have been thinking of qualities, pronunciation, rhythms, etc., as that is what the song calls for, and, by thinking them, develop the functions that, on demand in song singing, give out the material that was put in in their development.

These unfortunates, mechanically trained, are in a foreign land and do not speak a word of the language, which is art and not mechanics. It should be clear then that technique, that will equip us to perform the works of great masters, must be an artistic technique and not a mechanical one, for the idea, that is in the mind when the tone is produced, will be the thing that is heard in and will entirely dictate the tone quality that is to carry the message to the listener. Otherwise we could have no possibility of interpretation.

Three months' work will enable one to thoroughly master the standing position, which is merely the one we should have anyway, and that begins and ends the physical part of singing as far as my work is concerned. The rest is psychological, or mental training, wholly by means of the ear and is a process that continues its development without end, an ever increasing satisfaction and delight.

This mental training, by means of the ear, can be separated under the following heads, as before enumerated:

Pronunciation that is correct.

Enunciation that is clear.

Intonation, or pitch, that is in tune.

Rhythm so strong that even the musically ignorant respond to it.

Qualities that carry to the listener the emotions experienced by the singer.

Time—singing rapidly and slowly and all intermediate speeds.

Volume—singing loudly and softly and all intermediate volumes.

I challenge anyone to take clay or wax, or any other plastic substance, and make a pattern representing the singing apparatus on any given pitch of tone with a given quality. What they cannot do consciously, with materials that they can see and handle, they cannot do with the singing instrument which they cannot see or handle, unless it be done as a result of a process of thought that is concentrated on pitch and quality. The fact is no one knows what the shapes of the moulds are. The consensus of opinion is that there are over a million muscular changes in the entire instrument.

When these things are known, mechanical training becomes ridiculous, and it is safe to say is not followed in studios in touch with the best thought on this subject. A teacher, who has these psychological ideas and mixes with them honesty of purpose, will get a maximum result with whatever material may fall to his lot to develop. The atmosphere of such a studio will be artistic and each lesson will be a delight. Such a teacher not only trains singers and creates artists, but he developes character as well, and those, who place themselves in his hands, realize that he does not work with his eyes on the clock and his mind on their bank account.

In closing I wish to say, never, never study with a teacher who cannot sing. Anyone, who has done so and met with any measure of success in the open markets of the world, is one whose talent was so unusual that even inadequate instruction could not wholly spoil his career.

Blanchart's Boston Encomiums.

Prominent among Boston's musical celebrities is Ramon Blanchart, the Spanish baritone, who has been identified also with foremost operatic companies of Europe and America. During the past five seasons he has been the principal baritone with the Boston Opera Company and in that time has been heard extensively throughout America in concert and recital work. At present, in conjunction with his teaching and operatic coaching activities, he is singing a number of guest performances with the Boston Theatre Opera Company. An idea of the high esteem the Boston critics cherish for Blanchart's art, the following press notices indicate:

Ramon Blanchart, baritone of the Boston Opera House, and regisseur of the opera school of the New England Conservatory of Music, gave a song recital last night in Jordan Hall.

Mr. Blanchart as an opera singer has had a long and honorable career. He has sung in many theatres and in various lands, and always maintained the reputation of an artist respecting his art. He first came to Boston as a member of Mr. Russell's San Carlo Opera Company. At the Boston Opera House he has sung in operas of the older repertoire and thus shown his knowledge of sound traditions and schooling in what is called the grand style. He has also been seen and heard in operas of the extreme modern wing, in parts that were first of all dramatic, a singer of music that was antipodal to that in which he had formerly won success. In these modern operas his performance was marked by intelligence and force, and when he sang in English his enunciation and diction were most excellent, worthy of imitation by singers to whom the English language is a birthright.

Mr. Blanchart wisely chose for his program songs that for the most part make a simple and direct appeal to the hearer; songs that should be sung fervently. His dramatic intelligence served him in the comprehension of the prevailing character of each song, and if at times his fervor led him into gesticulation, the gestures were natural, such as might reasonably be expected of a man whose life has been passed on the stage. As a singer and as an interpreter he was eminently successful in the prologue to "Pagliacci" and in the songs with English words by Tosti and Chadwick. Again he showed a mastery of enunciation and diction in English that was remarkable, and the impression made by Tosti's familiar song and the finely expressive song by Chadwick was so great that the audience insisted on hearing them again.

It was a pleasure to hear the song by Rotoli, the author of many melodies that are too little known by singers arranging programs. Tosti's "Aprile" was sung with much taste, and Mr. Blanchart caught the spirit of the same composer's "Ninon." The Spanish songs were sung with gusto, but we have heard more characteristic ones by Alvarez than "Mia Patria." Mr. Blanchart was heartily applauded in the course of the concert, and after the final group he sang again in response.—Boston Herald.

At the matinee the salient feature was the Iago of Mr. Blanchart, a singer of resourceful skill and dramatic feeling, who may now be counted among the foremost resident artists of the city. Very few baritones can match him in roles that makes demands upon histrionic as well as vocal technic. His grace of repose, his well pointed action in spirited situations and his all around interpretative ability lent much distinction to the performance of the Verdi masterpiece.—Boston Herald.

Again this season the success of Ramon Blanchart, the world famous baritone, has been most brilliant at the Opera House in Boston, after having sung—with the greatest triumph the imagination can conceive—the role of Don Giovanni as well as others, the great artist has demonstrated one of the greatest powers of resistance. In fact, he, in twenty-seven hours, has broken, we think, one of the most important artistic records, presenting in other brief space of time his interpretation of Gumont in "Traviata," Raffaele in the "Jewels" and Rigoletto in the opera of the same name.

So, again, once more the Boston public may well appreciate the great singer, always the faithful soldier ready for the heavy end. All the North American press has unanimously with a loud voice praised Ramon Blanchart, presenting this illustrious singer as the truest and best example of faithfulness toward Henry Russell, the truly fortunate impresario who can count among his forces an artist like Blanchart!"—Boston Transcript. (Advertisement.)

RAMON BLANCHART,
as Scarpia in "Tosca."

NEVADA VAN der VEER Mezzo Contralto REED MILLER Tenor
Oratorio :: Concerts :: Recitals
Individually and Jointly
Address, 749 West End Avenue New York City Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

TINA LERNER
DISTINGUISHED RUSSIAN PIANIST
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
MANAGEMENT: LOUDON CHARLTON, CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

LEONARD BORWICK PIANIST
WILL TOUR AMERICA SEASON 1914-15
"Leonard Borwick is an artist gifted not only with refined taste and deep musical feeling, but with the technique of a master."—Berlin Borsen Courier.
Management—WOLFSOHN BUREAU, 1 West 34th St., New York. Steinway Piano Used

Madame OTTILIE METZGER
THE GREAT GERMAN CONTRALTO (Second American Tour)
and THEODOR LATTERMANN
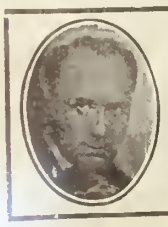
THE FAMOUS BASS-BARITONE (First Appearance in America)
WILL ARRIVE IN AMERICA FEBRUARY 1st.
Opera :: Concert :: Oratorio
Management: Music League of America, Howard E. Potter, Business Manager
Aeolian Hall, New York

Stojowski Public Piano Lessons.



Sigismond Stojowski, the Polish pianist and composer now in America, will inaugurate at the von Ende School of Music, New York, a series of weekly class recitals to which piano teachers, artist students and young concert pianists will be admitted for a public criticism.

The class will comprise two sections—one to consist of players—the other of the listening class. This latter is intended for the busy teacher who has no time for practice, or students whose advancement does not admit of their entrance to the playing class.

Mr. Stojowski gives personal illustration of the various works performed and any student may bring a piece of his own selection. The benefit of this plan of advanced instruction has been demonstrated in the artist classes of the great masters in Europe, Franz Liszt using it as his principal means of instruction. So many applications have already been received that it has been necessary to double the classes.

War Affects Spiering Pupil.

Nicoline Zedeler, the successful violin soloist of the Sousa world tour a few years ago, is a pupil of Theodore Spiering. She was on the point of leaving for Europe to fill engagements when the war broke out. Mr. Spiering, who had been instrumental in securing a dozen orchestral dates for Miss Zedeler through his acquaintance with the various conductors abroad, holds as an evidence of German punctiliousness, a letter from the conductor at Chemnitz, received just before Mr. Spiering's departure from Berlin, stating his regret at the cancellation of Miss Zedeler's date and expressing hope for her appearance next season.

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Alexander Bloch Heard in Recital.

Alexander Bloch, violinist, was heard in recital on October 28 at Aeolian Hall, New York. Blanche Bloch assisted at the piano.

Mr. Bloch showed himself to be a player of large and brilliant attainments, with a depth of feeling for the classical school which augurs well for his future. His opening number, the G major Beethoven sonata, No. 10, was played with great beauty of tone, clear phrasing and with genuine feeling for and understanding of the ideas and intentions of the composer.

With such talent as Mr. Bloch possesses, there is no reason why he should include in his programs an empty composition like the Paganini concerto in D major, which was his second number at this recital. Mr. Bloch is not, in any sense of the word, a trickster, and this work of Paganini, with all its technical difficulty and finesse, should be beneath his notice. He played the work brilliantly and in certain of the legato passages there was much charm, but one could but feel that Mr. Bloch's talents and ability would have been better displayed in a more worthy vehicle.

Mr. Bloch's third and fourth groups included the "Lithauisches Lied" (Chopin-Auer), which was interpreted with true sentiment, a "Serenata Napolitana" (Sgambati), delightfully and joyously given, and Hungarian Dance, No. 1 (Brahms-Joachim), in which Mr. Bloch was able to display the force of his rhythm.

The recital closed with the Wagner-Wilhelmj romanza and the Wieniawski polonaise in D major, which latter number Mr. Bloch played with great warmth and brilliancy.

On the whole, this recital was an entertainment of a high order. This artist shows himself to be not only technically a master of the violin, but musically endowed as well. His intonation is excellent; the double stopping, harmonics, bowing and the other requirements of a complete virtuoso are all in perfect shape and ready for use. But it must again be repeated that Mr. Bloch is at his best in compositions which call for depth of feeling rather than for great technical display, and this, more than anything else, speaks well for the genuineness of this young artist's talent.

ALEXANDER BLOCH.

Blanche Bloch played the accompaniments with much feeling and comprehension.

Germaine Schnitzer Begins American Tour.

Germaine Schnitzer began her American tour with a concert at Briarcliff, N. Y., on October 27. She is now on a Western trip which will extend as far as Colorado, where she has been engaged to play the Tschaikowsky concerto in Denver, on November 6. On November 7 she will play in Colorado Springs, and November 10 she is to give a recital in Mason, Ia. On her way eastward, she is booked for a recital in Lowell, Mass., where she will appear on November 16. She then begins a rather extended tour through the South, which will keep her very busy until the middle of December.

Germaine Schnitzer is certainly one of those pianists who are in great demand in America, and it is owing to her repertoire that she is able to respond to all the demands for engagements. In fact, she numbers as many as ten complete recital programs among her many selections, which also include twenty-five concertos.

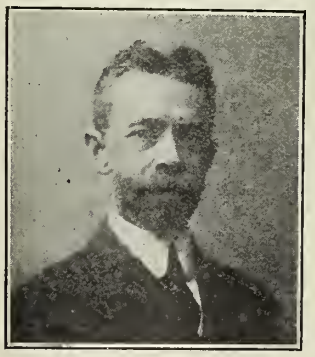
CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address: 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

VAN YORX
THEO. —— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill



VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

A. CARBONE
MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References.
AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
A School for Students with serious aims, who desire to become expert Organists. REOPENS OCT. 6th.
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates
GODOWSKY
Will be in America this Season
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.
KNABE PIANO USED

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Audubon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
NOW IN AMERICA
CONCERT ORATORIO
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway
Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Jacques Thibaud's Rapid Rise to Fame.

Jacques Thibaud, violin virtuoso and musician in the truest sense, was born in Bordeaux in 1880. Up to the age of thirteen he was taught by his father. He then was sent to the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied under Marsick, and in 1896 gained the premier prix. To supplement his modest means Thibaud played for several years in the Café Rouge, and was heard there by the conductor, Edouard Colonne, who was so impressed by the young violinist's unusual talent, that he offered him a place in his orchestra. Shortly after, the leader being unable to play the solo part in an orchestral work, Thibaud was asked to take his place, and did so, with such conspicuous success that he became a regular soloist at the Colonne concerts, playing no less than fifty-four times in a single season.

His fame in Paris established, the young violinist visited England, and then America, his tour in 1903 winning him prompt recognition and great acclaim. Since then, Thibaud's standing in Europe and throughout the musical world has been steadily enhanced, until today he is by general consent accorded a place in the foremost ranks of contemporary violinists. As a representative of the French school he is without a rival, producing an exceptionally pure and lovely tone, bowing with elegance, and possessing a caressing style peculiarly his own. After the French composers, he is heard at his best, perhaps, in the concertos and sonatas of Mozart, of which he gives an exquisite account, though his repertoire embraces practically the entire scope of violin literature.

JACQUES THIBAUD.

For some time Thibaud played on a violin made by Carlo Bergonzi, but he is now the possessor of an even finer instrument, a rare Stradivarius, once the property of Baillot.

Thibaud's American tour is under the management of Loudon Charlton, of New York.

Marion Wright-Powers Heard in Recital.

Marion Wright-Powers, a young coloratura soprano new to New York audiences, appeared in a song recital in Aeolian Hall, Wednesday afternoon, October 28.

Miss Powers' pleasing voice showed careful training, and she herself displayed excellent musicianship. Although the good sized audience present displayed an interest in Miss Powers' delivery of her first two groups, it was not, however, until the third number, "Chanson Provençale" (Dell' Acqua), that she proved that she had completely won her hearers. An individual grace of manner, and a piquancy well suited to Miss Powers' particular style, accompanied the delivery of this number, and won the deserved hearty applause. La Forge's "Like the Rosebud," the first of the fourth group (this group was devoted to American composers), disclosed some delightfully clear high notes, and a delicacy of interpretation which was effective. Cadman's "The Moon Drops Low" brought out well the singer's dramatic ability, which likewise evoked the approval of her listeners. The "Mad Scene" from "Hamlet" (Thomas), effectively rendered by this singer, made a fitting climax to a well chosen program.

André Benoist, at the piano, was an expert and efficient accompanist throughout.

Alexander Winterberger, once a noted pianist (and pupil of Liszt), died in Leipsic recently, aged eighty-one.

FRANKLIN RIKER
In America Season 1914-15
Personal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York
Phone, 3964 Riverside Studio: 603-4 Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
223 Mathilda St., Apt. 5 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York

ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON
AMERICAN PIANIST
Management: Robert P. Strine, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIANO

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

William Thorner
VOCAL TEACHER
Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:
"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.
(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."
Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.
Address 2130 Broadway, New York. Phone: 1050 Columbus.

JACQUES KASNER VIOLINIST
120 East 85th Street :: :: New York
Phone 2768 Lenox

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
150 West 104th Street, New York
Phone 3832 Riverside
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbus

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
[Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand]
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

EDYTH WALKER
(Imperial Royal Chambersinger, Court of Austria--Hungary)
Dramatic Soprano
Metropolitan, New York.
Covent Garden, London.
Imperial Royal Opera, Vienna.
Royal Opera, Berlin.
Festspielhaus, Bayreuth.
Royal Opera and Wagner Festivals, Munich, etc., etc., etc.
Season 1914-1915 with the Chicago Opera Company

Season 1914-1915
SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway
New York City

Mozart Society Program.

Anna Case, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company; George Dostal, tenor, and Charles Gilbert Spross, pianist, are the artists to appear at the first afternoon musicale of the New York Mozart Society, Mrs. Noble McConnell, president, Saturday afternoon, November 7, Hotel Astor, New York.

This is the program:

Song of the Sea.....Ware
Rhapsody.....Dohnanyi
Mr. Spross.
Ich möchte schweben über Thal und Hügel.....Sjogren
Lithauishes Lied.....Chopin
Sylvelin.....Sinding
Vergebliches Ständchen.....Brahms
Miss Case.
Sicilienne from Cavalleria Rusticana.....Mascagni
Bella siccome un Angelo, from Crespino e la Comaro.....Ricci
Mr. Dostal.
Aria from Louise.....Charpentier
Miss Case.
Etude Romantique.....Chaminade
Paraphrase, Fledermaus.....Strauss-Schütt
Mr. Spross.
Es blinkt der Thau.....Rubinstein
Röselein.....Schumann
Synnove's Song.....Kjerulf
Norwegian Echo Song.....Folksong
Miss Case.
If Thou Wert Blind.....Johnson
Could I.....Tosti
Love, I Have Won You and Held You.....Landon Ronald
Mr. Dostal.
Aria, Ah, non credea, from Sonnambula.....Bellini
Miss Case.

Marie Hertenstein's Plans.

Marie Hertenstein, the young American pianist, who is to play in this country this season for the first time, arrived in New York recently from Europe.

Miss Hertenstein has been coaching with Artur Schnabel in Berlin and comes to America prepared with a repertoire which is destined to stand her in good stead for the busy season she is to have.

MARIE HERTENSTEIN.

S. E. Macmillen, her manager, has booked several very important engagements for her, two of which are appearances with the Cincinnati Symphony and Russian Symphony Orchestras.

Among the other important concerts she is to play may be mentioned recitals in Indianapolis, Ind.; Lima, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; Akron, Ohio; Columbus, Ohio (her native city); Wheeling, W. Va.; East Liverpool, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Jamestown, N. Y.; Scranton, Reading and Erie, Pa., and Peru, Ind., in addition to several in which she appears in conjunction with Francis Macmillen, violinist, and Edmund Burke, the Irish baritone. Miss Hertenstein's season opens on November 4 in Lima, Ohio.

Paul Draper's New York Recital.

Paul Draper, the tenor, who has returned to America after several seasons of successful concertizing in Germany and England, will give a lieder recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Tuesday afternoon, November 17. Four songs by Karol Szymanowski will be sung for the first time in America. Other features will be Schubert's "Gesaenge des Harfners" and Schumann's "Dichterliebe." E. Romayne Simmons will assist at the piano.

The Knabe
The World's Best Piano

dominates over that small coterie of distinctly notable Pianos today, as in 1837 when the first Knabe blazed the path to perfection in pianoforte building.

Its purity, quality and individuality of tone has endeared it to critics of note both at home and abroad.

KNABE PLAYER-PIANOS

possess all the distinctive qualities of Knabe Pianos, while their instant responsiveness and absolute expression control meet every musical contingency.

Representatives throughout the world. Catalogs and information forwarded upon request. New York prices universal with freight and expenses added to outside points.

THE KNABE
The World's Best Piano

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

FLORENCE HARDEMAN
American Violinist Just returned from Europe In America Season 1914-15
Present address: 3514 Washington Avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio

DAVID HOCHSTEIN
Concert Violinist
—IN AMERICA NOW—
Address, Stella Comyn, 10 Carnegie Hall, New York City

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF THE RUSSIAN VIOLINIST In America 1914-15
Personal Representative: Johanna Sherrick, 200 Fifth Ave., N.Y.
Daniel Mayer, London

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
318 WEST 82d ST., NEW YORK CITY Tel. Schuyler 8537

SUNG BY MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, MME. GERVILLE-REACHE, ETC.
Three Songs of the Desert
By GERTRUDE ROSS
Sunset in the Desert
Night in the Desert
Dawn in the Desert
WHITE-SMITH MUSIC PUB. CO.
Boston New York Chicago

Now in New York | ALBERTO JONAS
205 EDGECOMB AVENUE

MYRNA SHARLOW
SOPRANO
Boston Opera Company, Boston.
Royal Opera Co., Covent Garden, London.
Anglo-American Grand Opera Co., Paris.
Under the management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

MARCELLA
CRAFT
Five years Prima Donna Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS
SOLOIST
Maine Festivals, Portland & Bangor, Oct. 1-5, 1914.
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 6, 1914.
San Francisco Recital, Nov. 8, 1914.
Riverside, Cal., Recital, Nov. 10, 1914.
Los Angeles, Cal., Recital, Nov. 12, 1914.
San Diego, Cal., Recital, Nov. 13, 1914, etc.
Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

During the past four years assistant to
FRANK KING CLARK
WILHELM
AUGSTEIN
From Berlin
VOCAL TEACHER
Voice Culture, Placing and Development, Style, German, French, Italian and English Opera, and Concert Repertoire
Studio: METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
1425 Broadway - - New York

FLASHLIGHT PHOTOGRAPH OF MISCHA ELMAN'S LAST CONCERT AT THE AUDITORIUM, MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA, JUNE 13, 1914.

More Praise for Kerr.

If there are any musicians who blame the war for the loss of engagements, there is one artist, at least, who cannot be counted among them. It is quite the reverse, in fact, with U. S. Kerr, the baritone, who has opened his season with an unusually large list of engagements, in one instance giving three recitals in one week.

In last week's issue of the MUSICAL COURIER, press criticisms were published relating to two of the recitals referred to above, namely, those at Hartford and Bridgeport, Conn. One of the following criticisms refers also to the Bridgeport engagement, and the other is one of the many which followed the Scranton success:

The ballroom of the Stratfield was well filled last evening at the concert given under the auspices of the Girls' Friendly Society of St. George's Church.

U. S. Kerr, baritone, and A. W. Burgemeister, pianist, gave a very interesting and varied program. Mr. Burgemeister accompanied Mr. Kerr and also played one solo, a rhapsody by Liszt, that was interpreted with considerable color, the pianissimo parts ringing clear and mellow. Mr. Burgemeister responded to the applause by playing, with much charm, that always delightful "To the Spring," by Grieg.

Mr. Kerr's numbers were varied in selection and held the interest throughout the program from the charming French song that opened the recital to the stirring "Two Grenadiers" at the close. This called forth an encore, "Absent," by Metcalf, that gave much pleasure to the audience, both for the song itself and the manner in which it was interpreted. Mr. Kerr's perfect diction added much to the pleasure of the evening. Schumann's "Die Lotosblume," in the first half of the program, and the wonderful prologue from "I Pagliacci," by Leoncavallo, in the second part of the program, were numbers that will linger long in the memories of those present. Both Mr. Burgemeister and Mr. Kerr earned applause in the "I Pagliacci" number.

Mr. Kerr . . . substituted "Asra," by Rubinstein, for Stephens' "Nightingale," in the last part of the program.

The program was as follows: "Kypris," Holmes; "Du bist die ruh," Schubert; "Widmung," Schumann; "Die Lotosblume," Schumann; "Der Sieger," Kahn; "The Ballad of Trees and the Master," Chadwick; "Faith," Chadwick, Mr. Kerr; "Rhapsody," No. 12, Liszt, Mr. Burgemeister; prologue, Leoncavallo; "The Gull," Sinding; "The Nightingale," Stephens; "The Night of Love," Schutt; "A Swan," Grieg; "In the Moonlight," Haile, and "Two Grenadiers," Schumann, Mr. Kerr.—Bridgeport Daily Standard, October 23, 1914.

U. S. Kerr, whose fine baritone voice has given pleasure to Scrantonians on several occasions, was heard here again last night. A. W. Burgemeister accompanied Mr. Kerr with expression and feeling.

The first part of the program was made up largely of songs by German composers and Mr. Kerr sang most of them in the original language. The opening song was Holmes' "Kypris," and was followed by "Du bist die ruh," by Schubert. Then came a double number, "Widmung" and "Die Lotosblume," by Schumann.

"Verborgenheit," by Wolf, followed and the dramatic and showy "Der Sciger," by Kahn, was a delight. Mr. Kerr put great feeling in the "Asra," by Rubinstein, which was sung in English, and closed with "Faith," another number in English, by Chadwick.

At the beginning of part two, Mr. Kerr announced that he would substitute "Like Dew on the Sweet Blush Roses" for his third number, in place of "The Nightingale," by Stephens, and that his closing number would be "The Two Grenadiers," by Schumann, in place of the "Toreador" song from "Carmen," which he had sung here several times before.

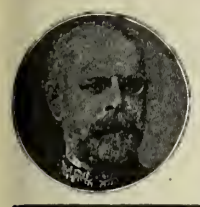
Leoncavallo's prologue gave the singer an opportunity for dramatics and also to show his skill in recitative work, in both of which branches of his art he acquitted himself with credit. Sinding's "The Gull" was the second number in the second part of his program and preceded the first substituted number, "Like Dew on the Sweet Blush Roses." Then came "The Night of Love," by Schutt; Grieg's "A Swan"; "In the Moonlight," by Haile, and "The Two Grenadiers," in the order named. . . . He never sang more beautifully.—Scranton Times, October 22, 1914.

Mischa Elman in Australia.

Mischa Elman's final concert in the Auditorium at Melbourne, Australia, the audience and participants at which are shown in the accompanying flashlight, taken on June 13 of this year, was evidently greeted by a capacity house. This is one of the sufficient proofs of the large following Elman has gained in far off Australia.

The young Russian violinist is easily discernible in the right foreground.

Witeks to Open von Ende Recital Series.



Anton Witek, violinist and concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, Vita Witek, the Berlin pianist, will open the series of artist recitals at the von Ende School of Music, New York, on Saturday evening, November 7. Mr. Witek is scheduled to play the Beethoven violin concerto.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

HAROLD HENRY
AMERICAN PIANIST
426 FINE ARTS BLDG., - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

PAUL
DRAPER
TEACHER OF SINGING
AND THE INTERPRETATION OF SONG
Personal address: 24 East 57th Street
Phone: Plaza 8645
For concerts, recitals, etc., address:
LOUDON CHARLTON,
Carnegie Hall New York

LORETTA del VALLÉ
SOPRANO COLORATURA
First Time in America
Season 1914-15
OPERA—PRAGUE
OPERA—DRESDEN
OPERA—CASSEL
OPERA—MANHEIM
AMERICAN ENGAGEMENTS
Management ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

SOUSA AND HIS BAND

"HEARD THE WORLD AROUND"

Office: 1 West 34th Street

Telephone 6128 Greeley

Alexander BLOCH

CONCERT VIOLINIST

Management, Foster & David, 500 Fifth Avenue, - New York

WILFRIED KLAMROTH TEACHER of SINGING

NEW STUDIO: 124 EAST 39th STREET

Tel. 4421 Murray Hill

INEZ BARBOUR SOPRANO

Concert-Recital-Oratorio

Management: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

FLORENCE AUSTIN

America's Violinist

Season 1914-1915 Now Booking

Engaged for Maine Festivals, with Boston Symphony Orchestra; Aeolian Hall Recital, December 3; Norwich Monday Musical Club, etc.

Address M. E. ROGERS, 155 East 18th St., N. Y. C. Phone: Gramercy 6223.

JANE CATHERWOOD SOPRANO and TEACHER

Fowler Apartments, 1110 W. Washington Street

Los Angeles, Cal. Phone 20584

MARIE KAISER

SOPRANO

Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th St., New York

FLORENCE LARRABEE

PIANIST

IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

NINA MORGANA

Coloratura Soprano From La Scala in Milan

Available for Concerts—Musicales Season 1914-15

Address: AEOLIAN HALL, Rooms 1626-27, N. Y. City

MARGARET SHIRLEY

Soprano

Available for Concerts: Recitals, Musicales

IRISH BALLADS A SPECIALTY

Exclusive Management: ANNIE FRIEDBERG, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York

FRANCES ALDA SOPRANO OF THE METROPOLITAN OPERA CO.

Assisted by Gutia Cassini, Cellist, and Frank La Forge, Pianist

SEASON 1914-15 NOW BOOKING

Exclusive Management for Concerts: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, New York City

Baldwin Piano Used

DRAMATIC MEZZO SOPRANO

SARA HEINEMAN

Concerts and Recitals, also Southern Folk Songs in Costume

3671 Broadway - - New York City

WITHERSPOON

BASS Metropolitan Opera

Available for Concert and Oratorio. Oct. 1st. to Jan. 15th

Address: Management, Wolfsohn Musical Bureau

1 West 34th Street, New York

Mme. KATE ROLLA

Former Prima-Donna, Covent Garden, London; Imperial Opera House, Moscow and St. Petersburg; San Carlo, Naples; Metropolitan, New York, etc.

PUPIL OF MARCHESI

Voice Culture, Opera or Concert, Repertoire, Diction.

JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE

Studio, 251 West 81st Street, N. Y. Phone, Schuyler, 3960

Baroness Evans

Von KLENNER

America's Representative of the GREAT GARCIA VOCAL METHOD

Grand Prix—Paris Exposition 1900

Tradition, Languages, Repertoire, Diction, Special Courses for Teachers

NEW YORK STUDIO, 952 EIGHTH AVE.

Phone 651 Columbus

Alma Peterson's Success.

Alma Peterson, prima donna soprano of the Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company, is of Swedish-American birth. She began her career as a church choir singer, occupying positions in the leading quartets of the Twin Cities. She is twenty-four years old and as a concert singer is well known throughout the Middle West and Northwest, where she has appeared in recital and oratorio. She has also filled important engagements with large orchestras as soloist, her latest appearance being with the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra shortly before the latter's disbandment. Maestro Campanini, of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, heard Miss Peterson sing during the visit of that organization to St. Paul last season and at once offered the young soprano a two years' contract, which she accepted. Miss Peterson was to have made her debut in Chicago this fall with the Chicago Grand Opera Company, but was prevented from doing so by the latter's suspension owing to the war abroad. Miss Peterson, in view of her enforced idleness, will undertake a concert tour and is open to engagements for oratorio, recital and with symphony orchestras. Her voice is lyric soprano of exceptional quality and range. Her repertoire is an extensive one, ranging from classic to modern music.

Some press notices are herewith appended:

Cries for Peterson! Peterson! filled the big auditorium, and when the popular singer returned to the stage not only bouquets, but baskets of flowers were handed over the footlights to the soprano who was evidently first in the hearts of the audience.—St. Paul Daily News.

ALMA PETERSON.

Seldom has a more captivating singer appeared before the Thursday Musical than Alma Peterson, of St. Paul, who contributed a group of songs to yesterday's program that were a feature of real artistic worth. Her voice is a lovely one capable of large expression.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Artistic is the word that applies to Miss Peterson's lieder singing. She expresses a great range of emotional feeling and much subtlety of insight, together with excellent technic.—Minneapolis Journal.

A voice of singularly beautiful timbre, well sustained, beautifully placed and evincing intelligence of exalted character.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Miss Peterson's singing of Swedish folksongs was refreshing in the extreme. She is an artist of great simplicity and possesses a voice that reaches one's very heart.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Seldom have the wonderful numbers for soprano in Handel's "Messiah" been sung here with greater depth of feeling or with more exquisite charm of voice.—Stillwater Gazette.

Alma Peterson, the popular St. Paul soprano, gave a finished and wholly excellent interpretation of the role of Barbara. Indeed Victor Herbert's "Natoma" proved none the less interesting for being rendered in concert form.—Duluth Tribune.

Immortal.

Ezra—My son has just sent me a message from New York, but I can't make out whether it says "No funds" or "No fun."

Eben—What's the difference?—Judge.

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE

SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO

in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:

Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO

Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:

65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.

VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Florence Macbeth

PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA

Lately Chicago Grand Opera

DUE IN AMERICA IN NOVEMBER

MME. MARIE

RAPPOLD

Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano

of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915

Exclusive Management:

R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

N. Y. COLLEGE OF MUSIC

128-130 East 58th Street

Announces the engagement of THEO. SPIERING, the eminent violinist and conductor

VICTOR BENHAM, the noted pianist

Mme. SCHAFRAM, of the Master School, Vienna, Assistant to Godowsky

RUBIN GOLDMARK, the eminent composer and instructor Head of the Department of Theory

CARL HEIN, AUGUST FRAEMCKE } Directors

Catalog on application

ARTHUR

SHATTUCK

The Distinguished American

PIANIST

In America Season 1914-15

Management, HAENSEL & JONES

Aeolian Hall, New York

Steinway Piano Used

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER
TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festiva
O. J. EHRGOTT
156 Fifth Ave.
Personel Representetive
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place, New York

BLANCHE GOODE PIANIST
AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS
Address: JOSEPH JOINER, 439 Fifth Avenue, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
115 E. 53rd St., New York
Management:
LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

Adele Krueger
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert, Oratorio, Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg, 1425 Broadway, New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Available for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

MADAME MOLIÈRE
Grand Opera Prima Donna
Vocal Culture. Special attention to voice placing. Voices tried free during October. Address, 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N. Y. Phone, 3900 New Rochelle, N. Y. Studio also in N. Y.

THEODORE SPIERING
CONDUCTOR — VIOLINIST In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
STUDIO: 327 CENTRAL PARK WEST
Phone, Riverside 3170

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

OVIDE MUSIN'S Virtuoso School of Violin
Recognized as the HIGHEST SCHOOL of violin playing in the United States

Instruction given by this world renowned Virtuoso in person, in the Authentic tempos, style, fingering and bowing of the classical repertory, ancient and modern. Musin's SPECIAL SYSTEM greatly LESSENS the time ordinarily spent in acquiring technic and bow control. Piano, Harmony, with eminent teachers. Singing with Mme. Ovide Musin, Coloratura Soprano. Write for outline of Course by CORRESPONDENCE, and THEMATIC CATALOGUE of compositions and editions by OVIDE MUSIN. Dormitories for limited number of students in School. Practice Unrestricted. CHAPERONAGE. Address the REGISTRAR,
51 West 76th St., New York.

Rare Violin Art.

It is not often that New York concert audiences are treated to such elevated and ingratiating violin art as Maud Powell exhibited at her Aeolian Hall recital on Tuesday evening, October 27. Long an accepted musical figure of prime importance in America's tonal world, Miss Powell has not stood still upon that reputation, but has striven and studied with tireless zeal and ambition to widen her repertoire, extend her technical and interpretative powers, and come into yet closer communion with the inner spirit of art and the thoughts and ideas of the composers she interprets.

In all of the Powell readings, as exemplified last week, there speak a fine authority, a large sense of confident musicianship, a perfect artistic understanding, and a complete mastery of all the formal and mechanical bases which form the foundation of all musical performance. Maud Powell's wide culture and exceptional intelligence were reflected in every measure of her playing, and the connoisseur appreciates at once that she has studied her violin not only with her fingers but also with her brain.

It was due, no doubt, to Miss Powell's correct conception of the true values in violin literature that she chose the D minor concerto of Vieuxtemps as her opening number. Too much stupid criticism has been leveled at Vieuxtemps and too many attempts have been made by ill balanced commentators to sweep him out of his proper place in the repertoire and history of the fiddle. It seems certain that Miss Powell felt keenly the popular misconception of the newer generation about such a typical violin composer as Vieuxtemps and her revival of the brilliant and engaging concerto was an undeniably graceful tribute. The work revealed the fact that despite its lack of very deep musical ideas, it is a sincere piece of writing and contains melodic charm and much violin writing of the most agreeable and characteristic sort. As a vehicle for the revelation of Miss Powell's many sided talents the D minor concerto served admirably, for the performer's own dignity and unfailing sense of proportion gave the piece its deserved atmosphere of worth and her skilful interpretative nuances, many colored tone, big style, and impeccable mechanism, made the Vieuxtemps measures throb and glow with a fascination that was as vital as it was irresistible.

Strauss' E flat sonata (assisted by pianist Moore) formed another unusually interesting feature of the program. It is a composition unduly neglected by violinists, and for no apparent reason, as it has a plentiful vein of melody, is musically of a high order, and exhibits on the part of the composer an unfailing knowledge of the manner in which to present the instrument in its most effective phases. Miss Powell played the sonata beautifully and was ably aided and abetted by her partner at the piano.

For such selections as Tartini's variations on a theme of Corelli, Pugnani's præludium e allegro, and Nardini's "Larghetto," Miss Powell is ideally equipped by nature and experience, and it need hardly be said that she gave the revered classics their appropriate tinge of majestic simplicity, even while she put at their service also the wide resources of tone and technic with which her thoroughly modern knowledge of the violin help her to intensify and adorn all her renderings. In this old music the mobility of the Powell tone and the suppleness of the Powell bowing shone to especial advantage.

Two Brahms-Joachim Hungarian dances, a Sibelius "Valse Triste" and "Musette" (delightful moreaux of infinite harmonic and atmospheric charm), Florent Schmitt's very attractive "Rock-a-Bye-Song" and Arbos' languorous and timely "Tango" gave room for the presentation of Maud Powell's lighter graces and these were received by the audience with no diminution of the marked favor which they had bestowed on her serious offerings earlier in the program. The Powell concert left a sense of an art evening superlatively well spent.

Tietjens' Studio Musicale.

Paul Tietjens gave his first studio musicale at his studio, 11 East Fifty-ninth street, New York, Tuesday afternoon, October 27, with the assistance of Adele Laeis-Baldwin.

The following program was rendered:

Allegro in F minor ..... Phil. Eman. Bach
Intermezzo ..... Brahms
Mr. Tietjens.
Blind ..... Paul Tietjens
Woodland Love Song ..... Paul Tietjens
Songs of a Sailor's Sweetheart (a song cycle) ..... Paul Tietjens Sailor Song.
The Storm.
My Star Upon the Sea.
The Sea Beach.
Fulfillment.
Adele Laeis-Baldwin.
Sonata appassionata ..... Beethoven
Mr. Tietjens.
The Dayspring ..... Paul Tietjens
Adele Laeis-Baldwin.

MARIE SUNDELIUS Soprano
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, New York

MARGUERITE DUNLAP
CONTRALTO. Concert—Recital—Oratorio
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN 1451 Broadway, New York

Ellen Keller
VIOLINIST
In America Season 1914-15. NOW BOOKING
Exclusive Management
GERTRUDE F. COWEN, 1451 Broadway, New York

WHITEHILL BASS-BARITONE
Formerly Metropolitan Opera
Management: The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York.

HENRIETTE BACH
VIOLINIST. Management, Wolfsohn Bureau, 1 W. 34 St., N. Y.

The HAMBOURG CONSERVATORY of MUSIC
PROFESSOR MICHAEL HAMBOURG, JAN and BORIS HAMBOURG, Directors
Unsurpassed faculty of over sixty teachers. Re-opens September 1st
TORONTO, CANADA

GIUSEPPE FABBRINI DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN PIANIST
Minneapolis

LIMA O'BRIEN
ACCOMPANIST
21 West 30th St., New York City Phone, Madison Square 3789

GAREISSEN
STUDIO HALL:
64 East 34th St.
NEW YORK CITY.

SLEZAK
The Great Dramatic Tenor
In America January, February, March and April, 1915
Exclusive Management:
HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York City
Hardman Piano Used

JANE OSBORN-HANNAH
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Song Recitals Concert and Orchestral Appearances
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Personal Management Chas. L. Wagner, 1451 Broadway, New York

JOHN McCORMACK
In America Entire Season 1914-15
EDWIN SCHNEIDER, Accompanist
Always and only under personal management of Chas. L. Wagner 1451 Broadway New York
Steinway Piano Used

RUDOLPH GANZ
"THE PIANIST WITH A MESSAGE"
Returns to America for
Season of 1914-1915
Exclusive Management, CHARLES L. WAGNER
1451 Broadway, New York
Steinway Piano Used

ALICE NIELSEN
Prima Donna Soprano
SEASON 1914-15 AMERICAN CONCERT TOUR
Steinway Piano Used
Personal Management, CHAS. L. WAGNER
1451 BROADWAY - - NEW YORK

HARRIET SCHOLDER Pianist
New York Recital, Jan. 26, 1915, Aeolian Hall
The N. Y. Tribune says: Harriet Scholder has the distinctive gifts of the pianoforte virtuoso.
Management: WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St.
Steinway Piano.

EDGAR
STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

REGINALD DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 WEST 57th STREET NEW YORK

SAM TRIMMER
PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

MME.
GERVILLE-RÉACHE
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Exclusive Management HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

VERA
BARSTOW
NOTED VIOLINIST
Management: M. H. HANSON

The Sensation of the Year
CARL
FLESCH
The Great Hungarian Violinist
Second American Tour
ENTIRE SEASON 1914-1915
Management HAENSEL & JONES
Aeolian Hall, New York
KNABE PIANO

BELLE GOTTSCHALK
Lyric Soprano
ORATORIO CONCERT RECITAL
In America Entire Season
MANAGEMENT
Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

MUSIC OF THE WEEK.

A Courtesy Extended to Our Advertisers.

November 4, afternoon, Blanche Goode, Acolian Hall, New York.

November 4, evening, Yvonne de Treville, Brooklyn Academy.

November 4, evening, Mme. Schnabel-Tollefson and Horatio Connell, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 5, afternoon, Leonard Borwick, Carnegie Hall, New York.

November 5, afternoon, Ketaw Kaluntuchy Sequoyah, Brooklyn Academy.

November 5, evening, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carnegie Hall, New York.

November 5, evening, Hamish MacKay, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 5, evening, Louis Elson and Alfred de Voto, Brooklyn Academy.

November 6, afternoon, Yvonne de Treville, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 6, evening, John McCormack, Orange, N. J.

November 6, evening, Harold Bauer and Mme. Hudson-Alexander, Morristown, N. J.

November 6, evening, Amato with Boston Symphony Orchestra, Brooklyn.

November 6, evening, Percy Hemus, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 7, afternoon, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carnegie Hall, New York.

November 7, afternoon, Harold Bauer, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 7, 11 a. m., Oscar Gareissen, 64 East Thirty-fourth street, New York.

November 7, afternoon, Mozart Society, Hotel Astor, New York.

November 8, afternoon, Frank Gittelson, with the New York Symphony, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 9, afternoon, Marta Milinowski, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 9, evening, Marie Morrisey, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 10, afternoon, Florence Hinkle, Aeolian Hall, New York.

November 11, afternoon, Johanna Gadski, Aeolian Hall, New York.

Bertha Yocum Heard in Recital.

E. Bertha Yocum, pianist, gave a recital in the chapel of Belhaven College, Jackson, Miss., on Monday evening, October 12. Miss Yocum opened her program with Saint-Saëns' arrangement of the Bach "Gavotte," from second violin sonata, which was followed by the Beethoven sonata, "Quasi Una Fantasia," op. 27, No. 2. Her second group was formed by "Romance," in F sharp, by Schumann, and the "Ballade," in G minor, by Brahms. Two Chopin numbers formed her third group, and her final selection was the sixth Hungarian rhapsody of Liszt.

The Jackson daily papers commented on her playing as follows:

Bertha Yocum was heard in her first recital at the college last night. The chapel was crowded to its utmost capacity. The high talent and splendid attainments of the musician, which she evinced, delighted the audience.—Daily Clarion-Ledger, Jackson, Miss.

Miss Yocum played before an audience that taxed the capacity of the auditorium. . . . As Miss Yocum performed her deep and varied program, the audience felt that they were indeed listening to an artist. She possesses a fluent technic with beautiful, rich melody tones. Her program consisted of numbers from the old masters, and in the execution of it she manifested a wonderful interpretative ability.—Jackson Daily News.

Returned and Returning from Abroad.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch and Clara Clemens Gabrilowitsch returned on the Cunard liner Carpathia, October 28.

Bessie Abbott was a passenger on the steamer Carpathia also.

Albert Reiss, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Mrs. Reiss arrived on the French steamship Chicago from Havre, October 27.

The Flonzaley Quartet members have arrived in America from Europe.

Carl Stasny, pianist, returned to Boston from abroad, October 7.

Cleofonte Campanini, general manager and musical director of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, arrived in New York, Friday, October 30.

Florence Macbeth, coloratura soprano of the Century Opera Company, arrived on the steamship Cedric, Friday, October 30.

Dr. von Hase Resigns.

Hermann von Hase, LL. D., has resigned from the firm of Breitkopf & Härtel, of Leipsic.

STEINWAY

IN the effort to satisfy the popular demand for a Steinway Grand Piano suitable for the modern drawing or living room, Style M has been produced. ¶It has the unexcelled tone and the perfect workmanship of every Steinway, and differs from the others only in size, design and price. It is the smallest Steinway Grand made, with 7⅓ octaves and all the tested Steinway improvements and patents. ¶To the music lover it means the world's ideal Grand piano at an exceedingly moderate price $750

We invite you to see this Steinway, and test its exquisite qualities.

STEINWAY & SONS
STEINWAY HALL
107-109 East 14th Street, New York
SUBWAY EXPRESS STATION AT THE DOOR

FOUNDED JANUARY, 1880

MUSICAL COURIER
A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND ALLIED ARTS

ESTABLISHED
BY
MARC A. BLUMENBERG

PUBLISHED
EVERY WEDNESDAY
BY THE

GRAND PRIX
PARIS EXPOSITION
1900

MUSICAL COURIER COMPANY
(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York)
LOUIS BLUMENBERG, President
ALVIN L. SCHMOEGER, Sec. and Treas.
437 Fifth Ave., S. E. Cor. 39th St. - - - New York
Cable address: Peguiar, New York
Telephone to all Departments 4292, 4293, 4294, 7357 Murray Hill
LEONARD LIEBLING - - - - - EDITOR
H. I. BENNETT - - - - MANAGING EDITOR

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1914.

No. 1806

OFFICES AND REPRESENTATIVES

MIDDLE WEST DEPARTMENT—
Chicago Offices, 615 to 625 Orchestra Building,
Rene Devries, General Representative, in charge.

UNITED STATES AND CANADA

BOSTON—Victor Winton, 11 Boylston Road, Fenway. Suite 31.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—Cora Julia Taylor, 819 Richmond Avenue.
CINCINNATI—
Mrs. Jessie P. Tyree, 9 The Westmoreland, Mason St., Mt. Auburn.
COLUMBUS, OHIO—Miss Emily Church Benham, 1299 Bryden Road.
DENVER—Mrs. Dolores Reedy-Maxwell, 1516 Milwaukee St.
DES MOINES—Mrs. Caroline Young Smith, 1082 21st Street.
KANSAS CITY—Geneve Lichtenwalter, 600 Studio Bldg.
LINCOLN, NEB.—Mrs. E. S. Luce, 1614 O St.
LOS ANGELES—Mrs. Jane Catherwood, 1110 W. Washington St.
LOUISVILLE, KY.—Katherine Whipple-Dohbs, 425 Fourth Avenue.
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Ruth Anderson, 49 So. Eighth St.
NEW ORLEANS—Harry B. Loeh, Box 79.
OMAHA—Jean P. Duffield, 205 Boyds Theatre.
PHILADELPHIA, PA—
Harold Parry Quicksall, 5719 Windsor Place.
PITTSBURGH, PA.—
Hollis Edison Davenny, 5012 Friendship Ave., E. E.
PORTLAND, ORE.—John R. Oatman, 445 Sherlock Bldg.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.—William Place, Jr., Jackson Bldg.
ST. PAUL, MINN.—
Johnson McClure Bellows, Musical Editor of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.
SAN FRANCISCO—
Alfred Metzger, Rooms 1009-1010, Kohler & Chase Building, 26 O'Farrell Street.
VICTORIA, B. C.—Miss May Hamilton, 312 Menzies St.
WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Brokaw, 109 East 3d St.

EUROPEAN

BERLIN, W.—
Arthur M. Abell, Jenaer St. 21.
Cable Address: Abell, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.
DRESDEN—
Mrs. E. Potter-Frissell, Eisenstuckstrasse 16.
LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND—
W. J. Bowden, 22 Fern Grove.
LONDON—
H. O. Osgood, care of G. Schirmer, 18 Berners St., London W. In charge.
MOSCOW, RUSSIA—
Ellen von Tideböhl, Arbatte, 34 Deneschny.
PARIS—
H. O. Osgood, 43 Boulevard Beausejour.
ROME, ITALY—
Mrs. Dolly Pattison, 9 Piazza di Spagna.
STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN—
Louisa Upling, Roslagsgatan 19.

For the names and addresses of correspondents and representatives not in this list, apply to main office.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: (In Advance)

United States	$5.00	Canada	$6.00
Great Britain	£1 5s.	Austria	30 kr.
France	31.25 fr.	Italy	31.25 fr.
Germany	25 m.	Russia	12 r.

Single Copies, Fifteen Cents, at newsstands.
Back Numbers, Twenty-five Cents.

Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class Matter.

THE MUSICAL COURIER is for sale on the principal newsstands in the United States and in the leading music houses, hotels and kiosques in Belgium, England, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Switzerland and Egypt.

American News Company, New York, General Distributing Agents.
Western News Company, Chicago, Western Distributing Agents.
New England News Company, Eastern Distributing Agents.

ADVERTISING RATES:

On reading page, per inch, per year	$400.00	Front pages, per issue	$500.00
On advertising page, per inch, per year	200.00	Line (agate) rate on reading page, per issue	1.00
Column rate, per issue	150.00	Line (agate) rate on advertising page, per issue	.50
Full pages, per issue	400.00

THE MUSICAL COURIER EXTRA
Published every Saturday by Musical Courier Co.
Devoted to the interests of the Piano Trade.

Will the Russian concert programs change the revolutionary Viennese composer's name to Schöngrad?

Italy will have nothing to do with "Parsifal," and it has been taken off at La Scala and San Carlos Operas. How Wagner would enjoy all this additional fuss about him. He always did love to be a cause of dissent.

A terrible catastrophe has befallen Felix Weingartner. He has been expelled from the French Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers of Music. At latest accounts Weingartner was bearing the blow as bravely as he could.

From Lincoln, Neb., comes the news that the Story Tellers' League of that place will use plots of the Wagnerian operas for their meets this year. The most brazen story Wagner ever told was when he said that Meyerbeer and Mendelssohn had no real talent.

A falling chandelier, weighing sixty odd pounds, almost killed Leopold Stokowski the other day at a rehearsal of the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. Fortunately the descending mass missed the conductor by a few inches, and beyond shock he suffered no ill effects from the mishap, greatly to the relief of his men and of all musical Philadelphia.

A history of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which has been written at the request of Major H. L. Higginson, founder of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now ready for the publisher and the book is supposed to appear by November 18, which is Major Higginson's eightieth birthday. The volume will recount the history of the orchestra from its earliest times to the spring of 1914, and will end with a list of all the works played by the B. S. O. during its career.

On another page of this issue will be found an account of the formal opening of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra season, written for the MUSICAL COURIER by Prof. Edgar Stillman-Kelley. The safe return of Dr. Kunwald from Europe seems to have occasioned real rejoicing in Cincinnati, and he was given a royal reception by the audience, although that was due also, as Prof. Stillman-Kelley reports, to the excellence of the readings vouchsafed by him and his organization.

Remarkable is the popularity in New York of "The Tales of Hoffmann," playing this week at the Century Opera. For over twenty-five years Offenbach's pretty work was the most neglected here of all the grand operas, and not until Oscar Hammerstein revived it did the metropolis seem to realize the beauty of the score and the picturesqueness of the story and its setting. There are many other half forgotten gems in the opera comique and Spieloper repertoire and the success of "The Tales of Hoffmann" ought to encourage American grand opera managers in giving some of the older works a chance with modern audiences.

Among the distinguished musical arrivals in New York last week were Cleofonte Campanini, general manager and musical director of the Chicago Grand Opera Company; Florence Macbeth, the coloratura soprano, who is to have some appearances with the Century Opera Company; and Leonard Borwick, the English pianist, who will make his reappearance in New York, at Carnegie Hall, on Thursday afternoon, November 5, presenting this program: Organ fugue in G minor, Bach-Borwick; rondo in G, op. 51, No. 2, Beethoven; three harpsichord lessons, Scarlatti; sonata in F minor, op. 5, Brahms; theme varie in A major, op. 16, No. 3, Paderewski; serenade in A major, op. 3, No. 5, Rachmaninoff; etude de concert, F minor, Liszt. Just returned from a long Antipodean tour, which resulted in additional fame for the artist, he is in excellent playing trim, and to judge by the newspaper notices he received across the Pacific, Borwick's pianism and musicianship must be more impressive than ever. New York awaits his reappearance with exceptional eagerness, as his sensational debut here a few years ago is remembered gratefully.

Another important addition to New York's colony of piano pedagogues is Alberto Jonas, who arrived in this city from Europe last week and will settle here for the present, devoting himself to teaching and to occasional recital appearances. Mr. Jonas was one of Berlin's best known instructors, and so indispensable did many of his pupils consider his services to be that a large part of his class followed him to America. Already his studio is one of New York's busy musical spots.

Latest confirmed MUSICAL COURIER reports from Europe regarding musical casualties in the war are to the effect that Fritz Kreisler is recovering rapidly from his slight injuries, while Rudolf Krasselt, conductor of the Charlottenburg Opera, and Dr. Besl, conductor of the Berlin Royal Opera, are in the hospital as the result of serious wounds received at the front in Belgium. Aladar Rado, the Hungarian composer, was killed in a recent Austrian attack against the Servian main line.

This week the New York Philharmonic is making a tour of New York State and New England, beginning at Boston last Sunday. After the Boston concert, the orchestra visits not only Springfield and Troy, but also smaller cities like Holyoke, Watertown, and North Adams. The soloists for these towns are Florence Hinkle, Efrem Zimbalist and Leo Schulz, first cellist of the Philharmonic. The next New York concerts will be given in Carnegie Hall, November 12 and 13, with Julia Culp as soloist and with a program including the "Scheherazade" suite of Rimsky-Korsakow, the first public performances of Hadley's "Lucifer" and the Smetana overture to "The Bartered Bride."

America is making good its boast that Europe's martial activity will be this country's musical gain. Three of our native musicians, all of them in the first rank, held the concert boards in New York last week. They were Maud Powell, Albert Spalding and Alma Gluck, and the trio met with a royal reception on the part of the hearers. So far as American audiences are concerned, the parochial custom of admiring everything that is foreign and sneering at homeborn talent belongs to a period that happily is past. Nowadays merit is the only passport to public favor in the American concert field, and extraordinary foreign names draw our compatriots only when the accomplishments of those with the freakish appellations also are extraordinary.

Boston recently heard its Mayor Curley make a speech in which he declared that Major Higginson will leave $1,000,000 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in order to insure its perpetuation, and that he now expends annually about $40,000 in order to make up the deficit of the orchestra. The orchestra has so far cost him $900,000. Considering that Eben Jordan has put about $500,000 into the Boston Opera, it must be admitted that when a rich man at the Hub likes music and wishes others to like it he is willing to pay munificently for his hobby. As a banker, Major Higginson never would be remembered in Boston after his death; as the benefactor of the symphony orchestra of that city he will be glorified with eternal fame. Why do not other men who are merely rich follow the Higginson example? Andrew Carnegie should make a beginning by restoring the Pittsburgh Orchestra and Henry L. Ford might continue the good work by endowing the Detroit Orchestra.

MUSIC AND MILITARISM.

Everything that John F. Runciman writes is well worth reading, not only because it is full of interest, but also because of its suggestiveness. In an editorial called "German Music and the Prussian Spirit," which he published recently in the London Saturday Review, there are a number of statements which are not founded firmly on facts, but only on the personal opinion of the writer himself. John F. Runciman asks: "What is the secret of the decay of German music?" He evidently takes it for granted that everybody acknowledges German music to be on the decline. But that is only a matter of opinion, and opinions often differ. German music may, or may not, be decaying. It is not an established fact that German music is going down hill, and John F. Runciman consequently has no logical right to say: "What is the secret of the decay of German music?" All he has the right to say is: "I do not like the modern music of Germany." Carl von Weber had a right to his opinion that Beethoven was "fit only for the madhouse" after writing the seventh symphony, and Chopin had the right to think that the new composition which Schumann had just dedicated to him was "not music at all." This cry of modern decay is as old as the hills. The poets of ancient Rome often wrote about it.

John F. Runciman says: "Modern German music does, indeed, reflect the modern German mind and ambition." Of course it does. What great art is not a reflection of the national mind? The most permanent works of art yet produced were decidedly the reflection of the Greek artists of the golden age of Athens.

Dante is a reflection of the mind, learning, and theology of a thirteenth century Italy, and all Shakespeare's characters are English. Shakespeare, too, had a fairly high opinion of himself, if his sonnets mean anything. Why blame Wagner for inordinate self-esteem and not find fault with Shakespeare for writing,

> "Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
> Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme?"

If Horace was permitted to publish his thirtieth ode, in which he asserts that his writings are more durable than brass, and loftier than the pyramids, why should not Wagner be allowed his favorite expression, "I"?

The Scotchman's prayer that the Lord might "gi'e us a good opinion o' oursel's" has been very generously answered. The main difference is that Horace, Shakespeare and Wagner really had something to be conceited about, whereas the very great majority of mortals have not.

John F. Runciman makes the "merest guess" that Wagner's idea of a German was a man with "tastes and habit of mind fostered by study of Goethe, Schiller, Feuerbach and Schopenhauer, and the musical works of Beethoven and himself." We hardly believe that the modern Prussian is sufficiently subject to the influence of the German Goethe who exclaimed: "If only we could remodel the Germans after the pattern of the English!" We were under the impression that the modern Prussian wanted to remodel the English after the pattern of the Germans. The culture of modern Germany does not appear to be singularly dominated by Goethe's conception of culture. He says: "National hatred is a singular thing. You will find it commonly most violent where there is the lowest measure of culture. There is a point, however, at which it disappears wholly and where one stands, as it were, above nations, and is affected by the fortunes and distresses of a neighboring nation as if they were one's own."

No; John F. Runciman had better guess again and leave Goethe out when seeking the roots of that modern Prussian culture which Wagner was supposed to have exhibited in his prose works and which modern German composers are supposed to exhibit in their musical works.

Does the modern military spirit of Prussia affect the modern music of Germany? We do not refer to the actual war which now disrupts every art and occupation. We are looking for the military spirit in music. Richard Strauss is not a Prussian. If he has the Prussian militarism in his blood he has not succeeded in making himself popular with the dominating personality of the Prussian military force, the Kaiser, who is fond of Gluck's unmilitary music to classical Greek stories.

The romantic and melodious Weber was a Prussian; but he lived long before the military spirit was so rampant. Meyerbeer and Mendelssohn were born in Prussia, but descended from peaceful and industrious Jewish ancestors. The one great modern Prussian composer is Brahms, whom his admirers rank with Bach and Beethoven, and whom his detractors accuse of dullness and of almost everything except a martial and arrogant spirit.

Arrogance and boasting are not necessarily founded on military efficiency. The boasting in Purcell's "King Arthur," to which John F. Runciman refers, was written at a time when England's power was at its lowest, and when the merry monarch, Charles II, was too busy with his actresses and ladies of the court to be troubled with insignificant affairs like battleships. While the opera singers were boasting of their prowess, the Dutch admiral, de Ruyters, was sailing the channel with a broom at the masthead in derision of the English fleet which he had swept from the sea.

Of course, it may be pointed out to us that the boasting in "King Arthur" referred to a very distant period in English history. In reply we say that Wagner's reference to German song in "Die Meistersinger" was put in the mouth of an actor impersonating a sixteenth century singer. Wagner took good care that the song the boaster had to sing was a good deal better than any Italian, Netherlandish, or English song of that period. Who cares what opera choruses and actors boast? It is part of the theatrical game. Sophocles makes the ancient Ajax boast that he was "a man such as Troy hath not seen in all the host who came from the land of Greece." One of Shakespeare's characters, John of Gaunt, praises England in this burst of poetry:

> This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
> This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
> This other Eden, demi-paradise;
> This fortress built by Nature for herself
> Against infection and the hand of war;
> This happy breed of men, this little world,
> This precious stone set in the silver sea.

Another Shakespearean character dares the "three corners of the world to come in arms." The gravedigger in "Hamlet" says that everybody in England is mad.

Trinculo, in "The Tempest," says that when the English "will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian."

We really see no offence in the "Lohengrin" prophecy that German arms will always be victorious. That is stage talk, and nothing more. So is Nanki Poo's ballad in "The Mikado":

> For where'er our country's banner may be planted,
> All other local banners are defied!
> Our warriors, in serried ranks assembled,
> Never quail—or they conceal it if they do.
> And I shouldn't be surprised if nations trembled
> Before the mighty troops to Titipu.

John F. Runciman is apparently more of a fluent writer than a logician if he thinks that Wagner should have put English song on the level of German song only because England employed Wagner and sent money to Beethoven. The real reason why Wagner should have ranked English song high, is that in the sixteenth century England was musically ahead of Germany and fully the equal of Italy.

But let us stop all this mixing up of music with militarism. The one and only international language of the world is music. It lives on a plane high above all the artificial and temporary political divisions of the day. The human note in the great composers' works has a message for the human hearts that beat beneath all the flaunting and defiant flags of Europe.

We are all boasters, every one of us. The Chinese call their land the Celestial Empire, and the Russians speak of Holy Russia. A Frenchman is ever ready to prove that France is the intellectual leader of the world. An Englishman takes it for granted that everybody knows the British Empire is the most magnificent that ever existed. And where is the American who has not said that the United States is the greatest country in the world?

Therefore if Wagner, and a few million of his countrymen, think that German culture is the only culture worth mentioning, we must consider it a harmless amusement. We have no admiration for the man Wagner, and we think his volume of confessions a disgrace. But his glorious music is as much unlike his private life as the crimson rose is unlike the manure in which its stalk is embedded. We may not be able to free ourselves entirely of our political and national bias, but let us try and keep our attention on the great Germans, the great Englishmen, the great Frenchmen, who dwell in everlasting amity on the summit of Parnassus.

PHILHARMONIC OPENING.

New York welcomed with unmistakable pleasure the resumption of activity by its favorite orchestra when the Philharmonic Society gave its initial concerts of the season at Carnegie Hall, Thursday evening, October 29, and Friday afternoon, October 30, under the leadership of Josef Stransky.

The program presented no music unknown to this town, and therefore the chief interest of the listeners centered upon the playing of the orchestra, which was found to be of the same invigorating and finished quality which won so much praise last year. The men have reached a wonderful stage of efficiency as an ensemble body and in every department of their performance revealed uncommon confidence, knowledge and musicianship. The loveliness of the Philharmonic tone and the virtuoso brilliancy with which the organization attacks technical flights already have become traditional in New York since its oldest symphonic association was revivified a few seasons ago (thanks to the initiative chiefly of the late Mrs. George R. Sheldon) and shaking off its long spell of comatoseness leaped at a bound into the vital and progressive spirit of the age.

A charming presentation of Dvorák's "New World" symphony (a work built on tunes that sound Bohemian and are colored with Bohemian imagination) was perhaps the most ingratiating feature of last week's program, although the familiar excerpts of Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" also came in for a goodly share of appreciation. Strauss' "Don Juan" glowed with all the color which the score calls for, and Stravinsky's very queer and effective bit of symphonic joking, "Fireworks," brought out all the fine bravura of the doughty band of instrumentalists. They were rewarded throughout the program with great bursts of handclapping, Maximilian Pilzer is serving as temporary concertmaster of the Philharmonic, and had several chances to make his fine tone and elegance of technic agreeably noticeable.

THE CRIME OF YOUTH.

Alma Gluck is a shining example of how much can be achieved by a young American artist in this country without waiting for the stamp of European approval before inviting the criticism and the patronage of our public. When it is considered that Mme. Gluck's career is only some half dozen years old, that she made her first important New York appearance at the Metropolitan, that all her vocal training was obtained in this country, that she still is young, and that she dares to give song recitals and render Lied classics at Carnegie Hall, the enormity of her crime against the conventions may readily be grasped by even the casual observer of musical doings on this custom ribbed little island.

Last Saturday afternoon, October 31, Mme. Gluck, radiantly beautiful and looking shockingly young, opened her program with Rameau's "Rossignols amoureux" and had the temerity to adorn the song with fine tone production and polished phrasing. Mozart's "Zeffiretti lusinghieri" exhibited matured style and a blessed legato—two qualities which Mme. Gluck really should not possess until twenty years from now. Handel's "Come, Beloved," and Haydn's "The Mermaid's Song," completed a group of classics that according to prayerful devotees of hidebound usage should have been respected by Mme. Gluck, but not sung. However, she sang them exceedingly well and seemed to enjoy doing it as much as her hearers enjoyed listening.

Schumann's "Der Nussbaum," "Er Ist's" and "Intermezzo," and Brahms' "Botschaft Sonntag" and "O, liebliche Wangen," revealed a degree of lyrical ecstasy and poetical elevation quite presumptuous in youthful Mme. Gluck. She should have failed to grasp the spirit of those songs, as may have been expected by the old fogies who regard the great German lieder in the nature of puzzles to be solved by only one or two singers in the whole world. A group of Little Russia folksongs (arranged by Efrem Zimbalist) had quaintness and sentiment to aid the performer's sweet voice.

Fantasy, archness, tenderness and romantic fervor, none of them Mme. Gluck's rightful possession until the acquisition of her first wrinkle, made their appearance liberally in Rachmaninoff's "Frühlingsfluten," Glazounow's "The Nereid," Charpentier's "Les cloches felées," Massenet's "Crepuscule" and Ravel's "Tout gai." Three Vogrich songs, one by Horsman, one by Homer and La Forge's unfailing effective "To a Messenger," closed an exacting program sung throughout in such amazing fashion that the vast audience cheered Mme. Gluck as though her hair were silver. She is exasperatingly young to be so successful.

MINNEAPOLIS PROTESTS.

We are very glad to print the attached communication from Wendell Heighton, manager of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, which bears on a matter of importance:

Minneapolis, Minn., October 24, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

In your issue of October 14, under a Detroit heading, was the following statement: "The idea is to develop in Detroit an orchestra of local musicians more or less (as was done in the case of the Minneapolis Orchestra), and not import foreign musicians."

This statement reflects an erroneous impression which I have found exists in other places as well as Detroit, and even where the facts should be better known.

When the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra was formed some twelve years ago, there was in the city a nucleus of good musicians available, many of whom had played in the symphony orchestras of Boston, New York and Chicago. To complete the membership a number of experienced symphony men of repute were brought in, and this has been done more or less every year, as the orchestra was enlarged and developed from a local to a national institution. Today there are just eight men of the original Minneapolis contingent and practically the entire present membership is made up of men who have played in the foremost orchestras of Europe and America. Every principal is an artist of distinction, and the personnel throughout, in point of artistic ability, previous positions held, and experience in other great orchestras, will compare favorably with that of any other orchestra in America.

To create or hold the impression that this orchestra is or has been built up from local material, is an injustice to the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, to Emil Oberhoffer its conductor, and to the loyal people of Minneapolis who have contributed the financial resources (as was done in Boston by Col. Higginson), which have enabled Mr. Oberhoffer to develop in this city of the Northwest, one of the greatest orchestras in the world. Remarkable as are Mr. Oberhoffer's gifts and abilities, he could not have built up such a wonderful orchestra had he not been given the financial support that has enabled him to engage the finest artists anywhere to be had. And were the orchestra not so constituted it could not have won from the best critics of the country the verdict that it is to be classed with those of Boston and Chicago. Respectfully,

WENDELL HEIGHTON.

The misapprehension to which Mr. Heighton refers has been general in the East particularly, and his explanation comes as a timely clearing up.

Minneapolis is not a very great distance from the population center of the United States, yet to much of the country, especially the east, it seems somewhat remote. Neither the size or location of Minneapolis, however, would preclude its having the finest orchestra in America, given the conductor and the financial support to enable him to gather the best artists to be had. Each year has seen a decided improvement in the personnel of the Minneapolis Orchestra, a gradual replacing of the merely good men with the best to be found. The changes this season are of prime significance, for their "first" players could not be better and the remainder compare favorably man for man with those of any other orchestra.

Yet over and over again newspapers and periodicals repeat that Minneapolis has an orchestra made up of local players, which through Mr. Obenhoffer's abilities and training has become a very fair organization. Oftentimes it is the prejudiced opinion of those who wish to belittle Minneapolis (because perchance they happen to live in a larger city), or in some cases to make propaganda for the orchestras of, say Spodunk or Oatville.

The great musical problem of Minneapolis, a marvelously progressive and ambitious city, is to overcome the handicap of its size and location. In the case of real musicians who know and appreciate the qualities of a fine orchestra, Minneapolis has nothing to complain of, as from them the city's orchestra gets credit, as a rule, for its technical perfection and fine musical ensemble.

The Minneapolis Orchestra will not visit New York this season, and in fact will come no further east than Ohio. Next year the organization plans to make the most comprehensive tour it has yet undertaken, including New York and Boston. The Chicago concert this season will be late in February next—probably Sunday afternoon, the 28th.

PAVLOWA PRIZE WINNERS.

Awards have been made in the Pavlowa prize dance music contest, and this week when Pavlowa opened her 1914-15 American tour in Bridgeport, she danced to the music of the winning compositions. Edward C. Moore, of Chicago, and Philip I. Jacoby, of San Francisco, each gained a $500 cash prize, the former composing music for the new social dance, "Pavlowana," which the Russian premiere danseuse originated last summer, and the latter writing the music, which Pavlowa will use for her equally new "Gavotte Renaissance." The third cash prize of $500 is divided between Henry B. Ackley, of Waukesha, and Harry R. Auracher, of Chicago, these young men appearing as collaborators in the music to be used by Pavlowa in the third of her new dances, the "Pavlowa Waltz."

The total number of piano scores received in the contest were 288. Edward C. Moore is the music editor of the Chicago Daily Journal. Composer Auracher is twenty-eight years old. In 1912 he had the satisfaction of having his operetta, "The Pearl Maiden," performed in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. Henry B. Ackley, nineteen years old, is a junior at Carroll College, Waukesha, Wis. Philip I. Jacoby only two months ago won with a composition entitled "Nineteen Fifteen" the prize offered by the San Francisco Bulletin for the exposition song.

SOME QUAKER CITY MUSIC.

A visit to Philadelphia last Friday afternoon, October 30, occasioned a hearing of the symphony orchestra of that city at the Academy of Music, and the MUSICAL COURIER representative was glad to find that he had difficulty in securing a seat owing to the capacity audience on hand.

No more flattering remark could be made about Conductor Leopold Stokowski than to say that he interested his hearers intensely in the Bruckner E flat symphony, better known under its title of the "Romantic." The romance in the work is a long and winding one, for it lasts close to fifty minutes and covers a wide range of musical moods, none of them intrinsically compelling through rare melodic beauty or fascinating orchestration. The romance in the "Romantic" is decidedly bourgeois, a love story of the peasants, and it takes tact and imagination on the part of a conductor to impart distinction to a score of that sort which does not elevate itself very far above the soil, romantically speaking. The Stokowski style of reading always is graphic and to follow his resourceful stick and note the skill with which he bridged over the specious musical episodes in the symphony and sent home with added impetus its few inherent powerful moments was of itself an absorbing phase of the concert and a source of keen delight. His mastery of his orchestra now is based on long and intimate association and he makes the most of its many virtues, chief among which are the big and luminous tone which seems to be a permanent feature of the Philadelphia ensemble, and an attack remarkable in its unanimity and incisiveness. A fine dignity and air of conscious authority lie over the work of the leader and his players, based on mutual confidence and esteem, but Stokowski has by no means lost his ability (nor his desire) to bring out the declamatory and picturesque elements of the music he interprets, and for that blessing he is duly thanked by a community which has to endure much musical preaching from others and therefore is grateful to Stokowski for his poetizing. He gave also a warm blooded and scintillating performance of the first Hungarian rhapsody by Liszt. The attitude of the audience throughout the concert left no doubt as to the status in Philadelphia of the most popular baton hero that town ever had.

Frank Gittelson, the young American violinist, who has been winning golden tributes (and ducats, let us hope) in Europe, played Lalo's concerto in F and scored a genuine and overwhelming success. He is a born fiddle genius, at one with every fiber of his instrument, putting it through its technical paces with amazing aplomb, coaxing from it a tone of rare sensuous quality, and tempering its utterance with refined musicianship and an unusually subtle sense of tonal and structural proportion. He caught exactly the spirit of elegance and elan which should resound from the polished pages of Lalo. The andantino was an exquisite piece of lyrical presentation on the violin. Propulsive temperament glowed through the brilliant passages of the concluding allegro, but Gittelson, in spite of his youth, held his performance within strictly musical limits at all times and lost neither his artistic repose nor his acutely belanced rhythmical control. He is an undeniably significant addition to the violin ranks and his reception by the audience was nothing less than a joyous one.

A NEW MUSIC PAPER.

A new musical quarterly is to be put out by G. Schirmer, Inc., the music publishers, the issues to appear in January, April, July and October. The editor will be O. G. Sonneck, and the advance announcement states that the new paper is to have "a field of usefulness legitimate and distinctive from that of the excellent musical weeklies and monthlies published in the English language."

It is not to be a magazine devoted to the technical or professional interests of the music teacher, virtuoso, etc. In addition to the reading matter "there will be announcements by American and foreign publishing firms," but "no other kind of advertisements will be admitted. The magazine will not include news items, editorial paragraphs, reports of concerts, etc., nor a review department."

While a paper devoted to educational and ethical musical purposes always is welcome in the circles which are interested in such a journal, it seems unusual for its projectors to state in advance in their prospectus that the Musical Quarterly will present "serious and thoughtful reading matter, but not too heavily, or too eruditely, or too brilliantly put." Then follows a list of contemplated contributors all of whom doubtless will be glad to hear that they are not too brilliant.

Dr. Richard Strauss started such a magazine some years ago and named it "Die Musik." He later complained to a member of the MUSICAL COURIER staff that he was disappointed in the number of persons who subscribed to the Strauss paper. However, with the facilities possessed by the house of Schirmer, the difficulty of the German periodical should not prove to be an obstacle. There are many Americans who take music seriously enough to take the new Quarterly. We wish it success.

DIPPEL OPERA ARRIVES.

Andreas Dippel's Opera Comique Company opened its career last Wednesday, October 28, at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre with a production of "The Lilac Domino," a three act operetta, music by Charles Cuvillier, and libretto Americanized (from the German) by Harry B. Smith and Robert B. Smith.

Mr. Dippel's experience has brought him into contact principally with the musical elements of the theatrical world, and therefore it was to be expected that in his new enterprise the tonal side would shine with particular lustre. It did. In fact, the music, the singing and the orchestral leading were the features of the performance. Cuvillier's score is charming in all that the word implies. It has melody, grace, rhythm and instrumental piquancy. In some of its episodes it rises easily to the heights of opera comique, notably in the finales and several of the ensemble numbers.

Eleanor Painter, a recruit from grand opera, proved to be possessed of a winsome personality, decided acting ability, a lovely voice and excellent knowledge of singing. She made a pronounced hit and easily has a sure future as a comic opera "star" if she remains in that field. Wilfrid Douthitt, an English baritone, was another vocal asset to the piece. His organ is remarkably clear and well trained. In one song he did a sensational tour de force by holding a high tone for thirty-five seconds. Others in the cast were satisfactory, but the two singers mentioned far outshone all the rest.

The libretto is based on a very old plot and is not handled with any particular wit or resource, but through effective personal methods, comedians John E. Hazzard and Robert O'Connor manage to keep the audience in prolonged good humor.

Anselm Goetzl, the conductor, takes rank as the best baton wielder of comic opera in this country. He had his forces under wonderful control and made his orchestra especially play as punctiliously and correctly as though they were discoursing symphony. He is a real find.

In staging, costuming, lighting, etc., fine taste were displayed, and the selection of the chorus showed a keen discernment for female pulchritude. A representative audience greeted the premiere and applauded it warmly. The general opinion is that Andreas Dippel has supplied New York with a very high class entertainment, which should prosper strikingly.

FIXED PITCH.

A correspondent writes to this effect:

Will you kindly inform me whether all instrumentalists of renown have absolute pitch; and is absolute pitch essential to success? Can it be acquired, or is it due to a certain formation of the ear drum?

Not all instrumentalists of renown have absolute pitch. We know many famous artists who can tell only approximately what a note is when they hear it. Not all composers have it. We personally know a number of them—some of them of international repute—who cannot tell a note when they hear it, particularly if it is sounded alone, without harmony.

Absolute pitch is not to be acquired by practice except by those who have a fine enough ear. Nearly all of those who have it have had it since infancy.

We speak rather dogmatically on this subject because we have given it a good deal of attention for years, for the simple reason that we—the present writer of these paragraphs—have had the ability to name instantly any note sounded since our earliest childhood and have consequently taken a special interest in fixed pitch.

The most remarkable case we ever knew was that of a blind tuner who could tune a piano absolutely to the standard pitch without a tuning fork and while surrounded with a dozen pianos in various stages of stringing and chipping. We stood beside him and heard him do it repeatedly as a test.

A piano tuner once related to several of us assembled musicians that he had met a farmer's daughter in Australia who would name by ear any note on her old fashioned piano. In her case, however, she had no standard except the instrument, which was out of order and about a third below pitch. But she had the gift of fixed pitch just the same, and it would take her only a short time to learn the names of the notes at the right pitch if she had the chance.

In our opinion it is only a matter of time until fixed pitch will be the common passion of the human race. Generations of musical culture will accomplish what is now somewhat of a rarity. Few persons are color blind; most persons are sound "blind," so to speak.

Of course we can prove nothing. Our conjecture has no scientific value. Yet we cannot help believing that in time the universal cultivation of music will make the general ear more subtle. Fixed pitch may be the possession of a man who has no remarkable musical talent. It is a purely physical gift resulting from an eardrum, or tympanic membrane, more than usually sensitive to the varying vibrations of notes of various pitches.

The possessor of fixed pitch recognizes different sounds as easily as the eye knows red and blue, green, yellow, and other colors. A trained musician, with a cultivated ear that naturally has the gift of fixed pitch, can analyze full orchestral chords and name the notes played by the different instruments. This is only a matter of training and experience; but the natural ear must be fine to begin with. The famous Latin adage about the poet being born, not made, might just as well be said about the ear: "Auris nacitur, non fit."

Stricken French and English soldiers are being sung to in the hospitals by the Duchess of Westminster.

ALGY'S LEADEN COMPOSITIONS.

Algernon Ashton emerges from the war zone with one of his world-shattering epistles, which reads as follows:

10 Holmdale Road,
West Hampstead, London, N. W., October 18, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

Among the latest "war items" there is the truly startling intelligence that Germany's supply of lead for the manufacture of bullets is causing some anxiety in Berlin and Essen, and that in order to maintain the supply the German Government has commandeered the whole of the plates of lead and zinc used in the production of music scores! Furthermore, it is stated that no discrimination has been made in the commandeering of these plates, and that even the classical works of the great masters have been seized for the melting pot, in order that bullets may be manufactured at Krupp's for the army, in consequence of which many of the great German music publishers are said to have been ruined! If this really be a fact (and I can still scarcely credit it), then it would only go to prove in what dire straits Germany already finds herself through the war. But should the foregoing actually have happened, no British composer would suffer more by this horrible action than I, as practically all my principal works, including quintets, quartets, trios, sonatas, as well as hundreds of piano pieces and songs, have (most unfortunately, as it now turns out) been published by German firms, and a great many of the music plates were my own property.

Yours very obediently,
ALGERNON ASHTON.

We have called up Kaiser Wilhelm on the telephone and inquired as to the truth of the melting rumor. The Kaiser's reply enables us to inform Mr. Ashton that the latter need have no fear about his own publications or those of the classical masters. Germany is not undergoing a bullet famine and the music plates have not been touched by her nor will they be at any stage of the war. We trust that Mr. Ashton will feel relieved; we repeat that we have this reassuring news direct from the Kaiser.

ANY RELATION?

From "Variations," MUSICAL COURIER, October 21, 1914.

And, by the way, those Americans who shudder at the consonantal Russian, Belgian, French and Galician names, should remember our own Quemquamoguisett and many other similar tongue twisters to be found on the American map.

"Variations," MUSICAL COURIER, October 21, 1914.

We are still awaiting the photographs depicting the damage done by the Allies when they capture towns.

From the Boston Transcript, October 23, 1914.

We note that a Pennsylvania paper that prints a joke about Przemysl also contains a political dispatch from Punxsutawney.

Philadelphia Ledger, October 23, 1914.

Which way will American sympathies swing when the ruins in the photographs are German?

MENGELBERG DEAD.

From Amsterdam the MUSICAL COURIER receives the terse cable information that Wilhelm Mengelberg, the famous conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra, is dead in consequence of an accidental fall. No other details are forthcoming at the present moment.

Mengelberg was one of the guest conductors of the New York Philharmonic several years ago and scored a rousing success with his leading of Strauss' "Heldenleben." He was one of the directors, too, of the London Philharmonic.

The music of the stock ticker is silent throughout our land these days and the average citizen does not miss its insidious song.

BRILLIANT OPENING OF CINCINNATI SYMPHONY SEASON

Dr. Ernst Kunwald Given Enthusiastic Welcome.

By Edgar Stillman Kelley.

Cincinnati, October 30, 1914.

The cloud of anxiety and suspense which had prevailed in the musical circles of Cincinnati during the past month, owing to the unavoidable detention of Dr. Kunwald in Europe, was definitely dissipated yesterday afternoon when this popular conductor stepped upon the platform of the Emery Auditorium, and his appearance was the signal for an enthusiastic reception. Genuine was the pleasure experienced by those present on seeing the gifted interpreter of the great masters; a pleasure enhanced by the high quality of the program and its excellent performance.

The stirring events of the past few months necessarily have exerted an inevitable influence upon the musical as well as the political world, and the program showed a decided tinge of this contemporaneous warlike coloring. As Dr. Kunwald is a native of the city that gave birth to the "Heroic Symphony" it was but natural that he should have selected this masterpiece of Beethoven as a fitting means of expressing the emotions experienced by multitudes of sufferers in the various countries at present involved in such unhappy strife. Equally in keeping with this appropriate selection was the serious consideration which it received at the hands of Dr. Kunwald and the orchestra. Indeed, there were moments, especially in the first two movements, where the word "exalted" is the only available one to be employed. Kunwald, though habitually conducting from memory, always edits the classical scores with the greatest care—not only in respect to phrasing and bowing, but with reference also to tempi, nuances, etc. Certain procedures which he has "read in" to the work while sometimes startling, are nevertheless worthy of serious consideration. Thus, in the first movement at the beginning of the working out section he takes the tempo considerably slower than we are accustomed to hearing, but by means of this very procedure he brings out the harmonic value of the modulations in the transition, which are sometimes lost when taken too fast. Particularly pleasing was his introduction of the theme in E minor.

At this point I should like to call attention to the personnel of the orchestra, which is much the same as that of last season, in spite of the obvious difficulties of European travel. The various executants were in good form and one could not fail to note the excellent work with which the wind section supplements the able body of strings. This was especially noticeable in the thrilling strains of the "Marcia funebre." The finale was performed in a manner that displayed a great variety of tone color, clarity of phrasing and many happy contrasts of light and shade. Indeed, Dr. Kunwald's superb conception of the entire composition was truly inspiring.

Dr. Kunwald placed us under great obligations for bringing out Grieg's "Variations on an Old Norwegian Romance," the reading of which would have gratified the composer. The work runs to truly symphonic proportions and is characterized by a great variety of orchestral devices and individualized treatment of the subject.

We frequently hear the assertion made by the devotees of abstract music that Wagner, the composer, is surpassed by certain symphony writers of the late nineteenth century; if they will but study the score of the vorspiel and "Liebestod," from "Tristan and Isolde," and compare it with any German symphonic work, they will find a quality of harmonic profundity and an eloquence of orchestral utterance as yet unattained by their symphonists. This was again brought to mind on hearing Dr. Kunwald's poetic interpretation of one of the last great words in music.

Cincinnati is to be congratulated on this brilliant opening of the symphony season, and a word of gratitude is due those public spirited citizens who are supporting this artistic enterprise.

PUBLICATIONS AND REVIEWS

NOTICE TO PUBLISHERS.

This department is devoted to a review of old and new music publications, musical works, musical literary works and anything pertaining to the publishing of matters in music.

Only such publications and compositions will be reviewed as are deemed worthy of notice, and the MUSICAL COURIER reserves to itself the privilege of rejection. It is also understood that any work or composition or book reviewed in this column relinquishes its copyright to any part or all of its parts so far as a review of the same can be applied. This does not mean that the MUSICAL COURIER assumes or claims any interest in the copyrights; it merely means that we are not to be held for any infringement of copyright by handling copyright publications or works in this department.

Particular attention given to works of American composers and their products.

Oliver Ditson Company, Boston.

FIVE QUATRAINS FROM THE RUBAIYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Set to music by James H. Rogers.

There is no straining after any unusual effects which might be supposed to add an Oriental flavor to this music. On the contrary, the composer appears to have put down on paper his natural and spontaneous themes just as the words suggested them to him. The result is a work that is grateful to the singer because of the perfect adjustment between the words and the music. And the music is earnest as well as passionate. Another of its merits is its simplicity which permits it to be played by almost any amateur accompanist.

Justice to the poet, Edward Fitzgerald, demands that his name be added to the next edition of this admirable cycle. The original Persian text of the old astronomer-philosopher-poet would never have been known to the general public if the English poet had not crystallized it into verse.

A literal translation of the original, made by Robert Arnot, reads thus:

> Existing things were already predestined upon the table of creation. The brush did not paint good and bad. With destiny God imprinted whatever should be imprinted, and the efforts that we make in these directions are wholly lost.

E. H. Whinfield, who made a 500 verse translation of the whole of Omar Khayyam's original, makes the following verse express his translation of the Persian:

> 'Twas writ at first, whatever was to be,
> By pen, unheeding bliss or misery,
> Yea, writ upon the tablet once for all,
> To murmur or resist is vanity.

Edward Fitzgerald made 101 stanzas, founded on selections from Omar Khayyam. These selected stanzas of Fitzgerald have become famous because they are the work of an original poet and not merely the product of a translator. It is hardly right, then, that the name of the English poet should be omitted from such a quatrain as the following, which James H. Rogers has used in the second song of his cycle:

> The moving finger writes; and, having writ,
> Moves on: nor all your piety nor wit
> Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
> Nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

This verse belongs as much to Fitzgerald as "As You Like It" belongs to Shakespeare, who found his original in Lodge's "Rosalynde."

"EXERCISES FOR THE HIGHER PIANOFORTE TECHNIC." By Isidor Philipp.

This volume, which is No. 196 of the Ditson Edition, contains twelve exercises, filling fifty-nine pages. These exercises are exceedingly difficult, and as equally valuable to students of the piano who are sufficiently advanced to profit by them. Fingers single, double and triple, wrist, forearm all come in for a very searching examination, which will soon discover any weaknesses. All pianists should possess this volume, which is the product of a great French artist of long experience. The book is dedicated to the American pianist, Felix Fox.

The attention of choir masters is called to the long list of all kinds of Christmas music published by the Oliver Ditson house. There are Christmas anthems and Christmas carols literally by the hundred. In one respect alone are they uniform, and that is the excellence of the engraving, printing and paper.

John Church Company, Cincinnati.

"THE CHRISTMAS DAWN." A cantata for solo, quartet and chorus, with organ accompaniment. Text compiled by Rev. John McNab. Music by Charles Gilbert Spross.

There ought to be, and probably is, a great demand for just such practical, melodious, simple and effective works as these; for there are hundreds of church choirs throughout the country that are altogether unfamiliar with the dramatic and semi-operatic style of most cantatas, and that could by no manner of means get an orchestra together for the accompaniment of the same. But a work of the nature of "The Christmas Dawn," written in the church anthem style by a popular song and anthem composer, and accompanied by the organ, is a cantata that ought to meet with instant success.

Boston Music Company, Boston

"SELECT FESTIVAL MUSIC FOR THE ORGAN." Compiled and edited by Dr. William C. Carl.

There are four volumes of these well selected works by composers of all nationalities and styles. Vol. I consists of Christmas music, Vol. II is for Lent and Easter, Vol. III for Whitsuntide and Thanksgiving, and Vol. IV for weddings, funerals and other services. Dr. William C. Carl has brought his long experience and cultured judgment to the task of selecting the best numbers available, and he has fingered an occasional passage, indicated a practical registration for the average three-manual organ, and, in other ways, has displayed intelligent discrimination in his editing of the varied styles.

The volumes are engraved and printed in the Boston Music Company's usual high class manner and are uniform with the other volumes of this edition.

"SIX SONGS." With English versions by Bliss Carman. Music by Henri Duparc.

It is to be hoped that this beautiful edition will help to make better known the works of a composer whose excellence is only equalled by his unwarranted obscurity. Shattered health and compulsory retirement from the arena have had a great deal to do with this fine musician's lack of popularity. But the fact that César Franck dedicated his great D minor symphony to Duparc is sufficient to show that he had some kind of merit. Saint-Saëns also went out of his way to make a piano transcription for two pianos of Duparc's symphonic poem, "Léonore." These six songs recently issued by the Boston Music Company are works which the composer spent many years in revising and polishing. They represent his best work in miniature.

A FEW LONDON NOTES.

London, England, October 22, 1914.

There is at present and promises to continue throughout the season a complete absence of recitals of individual artists. This week, Saturday, sees the end of Sir Henry Wood's promenade concerts which have been running every evening since August at the Queen's Hall. The Sunday afternoon series of this same orchestra have already begun and their regular symphonic season of course is also about to begin. The New Symphony Orchestra at the Albert Hall also has its Sunday afternoon concerts, but its usual symphonic series will not be held. Then there will be some choral activity as previously outlined in these letters. That is, this is the winter's program as outlined now, but as to whether, considering the circumstances, these rather ambitious plans will be carried through if the public does not adequately come to the support of the concerts is another question.

Last Sunday, for instance, there was a meagre audience at the Albert Hall at the regular afternoon concert.

These Sunday afternoon concerts are a particular distinctive feature of English musical life. It must be confessed that the programs presented—both at the Queen's Hall and the Albert Hall—are characterized more by variety than excellence of choice, but I suppose they are planned to suit the taste of their audiences. They are programs which, if presented for the serious consideration of musical audiences in any civilized country, would be laughed out of court—or rather out of the concert hall.

A short time ago I had the pleasure of calling on Blanche Marchesi, whose London home is a veritable joy to the lover of fine things in the home. She has among her various art treasures a magnificent collection of rare Chippendale specimens, and more good paintings than one sees in three Royal Academies together. Notwithstanding the war Madame Marchesi has a very large and increasing class this winter, and aside from rolling trills on the vocal cords she keeps them very busy rolling bandages and knitting for the soldiers, among whom Mme. Marchesi's son, who has already had a pretty thorough experience of actual warfare in north France, may be found.

Speaking about music, Mme. Marchesi told me that of all the voices which come to her after having been trained by other teachers, the best and the least damaged are from America, the worst from Germany, although she thinks that German singing in general has improved in late years. She attributes this fact to the influence of the excellent American singers who have been pioneering in Germany in the last few years. "When the Germans," she said, "hear excellent singers like the late Putnam Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Maclennan, Maude Fay and Marcella Craft, to mention only a few, they realize that there is a better method of singing than their own and, by careful imitation, have really succeeded in improving their standard of singing in the last few years, as I have noticed for myself among those who come to me from that country." A most interesting theory, though one which I think many will be disposed to dispute.

I was very sorry that absence in Paris last Saturday prevented me from attending the concert in the Albert Hall given under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen by Clara Butt and Kennerly Rumford. Needless to say there was a huge audience which raised the profits devoted entirely to charities. There was an audience which absolutely filled the great hall and enthusiasm was rampant. Mme. Butt and Mr. Rumford are giving no less than twenty-two concerts between now and Christmas on their own initiative in London and the large English and Scottish cities, the entire proceeds of which will be devoted to various funds for relief of distress caused by the war. Among these funds is one for the relief of fellow musical artists not so fortunately situated as themselves, and another is one personally administered by the artist couple, who take care to see that every penny really goes where it does actual good and relieves necessity. The big concert last Saturday produced no less than £1,500 for the Queen's Fund for Women Workers. What a fine work these two great artists are doing with their magnificent gifts! These concerts, remember, are all undertaken on their own initiative and they are not taking one penny of fees.

H. O. Osgood.

John McCormack's New York Recital.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, was given another rousing welcome at his first concert of the season, in Cargie Hall, New York, Saturday evening, October 31.

The big auditorium was filled to capacity, and every number, from Mozart's aria, "Don Giovanni," to the old favorites, "Mother Machree," "Mollie Brannigan" and "I Hear You Calling Me," etc. (the last three being among the encores) was greeted by a storm of applause, which again confirmed the complete enjoyment that New York audiences find in the Irish tenor's singing.

Mr. McCormack's program was generous at the outset, but the audience was not satisfied until one, two, three and even four encores after nearly every group had been added, and it is to the credit of the tenor that he so graciously responded to these demands.

He was in excellent voice and mood, and again convinced his listeners of the extraordinary quality of his voice in every detail and his method of delivery, which is quite his own.

To describe here McCormack's qualities of voice and his individual style of delivery is altogether unnecessary, for McCormack's unique place on the concert platform is established, and his Carnegie Hall appearance on Saturday evening added but another strong link in the great chain of his successes, both in America and abroad.

His programmed numbers were: Aria, "Il mio tesoro" ("Don Giovanni"), Mozart; "There's on Earth But One True Precious Pearl" (Hungarian folksong), arranged by Korbay; "Sylvelin," Sinding; "Oh! Thou Billowy Field," Rachmaninoff; "The Bard of Armagh," arranged by Hughes; "The Banks of the Daisies," arranged by Stanford; "The Banks of the Suir," arranged by Milligan Fox; "Pluck This Little Flower," Ronald; "Lovely Kind and Kindly Loving," Scott; "Life and Death," Taylor.

Donald McBeath, violinist, assisted the tenor with numbers consisting of "Romance in G," Beethoven; "Ave Maria," Schubert-Wilhemj; "L'Abeille," Schubert-Wilhelmj; "Wiegenlied," Reger; "Tambourin," Kreisler, receiving his due share of deserved applause.

Edwin Schneider's skillful accompaniments were again in marked evidence.

Scott's Songs Sung at Women's Club.

Songs by the American baritone-composer, John Prindle Scott, were given a prominent place on the program at the first meeting this season of the Women's Press Club at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, Saturday afternoon, October 31.

Eugene Scudder, tenor, sang "A Sailor's Love Song," "The Revelation," "John o' Dreams" and "The Secret"; La Rue R. Boals, baritone, "My True Love Lies Asleep" and "The Death Triumphant," the composer being at the piano.

These songs show decidedly commendable versatility in concept and musicianship. "The Revelation" and "John o' Dreams," two especially pleasing songs written in lyric style, are among his last works. "The Secret" has been widely sung, Orville Harrold, the tenor, includes it on his concert programs. In "The Death Triumphant," Mr. Scott shows a decided aptitude for the dramatic. Whether he writes in the purely lyric style, in ballad form, or dramatic, his works are found to be particularly melodious, to be attractively harmonized, to contain plenty of tonal color and to be effective.

Century "Opera Talks."

"The Tales of Hoffmann" was the subject upon which Havrah Hubbard based his "Opera Talk" on Sunday afternoon, November 1, at the Century Opera House, New York. As a person in the audience was heard to remark, it is not necessary to study a libretto in order to enjoy an opera, after having heard Mr. Hubbard deliver one of his interesting talks upon that subject. The final "Talk" of the series will be given next Sunday afternoon, when "Aida" will be dealt with.

Laura Maverick Sings with German Society.

Laura Maverick, mezzo contralto, was the principal soloist at the Beethoven Männerchor concert given in the Lexington Opera House, New York, Sunday evening, November 1.

Mme. Maverick was especially happy in her choice of songs, the Gluck aria, "Che faro senza Euridice," from the opera "Orfeo," and a group, "Zueignung," Strauss; "Hoffnung," Reichardt, and "My Star," Spross, to which she added the Ware "Mammy's Song," as encore.

Plenty of applause and immense bouquets of chrysanthemums gave evidence of the audience's enjoyment, not only of the pleasing quality of her voice, but of her commendable interpretations of the well chosen songs.

LAURA MAVERICK.

Carl Hahn played his own melodious and interesting work for violincello, "Lied ohne Worte," and "Vito" (Spanish Dance), Popper, for one number on the program. Both were thoroughly enjoyable.

Mr. Hahn accompanied Mme. Maverick (Mrs. Hahn) in each of her songs.

Century Sunday Evening Concert.

Wagner was the composer of the evening at the Sunday night concert at the Century Opera House, New York, November 1, selections from eight of his works being given. The orchestra, under the direction of Ernst Knoch, did some excellent playing, their numbers being the overture to the "Flying Dutchman," prelude of Act III of "Lohengrin," the "Good Friday" music from "Parsifal," and the overture to "Tannhäuser."

Bettina Freeman was the first soloist, singing "Dich theure Halle," from "Tannhäuser," very acceptably. Maude Santley sang the aria of Adriano, from "Rienzi," with excellent effect. Her fine mezzo voice was particularly well suited to this aria, which is but seldom heard.

Louis Kreidler was heard in "Wotan's Farewell" and "Feuerzauber," from the "Ring" cycle. Mr. Kreidler's excellent diction and fine interpretative ability were well displayed in this number. These qualities, combined with a splendid baritone voice, make him an artist par excellence.

Gustaf Bergman effected his first appearance at a Sunday night concert this season, singing the prayer from "Rienzi," his sympathetic voice being uncommonly appealing in this number. The "Evening Star" song, from "Tannhäuser," was sung by Graham Marr and his rendering resulted in enthusiastic applause.

Lois Ewell sang two studies from "Tristan," and Augusta Lenska was heard in Erda's song, from "Rheingold."

The audience was unusually large. Contrary to the general custom at Sunday night concerts at this house, no encores were given, a great disappointment to the hearers, apparently, for the applause following each number was prolonged.

Now that Arthur Adams has £100 for the words of Australia's national song and Theodore Tourrier £100 for the music, it's up to the N. S. W. Musical Society to give some one £100 to sing it.—Exchange.

Carl Friedberg's Debut.

The debut of a pianist new to New York always is a red letter event in the musical circles of this town and in consequence Carnegie Hall held a rapt band of keyboard devotees last Monday afternoon, November 2, when Carl Friedberg made his initial American appearance in a program which promised to constitute a decisive test of his abilities. It comprised the G minor fantasie and fugue by Bach-Liszt, Beethoven's E major sonata, op. 109, Schumann's "Etudes Symphoniques," Brahms' G minor ballade, E flat intermezzo and E flat rhapsody, and a Chopin ballade, valse, etude and polonaise.

The newcomer is a modest, unaffected artist whose outward bearing at once suggested seriousness and absorption in his musical task, and he had not played many minutes before those qualities became apparent as the fundamental basis of his pianistic equipment. He has sound artistic instinct, understands fully the structural and emotional content of the compositions he expounds, adapts his style to their requirements, observes finically the tenets of good taste, and shows keen sensed appreciation of the dynamic limitations of his instrument. As a producer of tone he commands high respect and admiration, for the sounds he projects are of noble and voluminous kind, tempered always to the character of the work in hand. Technically, Friedberg is master of that advanced measure of mechanical dexterity which one expects nowadays of all pianists who have right to be considered as of the superior rank.

With careful analytical precision and yet without dry pedantry, the player laid bare the formal outlines of the Bach number, and his nimble fingers and pliable wrists were fully equal to the ornate polyphonic masses with which Liszt has seen fit to adorn the severe simplicity of the earlier master. Friedberg performed the opus in big, convincing fashion and displayed not the least trace of nervousness.

The Beethoven sonata had an agreeably sane and well wrought rendering, its contrasting moods of cheerfulness, gentle melancholy, and deep gravity being brought out in admirable manner, the adagio being especially eloquent in utterance.

Schumann's symphonic studies make exacting demands on a player's fantasy and musicianship, but Friedberg withstood the test splendidly and set forth all the varying tone pictures with resourcefulness and effect. Many judges agreed that he is a Schumann interpreter of rare power.

Unfortunately press exigencies prevent a detailed discussion of the other numbers on the program, but the fact can be stated that Friedberg pleased his hearers in everything he performed and scored a solid and gratifying success. He should be one of the season's frequent musical pleasures.

Charles Bowes Settles in New York.

Charles Bowes, of Paris, has recently arrived from that city and has decided to cast his lot with Americans, and establish himself in New York City.

Mr. Bowes tells of his many interesting experiences during August and September, when he was acting as guide and interpreter with the English army in Paris, and of the heartrending scenes he saw when he was working in the hospital established at the Claridge Hotel, Avenue Champs Elysees.

Mr. Bowes has made a specialty in his six years' work in the Jean de Reszke school of tone production. His success in Paris in this line of work has proven his ability in this, his chosen work.

He is teaching temporarily in the home of a friend, but will have a studio in a very short time, so any communications addressed care of the Musical Courier will reach him.

THE CINCINNATI
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. ERNST KUNWALD, Conductor
On Tour November, January
February, March and April
KLINE L. ROBERTS, Manager
12 Times-Star Bldg., Cincinnati

CHICAGO IS A FLOURISHING CENTER OF MUSICAL ATTRACTIONS.

Concerts, Recitals and Music School Activities Are Indicative of a Busy Season—Chicago Symphony Novelties—Century Opera Well Advertised Through Advance Press Work—News of the Week.

Chicago, October 31, 1914.

One of the musical events of the week was a recital at the Fine Arts Theatre, Sunday afternoon, October 25. The program was presented by Elizabeth Rothwell-Wolff, soprano of the Royal Court Theatre of Vienna, who had the able assistance of Edna Gunnar Peterson, pianist, and Ridgley Hudson, tenor.

Mrs. Wolff's selections were varied and pleasing. At first there was noticed a decided uncertainty of tone, combined with poor breathing, but as the program continued these faults disappeared. In the second group, Mrs. Wolff distinguished herself by an excellent rendition of Goldmark's "Die Nachtigall als ich sie fragte," while her closing numbers sent the audience away admiring her artistic interpretation, and the rich quality of her voice. Miss Peterson's work at the piano was excellent, showing a mastery of technic as well as depth of feeling and poesy. Her selections were enthusiastically received, and she responded graciously to encores. In two varied groups of songs Mr. Hudson pleased the audience, though he failed to do more. His voice is under excellent control, which was shown to best advantage in Bernard's "Ca fait peur aux oiseux" and Handel's "Where'er You Walk." The accompanists of the afternoon, Walter Henry Rothwell and Laurence Doerig, deserve mention for their excellent assistance, the work of each being all that could be desired.

Marie Sundelius and Albert Lindquest in Concert.

At a concert given last Sunday afternoon at Orchestra Hall by the Swedish National Chorus the soloists were Albert Lindquest, tenor, and Marie Sundelius, soprano. Tickets not having been sent to this office no report of the affair can be given. From hearsay and reviews appearing in some of the daily papers, however, the work of both Miss Sundelius and Mr. Lindquest was highly satisfactory.

Herbert Miller's Recital.

Herbert Miller, baritone, will appear in a song recital on Monday evening, November 9, at the Germania Theatre. Gordon Campbell will act as accompanist. A very well balanced program has been arranged and a large attendance is expected.

Chicago Symphony Orchestra's University Concert.

The next concert to be given at Leon Mandel Assembly Hall, under the auspices of the University of Chicago, by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor, will take place on Tuesday afternoon, November 3. Selections by Mozart, Brahms, Liszt-Stock, Massenet and Coleridge-Taylor are inscribed on the program.

President's Reception of Amateur Musical Club.

The president's reception of the Amateur Musical Club will be held in the Assembly Room, Fine Arts Building, Monday, November 2, at 2.30 p. m. A musical program will follow and will be furnished by Llora Withers Biggs, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, George P. Upton and Agnes Lapham. Edith Shaw Brown will play the accompaniments.

Howard Shelley Gives Much Publicity to Century Opera.

Howard Shelley, the popular press representative of the Century Opera Company, has sent this office a biography of each and every artist of the organization and other material which will be of great help, before, during and after the season of the Century Opera Company at the Auditorium. The daily papers have given much space of late to the Century, thus proving once more that a good publicity man is one of the best assets an opera company can boast of. Certainly Mr. Shelley through his connection in Chicago is the best press representative the Aborns could have secured. Mr. Shelley is the only one connected with an opera company in Chicago who has his entree in the smart set here, not only as press representative of the opera company, but especially as he is a member of the smart set in any locality he may be residing.

Macburney's Professional Pupils in Recital.

Last Monday evening, October 26, at the Hamilton Park Field House, the second of the MacBurney winter series of recitals given by professional students of his class took place. Miss Pettinger could not sing because of laryngitis, but was replaced by Grace Brune Marcusson, soprano, and Northe W. Faulkner, tenor. John Doane, a very capable accompanist, who acts as coach in the MacBurney studios, assisted the artists and did remarkably well at sight. Mme. Marcusson and Mr. Faulkner had sung in Rockford, Ill., the night before, but Mr. MacBurney urged them to sing even though they had had but little rest, and the program was beautifully presented. Miss Pettinger, dramatic soprano, slated for last Monday, will present her program of American songs on November 9.

Frank Parker Leaves Chicago.

Frank Parker, formerly of Chicago, has just left this city to become director of the music department of the Cedar Valley Seminary, Osage, Iowa.

Theodora Sturkow Ryder's New Song.

Theodora Sturkow Ryder has just finished a new song with words by Mrs. J. B. Carpenter, which so delighted her that she had it sung by Mme. Arendt at the Chicago Woman's Club, Wednesday, October 28. The name of the song is "Love's Feast."

At the Sturkow Ryder studios, Saturday, October 31, Mme. Devore, violinist, and Mrs. Ryder, pianist, played the sonata in A major, by Handel. The other numbers were furnished by students, including Ruth Hanak, who played Haydn's sonata in D major; Ernau Blythe Smith, who was heard in Beethoven's sonata, op. 26; and Alexander Alison, who presented the berceuse "Seven O'Clock," by Hartmann, and Friml's "Bohemian Dance."

Herman Devries to Give Operatic Performance With Pupils.

Since opening his studios in the Fine Arts Building three years ago, Herman Devries has given recitals with his pupils in the Fine Arts Theatre, and a number of operatic performances at the Studebaker, among them two acts of "Manon," two acts of "Don Giovanni," two acts of "Romeo and Juliet," one act of "Faust," one act of "Carmen," one act of "Lakme," and one of "Mirelle." In response to requests for repetitions of "Lakme" and "Don Giovanni," Mr. Devries will give the first act of the former and two acts of the latter with his students in the near future. The cast for "Lakme" will be as follows: Lakme, Mrs. Thomas J. Prindiville; Mallika, Marie Yahr; Ellen, Dorothy Cannon; Rose, Filomena Sarcone; Mrs. Benson, Margaret Gaffey; Gerald, Grant Kimbell; Frederic, Lemuel Kilby; Nilakantha, Florian Varkony, and Hadji, Leroy Wetzel. The cast for "Don Giovanni" will be: Don Giovanni, Lemuel Kilby; Leporello, Florian Varkony; Don Ottavio, Grant Kimbell; Masetto, Frederic T. Blum; the Commendatore, John F. Harris; Donna Anna, Hazel Eden Mudge; Donna Elvira, Ethel Magie, and Zerlina, Mrs. George Hixon.

News from Chicago Musical College.

Chicago Musical College Orchestra gave the first public recital of the season, Saturday morning, October 31, in the Ziegfeld Theatre. As usual the theatre was crowded to the last row with students and their friends. The program was given under the direction of Karl Reckzeh.

The orchestra now has seventy members and the management of the Chicago Musical College has made a special feature of the Wednesday morning rehearsals of the orchestra, and has issued invitations to business men and women in the loop who find it possible to spend the hour from 11 to 12 on Wednesdays in the Ziegfeld Theatre, listening to what might properly be termed a public rehearsal. This scheme has proved remarkably attractive and has met with success from the start.

Felix Borowski will lecture in the Ziegfeld Theatre, Saturday morning, November 7, on "The Rise of Instrumental Music" and on the following Saturday his subject will be "Bach and Handel."

Notes From the Spry Music School.

The pupils recitals which take place the first Friday evening of each month are proving a very attractive fea-

FRANCES INGRAM
Management: SHAW & TUCKER Orchestra Building, Chicago

GEORGE SHEFFIELD, Tenor
Management Concert Direction M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Private address: 4654 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN
PIANIST
421-424 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill

LEON SAMETINI
Holland's Greatest VIOLINIST
Management ALMA VOEDISCH
3941 Rokeby Street, Chicago

Lucille STEVENSON SOPRANO
Address:
4438 Berkeley Avenue, Chicago
Telephone, Oakland 1570

HENRIETTE WEBER
Lectures. Opera Talks, Opera Concerts
Address MISS H. WEBER, Auditorium Building, Chicago, Ill.
Or Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York

MARION GREEN BASSO CANTANTE
Auditorium Building, Chicago
Home Phone: Ravenswood 5774 Studio Phone: Harrison 4868

THOMAS N. MAC BURNEY BARITONE
Voice Production Song Recitals
Three years assistant to Frank King Clark
Suite 609 Fine Arts Building, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Harrison 6889

HERMAN DEVRIES
Formerly Baritone with the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; Covent Garden, London; Grand Opera and Opera Comique, Paris; Theatre Royal de la Monnaie, Brussels, Etc.
VOCAL TEACHER
MRS. HERMAN DEVRIES
ASSOCIATE VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Studios: 518-528 Fine Arts Building - - Chicago, Ill.

BUSH CONSERVATORY
N. Clark St. and Chicago Avenue, Chicago
KENNETH M. BRADLEY, President

LEADING SCHOOL OF
Expression Public School Music MUSIC Languages Dramatic Art
Conducted by an unsurpassed faculty, including:

Julie Rive-King	Harold von Mickwitz	Justine Wegener
Guy Herbert Woodard	Frank B. Webster	Edgar A. Nelson
Grace Stewart Potter	Eleanor Smith	Edward Dvorak
Mae Julia Riley	Emile Leclercq	Adelaide G. Lewis
Abigail Raymer	Ernest O. Todd	Robert Yale Smith
Roland Leach	Dr. Charles Allum	Anna McPherson

The management announces the exclusive teaching engagement of the world's most famous baritone. CHARLES W. CLARK and DAVID BAXTER, the famous Scotch baritone from the Royal College of London.

The Bush Conservatory is the only Conservatory in Chicago which has its own Dormitory.

For catalogue and further information address EDWARD H. SCHWENKER, Secretary.

ture of the school. This week the program will be given for the most part by the junior members. In December the program will be given by the adults.

The Interpretation Class program for Wednesday, November 4, will be given by James Whittaker and will include Impromptu, op. 90, No. 2, and Impromptu, op. 142, No. 2, by Schubert, and the sonata in A flat by Weber. The next week Mr. Spry will give the following program: Andante in F, by Beethoven; rhapsody in B minor, by Brahms; the B flat mazurka and F sharp minor polonaise, by Chopin.

The first rehearsal of the orchestra for students under the direction of Hugo Kortschak will take place at the school, 712 Fine Arts Building, Saturday afternoon.

The annual faculty concert will take place Sunday, November 29, at the Fine Arts Theatre. The program will be announced later.

ADOLPH MUHLMANN RETURNS.

Adolph Muhlmann, a member of the faculty of the Chicago Musical College, returned to Chicago during the week after having been in Germany and Austria since last July. He came to America on the Rotterdam, which sailed from the Hague, October 15.

AMERICAN CONSERVATORY ITEMS.

Advanced piano students of Heniot Levy, voice pupils of Ragna Linne and violin students of Herbert Butler, will appear in recital Saturday afternoon, November 7, at Kimball Hall under the auspices of the American Conservatory.

Karleton Hackett is much in demand as a lecturer on various musical topics. Besides giving a series of lectures for the University of Chicago, he will lecture at the Arche Club, Friday afternoon, November 6, on "The Opera in Chicago"; during the present season "The Century Company," "The $10,000 Prize Opera," and the possibilities of our doing something for ourselves through such encouragement of our artists, and at the Kansas State Teachers' Association, Topeka, Kan., November 13.

The Saturday afternoon recitals of the American Conservatory given at Kimball Hall at 3.30 were never more popular than at present. At every recital thus far, the attendance exceeded the seating capacity of the house. This was especially in evidence last Saturday at the joint recital of the Misses Doelling and Brown.

The classes in Dalcroze Eurhythmics, under the direction of Lucy Duncan Hall, are again proving very successful. The children's classes meet every Saturday morning at the Conservatory Assembly Hall.

CHICAGO SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA NOVELTIES.

The symphony concerts this week given by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Frederick Stock, were especially interesting, as at this, the third pair of concerts, no less than two novelties figured on the program. The principal one was a symphony by the French composer, Guy Ropartz. The work has originality, though it reflects the training received under César Franck. The themes have been well developed and the symphony held the attention of the public not only on account of the beauty of the composition itself but also because of the superb playing of the orchestra. The other novelty was the Coleridge-Taylor "Bamboula"—a melodious and colorful composition which won the approval of the audience. The other orchestral piece was the Dvorák overture, "Othello," which was given a spirited and enthusiastic reading by Stock and his men. At this, the third, concert of the present season the soloist was Hugo Kortschak, a local violinist.

Mastery of Music.

The mastery of music never just "came naturally" to any human being . The world has never known a more industrious worker than the illustrious Franz Schubert. Yet, if to any one in the world music "came naturally," it seemed to come so to him. When the school principal asked his harmony teacher how young Franz Schubert was progressing, the teacher said: "He is a wonder. Whenever I explain anything new to him, he always seems already to know it. He must have received his knowledge straight from heaven." Yet, in spite of such superb gifts, there was never a harder worker than he. And don't you think that we with our lesser gifts, should follow his example? If he with all his heaven sent genius could not succeed without strenuous daily labor, how can we hope to accomplish anything worth while without ceaseless, patient and conscientious toil?—Woman's World.

Florence Hinkle's Recital.

Florence Hinkle's New York recital occurred at Aeolian Hall Monday afternoon, November 2. Owing to the exigencies of the MUSICAL COURIER going to press on that day a detailed account of this recital by the popular New York soprano, will have to be deferred until next week.

CINCINNATI ORCHESTRA CONDUCTOR RETURNS

Dr. Ernst Kunwald is Back from Europe and Begins Immediate Rehearsal of Symphony Players — Thinks War Will Benefit American Composers—Other Local News of the Week.

Cincinnati, Ohio, October 29, 1914.

Dr. Ernst Kunwald was given an ardent welcome home when he arrived in Cincinnati on Monday of this week. Accompanied by Mme. Kunwald, the director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, stepped from the train into a group of musical enthusiasts which included members of the symphony board, critics, reporters, and many personal friends who took this occasion to testify to their regard for the genial conductor of the orchestra.

War and war's alarums seem not to have dampened the high spirits of Dr. Kunwald, who looks the picture of health, and began work with the orchestra the very day of his return.

Dr. Kunwald was in Bayreuth when the war broke out and went immediately to Berlin, where he remained until early in October, when he left for Rotterdam, where he hoped to sail for America on October 3. The ship was delayed, however, and he sailed fourteen days later on the Rotterdam, securing an excellent cabin and a much needed rest. Always on the look out for interesting novelties for the orchestra, Dr. Kunwald secured several German compositions which will be heard later in the season.

"On account of the war French and Russian novelties were not to be had," said Dr. Kunwald, "and in some cases I was forced to leave German scores behind because printers at work on them were called to the colors and had to leave the music half finished in the printing houses."

According to Dr. Kunwald the war will benefit American composers, inasmuch as there will be a keener search now for the works of unknown Americans owing to the difficulty of securing scores from Europe.

The first pair of concerts opening the symphony season will take place Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week in Emery Auditorium. The sale of seats has been exceptionally good, and the program is ideally balanced, comprising the Beethoven "Eroica," prelude and "Liebestod," from "Tristan and Isolde," and Grieg's "Old Norwegian Romance with Variations." A review of the first concert will be found on another page.

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERTS.

The first of the series of chamber music concerts, which are so important a part of the musical life of Cincinnati, took place last Thursday evening at the Conservatory of Music. The program included the E minor trio of Saint-Saëns, and the beautiful Schumann quintet. The artists presenting these two delightful numbers were Bernard Sturm, violinist, Julius Sturm, cellist, and Wilhelm Kraupner, pianist, all members of the conservatory faculty.

A PIANO RECITAL.

Walter Gilewicz, pianist, whose brilliant debut occurred last season, gave his first recital this season at the Odeon on Tuesday evening. Mr. Gilewicz is a member of the College of Music faculty. His program Tuesday evening embraced a suite of D'Albert's, a group of Chopin, and the "Carneval Scenes" of Schumann.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC STUDENT RECITALS.

The weekly Saturday afternoon student recitals have been resumed at the Conservatory of Music and will continue throughout the year. The students who took part last Saturday were Jean Simon, Katherine Cockley, Mabel Beierlein, Boyd Ringo, Helen Portune, Constance Baur and Frieda Besuner.

COLLEGE OF MUSIC CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA.

It is expected that the first of the series of concerts by the College of Music Chorus and Orchestra at the Odeon, November 3, will present two excellent student bodies at their best. Both the chorus and orchestra have an increased membership and under the careful guidance of Louis Victor Saar and Johannes Miersch, have reached a high degree of efficiency. The solo numbers with the exception of that given by the violinist will be performed under the direction of Albino Gorno. The soloists will include a new array of talent that will make its first appearance in public with the orchestra. The selections, too, are novel and interesting. A trio from "Fidelio," Beethoven, will be sung by Florence Hawkins, Adele Goldkamp and Paul F. Sebring. Frances Berg will be heard in the concerto in F minor for piano and orchestra by Schuett. The tenor solo in the nocturne, op. 45, by Louis Victor Saar, will be sung by Walter Vaughan, Ellis McDiarmid playing the flute obligato. The work is written for women's voices, tenor solo, flute obligato and orchestra. The violinist of the evening will be Nell Gallagher, a talented young pupil from the class of Johannes Miersch. Miss Gallagher will play the Kreutzer concerto in D minor for violin and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Miersch. Miss Berg, the pianist, is a pupil from the class of Albino Gorno, while all the soloists represent the class of Lino Mattioli.

JESSIE PARTLON TYREE.

Excellent Success of Four Morrill Pupils.

Laura E. Morrill, the vocal teacher, has been very busy since the opening of her studio in Aeolian Hall, New BERTHA KINZEL.

York, preparing her professional pupils for the concert season. Among these may be mentioned Bertha Kinzel, soprano, who is at present in the Middle West where she has a number of concerts booked for the month of November. Miss Kinzel, who is the soprano soloist at the West Park Presbyterian Church, New York, having succeeded Anna Case in this position, and who is also a soloist at a New York synagogue, has recently appeared with great success with the following orchestras and societies: The Boston Festival Orchestra, Cornell University May Festival, Albany Philharmonic Orchestra, York (Pa.) Choral Society, Lawrence (Mass.) Choral Society, Providence (R. I.) Arion Club, etc. She has a voice which is of excellent quality, and musicians who have recently heard her sing say that she has made great progress in her art. She is an intelligent musician, possessing fine versatility, and has a charming personality. She is as fine a singer in oratorio as she is in concert.

Another talented pupil of Mrs. Morrill is Mrs. Kenneth Croft, of San Francisco. Mrs. Croft recently scored marked success at a recital which she gave in the great stadium at Berkeley, Cal.

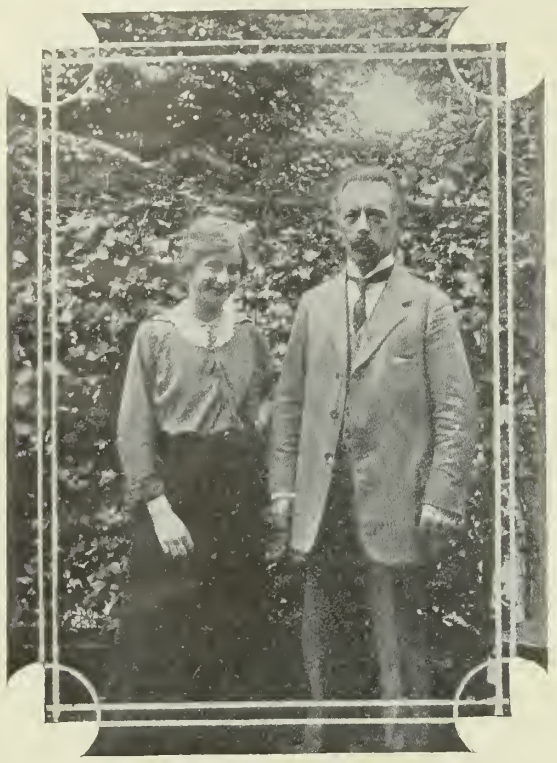
Jessie Pamplin is the possessor of a delightful contralto voice and is also gifted as a linguist. At present Mrs. Pamplin is singing in Buenos Aires and Montevideo, where she has been warmly received, but she will soon leave for New York, where she expects to establish herself as a concert and oratorio singer. Mrs. Pamplin has been teaching Mrs. Morrill's method in Buenos Aires for three years, meeting with marked success.

Russell Bliss, baritone, has recently been engaged as baritone soloist at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in West Eighty-fourth street, New York.

Among the pupils at present studying with Mrs. Morrill is an exceptionally talented girl, who is said to closely resembel Christine Nilsson in both voice and personal appearance, and who is expected to become very successful in her line of endeavor. Mrs. Morrill will introduce her to the public in one of her musicales this season. The first of these recitals will be held on December 15, and cards for the series will soon be issued.

Sousa to Give New York Concert.

Sousa and His Band are announced for a concert at the New York Hippodrome, next Sunday evening, November 8. The assisting soloists will be Herbert L. Clarke, cornetist; Virginia Root, soprano, and Margel Gluck, violinist.



The "March King" and his organization will be heard in a varied program, including the favorite Sousa marches, and an entertainment of unusual worth is promised for this occasion.

BOSTON HAS UNIQUE CONCERT SERIES.

Music School Settlement Inaugurates Sunday Afternoon Musical Attractions—Noted Artists Engaged—Italian Opera Continues at Boston Theatre—Notes and Mention.

11 Boylston Road, Fenway,
Boston, Mass., October 30, 1914.

Boston now has one of the most unique concert series existing in the United States. Over four years of undaunted effort on the part of the Music School Settlement culminated gloriously in the concert given last Sunday afternoon at the Boston Theatre. Maud Powell, the violinist, and Felix Fox, the Boston pianist, were the artists for the occasion. This is the first time in the history of Boston that its music lovers have heard such brilliant artists at prices ranging mainly between 15 and 50 cents. The Boston Theatre was packed from pit to gallery and many hundreds had to be turned away. Gratification on the part of the society was enthusiastically expressed by Meyer Bloomfield, the manager, who said: "This proves that there is a real place for the music at moderate prices. This enormous house should encourage us to make this great theatre a center of fine enjoyment. It is a form of social service that the Music School Settlement has always believed in and which may now be regarded as proved to general satisfaction. It crowns our creed of developing personal and social resources through music; of furthering talent among children of limited opportunity; shows the value of an education in music as a defense against degrading pleasures; in fine, it provides a lesson in social service."

IRMA SEYDEL, THE VIOLINIST, AND HER FATHER, THEODORE SEYDEL, WHO IS A MEMBER OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Maud Powell's contributions, performed in masterly fashion, consisted of the Vieuxtemps' D minor concert, the Tartini variations on a theme by Corelli, Nardini's larghetto and allegretto, "Chanson a bercer" by Schmidt, and a Spanish dance by Arbos. Numerous encore numbers were played in response to the enthusiastic plaudits. Among these "Deep River," by Coleridge-Taylor; a minuet by Beethoven, and "Musette," by Sibelius, were especially attractive.

Felix Fox was received with real joy, which bespoke the pianist's popularity in Boston. He played in a group, the Mendelssohn prelude in E minor, a Chopin ballade in A flat and the Liszt "Tarantella," adding as encore the sketch "Moonlight," by Philippe. The Strauss E flat sonata for violin and piano, op. 18, was played by Mme. Powell and Mr. Fox. The latter possesses an authoritative command over the art of piano playing and his interpretations are vivid, wholesome proofs of his sane musicianship. His technic is astonishing and reliable and meets every requirement.

These concerts are to be given every other Sunday. The next attraction, on November 8, will bring Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, and George Mitchell, tenor.

Boston Theatre Opera and Notes.

The Boston Theatre Opera Company continues its custom of springing genuine artistic surprises on the faithful, but small, audiences that assemble in the famous old playhouse in Washington street. Local critics and their respective papers are making a final vigorous call to the public to come forth and help assure the continuance of such a worthy company's original plans and season. What further steps may be taken to save the cause, I am at present not at liberty to disclose; however, several plans have been proposed, and if they succeed, the encouraging possibilities are that the institution may in time become an established item in our local music world.

Sunday Evening Concert, October 25.

It was a pleasure to listen to the splendid offerings of the Sunday night concert, which brought forth various members of the opera company and two visiting artists. Helene Josephe, a local soprano, opened the program with "Voce di Primavera," by Strauss, and won immediate recognition from the enthusiastic audience. The singer is very young, hence all the more credit is due her, for she possesses a voice from which much may be expected in future seasons. Charming in personality and appearance alike, the youthful vigor, sincerity and sweetness revealed in her well trained voice carried a very satisfactory result. In another part of the program she sang the aria, "Je suis Titania," by Thomas, and in both instances had to respond to encore demands. Millo Picco, principal baritone of the opera company, was equally as effective in concert as in opera. His voice was superb in Massenet's "O, castro fior" and Tosti's "Mattinata," followed by "Canzone Russa," by Giordano. Blanche Fox, mezzo-soprano, and Giuseppe Opezzo tenor, were both in splendid voice and their numbers arroused prolonged applause and, I believe, in one case Opezzo had to sing three or four encores to one of his numbers.

"Favorita," Monday Evening.

Donizetti's "Favorita" was given an excellent performance on Monday night and attracted a fair sized audience. The opera has not been given in Boston for many years and its revival proved a noteworthy event. It was staged acceptably and sung throughout in excellent style. Blanche Fox as Leonora displayed to advantage the fine qualities of her mezzo-soprano voice. Her dramatic abilities I have commented upon before, and they were again in striking evidence. Di Crescenzo was acceptable as Ferdinand, while Pietro di Biasi took the house by storm with his Balthazar. The basso has a remarkable voice and one wonders that he has not been heard of before in a more fitting way. Picco, as Alphonso, pleased, as he always does, while Giuliani, as Don Gaspar, and Rina de Sales, as Inez, were both very effective. Castillo's conducting did not add much to the success of the performance.

"La Tosca," Wednesday Evening.

I remarked in the opening sentence of this review that this company continues to surprise its audiences with performances of artistic worth. The instance in question this week was undoubtedly the "Tosca" offering, which had in the cast Ciccolini, Blanchart and Johanna Kristoffy, who are among the best artists in the company. Ramon Blanchart as the Baron was in his element. His dramatic abilities are ingeniously exploited and his singing of this role is a splendid piece of work. Ciccolini, the new tenor, as Cavaradossi, gave the audience further proof of his fine worth. Ciccolini's success is due to his refined individuality and polished style. Kristoffy, as Tosca, had a role none too large for her vocal or dramatic talents, and her portrayal of it was highly satisfactory. Other artists who figured prominently in the performance were Di Biasi, Giuliani, Florian and Roberto Vanni. Bovi conducted with spirit and a good understanding of the score.

Stephen Townsend's Artist-Pupils Heard.

Stephen Townsend, the vocal teacher, presented a group of some thirty soloists in two song cycle programs on Wednesday and Thursday evening of this week at Steinert Hall. Much praise is due Mr. Townsend for the successful carrying out of this rather large studio undertaking and for the splendid work that was accomplished on both evenings. A striking tribute to the scholarly instructor was paid him through the enthusiastic reception accorded those who had studied with him. Large audiences filled the hall on both evenings, and they were strictly musical audiences composed mainly of students and teachers. It is impossible to give detailed reviews of each individual

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX,
As Amneris in "Aida."

and equally impossible to pick out the best performers, for they were all good. In reproducing the two programs it might be said that many of the singers, although still under Mr. Townsend's tuition, are prominently identified with the New England professional music world. The programs follow:

WEDNESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 28.

Dorothy's Wedding Day (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Words and music by H. Lane Wilson.
Mildred Green, soprano; Flora Ramsey, contralto;
Earl Bellis, tenor; Dr. Fred G. Salisbury, baritone.

The Little Sunbonnet (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Words by Edward Teschemacher and Arthur Cleveland.
Music by Hermann Lohr.
Marion Smith, soprano; Alice Reece, contralto;
Walter Hancock, tenor; John Pierce, baritone.

Aria, Celeste Aida.....Verdi
Allen Newhall.

HEINRICH GEBHARD Pianist
Management: GEORGE WHIPPLE
162 Tremont Street :: :: :: Boston, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. HUBBARD
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
SYMPHONY CHAMBERS BOSTON

IRMA SEYDEL
America—Entire Season 1914-1915
Address, THEODORE SEYDEL, 104 Hemenway St., Boston

FELIX FOX PIANIST
WESLEYAN BUILDING
581 Boylston Street - - Boston

WILLARD FLINT BASS
Soloist Nine Times, HANDEL and HAYDN SOCIETY
246 Huntington Avenue, Boston
Management: Briggs Musical Bureau - Chicago

CLARA TIPPETT
TEACHER OF SINGING
321 Pierce Building - - - Boston, Mass.

RAMON BLANCHART

The great artist of operatic fame and master of vocal instruction :: ::

NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS

For Coaching or Private Lessons, Address 53 University Road, Brookline, Mass.

Oliver Ditson Company
150 Tremont Street - - - Boston
8-10-12 East 34th Street - - New York

Five Quatrains from the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam

SET TO MUSIC BY JAMES H. ROGERS

High and medium voices Price, each, $1.25 postpaid

From Omar's immortal verses the composer has chosen five quatrains which are among the most beautiful, besides being well contrasted in mood. Thus inspired, Mr. Rogers' melodic vein was never more fluent, his harmonic scheme more vital, nor his economy of means to produce just the right emotional effect more sure. These songs may be used as a cycle or singly, and will adorn any artistic recital program.

BOSTON NEW YORK

Fairy Dreams (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Words by Edward Teschemacher. Music by Franco Leoni.
Mildred White, soprano; Anna Musgrove Adams, contralto;
Thomas Lumb, tenor; Russell Hemenway, baritone.
The Divan (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Words by Hafiz (English translation by H. Bicknell.)
Music by Bruno Huhn.
Margaret Alexander, soprano; Jean Hunter Tanner, contralto;
Frederick Kennedy, tenor; E. Perry Haskell, baritone.

THURSDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 29.

Prologue from Pagliacci.....Leoncavallo
Bernard Ferguson.
Floriana (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Poems by Oliver Herford from Overheard in a Garden.
Music by Arthur Whiting.
Bernice Keach, soprano; Ethel Keach Ferrin, contralto;
Walter Bruton, tenor; Frank B. Morrow, bass.
Aria from Elijah, Hear Ye, Israel.....Mendelssohn
Bernice Taft.
Parody Pie (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Lyrics by A. Stodart Walker, Nancy Pain, Winifred Rose and Anon. Music by Liza Lehman.
Mable Woolsey, soprano; Edith Weye Wilson, contralto;
Harrison Burrill, tenor; George Dane, baritone.
Aria from Tannhäuser, O Hall of Song.....Wagner
Blanche Maguire.
The Morning of the Year (a song cycle for four solo voices).
Words selected from the works of modern poets by Nelle Richmond Eberhart. Music by Charles Wakefield Cadman.
Hazel Mack Glines, soprano; Jessie Nute, contralto;
Everett S. Glines, tenor; Roberts Lunger, baritone

Heinrich Gebhard's Activities.

The Musical Courier representative called on Heinrich Gebhard, the pianist, one day last week and found him in the midst of a lesson. I tried to effect a noiseless retreat, but failed when encountering the warm hospitality of the genial artist who is to play at a private musicale for Miss Lowell on November 12. December 4 he plays for the Harvard Musical Association; gives his own Boston recital in Jordan Hall on December 9 and plays for the Buffalo Chromatic Club on January 22.

Mrs. Beach Honored by Faelten School.

Mrs. Beach, the American composer, was present at a pupil's recital given at the Faelten Pianoforte School on Thursday afternoon, October 22. The program included several compositions by Mrs. Beach and others by Warren Smith, Paderewski and Liszt. Mrs. Beach, for whom the complimentary recital was given, expressed herself as greatly pleased with the work of the pupils, their discriminating taste and excellent technic. An informal reception was held after the recital.

Boston Symphony Concerts.

At the third pair of concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday afternoon, October 30, and Saturday night, October 31, Dr. Karl Muck placed the Brahms D major symphony in the first half of the program. The conductor's reading of the score added credit to his reputation as a Brahms interpreter. The orchestra responded well. The same degree of efficiency was, however, not maintained in the Enesco suite, as the ensemble was decidedly better in the cello and second violin sections than that produced by the first violins.

Pasquale Amato, the Metropolitan Opera baritone, was the soloist, and shared honors equally with the conductor throughout the evening. The "Qui donc commande quand il aime?" air, from Saint-Saëns' "Henry VIII," showed the baritone to be among the greatest singers of the day. His voice has lost none of its former brilliance and his phrasing spelled perfection. Handel's "Ombra mai fu" air, from "Xerxes," otherwise known as the "Largo," gave the artist another chance for displaying the beauty of his marvelous voice, and he won many recalls.

Boston Notes.

Last Sunday afternoon, after her concert in the Boston Theatre, Maud Powell, the violinist, gave the young pupils of the Boston Music School Settlement a real treat, when they not only had a chance to hear her play again, but had the privilege of shaking hands with her. A reception was tendered the violinist at the school.

The annual orchestral concent given by the Musicians' Mutual Relief Society will take place in Mechanics' Hall, Sunday night, November 22. Emil Mollenhauer again will conduct and under his baton will be a body of three hundred players. Lambert Murphy, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be the soloist of the occasion.

Arrangements are now complete for the third season of the Tremont Temple concert course. The first concert takes place Thursday evening, November 19. These concerts are semi-popular in character and the programs are a blend of familiar ballads and classic numbers. The special feature is the preponderance of songs and arias in English. Among the artists announced for this season are Evelyn Scotney, Myrna Sharlow, Louise leBaron, Blanche Fox, Elvira Levcroni, Jeska Morse, Michael Dwyer, Howard White, Emiliano Renaud, and the Lotus Quartet. For the first concert Michael Dwyer, tenor; Hildegard Brandegee, violinist, and John O'Shea, organist, will participate.

Victor Winton.

THE MANAGERS' FORUM.

Foreword.

I have crisscrossed this land hunting for concert game, have seen, heard and thoroughly studied things to satisfy my curiosity impulse. Were I to be confronted with the question as to who has a worse reputation over this land, Jesse James or the average concert manager, I would feel compelled to call it a tie for first place.

There is something wrong, radically wrong, with this managerial profession. I can say in truth, however, that I know of few other branches of business or few other professions that expose a man's character to more pitfalls and greater risks than the managerial line of endeavor and blemish his reputation more easily on the slightest provocation—and often without any. And if such be the case, would it not be to the greatest advantage of those engaged in the business to turn on the light, to counteract these many falsely founded convictions with some solid facts about things as they are, and not as they seem to some extremely sentimental and misinformed lay critic? The wornout excuse of having no time for such things should be buried in peace. The intelligent discussions of managerial affairs is just as important and profitable to artists as it is to managers, and it is especially helpful to the young artist who needs most of the assistance. The artist and impresario are not to be separated, for each is entirely dependent on the other.

Relation of Artist and Manager.

At present the average artist mistrusts the average impresario. Why? Because each side as a rule knows only the most elementary things about the business of the other side. Misunderstandings are easy and frequent. Let there be the least strain and something snaps. This should not be, for after all is said, with all its methodical intricacies and close bound rules, the managerial business is a very unbusinesslike business. Strictly speaking, much of it is a matter of good will, faith and friendship. And allow me to say that a business that depends so much on friendship surely ought to set about to remove the existing misunderstandings and false impressions.

There are and always will be things that may be tagged "What the public does not know will not hurt it." But there are many things just at present that the public should know in order to redeem the good reputation of many concert managers. That is why this Forum has been started by the Musical Courier for the intelligent and universal discussion of managerial affairs, ranging from the mutual business and friendly interests of artist and manager, to suggestions for improving musical conditions in different parts of the country and for creating a universal American appreciation of the best music.

Nothing to Lose, All to Gain.

No manager with legitimate business principles will lose through the dignified and tactful airing of managerial affairs, for there is no such thing as a "secret list" nowadays. The Musical Courier and the Federation of Music Clubs are scouring the land from one end to another for facts of just such nature, and the gist of the investigations may be yours for a mere trifle. Besides there are a thousand and one things to write about outside of things some managers may deem wisest to keep for their own counsel. The local managers will learn to view the tactics of the artists' representative from a different angle. They soon will learn what an extremely delicate task it is to book an artist in a city with a certain local interest without grievously offending one or two of the other competing factions in the same place—some of whom he may have done business with before, but could not on this occasion. They will learn to discriminate between purely imaginary wrongs and the combined business interests of the artist and the manager. And chiefly some of our artists will learn to accept the fact that in the total of success there is more than a morsel of business talent and intelligence.

Commercialism and Art.

The young artists will realize in all truth what a great task they are about to overcome, and many of them wisely will choose a path of less resistance once they thoroughly awaken to the cruel fact that their powers, musical, physical (and, lest one forgets, financial), are poorly supplied for the struggle of a soloist career.

The parents and our public spirited wealthy patrons of music will be well posted on the actual cost of an artistic career and there will be fewer musical careers wrecked through the old evil of ignorance.

The music clubs and other talent buying mediums will learn not to gamble heedlessly. All over this land there are scores of disbanded music clubs and local managers who have failed financially on account of unwarranted speculation with overexpensive concert attractions that their public could not appreciate, or they were not able to manage properly.

Saner and Safer Local Management.

It is the managers' duty to educate the inexperienced buyer of talent so as to save him from falling into these pitfalls. The apprentice in the concert managing line must be told that the drawing power of a high class musical program is not that of a well advertised vaudeville show, drama or other sensational performance. The success of the concert does not depend entirely on the drawing power of a name, even if it be a "top notcher." There must be a most exacting campaign carried on by the local manager with the combined effort of the musical and social leaders of the community, in order to make the public realize the cultural value of a high class musical program about to be enjoyed.

Suggestions of effective advertising methods and hints on how to undertake publicity campaigns in the daily papers (while preserving an atmosphere of refinement and culture in connection with every phase of the preparatory work), together with an endless variety of other gentle hints, will be given in this department.

Comment Invited.

Comment is invited on the following subjects:

Outlining a systematic campaign for the cooperation of public schools in a crusade for better music.

The mission of the municipal concert series and their mutually beneficial cooperation with the local managers.

A saner and safer distribution of musical talent.

Suggestions for advertising methods to be used by local managers (who in the beginning of their career may be saved from utter failure by timely advice).

Relative values in advertisements.

Encouraging the founding of local symphony orchestras by the publication of lists of those cities that are anxious to engage competent conductors, and could afford to pay for the drilling by such conductors at reasonable figures, if he were assured of being able to extend his operations to several neighboring cities in the same part of the country.

All communications intended for this department should be addressed to "The Managers' Forum," care of Musical Courier, 437 Fifth avenue, New York.

Nemo.

MME. DE PASQUALI AND NEW YORK NEWSPAPER REPORTERS MEETING HER ON HER ARRIVAL FROM EUROPE.

Mme. de Pasquali and the Newspaper Men.

While the gracious personality of Bernice de Pasquali, coloratura soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has won friends for her among people in all walks of life, she is nowhere more popular than among newspaper men.

Mme. de Pasquali is personally acquainted with several hundred representatives of newspapers all over the country, so is sure of a welcome in almost any city she visits for a concert appearance.

The accompanying snapshot shows the diva surrounded by newspaper men, who met her on the pier when she arrived in New York recently from Europe on the Italian liner Stampalia. From left to right they are: Ross D. Whytods, of the Evening World; James Lanehart, of the Evening Journal; Frederick O'Connor, of the Evening Telegram; Harold I. Smith, of the New York City News Association; David Morrison, of the Globe, and Mr. McLellan, of the New York Herald.

Mme. de Cisneros Interviewed.

One of the most constant characteristics of the truly great artist is a certain quiet dignity and unaffectedness which denotes a quiet acceptance of the fact of one's own gifts and a sincere resolve to develop them to their highest power.

It is this that impresses one most on meeting Eleonora de Cisneros, the brilliantly successful American prima donna, who comes to this country this season from innumerable triumphs abroad, in Italy, France, England, Germany, Russia, and indeed every land of Western Europe.

Added to this quiet dignity and complete unaffectedness Mme. de Cisneros possesses a delightful charm of manner and graciousness and a wealth of personal magnetism which most assuredly augment her success before the general public, always so quick to welcome these attributes or to be chilled by their abscence.

Photo by Matzene, Chicago.
ELEONORA DE CISNEROS.

Naturally the things most of interest about such an artist are her aims and ideals, and a tentative question as to these was put by a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER in a recent interview.

"My ideals?" answered Mme. de Cisneros. "Do you think, after eleven years of operatic life, I have any?" and her face took on a certain hard look at the memory of those trials and bitter struggles from which every artist, even the greatest, must suffer if only by reason of the constant necessary resistance which must be maintained against the forces that urge toward the facile popularity and sensationalism of the charlatan.

Then quickly, during a moment of silence, that hard look gave place to one of dreamy retrospection.

"Oh! I ought not to say that. Of course one has ideals, and the life of the artist is made beautiful and derives its fascination from the very fact that the ideals of youth and student days never fade or change in spite of every struggle, disappointment or bitterness."

"But you have had little of those?"

"I have, indeed, been very fortunate. No artist can boast of a greater number of appearances in the various leading opera houses of Europe—and surely that is a proof of success? But still one cannot be unconscious of the jealousies, the bickerings and smallnesses with which one is constantly surrounded. And the favoritism, the necessity of influence! It is so much easier just to flow with the tide than it is to maintain one's own individuality and idealistic eminence."

"Does that favoritism maintain even in America?"

"No country is free from it. Perhaps freest of all is Italy, for there no manager dare go against the wishes of the aristocratic, impulsive and noisy public.

"No! No country is quite free from favoritism, and of course the opera suffers from it. If merit were the sole guide how much greater even the greatest of our opera houses would be."

"But you are here to sing, and it would be interesting to know what you will sing. Not solely opera?"

"Oh! no. Of course, I have my immense operatic repertoire, but I also have the routine of the concert stage and my programs include a little of everything—the best works of the classic masters, German lieder, French songs, Italian, English, Hungarian, Russian. I should also specially mention that I sing some of the very heavy, strong, majestic works of the classic composers, works rarely heard because they require so much force and bigness. Then, too, I have a long list of very interesting American songs.

"What else can I tell you? I start off soon and expect to travel right across the country. I will sing with some of the principal orchestras and also in opera. But I can tell you more of that later. I have only been in America a few days.

"And how good it does seem to be home!"

Alberto Jonas in New York.

Alberto Jonas, the piano pedagogue and virtuoso, arrived recently in New York and will remain in America throughout the entire season. Mr. Jonas left Berlin on October 1 with a number of his pupils, who elected to follow their teacher to his temporary exile. They reached London via Holland and sailed from Liverpool on October 17 on the steamship Philadelphia.

It has been nine years since Mr. Jonas was in America and all of those nine years have been spent in Berlin with the exception of the considerable time occupied by his extended concert tours which have taken him through entire Europe.

Mr. Jonas had Leschetizky at his Berlin home recently for the celebration of the latter's eighty-fifth birthday, in company with Carreño and Schnabel and a few intimates. A large reception was also tendered by Mr. Jonas to the great old master, at which about two hundred persons were present, among them Leopold Schmidt, of the Berlin Tageblatt; Ertel, of the Lokalanzeiger, and Lessmann, of the Algemeine Musik Zeitung.

Mr. Jonas had been booked for an extended tour throughout Europe this season, but these dates had, of course, to be cancelled owing to disturbed conditions, hence his presence in America. During his last trip to this country Mr. Jonas was heard in many concerts and recitals and with the Chicago-Boston Symphony and other important orchestras. He has opened a studio at 205 Edgecomb avenue, New York, where the fourteen pupils who followed him from Berlin have already started their lessons.

Mr. Jonas expresses himself as being greatly impressed with America and finds that the atmosphere here inspires a man to give the best and the most that is in him.

Mme. Fremstad Acclaimed.

Enthusiasm often is a much misused word when applied to descriptions of the manner in which audiences act at concerts, but in the case of Olive Fremstad, who was the chief attraction at the New York Symphony Orchestra session in Aeolian Hall last Sunday afternoon, November 1, there is no way in which to characterize the behavior of her hearers other than to say that they brimmed over with frank, unbridled, constant and vociferous enthusiasm. The popular Wagnerian soprano was left in no doubt as to the fact that she has won an enduring place in the esteem of New York's musical public.

Mme. Fremstad was in excellent voice last Sunday and by her superb singing of "Dich theure Halle," from "Tannhäuser," and Kundry's narrative from "Parsifal" (Act II), demonstrated her command over the dramatic school of vocalism in its most exacting requirements. It was a pleasure to her admirers to note that even without the aids of costume and scenery, Mme. Fremstad demonstrated amply her ability to create graphic musical illusions which held the listeners both by her compelling exposition of the text and the artistic significance of the tonal delivery. Sung as they were by Mme. Fremstad, the Wagner numbers eloquently asserted their right to existence as concert numbers without operatic accessories. The "Liebestod" marked the climax of the splendid Fremstad renderings, although many auditors remarked also upon the virility and emotional depth poured into the "Tannhäuser" measures.

The orchestra played in comfortable fashion a Handel concerto for two solo violins and cello, the same composer's familiar "Largo," Bach's first "Brandenburg" concerto, and the "Meistersinger" prelude.

Portland Symphony Orchestra Concert.

The Portland, Ore., Symphony Orchestra opened its fourth season on November 1, with a delightful concert in the Heilig Theatre, that city. Harold C. Bayley was the conductor on this occasion.

This orchestra will be directed during the season by three conductors.

Gerville-Reache to Sing in Omaha.

Jeanne Gerville-Reache, the contralto, is to be the soloist at the Teachers' Convention in Omaha, Neb., Friday, November 6.

Dostal Pleases.

George Dostal, the Bohemian tenor, was heard in a song recital at the Gardens Club, Forest Hills, on Friday evening, October 23. This new tenor is undoubtedly entering at a surprising rate into a career which, according to all indications, will be brilliant in its every phase. His recent ascension into the American music world's realm of preeminence has proven beyond all doubt that this talented lyric tenor has vocal and artistic embellishments, individual and even unique in their attractiveness. His acceptance everywhere has been instant at the hands of his many auditors and enthusiasts. On this particular evening the program offered was interesting and one which drew finely on the artist's versatile powers. The opening group contained four arias from old Italian masterpieces by Mascagni, Leoncavallo, Donizetti and Ricci. More suitable selections for a ready displayal of Dostal's individual manner of singing and his uncommonly passionate lyric quality in voice could not have been chosen. His Italian diction is well near faultless, and then another item, an intuition, bespeaking itself in florid temperamental suggestions, which allows of the conclusion that the singer cherishes close understanding of the Italian innermost nature, lends further charm to his rendition of such numbers. The two following groups concluding the program, were composed of English ballads; composers represented here were Noel Johnson, Emil Polak, Chapman, Landon Ronald, Tosti, William Stickles, Tete and Sanderson.

Enunciation is one of the particularly good features of his singing, and throughout the entire evening he succeeded in pleasing in the most fascinating manner. Emil Polak, his ingenious accompanist was again in that happy mood of playing, which has identified him so successfully in near and far music circles.

Cadman at Work.

Nelle Richmond Eberhart, who has collaborated with Charles Wakefield Cadman for twelve years, has been spending a month in Colorado with Mr. Cadman and his mother, Mrs. Cadman. They have been at work on a one act opera and various songs.

WHERE CADMAN COMPOSES.
His lodge in Colorado.

In the accompanying picture appear, reading from left to right, Mrs. Eberhart, Mr. Cadman, and Lola Carrier

CADMAN AND FRIENDS AT FORMER'S COLORADO HOME.

Worrell, the Denver composer, whose "Chimes" Alma Gluck and other artists have been using.

On October 25, Mr. Cadman started on his tour of Western engagements with the Indian Princess, Tsianina Redfeather.

The second picture shows Mr. Cadman's lodge in Colorado.

In the Name of Grand Opera.

Putting on grand opera is mighty hard work. It is apt to be rather thankless work, too. And in Seattle it is not very well paid work, from the financial standpoint. Yet The Town Crier ventures the opinion that not a single member of the Standard Grand Opera Company, which finishes its first week of the 1914-1915 season at the Metropolitan tonight, feels other than proud and happy to be a part of that organization and anxious to begin work on next January's scores of "Faust" and "Hansel and Gretel."—Seattle (Wash.) Town Crier.

Victor Küzdo Talks of Auer's Classes.

In a recent chat with Victor Küzdö, the violinist, a MUSICAL COURIER representative gleaned some interesting details of present musical conditions abroad and of Küzdö's enforced stay in Germany, while a pupil of Leopold Auer.

"I have arrived but recently," related Mr. Küzdö, "and am more than happy to be home again. It took me just two months to secure passage for New York. In the interior of Germany all is peaceful and quiet. Nobody would realize that the empire carries on war with seven nations. Order prevails everywhere. Food is plentiful and prices are normal. Nobody seems to be short of money, except the musicians, with whom, after all, it is a chronic state. One would naturally expect all theatres, opera houses, concert halls and similar places of entertainment to be closed indefinitely. This is really the case in Paris, not so, however, in Berlin or in other large towns in Germany. Operas, plays and concerts are given and are well attended, considering present conditions. Some of the renowned artists have announced recitals, which surely will draw fair sized audiences. The opera and play houses are also well filled. Patriotic subjects predominate.

"The music teachers, however, do suffer to some extent. Music at best is a luxury and its culture and practice is naturally crippled if political disturbances agitate the country.

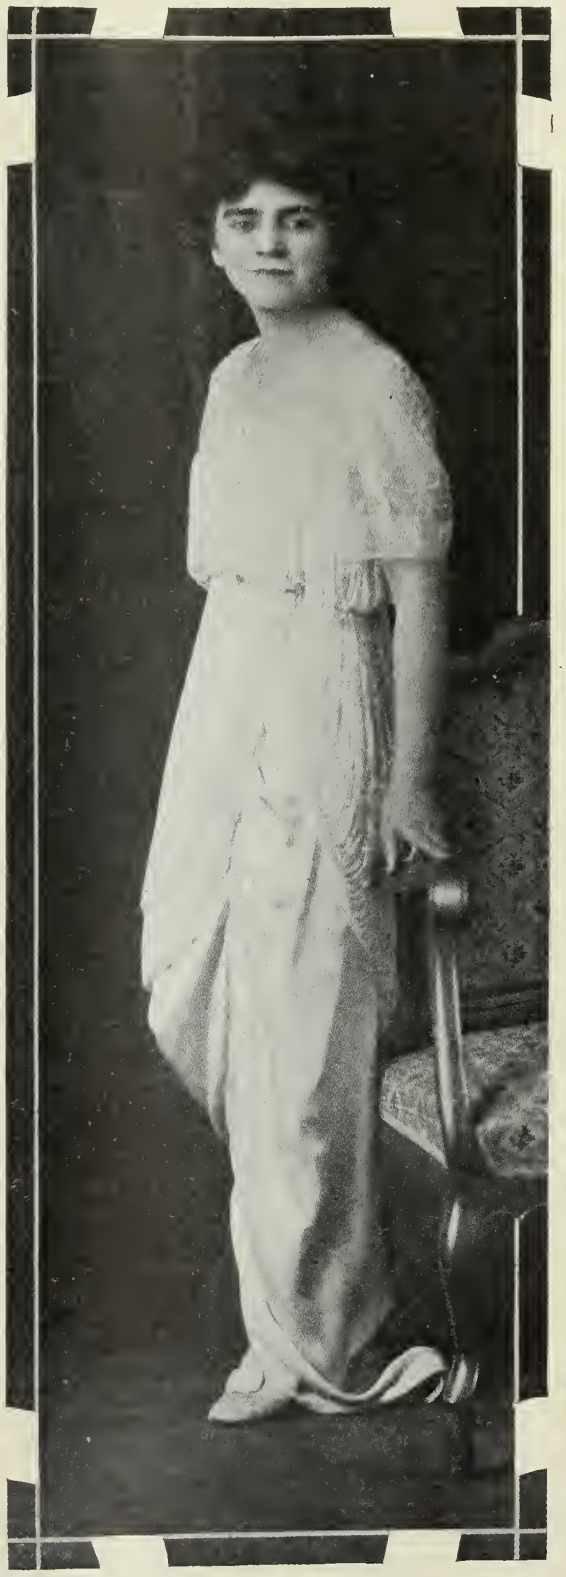
"My stay abroad was of a most agreeable nature. I left in May for my annual visit to Loschwitz, where my great master, Leopold Auer, holds forth every summer. Besides coaching with him, I also gave lessons to a number of his pupils, helping them to get their concertos ready for him. After the war broke out all his pupils flocked to him for advice. Most of them expected to spend the winter in Russia studying, and were bewildered at the interruption of their plans and the possible breaking up of their career. To the American pupils his counsel was to return to the United States and keep studying with me until the war is over and conditions would favor their return to him. Professor Auer gave me the sole authorization, for America, to teach according to his system.

"I would like to say that, contrary to all rumors, at no time was he made a prisoner of war by the German authorities, despite his Russian citizenship. They promised to notify him as soon as passenger service was resumed on the railways, to give him opportunity to start for his home in Petrograd. As usual, he again was flooded with applicants, but could accept only one-third of them on account of his limiting his lessons to four a day.

"We also had our annual garden party in July, which Professor Auer gives for the exclusive entertainment of his pupils. It consists of a violin recital followed by a general good time and a generous collation. Eddy Brown was selected by him to render a program, which was of most absorbing interest to the students. He opened the recital with Dvorák's concerto, later on playing 'La Chasse,' by Cartier; 'Vogel als Prophet,' by Schumann (in Auer's transcription); a Paginini caprice and my serenade and 'Witches Dance' for the violin alone. Eddy Brown, who is but eighteen years old, gave a marvelous performance of the difficult and ungrateful concerto. The composition has some enchanting sections, but on the whole it is not a great work. The first movement is perhaps the best and most effective of the three. The smaller compositions were rendered by him with subtle charm and wonderful coloring. His technical skill is not surpassed by any living violinist. He is already famous abroad and I wonder how long it will be before American managers take notice of him.

"The delightful recital ended with Sarasate's exotic 'Navarra,' for two violins, in which Isolde Menges, the fascinating English violinist, divided the honors with Eddy Brown.

"Miss Menges concertized last season all over Europe with great success. I was thinking why it has not occurred to some enterprising American manager to induce Professor Auer to visit our shores and give his usual summer course here instead of at Loschwitz. I am sure it would prove a great success, artistically and financially. I hardly think he would hesitate to consider an offer, at the present state of European affairs, that was worthy of his wonderful skill and fame. According to the unanimous verdict of all those who have studied with him, there is but one Leopold Auer."



Victor Wittgenstein's Program.

Victor Wittgenstein, violinist, will play the following program at Aeolian Hall, New York, on Friday afternoon, November 20:

Ballade, op. 10, No. 1 (after the Scottish ballad Edward)...Brahms
Rhapsody, op. 79, No. 2.....Brahms
Capriccio, op. 76, No. 2.....Brahms
Presto.....Scarlatti
Sonata, op. 31, No. 3.....Beethoven
Prelude, aria and finale.....César Franck
Etudes, op. 10, No. 7; op. 25, No. 1; op. 25, No. 3.....Chopin
Chant Polonaise (arr. by Liszt).....Chopin
Scherzo, B minor.....Chopin
Restless, Ceaseless, op. 7, No. 3.....Rubin Goldmark
Weeping Willows, op. 12, No. 2.....Rubin Goldmark
Etude de Concert.....MacDowell

How Chicago Received Jenny Dufau.

A large and select audience, gratified and enthusiastic, requesting one encore after another, until they had happily gotten seven of them, greeted Jenny Dufau, the versatile coloratura prima donna of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, at her opening recital in the Illinois Theatre, in Chicago, recently. It was the first concert of the season, and the Chicago public was found ready to acknowledge that this artist, in whom are blended the brilliant qualities of the operatic stage, as well as the more intimate ones of the concert stage, and to whom they have paid tribute so often Copyright by Moffett Studio, Chicago.

JENNY DUFAU.

in the Auditorium in coloratura roles, has discovered, beyond any doubt, that something which designates the superior concert singer—the secret of how to reach the public's heart.

Karleton Hackett remarked in the Post:

There was a warmth in Miss Dufau's singing yesterday afternoon that we have never been able to feel to such a degree heretofore; never have we heard her get into the meaning with the wholeheartedness that she gave out yesterday afternoon. There was no feeling of vocalization of brilliant display for its own sake, but she was using all her vocal skill to bring out the thing that the composer intended.

As we listened to her, the feeling came to us that perhaps this war is to do one thing for us, to give us truer appreciation of art, since, in our sober mood, we shall be more responsive to the essentials, while the artists, if they have any heart in them at all, will approach their art with a sincerity that might not have been quite possible last year.

This does not mean that purely decorative music like the "Bell Song" from "Lakme" will not have its proper place in this winter's programs. The thing which stands for grace, for the charm of daintiness, will be welcome if the singer can make us feel the gracefulness of the thought, and not give merely the impression of technical display. Miss Dufau gave us this feeling yesterday in her singing; that with all her heart she was striving to make us appreciate the manner of thought which gives the distinctive French quality. It was delightful, with perfect clarity in the doing, and the feeling back of it that made it ring true.

In her French songs she was at her best; especially in the "Beau Soir" of Debussy there was a sustained tone, with richness of color that made this a gem.

ALMA
PETERSON
SOPRANO
Chicago Grand Opera Co.
Open for Concert, Recital Oratorio Engagements
Private address: 1149 Selby Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

HARRY MUNRO BASSO CANTANTE
Available for Recitals, Festivals and Oratorio
Exclusive Management: C. DEXTER RICHARDSON, 501 Fifth Ave., N Y.

WILHELM
SPOOR
Season 1914-15 on tour with ALMA GLUCK
Coaching and Repertoire
APPOINTMENT BY MAIL ONLY
Care of WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street :: :: New York
KNABE PIANO

MORGAN KINGSTON

MORGAN KINGSTON,
As Don Jose in "Carmen."
PRINCIPAL TENOR CENTURY OPERA COMPANY
SEASONS 1913-'14-'15-'16

MME. OLIVE FREMSTAD
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID
500 Fifth Avenue, New York
NOW IN AMERICA
Dates Booking Season 1914-1915
STEINWAY PIANO USED

NEWARK CHORUS HOLDS FIRST REHEARSAL.

Nearly Five-Hundred Singers Assemble to Prepare for Three-Day Music Festival—Unusual Interest and Enthusiasm Shown—Advisory Committee Elects Officers—Board of Education Grants Use of Central High School for Rehearsals.

Newark, N. J., October 31, 1914.

The much talked of Newark Music Festival Chorus is now permanently established. It is no longer only a topic for discussion, but indeed a real body of singers which has been tried and has "made good."

Last Wednesday evening the first rehearsal of this gigantic chorus was held in the large lecture rooms of the South Park Church, corner Broad street and Clinton avenue, Newark. Nearly five hundred singers were present, many of whom had not registered or received their membership cards beforehand. It was a great surprise to all of those persons working in the interest of the festival to see so large a number present at this first rehearsal. It was known that the big group of singers who are to commute from New York each week would not be present at this first meeting, because of another musical event. Too, it proved a bad evening for many other suburban singers, but nevertheless all expect to be present at the next rehearsal, on Wednesday evening, November 4, in the Central High School auditorium.

It was interesting last Wednesday evening to note the enthusiasm displayed everywhere. There were a number of young singers present, as well as many older ones. Age makes little difference, and rightly so, for it is the voice and not looks that count in an organization of this kind. Everyone seemed to enter into the spirit of the affair and sang with a zest and feeling almost unbelievable. It was a case of sight reading at this first meeting and the result was splendid. There were undoubtedly many present who had not received the training that others had been so fortunate as to acquire, yet, nevertheless, they fitted in well and worked in splendid harmony with the others.

Conductor C. Mortimer Wiske expressed himself as being delighted with the rehearsal, and especially with the enthusiasm shown. "This is a sure sign of the festival's success," he said. "If each singer will take the same interest in the rehearsals as demonstrated here tonight, there is not a doubt but that the chorus will be much larger than we ever expected, and the results will soon prove that real interest has been taken in the work."

The rehearsal was set for 8 o'clock. When the doors were opened at 7.20 there were nearly fifty singers waiting to get in. At 7.45 they arrived in such large numbers that a little difficulty was experienced in getting them to their proper seats, each one of which was numbered.

Before beginning the rehearsal, Conductor Wiske outlined to the singers the work he is to undertake with the chorus. He also announced that it had been decided to hold monthly musicales on rehearsal nights, shortening the time of practice and devoting the remainder of the evening to an especially arranged musical program; on these occasions the soloists will be chosen from the chorus body.

The choral numbers sung at this first rehearsal were the choral fantasie, from "Lohengrin"; the choral, "Awake," from "Meistersinger"; Dudley Buck's "Hymn to Music," and the "Blue Danube Waltzes," by Sullivan.

Singers who desire to join the chorus are urged to secure their membership cards at the Newark Music Festival Association office, 593 Broad street (Lauter Building), before the evening of rehearsal.

Advisory Committee Elects Officers.

On Thursday evening, October 29, a meeting of the advisory committee of the Newark Music Festival Association, was held in Lauter Hall, 593 Broad street, a representative group of musicians being present. Louise Westwood and Charles Grant Shaffer were elected chairman and vice-chairman, respectively, of this committee.

The advisory committee, which is comprised of the organists, chorus and choir leaders, teachers and prominent musicians, was organized for the purpose of bringing together a representative group of musicians in the city and suburbs, who would assist the association in an advisory capacity as well as aid them through their personal influence.

The festival association is composed of prominent business men and women who have guaranteed to back the festival financially. The advisory committee includes the musicians of the city who are expected to work with the association in various ways, and assist the organization, not financially, but through their personal influence, and work among the singers of the city.

The most important question under discussion at this meeting was the securing of a rehearsal hall large enough to accommodate the gigantic chorus which is increasing in size daily. Various halls and auditoriums were suggested but none with the exception of the Central High School Auditorium seemed satisfactory.

It was late in the evening when it was decided to communicate with the Board of Education in reference to securing one of the high school buildings. By coincidence it was learned that the monthly meeting of the Board of Education was then in progress at the City Hall, and despite the late hour J. H. Huntington, Jr., was appointed a committee of one to attend the Board of Education meeting and present the committee's request in person.

It was a delightful surprise to every one when it was learned later that the Board of Education had not only granted the association the use of the Central High School for its rehearsals, but it had also decided to allow the circulars and poster matter of the association to be distributed among the public schools of the city.

The next rehearsal of the chorus, therefore, will be held in the auditorium of the Central High School, corner High and New streets, on Wednesday evening, November 4, at 8 o'clock sharp. Those who have not as yet joined the chorus but who are intending to, are urged to secure membership cards before the rehearsal evening. Director C. Mortimer Wiske will be at the office of the association every Wednesday from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m., and every Thursday and Friday from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m., as heretofore, to receive applications.

Members of Advisory Committee.

The advisory committee is composed of the following members: Alexander Russell, Florence Mulford Hunt, Otto Schill, C. Wenham Smith, J. H. Huntington, Jr., Charles Grant Shaffer, Tom Daniel, George Clauder, Charles Tamme, Alexander Berne, Louise Westwood, Sidney Baldwin, Frank Mindnich, Louis Minier, Dora Becker-Shaffer, Dianne Cobb, Manuel Svet, Mrs. E. A. Baumann, Mrs. Otto Schill, Mrs. George Clauder, John Pearsall, Mrs. Spaulding Frazer, Mrs. Jay Ten Eyck, Katherine Young, R. L. Smith, J. E. Joyner, Archibald K. Towers, James Sauvage, Claude W. Velsor, C. E. LeMassena, Eleanor Hendrickson, Daniel E. Hervey, James Philipson, Edward Flannagan and Thornton W. Allen.

Organization Committee Members.

Members of the organization committee were also present at this time and discussed the selection of additional names for membership in the permanent association. The organization committee consists of the following members: Hon. Jacob Haussling, Alfred L. Dennis, Wallace M. Scudder, Austen Colgate, Hon. Frederic Frehlinghuysen, C. W. Feigenspan, James S. Higbie, Hon. Franklin Murphy, Forrest F. Dryden, Louis Bamberger, Louis Plaut, Frank Mindnich, Alexander Berne, Edwin Wickenhoefer, Major William Bryant, Rev. Lyman W. Allen, Louis Schlesinger, George Kuhn, Mrs. Jay Ten Eyck, Mrs. Spaulding Frazer, Andred van Blarcom, Franklin Conklin, Peter F. Campbell, Mrs. Robert F. Ballantine, Florence D. Murphy, Edward Flannagan, Daniel E. Hervey, Albert H. Atha, Charles Grant Shaffer, Isabell Sims, General Edwin M. Hine, Mrs. A. C. Bradin, Austen McGregor, Mathias Plum, Jr., J. A. Riker, Charles F. Mackin, Alice Kirkpatrick, Thornton W. Allen, William T. Carter, Dr. Edward J. Ill, Franklin Murphy, Jr., Louise Westwood, Mrs. Robert W. Cumming, August Williams, H. G. Currier, Mrs. Zachariah Belcher, Frederick Shaw, J. G. Truesdell Moore and John Reeve.

Tina Lerner's Recital.

Tina Lerner, the pianist, quite surprised her hearers last Friday afternoon, October 30, when she appeared in recital at Miss Beard's School, Orange. Miss Lerner was warmly greeted and greatly pleased her audience with an interesting and well rendered program.

Notes.

John McCormack will give his East Orange song recital next Friday night, November 6, in the East Orange High School Auditorium.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, assisted by Edward McNamara, baritone, will give her recital in Newark at the Krueger Auditorium on November 11.

JERSEY CITY SINGERS TO JOIN NEWARK.

Advisory Committee to Meet This Week to Arrange for Organization of Large Chorus of Singers to Participate in Newark Festival, C. Mortimer Wiske to Conduct.

Jersey City, November 1, 1914.

The Jersey City advisory committee of the Newark Music Festival Association is to hold its first meeting on Thursday evening, November 5, at the Lincoln High School. Officers will be elected at this time and arrangements made to organize the large chorus of Jersey City singers who are to join the gigantic Newark body in preparation for the three day music festival, on May 4, 5 and 6 next.

Newark has already enlisted 600 singers. It is believed 300 or 400 additional singers can be secured in Jersey City. Conductor C. Mortimer Wiske, director of the Paterson and Newark festivals, will rehearse the Jersey City members every Thursday evening in the Lincoln High School building, all going to Newark once a month to rehearse with the entire body. A similar plan is to be tried in Elizabeth, N. J.

The festival this year is to be given in the First Regiment Armory, Newark, the largest in the State, on the evenings of May 4, 5 and 6. "Opera Night" will open the festival, "Wagner Night" will follow and "Concert Night" will conclude the programs. While a chorus of 1,000 was originally planned, it is now estimated that the list of singers will greatly exceed this number. Some of the world's greatest soloists, as well as an orchestra of 100 members, will be engaged.

The present plan of the association is gigantic in its scope and wonderful in its possibilities. With Newark as a center it is proposed to organize a chorus in each of the large surrounding cities, each individual body of singers to form a part of the one big chorus. While this year it has been arranged to hold the three concerts in Newark, it is believed that next year, with the support of the Jersey City music lovers, the concerts can be divided so that part will be given in Newark and part in Jersey City.

In connection with the association, which is composed of prominent men and women from all of these cities, an advisory committee will be formed in each city composed of the musicians, including organists, chorus and choir leaders and teachers. From this local body an executive board of five members will be elected and these will represent their respective cities at the general meetings of all the boards. The assistance and influence of such an advisory committee is of great value in the bringing together the chorus members, as well as the help and advice so needed by the association.

Last week Newark held a meeting of its advisory committee and elected Louise Westwood, supervisor of music in the public schools, as chairman, and Charles Grant Shaffer, also of the Board of Education, as vice chairman. As a result of this election the Board of Education has decided to work with the Festival Association in the promotion of the festival concerts.

Every organist, chorus and choir leader, as well as teacher of music in Jersey City and the suburbs, is invited and urged to become a member of the advisory committee and to be present at this time. This is to be more or less of a civic affair and a splendid opportunity will be given Jersey City singers not only to receive the benefits that only such an organization can give them, but also to be the means of forming in Jersey City the nucleus of a music festival of its own.

Until a permanent office has been established Jersey City singers who desire to join the chorus are asked to send their names, addresses and part they sing, directly to C. Mortimer Wiske, Lauter Building, 593 Broad street, Newark, or to Miss Lockhart, 17 Brinkerhoff street, Jersey City.

At the meeting on Thursday evening, Director Wiske and Thornton W. Allen, the organizer of the Newark Festival, will address the Jersey City singers. The proposed plans of the association will be laid before the members at this time and definite arrangements made for the organization of the Jersey City chorus. W. T.

BARONESS Olga von Türk-Rohn SOPRANO
"Europe's Famous Song Bird"
Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Management
Metropolitan Musical Bureau, New Brunswick, N. J.

YVONNE DE TRÉVILLE
COLORATURA SOPRANO, Grand Opera Prima Donna
Now in America Season 1914-15 Booking
Available for Concerts, Musicales, Recitals and Festivals
New York Recital, Aeolian Hall, Afternoon, Nov. 6
Brooklyn Recital, Brooklyn Institute, Evening, Nov. 4
Washington, D.C., Recital, Columbia Theater, Nov. 13
European Address: 68 rue de l'Aurora, Bruxelles, Belgium
American Address: - 62 De Hart Place, Elizabeth, N. J.
Cable Address: Detreville-Bruxelles

Musin's Virtuoso School of Violin.

Recently a representative of the MUSICAL COURIER had the pleasure of listening to an ensemble lesson at the school of Ovide Musin, in West Seventy-sixth street, New York. This school, which is turning out some very excellent artists, well merits the following tribute paid it by the musical critic of the New York Evening Mail:

Being duly invited to be a witness to the extraordinary details of a class day under the direction of the great master of Liege, Ovide Musin, who has transferred his Belgian activity, together with a large amount of American energy, to an American field, the writer saw many things which seemed nothing less than miraculous.

This class includes students from every section of the United States. There are young men and young women from Oklahoma, from Seattle, from the Maine woods and from the far South; indeed, it were difficult to name a geographical point which is not represented by violinists in the Musin school. All of these take private lessons, and these lessons are devoid of narrow rule and regulation. Each need is found and the master walks up and down with his instrument urging on the results he wants to hear by means of example. His own tone is full, round and luscious, just as it always was, and he teaches his pupil what he must expect to hear in his own tone.

"But," says Musin, "the trouble in America is that the pupil does not get to the teacher often enough to feel his influence. What is the good of seeing a pupil once or twice in an entire week, and then you have no way of knowing what goes on or anything about their work or the influences which surround them. I want my pupils near me, so I make them understand that they are always expected to hear other lessons. The best pupils I have are those who are interested to hear all the other lessons; they understand better how to correct and how to find their own limitations and it keeps them in the atmosphere of study. Do not misunderstand—the atmosphere of music is one thing and the atmosphere of study another, and I want all my pupils to feel the latter."

Still bearing upon the "virtuoso" part of it, the writer insisted upon asking whether the master really believed that virtuosi can be made of more than a few limited number of people. He said: "Just wait and see this class that is coming in today. You will see that the work they do would not be within human possibility to do alone, no matter how serious they might be in their intentions. There is a phase of physical endurance which cannot be developed in any other way."

The class consisted of those taking private lessons, to whom the master gives two days in the week for ensemble practice. But this is not ensemble in the ordinary sense of the word. It is rather "unison practice," and it is the most astonishing practice conceivable.

With Musin at the piano, there were eight young women on one side and six young men on the other. At a given sign, one young girl began to play scales in a long, legato stroke and in broad tone. At the close of this scale, on the beat of the moment, without the loss of a second, the entire class played the same scale. Then came technical studies in tempo so furious that it seemed to be impossible to keep count of the time, and yet there was not a slip of intonation, of rhythm, of any detail whatsoever. The "starter" played most difficult things first, and then, without an instant's loss of time, the entire class would join in the most technical feat ever witnessed. "But what of the one who played it twice?" was the exclamation of the astonished onlooker. There is not one in the class who could not go through the feat twice. It is true here, and there one or the other dropped out to rest, but that only emphasized the fact that there is no danger of overstrain in a feat of this kind, because there is no obligation but that of pride. These exercises are all done from memory; there are shadings and ritards of tempo, there is an interpretation which shows a complete musical understanding, and, above all, there is a surety such as nothing else in the world could produce.

This class worked two hours in this manner, and it must be admitted that the writer felt very much less marvel for the technic of some of the noted virtuosos of the day, after hearing the absolutely astounding achievement of so many of these young students, who are only students and have no other ideas concerning themselves.

The one great thing that was demonstrated in addition to all else was that this is a real school for violin virtuosi.

Elsa Alves in Recital.

Elsa Alves, soprano, gave a recital on Thursday evening, October 29, at the residence-studio of her mother, Mrs. Carl Alves, at 48 West Ninetieth street, New York. Miss Alves' first group consisted of five songs as follows: "Lied des Harfenmädchen's," S. von Hausegger; "Oh! Quand je dors," Liszt; "Knabe and Veilchen," E. Wolff; "Befreit," Strauss; "Oh! hätt ich Jubals' Harf," Händel.

Miss Alves has a delightful voice, especially commendable for its freshness and clarity. These qualities were particularly noticeable in her singing of Händel's "Oh, hätt ich Jubals Harf," which was excellently sung. Her second group was made up of eight "folksongs," three of them in German and the others in French, Norwegian, Swedish, Italian and English. She was especially successful in the charming Swedish "Lullaby," where the sustained quality of her tones and the excellence of her interpretations pleased. The final number of this group, a rollicking German song, "Och Moder ich well an Ding han," caused much merriment among those present.

Her third and last group was composed of four numbers by Brahms, "Feldeinsamkeit," "Auf dem Kirchhof," "Ständchen" and "Von ewiger Liebe," in each of which she evinced an unusual delicacy of tone and excellent breath control.

Her voice shows the result of the careful training by her mother, Mrs. Carl Alves, and good diction characterized each of her selections. These qualities, combined with her thoughtful interpretations, make her a young artist who gives promise of becoming a favorite on the recital and concert platforms.

C. Waldemar Alves assisted at the piano, rendering excellent and sympathetic accompaniments.

Success to John McCormack.

Not since John McCormack opened the season in Sydney, Australia, about sixteen months ago, and established attendance records, despite acute business depression and a severe epidemic of smallpox, has his popularity and drawing powers been so clearly demonstrated as they were last week.

He opened his season in Grand Rapids, Friday evening, October 23, where Powers Theatre was full to overflowing. It was Mr. McCormack's third appearance in the Michigan city in the same number of years. "During the three years," says the Grand Rapids Press, "that he has been coming to this city, his art has gained immensely in breadth and refinement, and at no time has he sung as well, or with such artistic distinction as on Friday night." The Grand Rapids Herald said: "The opening number was the aria 'Il mio tesoro' from Don Giovanni, by Mozart, and was accorded a remarkable degree of artistic polish. . . . McCormack is not only gifted with wonderful vocal powers, but also with the power to use his voice at its fullest worth. Standing before an audience he is a wizard song bird, swaying the emotions of his fellows as though he knew the hidden spring of the human heart."

From Grand Rapids he went to Lexington, Ky., and so great was his success there, and so many people were unable to secure admission to the Woodlawn Park Auditorium, that he was immediately booked for a return concert early in December.

Three days prior to his appearance in Indianapolis, the house was sold out, and Manager Wagner had an urgent appeal for another engagement the following night. This was impossible, however, as Mr. McCormack had to return to New York for his Carnegie Hall concert, on Saturday evening.

Two extra concerts are announced for Greater New York before he will start for the Pacific Coast. They will be held at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, Sunday evening, November 15, and Carnegie Hall, New York, Sunday afternoon, November 22.

Marguerite Melville-Liszniewska Coming.

The pupils of Marguerite Melville-Liszniewska, who had planned to study with her during this season in Vienna, as well as those whose work was so suddenly cut short this summer by the breaking out of the war, will no doubt be glad to hear that Mme. Liszniewska will be in America for a few months this winter. She is coming over to complete arrangements for her American tour in 1915-1916, and expects to sail on the steamship Rotterdam, leaving Rotterdam November 7. During her sojourn in the United States she will teach twice a week at Steinway Hall, New York, and once a week in Boston.

Photo by Pauline Kruger Hamilton, Vienna.
LESCHETIZKY AND MARGUERITE MELVILLE.

Boston Pianist Returns from Europe.

Carl Stasny, the pianist, returned from Europe, October 7, and began his work at the New England Conservatory the following day.

Hamish MacKay's Recital Program.

Following is the program for Hamish MacKay's song recital, assisted at the piano by Fay Foster, the American pianist and composer, Aeolian Hall, New York, November 5, at 8.30 P. M.

ART SONGS IN ENGLISH.

Sons of the Sea.....S. Coleridge-Taylor
A Lover's Garland.....Sir Hubert Parry
Ethiopia Saluting the Colors.....Charles Wood
Auvergnat.....A. M. Goodhart
The King (a Rebel Song).....Fay Foster
Birds in the High Hall Garden.....Arthur Somervell
The Old Superb.....Sir Charles Stanford

ART SONGS BY SCOTTISH COMPOSERS.

O, White's the Moon Upon the Loch.....Hamish MacCunn
Where Shall the Lover Rest?.....Learmont Drysdale
Son of Mine.....William Wallace

IRISH FOLK SONGS.

By the River Loune.....Arranged by Dr. Charles Wood
I'm the Boy for Bewitching Them...Arranged by Dr. Charles Wood
The Cuckoo Madrigal.....Arranged by Dr. Charles Wood
The Jug of Punch.....Arranged by Dr. Charles Wood

HIGHLAND DANCES.

The Plaid Dance.....Composed for the piano by Hamish MacCunn
The Kerchief Dance...Composed for the piano by Hamish MacCunn
The Gillie's Dance....Composed for the piano by Hamish MacCunn

SCOTS SONGS (sung in Jacobite costume).

The Braes o' Balquidder.....Arranged by T. S. Drummond
The Skye Milking Song.....Arranged by M. Kennedy Fraser
To Mary in Heaven.....Arranged by Gavin Godfrey
The Wee Cooper o' Fife.....Arranged by A. Scott Jupp
Twa Bonnie Maidens.....Arranged by Charles Macpherson
The Twa Corbies.....Art song by Mrs. A. C. Bunten
Willie's Gane tae Melville Castle...Arranged by Learmont Drysdale

Nina Morgana's Success at Maine Festival.

Nina Morgana, the young soprano with the splendid coloratura voice, scored a great success at the Maine Festival, held recently at Bangor and Portland. Her appearances there were musical events of marked importance. The Bangor Daily Commercial, of October 3, stated that the audience was electrified by her singing. Her success was a genuine one, which her excellent delivery well merited.

The following are some extracts from the enthusiastic appreciation which was accorded her by the local press:

Nina Morgana, coloratura soprano, deeply impressed the Saturday night audience.—Bangor Daily News, October 5, 1914.

The marvelous voice of the coloratura soprano created a sensation and took the audience by storm.—Bangor Daily Commercial, October 3, 1914.

Nina Morgana, known as the "Child of the Starry Eyes and Angel Voice," was a hit of the festival, a sensation at City Hall.—Portland Evening Express, October 6, 1914.

Nina Morgana, the young prima donna, created a furore. Her wonderful voice aroused unwonted enthusiasm.—Portland Daily Press.

Following her success at the festival, Miss Morgana signed another contract with William Rogers Chapman, director of the Maine Festival, for several recitals in Maine.

For concert and recital dates, Miss Morgana can be reached at Room 1626-27, Aeolian Hall, New York City. (Advertisement.)

Florence Austin's Success.

Florence Austin, America's violinist, gave a very satisfactory concert last week at the Bryant High School, Long Island City, for the Teachers' Association. Miss Austin's program was:

Polonaise in A.....Wieniawski
Slumber Song.....Weitzel
Valse de Concert.....Musin
Faust Fantasia.....Vieuxtemps

Miss Austin was splendidly accompanied by Edna Rothwell, who will be her accompanist at her recital December 3.

Miss Austin is receiving much praise for her splendid playing this season. Her intonation is invariably perfect, her tone big, and her interpretation traditional. It is always a pleasure to hear so fine an artist as Miss Austin.

Florence Austin, whose success at the Maine Music Festival brought her prominently before the public, will give her New York recital, December 3. She has prepared a program that will be interesting to artists and students, including several novelties. Miss Austin has recently had dedicated to her "Twelve Short Poems," by Cecil Burleigh, and "Souvenir," by Weitzel. This last number was well received at recent concerts.

"Why is the scholarly looking man slamming down his windows so hard?"

"I will tell you why the scholarly looking man is slamming down his windows so hard."

"The scholarly looking man is slamming down his windows so hard because the hurdy-gurdy out in front is playing the same tunes that he paid $5 to hear last night at grand opera."—Judge.

New England Singer Lauded.

Apropos the Nielsen-Ganz-Williston concert given in Springfield, Mass., recently, the attached notices appeared in local Springfield and Holyoke, Mass., daily papers. These are tributes which should be exceedingly gratifying to the young singer:

It is to be recorded that Mrs. Artha Williston upheld her important end of the long and exacting program with great credit to herself and the splendid training she has received in New York. Her friends were out in force, especially those from her alma mater, Mt. Holyoke, and gave her a cordial welcome; but it was not more hearty than that given her by the whole audience for her genuinely beautiful voice quality, the perfection of her method, and the delightful clarity of enunciation. She sang all her numbers with ease and readiness; and it is to be said that the crystal clear soprano, whose public vocal experience has been chiefly gained through solo work in the Sacred Heart Church and other churches, suffered nothing in the very trying comparison with that equally beautiful and very different style of soprano trained in a generous experience in comic opera.

Mrs. Williston was heard perhaps to the best advantage in the third of her numbers—the florid Arditi waltz song—and gave for an encore the sweet, old fashioned Kjerulf "Last Night" ballad. Her singing of the "Lohengrin" number was a scholarly and finished performance, and marked the close of her extremely successful debut. It required the assistance of her very proficient accompanist, Miss Birchard, to take the wealth of flowers she received off the stage.—Springfield (Mass.) Union, October 15, 1914.

Opening the Springfield concert season, Mrs. Artha Williston scored a distinct success last night when she appeared in the auditorium in collaboration with Alice Nielsen . . . and Rudolph Ganz, the Swiss pianist. . . .

Mrs. Williston's popularity was manifested in the generous and spontaneous applause which greeted every number she sang. It was her first Springfield appearance and really her first appearance in this section in concert, for although her voice is familiar to Holyoke people . . . she had yet to be heard under the trying circumstances of a concert such as that of last night, when placed in comparison with an artist of such an established position in the world of song as Miss Nielsen.

She made many friends among the Springfield people in the audience and received a lavish floral offering. . . . Mrs. Williston was accorded a reception seldom equaled by any on a first appearance.

If any of her Holyoke friends were fearful of the result of her debut in a more ambitious career they must have been pleasantly surprised. Music critics of New York and other musical centers made many promises for her, and last night her singing fully justified everything that has been said. No singer of recent years gives more indication of becoming an extraordinary success.

She has a beautiful voice quality and a delightful clarity of expression. Most pleasant to the untrained ear of the vast majority of every audience is the clearness of her enunciation. Every word is distinctly understood and in the "Parla" waltz by Arditi her French pronounciation could not have been better. . . .

She followed up the florid Arditi waltz with the sweet "Last Night" ballad of Kjerulf as an encore. Mrs. Williston closed the program with "Elsa's Dream," from "Lohengrin." In this she gave a scholarly and finished exhibition of her power. The wealth of flowers which she received required the assistance of her accompanist, Dorothy L. Bichard, to carry from the stage. . . .

Hundreds of Holyokers journeyed down the river to the Springfield Auditorium last night to enjoy the first musical event of the season at that wonderful hall so well adapted for musical events. Last night's concert has unusual interest for it marked the first concert appearance of our townswoman, Mrs. Artha Williston, whose musical career has been observed with such interest by her hosts of friends. . . .

Mrs. Williston's singing last night was a delight. The silvery quality of her voice and the remarkable beauty of her upper scale was displayed in splendid style. Back from her success at the Portland festival, she completely realized the expectations of her admirers and appeared with an ease and charm of manner that implied almost as much experience as the other singer on the program. Her clarity of enunciation and richness of tone is a constant delight.

Mrs. Williston has a very attractive stage presence. . . . Holyoke may well be proud of her success, implied with emphasis by last night's concert.—Holyoke Evening Telegram, October 15, 1914.

Happy and most agreeable indeed was the inaugural program of the new concert season at the Auditorium last evening, when a combination of three such satisfactory artists as Alice Nielsen, Mrs. Artha Williston and Rudolph Ganz resulted in a recital of exceptional delight. It is, of course, rather unusual to have two sopranos on a recital program of this nature, but the experience proved well worth while, especially in view of the opportunity offered to hear Mrs. Williston, the Holyoke soprano who has been "arriving" recently in the musical world—thus being her local debut—and whose work justifies the complimentary things that have been said of her elsewhere. . . .

Mrs. Williston was greeted with warmth on her initial appearance and her singing showed that her work has not been overpraised in her public appearances thus far. In her favor, aside from her generous vocal accomplishments, she has a strikingly attractive stage presence and no little magnetism to commend her. Her program gave her opportunity to show that she is not limited in equipment for the concert stage. Indeed, both in presence and in voice she would seem to be equipped for some of the strongly dramatic roles in opera. . . . She introduced herself in a charming group consisting of Harriet Ware's "Joy of the Morning," Landon Ronald's "O Lovely Night," of which she gave an exquisite rendition, and Arditi's showy "Parla" waltz. In the latter number she did really beautiful coloratura singing, executing the runs with agility, but without sacrifice of tone quality. Her high notes are exceptional. The audience was decidedly enthusiastic and the demand for an encore brought her forward in a ballad by Kjerulf, "Last Night." Her programed au revoir was Elsa's dream song from "Lohengrin," of which she gave a dramatic and eminently praiseworthy rendition. Mrs. Williston has a naturally lovely voice and she does not ignore the value of enunciation. She will go ahead in the concert world rapidly, unless we err, for she has a great deal in her favor in what is practically the beginning of her professional musical career.—Springfield Daily News, October 15, 1914.

Rudolph Ganz opened the program and next came Mrs. Williston. Her appearance on the stage was the signal for a burst of prolonged applause and it was quite some moments before the applause subsided sufficiently for Mrs. Williston to begin her first song, which was Landon Ronald's "O Lovely Night." Her voice never showed to better advantage and she sang with wonderful ease and readiness. Her crystal-clear soprano voice was at its best in Harriet Ware's English song, "Joy of the Morning." Every number received its full measure of applause, and when at the close of the group of three songs, the ushers came up the aisle laden with floral tributes . . . . the auditorium responded with enthusiastic applause. . . .

When the burst of applause which greeted the presentation of the lovely flowers to Mrs. Williston had subsided, the audience simply refused to allow her to withdraw from the stage and she very graciously sang for an encore "Last Night," by Kjerulf. . . . .

The closing number was "Elsa's Dream," from "Lohengrin," and was beautifully sung by Mrs. Williston. In all, every one who attended had a most enjoyable and wonderful evening. It may be also said that every Holyoker who attended was very proud of Mrs. Williston and justly so for her work was indeed very creditable.—Holyoke Daily Transcript, October 15, 1914.

There was much interest in the appearance of Mrs. Williston, of whom of late we had been hearing fine things from New York, and her singing fully justified expectations. She has a voice of quite exceptional promise, large and full, and evidently of a fine, natural quality. It is smooth, bright, even brilliant, and her best tones have a peculiar and beautiful transparency. . . . She is still best in English songs such as Harriet Ware's "Joy of the Morning," and Landon Ronald's "Oh, Lovely Night," which she sang first, but she sang well the Arditi waltz, "Parla," and the warm brilliance of her voice is very effective in music of this sort.—Springfield Daily Republican, October 15, 1914.

A soloist of the afternoon was Mme. Artha Williston, whose singing made such a favorable impression at the previous evening concert in the oratorio of "Elijah." This rarely gifted singer possesses a voice of unusual range and purity of tone, and of lyric quality. Her program number, Wagner's "Elsa's Dream," from "Lohengrin," was well suited to her beautiful soprano voice and was given in an almost faultless manner. Dramatic feeling was displayed to a large degree, and at the close the singer was greeted with enthusiastic applause, being recalled many times. As an encore number she sang "When the Roses Bloom," by Reichardt, and again received such plaudits that a second encore was demanded and she graciously acquiesced, singing Kjerulf's "Last Night" with rare artistry.—Portland (Me.) Argus.

ARTHA WILLISTON.

Zofia Naimska Resumes Teaching.

After spending an enjoyable period of recreation at Lake Pleasant, N. Y., Zofia Naimska, teacher of piano, has returned to New York to resume work. Miss Naimska will teach on Mondays and Thursdays at Carnegie Hall, room 121, and on Wednesdays and Saturdays at her home studio, 50 Morningside Drive. She gives piano instruction also, at the Institute of Musical Art, New York.

Miss Naimska, who is an exponent of the Leschetizky method, has met with marked success as a teacher. Gladys Browne, one of her artist-pupils, appeared in recital in New York last season, scoring a great success and receiving some very complimentary notices. Another pupil who is deserving of special mention is David Brown, who is making excellent progress in his work.

Besides presenting her pupils in recital each month, Miss Naimska will have two of her artist-pupils appear in their own recitals this season.

In addition to her duties as a pedagogue, Miss Naimska will herself play at a number of recitals in and near New York.

Marya Naimska, a violinist of the Belgian school, will have also a class of pupils at her residence, 50 Morningside Drive. She is a pupil of Cësar Thomson, from whom she has a valuable testimonial of her ability and technical knowledge.

These talented sisters have appeared frequently in joint recitals and have met with excellent success, their work having received especial commendation from Paderewski and others of equal repute.

Spalding's Violin Mastery.

From the start of his American career Albert Spalding made it plain in the kind of music he selected for public performance and in his manner of playing it, that he purposed to tread only the stern and legitimate paths of art. His musical training had been of the strictest kind and his ambition early manifested itself to win his way solely by virtue of his artistic achievements and to gain the suffrages of the American public without any undignified appeal to their patriotism.

In Europe, Spalding had no such considerations to meet, for a virtuoso's birthplace neither helps nor hinders his reception in foreign art centers, but unfortunately our own country is not yet independent enough and our critics are not yet broad enough always to disassociate a performer's nationality from his intrinsic accomplishments.

It has been interesting to note how Spalding, by relentless adherence to his ideals and by incessant application has won the admiration of his concert going countrymen and forced the respect of the hesitant critics. By dint of his splendid deeds on the violin he now ranks in this country, as he does in Europe, as one of the representative and commanding violin personalities of the day, and with each new appearance in America, he demonstrates greater strides and higher flights toward that perfection which all true artists never cease striving for, but which even the best of them modestly assert they despair of ever attaining.

Spalding's interpretations have broadened into notable proportions and now carry thorough conviction where formerly they left room for doubt, as his youth and his extreme technical agility sometimes inclined the listeners to think that he loved the sound of the music rather than its soul. But no such hesitation need exist any longer. The purity of sentiment with which Spalding delivered the fine old Porpora sonata in G, the depth of musical feeling and truly touching devotional spirit with which he invested the Bach adagio and fugue in G minor (unaccompanied), and the sprightliness, stylistic finish and enchanting humor encompassed in his delivery of the Mozart D major concerto, stamped the violinist as a master of his instrument and its possibilities, musical and technical, and as an interpretative authority of an unequivocally high order. It was a concert treat of the most exceptional kind to hear that trio of numbers, and on every side the writer heard nothing but expressions of pleasure and surprise at the manner in which Spalding has leaped to so exalted an artistic plane in comparatively so short a period of time.

As a composer, too, the concert giver won enviable laurels, his "Prelude" and "Nostalgie" establishing him as a music creator of thematic originality and facile constructive talents. The works were palpably applauded on the strength of their inherent value and not merely as a compliment to their maker.

Edmund Grasse's "Waves at Play," a pleasing and well built piece, was a tour de force in the skillful treatment accorded to it by Spalding, and his nimble fingers and dexterous bow excited unbounded demonstrations of appreciation on the part of the audience.

Dvorak's "Mazurek" was a gem of lovely tone and bewitching piquancy as Spalding played it.

In his own arrangement of Paganini's "Campanella," the youthful virtuoso left nothing undone in the way of taxing violin brilliancy to its extreme limit, and it would be difficult to recall a more scintillating performance of the popular caprice. When the shower of stimulating pyrotechnics came to an end, the enthusiasm of the listeners spent itself in deafening applause, which forced Spalding into bows innumerable and encores galore.

Andre Benoist was a host within himself at the piano. His accomplishments were on a par with the work of the soloist and nothing better can be said in their praise. He is a master accompanist, as Spalding is a master violinist.

Newkirk Pupil to Be Heard in Recital.

Lillian Sherwood Newkirk, the vocal teacher, who has studios at Norwalk, Conn., and in the Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York, announces that Clara Marie Jäger, who has been studying with Mme. Newkirk since her sixteenth year, will give a recital at Aeolian Hall, on November 12. Miss Jäger spent last season in Paris, perfecting her French.

Martyrdom.

"You say you're a moving picture hero?"

"Yes, my wife makes me go to them every night."—Pearson's Weekly.

LORETTA DEL VALLÉ IN NEW YORK.

Coloratura Soprano Has Established to Her Credit Numerous Operatic and Concert Successes in Europe.

Loretta del Vallé, coloratura soprano, recently came to New York after a period of six and one-half years of singing and studying abroad.

Previous to this recent sojourn in Europe, Mme. del Vallé had studied with Mme. Marchesi in Paris for two years.

In 1908, however, she went directly to Dresden, where she studied roles with Frau Reuss-Belce, stage manager of the Bayreuth Theatre. When Frau Reuss-Belce's duties called her to Bayreuth, Mme. del Vallé went to study during the summer months at Graz with Joseph Trummer, the regisseur of the Prague Opera House, who with Mrs. Trummer, was passing the summer at his home in Graz. He had been for years principal conductor at Breslau. "His knowledge of opera from every point of view was phenomenal," Mme. del Vallé says; "in fact, he was without an equal. I was so delighted with Mr. Trummer and made such excellent progress, and he seemed so much in earnest, that I took his advice and went with him to Prague, where I continued my studies with him daily."

The following January, Mr. Trummer procured for Mme. del Vallé a guest engagement at the Court Theatre in Mannheim, where she sang Queen of the Night in "The Magic Flute."

About a week after her return to Prague from Mannheim "The Magic Flute" was included in the repertoire at the Opera. At the last moment the artist who was to sing Queen of the Night became indisposed half an hour before the beginning of the performance and Regisseur Trummer, knowing that Mme. del Vallé knew the part, suggested to Angelo Neumann, the director, that she sing the role. He sent for the soprano immediately and asked her if she would do this, to which she assented. It was thus that Mme. del Vallé made her debut at the New German Theatre. Mme. del Vallé's success in this, her first appearance in Prague, was instantaneous and the next day she received a letter from Angelo Neumann and the sum of 100 crowns. Any one having any knowledge of his love of and fame for small salaries will appreciate the generosity of this amount. He asked her to come to his office next day and upon her arrival she found that he had prepared a three years' contract which merely awaited her signature. This was the real beginning of Mme. del Vallé's operatic career. Angelo Neumann revived "Lucia," "Robert the Devil," "Huguenots," etc., for her. In addition to the above operas her repertoire consists of Queen of the Night in "Magic Flute," Gilda in "Rigoletto," Philine in "Mignon," The Doll in the "Tales of Hoffmann," Violetta in "Traviata," Inez in "Africaine," Martha, and in fact all principal coloratura roles.

Angelo Neumann was so much pleased with Mme. del Vallé's performance in "The Magic Flute" that he sent her to Dresden on the following Sunday to sing the same role.

Unfortunately, in Angelo Neumann's death, on December 21, 1911, Mme. del Vallé lost a great admirer and a genuine friend. He proved this in particular when he was named the director of the new Charlottenburg Opera House in Berlin. Mme. del Vallé was the second person whom he engaged. This contract, which could not be fulfilled, owing to his death and the subsequent failure of the project, would have occupied the soprano's time until June 30, 1915.

Upon his death the directorship of the Prague Opera House changed hands. Mme. del Vallé's contract having expired June 30, 1912, she decided to go to Berlin and work with the late Frank King Clark, whom she had met in the meanwhile in Prague and who expressed an interest in her work.

There she worked all through the summer and in September she sang a guest performance of the Queen in "The Huguenots" at Cassel. She had made tremendous strides with King Clark, and it is perhaps owing to his extreme kindness and great encouragement, to says nothing of his absolute faith in her ultimate future, that enabled her to make such a successful appearance in Cassel.

A death in the soprano's family prevented her from returning to sing a second guest performance, and as all other contracts offered were for five years or more (the intendancy in Cassel was willing to offer her a contract for even one year), she decided, not wishing to tie herself for so long a term of years in Germany, to go to London, which she considered to be the center for an international career.

Her appearance in the English capital were entirely of a private nature. She sang, among other places, at the Duchess of Westminster's, Lady Cunard's, Mrs. Cornwallis-West's, the Royal Automobile Club; also at Whitley Bay, the fashionable watering place of Northumberland, where she was reengaged to return on August 16. She also had an engagement for Blankenberghe, in Belgium, for August 14. At the outbreak of the war these dates were immediately cancelled, as were all her other engagements abroad for this season.

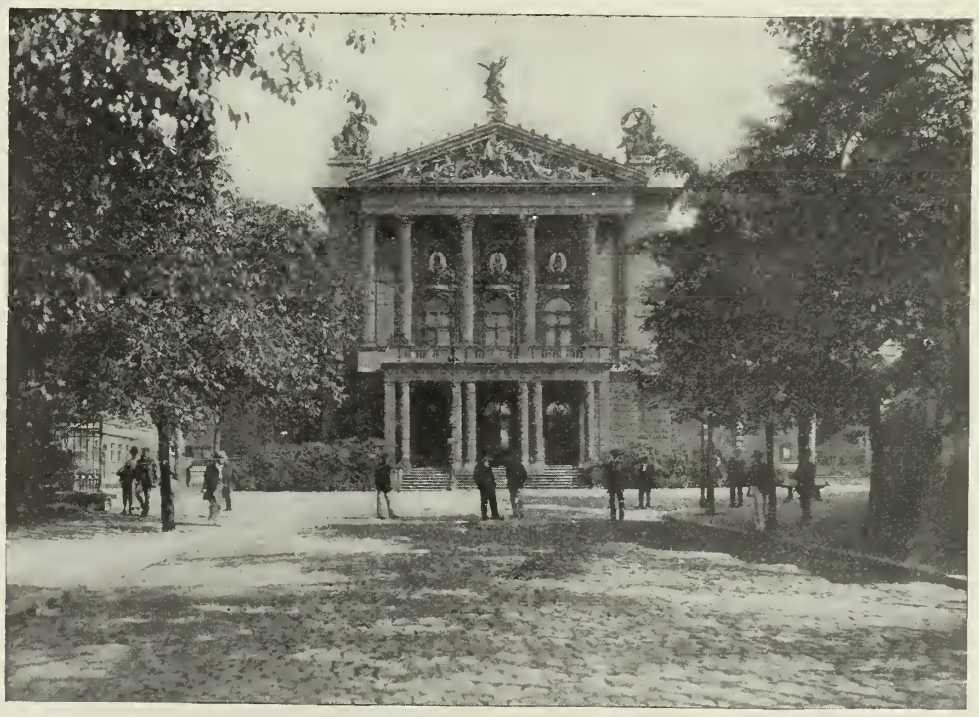
Mme. del Vallé is under the management of Antonia Sawyer, New York.

LOS ANGELES LIBRARY HAS MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

Adequate Reference Arrangement Proves Valuable Addition to Public Institution—Over Two Thousand Volumes, Including Opera, Orchestral and Choral Scores Are at the Disposal of Patrons—Other Attractive Features Described—Local Composers Are Busy with New Works.

1110 West Washington Street,
Los Angeles, Cal., October 17, 1914.

For several years the Public Library has been cooperating with the musicians and musical clubs in supplying not only the books upon musical subjects, but also in carrying a large line of sheet music, musical scores, etc. The new library is situated on the two top floors of the new Metropolitan Building at Fifth street and Broadway. A more central location would be hard to find and every requisite for the convenience of the patrons of the Public Library has seemingly been provided for.



The musical department is situated in the north wing of the balcony floor, and besides offering the usual conveniences for reference has over two thousand volumes of music, containing scores of operatic, orchestral and choral works. Of the most popular there are several copies. The head of the music and art department is Susanna C. Ott, Ruth Waring being in charge of the music section. I spent a very delightful half hour with Miss Waring recently and could not help catching some of her enthusiasm. She explained her hopes and ambitions for this department. She is especially anxious to cooperate with music clubs in and around Los Angeles, and for this purpose will gladly assist in making out programs, arranging plans of study, etc. Any music not in the library will be secured and every assistance given.

One of the unique features of the department is the soundproof roof provided with a piano with player attachment, for the use of those wishing to try over new music, and especially for the use of study clubs and music students. Regular hours are being reserved for the use of any clubs desiring it. The room is ideally situated, as it is centrally located and the best material for reference is at hand. For use on the player piano will be found rolls of the best music, especially operatic scores and symphonic works.

During the musical season a bulletin board will be provided, on which announcements of the coming musical events will be made and the music to be used at these concerts will be kept in the library the week previous, for the use of any wishing to study the programs. By far the most valuable recent addition to this department is the gift of Charles Modini-Wood, by which he has placed upon the shelves the scores which he presented to the People's Orchestra in trust two years ago. This library is valued at $1,500, and Mr. Modini-Wood feels that this is the safest place as well as the most useful and accessible since the disbandment of the orchestra.

Charles F. Edson has given part of his valuable musical library to the department recently.

Another plan just put into execution is the binding together of the sheet music compositions of one composer for easy reference. The musical periodicals are also now kept in this department and bound volumes and current numbers are in constant use for reference work and musical events. Among these I found the MUSICAL COURIER to be most valuable and in constant demand. The Los Angeles musical public has every reason to be very proud

THE NEW GERMAN THEATRE, PRAGUE, BOHEMIA,
At which Mme. del Vallé made her debut.

2100 PERSONS WERE TURNED AWAY from the first two pairs of concerts of The Philadelphia Orchestra, and this in the face of economic conditions adverse to amusement expenditures.

The sale of seats and boxes for the year has exceeded that of any previous season.

The orchestra of eighty-five members is intact, and playing, in the opinion of the leading music critics, with a beauty never before reached by this assembly of players.

The soloists, twenty-five in number, are the most notable ever presented.

The orchestra is under the distinguished conductorship of Mr. Leopold Stokowski.

THE PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

Alice SOVEREIGN
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, N. Y.

of what is being done in this line, for there are few libraries in the United States accomplishing as much. A clipping from one of the Chicago papers, recently published in a local paper, speaks of the Chicago Library board as inaugurating a "new departure." They are to provide music for circulation and have already secured a few copies for that purpose. The Los Angeles Library has been doing this for several years, and it has become so valuable and popular a feature as to warrant the enlargement. Miss Ott and Miss Waring desire the cooperation of all clubs, music teachers and students and offer their services for all assistance needed.

Lucchesi Composing War Music.

A call on Riccardo Lucchesi found that genial and talented gentleman very busy orchestrating the scores of two new songs just finished. The title of one is "Angels of the Red Cross," the other "Lest We Fall." The poems are by Mr. Danziger, a well known lawyer of Los Angeles. Both poems and music are very beautiful, full of tenderness and deep dramatic feeling and are sure to meet with favor. Signor Lucchesi is also finishing several works for piano, string quartet and orchestra.

Two of his songs recently published, which are being used quite extensively, are "Illusions" and "Regret."

Mrs. Ross' Compositions on Recent Programs.

Gertrude Ross and Grace Widney Mabee, assisted by Elsa von Grof Menasco, cellist, presented a very successful program before the Woman's Club of Hollywood, Wednesday, October 14. For the closing numbers Mrs. Mabee sang six songs by Mrs. Ross, three Japanese songs still in manuscript, and "Three Songs of the Desert," recently published by White-Smith Company. As an encore Mme. Menasco played Mrs. Ross' "Lullaby," arranged for the cello.

On October 19 Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Mabee will go to San Diego to present a program before the opening meeting of the San Diego Music Teachers' Association. This engagement comes as a result of the program Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Mabee gave at the California State Music Teachers' Convention at San Diego in July. Jane Catherwood.

Carl Friedberg in Pittsburgh.

Carl Friedberg, the German pianist, who arrived in this country recently, after great difficulties in obtaining a release from the English Government, has just returned to New York from his first concert in America. He opened his tour, which will take him as far west as the Pacific Coast, with the Pittsburgh Art Society, Friday, October 23, where he received a veritable ovation.

In the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times appeared the statement that, "it was a pleasure to make the acquaintance of such a great artist, and that Pittsburgh has in four years not had such a surprise in an unheralded artist. . . . He made one forget that the piano is to a large extent a percussion instrument."

After playing Schumann's symphonic etudes, he was recalled to the stage seven times, but he granted an encore only after his second group of Chopin numbers. Friedberg made such a deep impression on the Pittsburgh audience that a return engagement was requested immediately for November 10, which, however, could not be granted on account of the heavy bookings during that month.

Harold Bauer's New York Program.

A program of unusual interest has been arranged by Harold Bauer for his recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Saturday afternoon, November 7. The pianist's return from Australia and New Zealand via San Francisco, has been marked by a series of recital appearances en route East. A feature of his present visit (his eighth) to America will be twelve appearances on tour with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will likewise be heard as soloist with practically every other orchestra of first importance throughout the country. His recital program follows: Toccata and fugue in C minor, Bach; sonata in F sharp major, Beethoven; variations and fugue upon a theme by Handel, Brahms; seven inventions, Bach, and sonata in A flat, op. 110, Beethoven.

Julia R. Waixel Opens Studio.

Julia R. Waixel announces the opening of her studio, at 509 West 112th street, New York, telephone 3249 Morningside. Mrs. Waixel is available as accompanist and she will also give coaching lessons, in which line she has met with excellent success.

"Othello," "L'Africaine," "Fidelio," "Tannhäuser" and "Meistersinger" have been regaling the citizens of Nuremberg with melody and artistic uplift during the troublous days.

Clark's Tribute to Clark.

Death interrupted a beautiful friendship between Frank King Clark, who gained wide recognition as a vocal instructor in Paris and Berlin, and Charles W. Clark, the American baritone and teacher, when it claimed the former a few weeks ago. Although of no kin, these two singers of a common surname were very near and dear to each other back in the days when the "sledding" was not over the smoothest roads. Recently in Chicago, Charles W. Clark, falling into a reminiscent mood, recalled the comparatively "lean" times when he and Frank King Clark were striving in Paris for the lofty recognition which eventually came to each. "When Clark helped Clark and Clark helped Clark" might serve as a good title for Charles W. Clark's reminiscences.

"When I went abroad about twelve years ago," said Mr. Clark, "Frank was in Paris studying under Sbriglia and, incidentally, acting as correspondent for an American musical journal. He was the only person I knew in Paris, and we spent much of our time together. Frank was the soul of enthusiasm and good cheer, and his genial companionship meant much to me. Of course, we both had our troubles—who, of a seriousness of purpose and a slim

VIDA
LLEWELLYN
PIANIST
In America 1914-1915

"She unfolded her extraordinary superior qualities, elegant technic, marked rythmical feeling, and musical temperament."—Breslauer Morgenzeitung.

New York Recital, November 14th
Aeolian Hall

CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue New York City

purse does not have his troubles? Frank became worried about his voice, at times being downright gloomy and morose, but I cheered him up to the best of my ability and did all I could, in my humble way, to aid him. I endeavored to show him how Sbriglia wanted his exercises done. Knowing that I had considerable spare time on my hands,

Frank suggested that I give some of it over to teaching. It was not long long before he had all my spare time taken, and I could have had many more pupils than I could handle. The sense of financial relief was most pronounced.

"When Frank's confidence in his voice was fully restored, I advised him to take on a few pupils, knowing that he had all the capabilities of a successful teacher. He did so, with merited success. When I decided to return to America I turned all my pupils over to him. It was not long before he was enjoying high and richly deserved recognition. About four years ago he went to Berlin, where his success was quite in keeping with that attained in Paris. He was wonderfully enthusiastic in his work, scrupulously honest with his pupils, to whom he always gave the best that was in him. I may have had something to do toward putting him in a way to make himself, but he possessed all the attributes of a great teacher, and was destined to enjoy success because of his qualifications. The world lost a truly big figure when Frank King Clark died, and I a true, faithful friend."

Annola Florence Wright Recital.

The following program will be given by Annola Florence Wright, soprano, at the Regneas studios, in New York, on Thursday evening, November 5:

Aria from Der Freischütz	Weber
Liebesbotschaft	Schubert
Ihr Bild	Schubert
Gretchen am Spinnrade	Schubert
Mondnacht	Schumann
Zueignung	Strauss
Oh heller Tag	Tschaikowsky
Zwei Straüsse	Kaun
The Lost Falcon	Schindler
Come, Sweet Morning	A. L.
Across the Hills	Rummel
Sylvia	Chapman
April	Chapman
Gypsying	Chapman
When Spring Comes Laughing	Chapman
Butterfly Waltz Song	Mildenberg

Arrigo Serato Arrives This Week.

Arrigo Serato, the Italian violinist, who arrives from Italy this week, will make his New York debut with the Philharmonic Society at Carnegie Hall on November 15. On that occasion he will play the Mendelssohn concerto.

His tour will take him to the Pacific Coast and he will appear in almost every large city in the United States. Though an Italian by birth, he is recognized as one of the greatest interpreters of classic German music. This may be largely due to the fact that for many years Serato has made his home in Berlin, to which circumstances also may be ascribed what may be termed his cosmopolitan temperament.

Philadelphia Club Likes Dunning System.

Carrie Louise Dunning, pedagogue and originator of the Dunning system of music study for beginners, was invited by the Mothers-in-Counsel Club, of Philadelphia, one of the most exclusive in that city, to present her system in all its phases to them. They were most enthusiastic and have since written her a letter of sincere appreciation.

On Wednesday, October 21, Mrs. Dunning closed her New York class; she will begin another the middle of November, for many teachers in and around New York who desire to become familiar with this system of teaching. This class gives promise already of being a large one.

Preyer Pupil Scores Success.

Marie Durand, soprano, recently won instant success in the role of Lucia, which she sang for ten weeks with the San Carlo Opera Company. As she was the only American in the company, it is interesting to note the words of the Springfield Union, "Durand and Malpica easily the stars," and again, "The dagger and mad scenes were superbly given by Marie Durand, and in the duo for soprano and the flute, a height was reached seldom attained by any singers."

Miss Durand is a pupil of Caroll Badham Preyer, the vocal instructor of New York.

Edwin Evans Activities.

On October 18, Edwin Evans, baritone, appeared at the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, as a guest soloist before an audience which filled the church and which probably numbered about twenty-five hundred persons. Tomorrow evening, November 5, he will give a recital at Easton, Pa., and on November 15, he will appear as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra. His annual Philadelphia recital will take place at Witherspoon Hall, on the evening of November 19, when he will be heard in a varied and interesting program.

Wolle to Discuss Bach's Humor.

On November 20, Dr. J. Fred Wolle will deliver a lecture in the Moravian Sunday School Building, Bethlehem, Pa., under the auspices of the Woman's Club. His subject will be "Bach's Humor," which he will himself illustrate at the piano. He will be assited by Anna Estes, soprano, a member of the Bach Choir, of Bethlehem. This promises to be an interesting as well as instructive lecture.

Philadelphia Society Gives "Carmen."

An excellent performance of Bizet's "Carmen" opened the ninth season of the Philadelphia Operatic Society.

Photo by Haeseler, Philadelphia.
VIVIENNE SEGAL,
as Carmen.

This production, which was given on Wednesday evening, October 28, in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, was attended by an enthusiastic audience which completely filled the Academy.

With Wassili Leps as conductor, the orchestra, which was composed of sixty members of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, did splendid work. The cast was made up of members of the Operatic Society and their work was truly remarkable when it is considered that they were all amateurs. The personnel follows: Carmen, Vivienne Segal; Micaela, Adelina Patti Noar; Frasquita, Adele Hassan; Mercedes, Louis Hutchinson; Don Jose, George Rothermel; Escamillo, Horace Hood; Zuniga, D. Wiltbank Keene; Morales, William J. Mayer; Remendado, Oswald F. Blake; Dancairo, E. V. Coffrain; Solo Dancer, Marguerite Edna Wroe; Dancer on Table, Hilda Schock.

In addition there was a splendidly trained chorus of one hundred and fifty persons and a ballet of thirty-two members. The society was assisted also by the Carnatius Mandolin Club of Philadelphia.

To Wassili Leps, the conductor and also the musical director of the society, is due the greater share of the credit for the exceptionally fine performance of this, the thirty-first production by this enterprising society. For energy and perseverance he is not to be surpassed, and the unity and spirit of camaraderie which evidently prevailed between Mr. Leps and his assistants were delightful.

In the title role, Vivienne Segal, a young and talented singer, displayed a mezzo-soprano voice of pleasing quality, which never lacked in purity and sonority. Miss Segal, who is but eighteen years of age, is a pupil of Mrs. Phillips-Jenkins, of Philadelphia, this being her fourth year of study with that teacher. She acted the part of the dashing Spanish girl with charm, giving the cigarette girl a petite attractiveness quite unusual.

Another pupil of Mrs. Phillips-Jenkins, who appeared in one of the principal roles, was Adele Hassan, who was the Frasquita of the production. She made the most of this unimportant role, singing with spirit and excellent taste.

The Don José of George Rothermel and the Escamillo of Horace Hood were remarkable for an amateur production. Both of these gentlemen have excellent voices which they use artistically; especially is this true in the case of Mr. Rothermel.

The role of Micaela as acted by Adelina Patti Noar was extremely graceful, and her beautiful soprano voice was heard to advantage in this part. Especially well done was her aria in the gypsies' camp, where she displayed her fine sense of the dramatic.

A word of praise must also be spoken for Mr. Leps' splendid control of the chorus. It sang with much force and fine modulation. William P. Bentz was the chorus master.

A graceful and delightful ballet was designed and directed by Walter G. Wroe. The production, staged by Joseph Engel, formerly of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company, reflected credit upon that gentleman.

It may be added that by many this was considered to be the best production which this society has given since it was organized in 1906.

Mr. Leps will immediately begin work on the production of "The Serenade," by Victor Herbert, which will be given in January.

WASSILI LEPS.

Lecture on "How to Breathe."

Ida Haggerty-Snell will give a lecture Thursday evening, November 5, in her new studio, 130 West Ninety-seventh street, on "How to Breathe." "Few think of the necessity of knowing how to breathe or that they do not already breathe correctly," says Mme. Haggerty-Snell, who is recognized as an authority on correct breathing. Her lecture will no doubt prove very beneficial.

Ida Haggerty-Snell gave a pupils' song recital in her new studio recently. It was the first appearance of the participants; notwithstanding that none of them had studied over three months, their singing was excellent. Lucidity of tone and distinct enunciation were especially noticeable.

After the program, Mme. Haggerty-Snell gave a short, interesting talk on American folksongs.

Jules Wellens, as accompanist, added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening's music.

Mme. Sundelius With Chicago Apollo Club.

Concerning Marie Sundelius' appearance with the Chicago Apollo Club as soloist in Elgar's "Caractacus," the press of that city had the following to say:

"In the music of 'Eigen,' Mme. Sundelius disclosed a voice of attractive quality that carried well. She made it evident, too, that her resources did not begin and end with the production of vocal tone, by the manner in which she expressed the emotion incidental to the role."—Chicago Herald, October 19, 1914.

Marie Sundelius, an appealing soprano, sang 'Eigen,' with a fine sense of the dramatic value of the work."—Chicago Daily Tribune, October 19, 1914.

"Mme. Sundelius made a pleasing impression."—Chicago Post, October 19, 1914.

MARIE SUNDELIUS.

"Marie Sundelius interpreted 'Eigen' with a voice of wide range, of noble quality, and of good training."—Chicago Examiner, October 19, 1914.

"Mme. Sundelius making her Chicago debut in this performance, made an excellent impression. She has a high clear voice of good quality, and a very definite idea as to its use."—Chicago Journal, October 19, 1914.

"Marie Sundelius sang the soprano part of 'Eigen' in warm and true tones, and put a weird inflection into the Druid maid's warning."—Chicago News, October 19, 1914.

A Compliment.

Little Girl—My father says he has often see you act.

Pleased Actress—What did he say he saw me act in, dear?

Little Girl—In the 'seventies.—Puck.

1914-1915 1915-1916

We are booking dates for both this season and the next for :: ::

CHARLES W.
CLARK

Who has cancelled all European dates :: ::

Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York

ELEONORA DE CISNEROS In AMERICA
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y. Entire Season

Helen Ware in Joint Recital With Harold Bauer.

Helen Ware played her first concert of the season in Kenosha, Wis., on October 20. Her program was as unique and fascinating as those that have given her an international reputation as an interpreter of Hungarian and Slav music. After introducing the new Hungarian sonata from Buttykay, Helen Ware proved her fine musicianship by a splendid rendition of the Sarabande, Double, and Bourree from Bach. The "Carmen" fantasie, from her Master Hubay, brought her an ovation, for like in her Hungarian and Slav numbers, her temperament and rhythmic grasp made it possible for her to rise to great heights, carrying her audience through the various moods of the composition. A Hungarian Love Song arranged by Helen Ware had to be repeated, also one of her encores, Chant Negre, by Walter Kramer.

HELEN WARE.

This Kenosha concert was followed by a joint recital with Harold Bauer, in Milwaukee, on October 25.

Helen Ware's first Milwaukee appearance was a decided success, each number being greeted by spirited applause and many encores were the result. On this program Helen Ware gave a magnificent interpretation of her Master Hubay's Hungarian fantasie, "Azt Mondjak." Among the number of encores played, a dainty little composition from Gustave Saenger entitled "Scotch Pastorale," had to be repeated to satisfy the enthusiastic music lovers. Some press opinions follow:

MISS WARE MAKES HIT.

Helen Ware appeared for the first time, and her playing proved to be of excellence. Miss Ware exhibited genuine flashes of virtuosity.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Miss Ware's performance was musically impressive. . . . Her various readings gave evidence of such genuine musical talent as is bound to place her in the foremost ranks of women violinists. . . . Miss Ware's selections were mostly from the Hungarian and Slav schools, in which her poetic nature found ample opportunity to manifest itself.—The Milwaukee Journal.

Helen Ware plays with power unusual for a woman. . . . Her most appreciated numbers were the Hungarian dances,—Milwaukee Sentinel.

She has a rich and mellow tone and an imaginative quality which is very appealing, especially in the Hungarian music.—The Evening Wisconsin.

Praiseworthy was her rendition of the Handel sonata. In the Hungarian and Slav music she entered the spirit of the music heartily. It was pleasure to listen to the poetical rendition of such musical jou jous as berceuse (Cui), "Tambourin Chinois" (Kreisler), Waltzer, Burmester, Hummel.—Germania Herold.

MISS WARE POPULAR.

Miss Ware will always have a warm place in the appreciation of those who heard her at her first Milwaukee concert. . . . With a rich temperament, poetical insight and good technical equipment, this young woman turns her talent to serious account.—Milwaukee Daily News.

Emma Nagel in Virginia.

Emma Nagel's popularity at the Richmond, Va., Festival, October 5-9, was indicated by the spontaneous applause from the huge audience and the favorable criticisms of the Richmond daily newspapers, some of which are appended:

EMMA NAGEL.
Soprano.

So much commendatory criticism of Miss Nagel's singing was indulged in that the members of the directorate are planning to engage her for the American Bankers' Association convention. The enormous crowds listened to Miss Nagel with rapt attention and she was graciously encored. — Times-Dispatch.

Miss Nagel has a beautiful and well cultivated soprano voice. Her runs and trills were splendidly executed and her tonal quality excellent.—News-Leader.

Miss Nagel sang beautifully and was heartily encored.—The Virginian.

Morgan Kingston as Lohengrin.

Morgan Kingston's success in the recent performance of "Lohengrin," at the Century Opera House, New York, are referred to in the following press notices:

Kingston's Lohengrin was excellent, singing in good voice and acting in good spirit.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

Mr. Kingston sang Lohengrin's music with style and assurance. He also bore himself with more ease. In face and figure Mr. Kingston surpasses almost any other Lohengrin one sees.—New York Globe.

Morgan Kingston pleased his admirers as Lohengrin.—New York Evening Post.

Morgan Kingston sang Lohengrin in fine voice and with taste and distinction.—New York Evening World.

The Swan Knight's address and narrative in Morgan Kingston's (the Welsh star) fine, natural style were, of course, faultless.—New York Evening Sun.

Morgan Kingston has done nothing better than his Lohengrin.—New York World.

Mr. Kingston was the Lohengrin, and he not only sang with good style and taste, but he looked young and knightly and picturesque.—New York American.

Morgan Kingston's Lohengrin was excellent.—New York Times.

Morgan Kingston sang the title role with more brilliancy than on any other occasion this year.—New York Herald.

Morgan Kingston as Lohengrin gave a good account of himself.—New York Press.

Morgan Kingston sang Lohengrin well and his enunciation was excellent.—New York Sun.

The singing of Morgan Kingston as Lohengrin was admirable—thoroughly admirable. Scarcely any one could have wished it better.—New York Tribune.

The Lohengrin of Mr. Kingston was interesting and satisfactory. One noted with pleasure his improvement over last year's impersonation. His singing was at all times of generous and becoming quality, his acting was free from restraint and full of conviction.—New York Journal of Commerce.

The Lohengrin was Morgan Kingston. Never has he done better. The voice, which is a tenor of no usual order, was resonant, steady and musical. Seemingly more at home in Wagnerian music than any other.—New York Morning Telegraph. (Advertisement.)

Fleck, Conductor, Instructor, Organizer.

The music festivals now taking place in Greater New York, celebrating the New York Commercial Tercentenary, have had as chairman, Dr. Henry Thomas Fleck, Dean of Music at Hunter College, New York. Dr. Fleck has been prominent in New York musical affairs for a quarter of a century, and every year finds him as the head of still more important affairs. This is a natural development in his life, for he is a born musical diplomat, possessing tact, a wide experience and an ability to handle men, masses and music to successful conclusions.

At City College, October 26, his appearance on the stage to conduct the opening number, the Vorspiel from Wagner's "Meistersinger," was the signal for a warm orchestral "greeting," the men playing the chord of C major, with a prolonged hold. During the evening Dr. Fleck took occasion to make a few remarks suggestive of certain works on the program. These remarks soon took on the aspect of a regular speech, full of information and witticisms. The audience heartily enjoyed this feature, which was not on the program, and it is a fact that he received the warmest and most spontaneous applause of the evening

HENRY T. FLECK,
Dean Department of Music, Hunter Normal College.

As chairman of the Music Festivals Committee, Dr. Fleck had a thousand details to attend to, including the engaging of bands for the parades. This committee consisted of the following well known men:

Prof. Henry T. Fleck, chairman; Louis Annin Ames, Elmer E. Brown, Ph.D., LL.D., Charles H. Ditson, Hon. Robert L. Harrison, Hon. William B. Howland, Robert C. Kammerer, Hon. William J. Lee, A. E. MacKinnon, Hon. Alrick H. Man, Alfred J. McGrath, S. C. Mead, Lewis Rutherford Morris, M.D., Hon. Cornelius A. Pugsley, George Martin Seeley.

Dr. Fleck and his pleasant countenance are sure to be omnipresent at musical functions in and around Greater New York during this season. It is expected that the City Orchestra, under his direction, will give their usual number of concerts.

Francis Rogers' New York Recital.

Francis Rogers, baritone, will be heard in recital at the Little Theatre, Thursday afternoon, November 12, and will be assisted by Isidore Luckstone, pianist. Mr. Rogers will sing a group of songs of the bel canto period, a group of songs of the classic German school, three songs of Moussorgsky, and several songs in English by Brewer, Johns and Lady Nairn.

Winkler Plays.

Leopold Winkler, the pianist, was the soloist at the New York Philharmonic concert in Troy, N. Y., on November 4. He played Liszt's Hungarian fantasia.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY

Paul Dufault Returns from Antipodes.

Paul Dufault, tenor soloist with the Nordica Concert Company, is full of his experiences during this, his second trip to Australia and New Zealand. It will be recalled that he visited that region the first time with the de Cisneros Concert Company, and established a reputation which resulted in a demand for his return. Incidentally, he plans another trip to Australia in two years.

Mr. Dufault says that Mme. Nordica was far from well at her concerts in Laramie, Denver and San Francisco. He says that it was a joy to hear her sing in New Zealand, where climate and people all conduced to her best efforts. When the Nordica company dissolved and Mme. Nordica started on her ill fated return journey (shipwreck was followed by her mortal illness and death), Mr. Dufault with Frederic Shipman as his manager, undertook a tour with his own company. This was immensely successful. They visited towns of three thousand people where there were nine hundred or a thousand in the audience. The city concerts were invariably attended by very large audiences, and the great success of this favorite tenor is registered in the appended press notices:

Paul Dufault is a singer first, last and all the time. But he is very much more. He is a skilled elocutionist, a compelling raconteur, a finished actor. He seems to possess all the gifts, including that of personal magnetism, and also that of unerring taste. . . . —Dunedin (N. Z.) Evening Star.

It was recognized that Dufault was not only a rare tenor in a vocal sense, but a cultured artist through and through. . . .—Wellington (N. Z.) Evening Post.

The art of Paul Dufault is to sing easily and naturally and withal with a charming grace. You feel at the outset that he is an artist of ability and talent. . . . There is a quality about it that attracts, and you have a feeling when he is done that you want to hear more.—Auckland (N. Z.) Bulletin.

As an interpreter and stylist he marks an epoch, and he is safe when the searching test of comparison is made.—Adelaide (Australia) Mail.

Paul Dufault, one of the finest tenors who ever visited this country, was encored again and again. Dufault represents the purest type of tenor voice, just between the lyric and the absolutely robust timbre, the whole "instrument" perfectly equalized, always employed with art and perfect taste.—Sydney Morning Herald.

Paul Dufault created a sensation. He is an artist of intellectual qualities, backed up by a strong musical temperament. His voice is a tenor of superb quality—sympathetic, resonant, and marked by ease of production.—Sydney Daily Telegraph.

PAUL DUFAULT IS ADVERTISED IN AUSTRALIA.

Paul Dufault is the finest concert tenor heard in this city. His voice is beautiful in quality, and his production and diction are perfect.—Sydney Sun.

Paul Dufault shared in the honors with Mme. Nordica, and the audience was insatiable in its demands upon him.—Sydney Evening News.

The French-Canadian tenor, Paul Dufault, is the star of the Cisneros concert season. He displayed a tenor voice, faultless in its purity and perfect in the method of its production.—Sydney Bulletin.

It is difficult to praise Paul Dufault adequately, for his work is ever of such unvarying excellence that one is tempted to take his success for granted. In spite of the fact that so far he has always appeared before the Melbourne public in the train of a more widely known artist, there is no doubt that he has a following of his own, and should he return to us at any time as his own particular personal star, his success would be practically a foregone conclusion.—Melbourne Age.

Paul Dufault's powers are well remembered from his achievements of last year, but, judging from the admirable singing he gave last night, he seems likely to surpass what he did then, since in voice, in vocalization and expressive phrasing he was a treat to listen to.—Melbourne Argus.

Paul Dufault, as before, delighted his hearers by the masterly handling of his fine voice. Even trifles become interesting through his subtle execution and by his expansive top notes.—Melbourne Herald.

Paul Dufault has created an absolute sensation. Sydney and Melbourne critics and last night's audience hold that there never has been heard a more superb tenor organ in this southern world.—Adelaide Register.

Paul Dufault is opening up a whole world of new songs for us and singing them richly, tenderly and impressively, according to their style. His warm, melodious voice is of immense power, wonderfully used. His singing of "Invictus" is a powerful sermon.—Adelaide Observer.

Paul Dufault's reception last night was hearty to a degree. Such is the delight which his cultured singing affords that he practically shares the honors of the evening with Mme. Nordica.—New Zealand Herald.

Paul Dufault is a tenor who possesses a voice of lovely quality, and who is an artist every inch. Last night he held his audience spellbound. He sings with exquisite ease, commanding an envi-

FRANK
GITTELSON
The Distinguished American
VIOLINIST
New York Debut, New York Symphony Orchestra, November 8th
Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 W. 34th St., N.Y.

able technical equipment, and whether the number was dramatic, tragic, light, gay or fantastic, and whether he sang in French or in English, he was at all times a vocalist worthy of association with Mme. Nordica, in whose triumphs he shared last night.—New Zealand Times.

Paul Dufault, a prince of concert tenors, was the coequal star with Mme. Nordica. Such a voice embodied in an artist of the calibre of Mr. Dufault is not heard more than once in a decade. Apart from his golden voice he has the rare attributes of repose and strength, and each song is given exactly and perfectly at its highest valuation.—Wellington Dominion.

Paul Dufault's clarionlike tenor brought him further triumphs. Superlatives throng when one essays to do this artist reasonable justice, for his work on Saturday evening proves him (as before) the truest and most thrilling tenor that has come this way of modern times.—Wellington Evening Post.

In honesty one says what one thinks, and it seems to me that Paul Dufault is the finest and most satisfying concert tenor that I have ever heard. He has all the great gifts—voice, insight, glamor, temperament. He is a poet of the concert platform.—New Zealand Triad.

Paul Dufault divided with Mme. Nordica the honors of the evening.—Lyttelton Times.

If the consensus of opinion were taken we are quite sure that Paul Dufault would take rank as the star of the Nordica firmament.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

He is without doubt the most accomplished male singer who has ever visited New Zealand.—Christchurch Star.

Paul Dufault was in splendid voice last night, and sang finely in every number. He possesses the gift of delineating with true art, and in convincing accents, the varying sentiments and the atmosphere of his songs.—Christchurch Press.

Of all tenors I have ever heard none was so soul satisfying as our recent visitor, the French Canadian, Paul Dufault.—Christchurch Evening News.

Paul Dufault, the Canadian tenor, made a profound impression upon an audience hearing him for the first time, rivaling in popularity before the program concluded any tenor who has come this way.—Otago Daily Times.

MUSICIANS CROSSING THE PACIFIC.
Left to Right: Mischa Elman, Violinist; Paul Dufault, Tenor; Eva Gauthier, Soprano.

Paul Dufault, a tenor, in whose voice there is no alloy or impurity, duplicated the triumph that he achieved on the occasion of the first concert. To a beautiful voice he adds pronounced temperament and passion.—Dunedin Evening Star.

Certain American composers owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Dufault for introducing their works in Australasia. Harriet Ware, Sydney Homer, Bruno Huhn, all these have been made popular through his singing of their songs.

Asked if he would resume a church position, he replied, "Yes, if I obtain as pleasant a position as that in the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, where I sang for fifteen years." Many requests for instruction have come to him, and so he will accept pupils, making a specialty of French repertoire and diction.

Artists' Recitals at the von Ende School.

A series of five artist recitals are scheduled at the von Ende School, New York, as follows:

ARTIST RECITALS.
THE VON ENDE SCHOOL OF MUSIC
requests the honor of your company
Saturday evening, November 7.
Anton Witek, violin; Vita Witek, piano.
Thursday evening, November 12,
Violin Recital, Sergei Kotlarsky.
Tuesday evening, November 17,
Henri LaBonte, tenor; Lawrence Goodman, piano.
Tuesday evening, November 24,
Alfred Ilma, baritone; Lawrence Goodman, piano.
Monday evening, November 30,
Sonata Recital—Sergei Kotlarsky, violin; Moritz Lichtman, piano.

War Time Pleasantry.

"Erratum: The headline 'German Music Not Banned' should read 'German Band Not Music.'"—London Globe.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
Available for Chautauqua Engagements Summer 1915
Tour Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
KNABE PIANO

Helen Stanley's Success as Mimi.

Helen Stanley is making rapid progress in her profession by her brilliant and clever interpretations of the Puccini heroines at the Century Opera House, New York. Her success in the title role of "Madame Butterfly" was enormous, and last week her beautiful voice was heard to advantage as Mimi in "La Boheme."

The following notices are from the New York and Brooklyn daily papers, and testify to her success in the latter role:

Miss Stanley, who sang the part last evening, has a very serviceable voice, and she demonstrated once more, as she had already done in "Madame Butterfly," that she is at home in the music of Puccini.—New York Sun, October 28, 1914.

Helen Stanley and Thomas Chalmers may be singled out for special praise. Miss Stanley sang always unaffectedly, and her voice displayed a fine quality of tone, while on the histrionic side she made the character real and sympathetic.—New York Times, October 28, 1914.

Mimi was very well sung by Helen Stanley. As in "Madame Butterfly," the music lies well for her voice, and her work abounded in nice detail and finish.—New York World, October 28, 1914.

Helen Stanley, who has been singing Madame Butterfly, was the Mimi. It has been a matter of pleasant discovery that Miss Stanley possesses so versatile a talent, and her Mimi adds fresh credit to her accomplishments. As the harried little embroidery maker Miss Stanley again displayed a voice which has charm, warmth and no little dramatic quality. Histrionically, too, Miss Stanley in no way falls below the best of standards.—New York Press, October 28, 1914.

Miss Stanley appears as Mimi. Her singing had charm and sympathetic significance. She looked youthful, and her acting was winsome and naive.—New York American, October 28, 1914.

Helen Stanley was an admirable Mimi, singing and acting her part as few things have been done at the Century.—New York Herald, October 28, 1914.

Miss Stanley's voice has perhaps never sounded so well as it did in the music of Mimi.—New York Globe, October 28, 1914.

Much of the credit for this latest success must go to Helen Stanley, whose acting and singing seem to improve with each appearance. Last night there was no trace of nervousness, which marred her earlier performances. She sang throughout with a luscious, compelling tone which thrilled her audience.—New York Mail, October 28, 1914.

In the center of interest stood the beautiful and touching Mimi of Miss Stanley, who gave further proof of her ripe artistry. This little grisette was bubbling over with the joy of living and charm until the delicate little plan fell victim to the dread disease. Vocally her efforts were beyond criticism.—New York Staats-Zeitung, October 28, 1914.

Miss Helen Stanley's Mimi was delightful, not only vocally but histrionically.—New York Evening Telegram, October 28, 1914.

Helen Stanley as Mimi sang well and acted with understanding.—New York Evening World, October 28, 1914.

The singers were in good voice, Helen Stanley giving a fine vocal and acting interpretation of the delightful role of Mimi.—Brooklyn Eagle, October 28, 1914.

Helen Stanley sang the role of Mimi. Her voice, strong and sweet, was well suited to Puccini's music and her acting commendable.—Brooklyn Standard-Union, October 28, 1914.

Harold Bauer's Chicago Encomiums.

Harold Bauer's reception in Chicago at his first recital following his return from Australia furnished ample proof of the pianist's popularity not only with the general public but with the critical fraternity. Mr. Bauer's program and his masterly rendition were highly praised.

"Piano playing of the most delightful description" is the phrase used by Felix Borowski, in the Chicago Herald, the critic going on to say: "It was playing that lacked none of the qualities of great performance; playing which in the loveliness of its tone and touch, its restraint, its musicianship, must have been at once a lesson and an inspiration to all students who were privileged to hearken to it."

"Bauer is one of the most intelligent of all pianists," declared the Daily Journal. "Everything on his program is executed with studious care and fine feeling. He knows how to make a piano sing, he gives to it a sustaining quality comparable only to what Gadski does with her voice, and he never forces it beyond its power."

Karleton Hackett in the Evening Post referred to Bauer as "one of the great pianists for whom music still remains the art of beauty. It is both a refreshment and a stimulus to hear him play." "Harold Bauer's playing," says the Examiner, "was one of the most artistic feats of pianism heard for some time"; while the Daily News introduced a long and highly commendatory review with the assertion: "Harold Bauer proved that there are giants in these days."

Bauer's New York recital is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, November 7.

Leginska Chopin Recital.

An all-Chopin program will be played by the young pianist Leginska, at her recital, Aeolian Hall, New York, Monday afternoon, November 16. There will be two groups of twelve etudes, op. 10 and op. 25, and the sonata in B flat minor, op. 35. Leginska has given this program with success in England, but it is quite different from any she has offered a New York audience.

Sara Heineman with Theatre Club.

Sara Heineman sang Southern melodies in costume before the New York Theatre Club, at the Hotel Astor, Tuesday afternoon, October 27. Stephen Foster's lovely old melodies, "Old Folks at Home," "Old Black Joe," "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," were well adapted to the warm, rich quality of the soprano's voice. According to the prevailing fashion, Mme. Heineman appeared in a cotton gown, also in poke bonnet and curls.

Others on the program were Franklin Sargent, of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts; Kathryn Miley, Georgia Wolfe, Taylor Holmes, Mrs. Albert Massey and Richard Temple.

SARA HEINEMANN.

Mrs. J. Christopher Marks is the president of the club and Mrs. Julien Edwards, chairman of music. Grace Anderson was Mme. Heinemann's accompanist.

McConnell Pupils' Score.

Minnie M. McConnell, the vocal teacher, gave a song recital on Tuesday evening, October 27, at the Seger Conservatory, New York, where she is head of the vocal department.

Mrs. McConnell brought out two advanced pupils, whose finished performances won immediate recognition. The audience was large, and the applause bestowed upon the performers was well deserved.

Mrs. McConnell demonstrated again her ability as a successful vocal teacher. Harriet McConnell possesses a full, rich contralto voice. She sang in English, Italian and German. Walter Mills' fine baritone was heard to advantage, and his interpretations were excellent.

Lucia Seger contributed three readings which found favor and aided materially in making this recital a success. The following program was rendered: "Elysium" (Oley Speaks), "The Rosary" (Ethelbert Nevin), "Donna Vorrei Morir" (Tosti), "By the Fire" (Salter), Harriet McConnell; "My Little Gray Home in the West" (Lohr), "Mother Machree" (Alcott and Ball), Walter Mills; "The Post That Fitted," (Kipling), "Da 'Mericana Girl" (Daly), Lucia Seger; "Heimweh" (Herbert), "Widmung" (Schumann), Harriet McConnell; "For You Alone" (Giehl), Walter Mills; "Aunt Angelina on Women," Lucia Seger; "Call Me No More" (Charles Wakefield Cadman), "Jean" (H. T. Burleigh), "How's My Boy?" (Sidney Homer), Harriet McConnell.

"Boheme" at Century Opera House.

The first performance of this season at the Century Opera House, New York, of "Boheme" was given on Tuesday evening, October 27. It was a rather uneven performance upon this occasion, but improved greatly during the week.

In the role of Mimi, Helen Stanley is at her best. The soft, pathetic quality of her voice is especially well suited to the portrayal of this character, and she evidences a complete understanding of the Puccini music and is clearly in perfect accord with the feeling of the composer. Her phrasing and enunciation are fine and the conductor, Agide Jacchia, seconded her efforts ably. Morgan Kingston is an attractive figure in the role of Rudolph, although it may be permitted the critic to remark that his costume was rather too new looking for a hungry poet of the Bohemian Latin Quarter, a deficiency, however, which will evidently be remedied by the ravages of time. This same comment applies also to the costumes of several of the other principals. Mr. Kingston sang Puccini's music delightfully, with true cantilena, requisite style, and sustained legato. The character of the music admits of ample display of the great beauty of his voice.

Thomas Chalmers is an attractive Marcel, although it cannot be said that broad comedy is particularly well suited to his talents, but he looks and acts the thorough Bohemian student in this part and sings the music with his usual beauty of tone and fervent intensity. In the role of Colline, Henry Weldon's fine bass was heard with pleasure, and the role of Schaunard was excellently taken by Louis d'Angelo.

Frank Phillips injected rather too much broad comedy in the two roles which were allotted to him, Benoit and Alcindoro, but his impersonations were enjoyed. A new member of the cast, Eileen Castles, essayed the role of Musetta and a very graceful and attractive Musetta she was.

Prof. Heink's Lecture-Recital in St. Louis.

Prof. Felix Heink of the Strassberger Conservatory of Music, St. Louis, Mo., appeared in recital last week, his success being told in the following excerpts from the St. Louis press:

Prof. Felix Heink, of the Strassberger Conservatories of Music, scored a brilliant success with the lecture-recital he gave at the auditorium of that institution last Friday evening, which was as deserving as it was flattering. As the main theme of his lecture he spoke of "Education in General and Musical Education in Particular." He congratulated St. Louis for its numerous excellent singing societies and other musical organizations, headed by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and expressed the hope that these would continue also in the future as important factors in behalf of musical education and advancement in this city.

The lecture, which in its various details proved to be most instructive, gained especially in value on this account, that Professor Heink beautifully illustrated the same by means of three groups of musical selections, by the performance of which the composer-pianist presented additional brilliant testimony regarding his widely known virtuosity as a master of musical interpretation.—St. Louis Westliche Post. (Translated.)

On Friday evening last at the auditorium of the Strassberger Conservatories Prof. Felix Heink, an eminent composer, pianist and music litterateur, gave a lecture recital which, notwithstanding the very unfavorable weather, was honored by an audience that completely filled the South Side hall. Professor Heink's program consisted of three finely contrasted groups of from three to four compositions. Each number was preceded by a technical explanation and each group was introduced by a brief lecture, or rather a familiar talk, the intent being to instruct the students of music present and to interest the general audience at the same time. Professor Heink briefly reviewed musical affairs in St. Louis before concluding his lecture and made an ardent and informative appeal for support of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. The lecturer also pointed out the error of a too diffuse interest in musical affairs as instanced in the formation of numerous little societies for the cultivation of that which at best is only a very temporary fad.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat, October 18, 1914.

Japanese Dances.

[From the Vancouver, B. C., Saturday Sunset.]

In Japan dancing to delight the gods goes back to the origin of all music and poetry, says a writer in "The Japan Magazine" for March. The "kagura" is described as an early form of pantomimic dance associated with temples in Japan as part of the worship of the gods. It has, in fact, prevailed in Nippon for over 2,000 years. When the "kagura" is performed at the Imperial Palace the dancers are arrayed in simple but expressive costumes of ancestral times, and the musical instruments used are of the most primitive nature. The most sacred dance is the "niwabi," or "garden fire." For this the orchestra consists of flutes, pipes and harp. The chief character sings as he dances, while the other characters dance to the music of the harp alone. The best performance of the "kagura" is to be seen in the larger temples in Tokyo during a season of festive celebration. The popular "kagura" of the villages has degenerated largely into mere pantomimic acting, with interpolations by the performer.

Donald Chalmers Lauded.

Donald Chalmers is becoming widely known throughout the United States, having toured from coast to coast. He possesses a real bass voice of great resonance and brilliant quality and a buoyancy and charm of personality and magnetism which render his every appearance a genuinely popular and artistic success.

The following clippings from the press speak well for his future on the concert stage:

Donald Chalmers, as the Happy Executioner, has a fine bass voice and excellent histrionic skill.—New York Evening Telegram.

Donald Chalmers sang with a bass voice that was noteworthy for its beauty and fullness.—New York Herald.

Mr. Chalmers' deep bass voice was very noticeable and won favor. —Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

Mr. Chalmers, in forbidding make-up, was seen as a cheerful executioner, with nothing much of moment to do except to sing, and, as he has a good voice of basso quality, he was entirely satisfactory and much enjoyed.—Philadelphia Record.

Donald Chalmers, for many years a favorite in Norfolk musical circles, has seldom if ever been in better voice in these concerts, and his familiar bass with its extraordinary power and remarkable flexibility was displayed at its best in Tschaikowsky's "Pilgrim Song" in the concluding part of the program, the composition requiring for its adequate rendition a voice particularly under the complete mastery of the singer.—Hartford (Conn.) Courant.

I do not recall having heard a better basso in many years outside of grand opera than Donald Chalmers. The audience seemed to yearn for more of him.—New York World.

Mr. Chalmers' number, Hawley's "I Long for You," and Tschaikowsky's "Pilgrim Song" were given with the artistic effect and finish which has always characterized his work before Litchfield County audiences. Seldom, indeed, is Norfolk privileged to hear a bass with the tremendous power and quality of that possessed by Mr. Chalmers; his masterful rendering of the "Pilgrim's Song" created the strongest possible impression.—Winstead (Conn.) Citizen.

Donald Chalmers has one of the sweetest and most powerful voices heard in this city.—Brooklyn Times.

Mr. Chalmers displayed to advantage his deep, musical basso. He was heartily applauded and established himself firmly as a true artist.—Canton (Ohio) Repository.

Mr. Chalmers made the strongest impression of the evening by his dashing rendition of "The Bandolero," which brought out a voice of unusual resonance.—Springfield Union.

Mr. Chalmers rendered several basso solos in such manner as to win great applause, establishing himself as one of the greatest bassos ever heard in this city.—Lead (S. Dak.) News.

Mr. Chalmers so far surpassed his previous work as to occasion general surprise and elicit unlimited praise. He has a magnificent voice and displays it to good advantage.—Marshaltown (Iowa) News.

Of Mr. Chalmers it may be said that the audience would gladly have heard more from him. A voice of such strength and virility one rarely hears. His splendid work will long be remembered.—Winstead (Conn.) Citizen.

Sharing the honors with Mme. Jomelli was Donald Chalmers, who sang the "Toreador" song from "Carmen" in a most convincing manner, his rich basso sounding full and clear in every part of the building.—Asbury Park (N. J.) Journal.

Among the singers heard at the Auditorium, Ocean Grove, Donald Chalmers, the basso, won one of the most brilliant successes. His voice is powerful filling the vast auditorium where ten thousand people rendered him the reward of their applause.—New York World.

Donald Chalmers is a corking fine basso, possessing a voice of great roundness, of much resonance and masterfully controlled. His voice and musicianship were keenly enjoyed, while his enunciation is perfect. He is one of the greatest bassos ever heard here.—Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Record.

Donald Chalmers, one of the soloists of last night's concert, was most enthusiastically received. His voice is a rich basso of beautiful quality; his enunciation is distinct and his phrasing excellent. After each number he was compelled to respond to several encores.—Brooklyn Eagle. (Advertisement.)

Clarence Eddy in Middle West.

Clarence Eddy, the American organist, was heard on October 20 at Grand Avenue Temple, Kansas City, under the auspices of the Kansas City Association of Organists. He played a brilliant program and his success was pronounced. He was again heard on October 22 at the First Presbyterian Church, Lincoln, Neb., and again scored a tremendous success. He was especially successful in a new Concert Gavotte, by Maxsell, which is dedicated to Mr. Eddy, and in the Concert Prelude in D minor, Kramer, also dedicated to Mr. Eddy.

Myrna Sharlow at Western College.

Myrna Sharlow, soprano of the Boston and Covent Garden Opera Companies, opened her concert tour in Oxford, Ohio, on Saturday evening, October 24, when, under the auspices of Western College, the following program was given with great success:

Adieux Notre Petite Table (from Manon).....Massenet
Gavotte (from Manon).....Massenet
French, Maman, dites-moi.....George Osgood (1800)
German, O du lieber Schatz.....Hans Schmidt (1866)
Scotch, Bonnie Sweet Bessie.....J. L. Gilbert
Irish, I Know Where I'm Going.....———
Old Irish, County Antrim.....———
Mi Chiamano Mimi (from La Boheme).....Puccini
Addio (from La Boheme).....Puccini
Spirit Flower.....Campbell-Tipton
L'heure Exquise.....Victor Staub
Lilacs.....Rachmaninoff

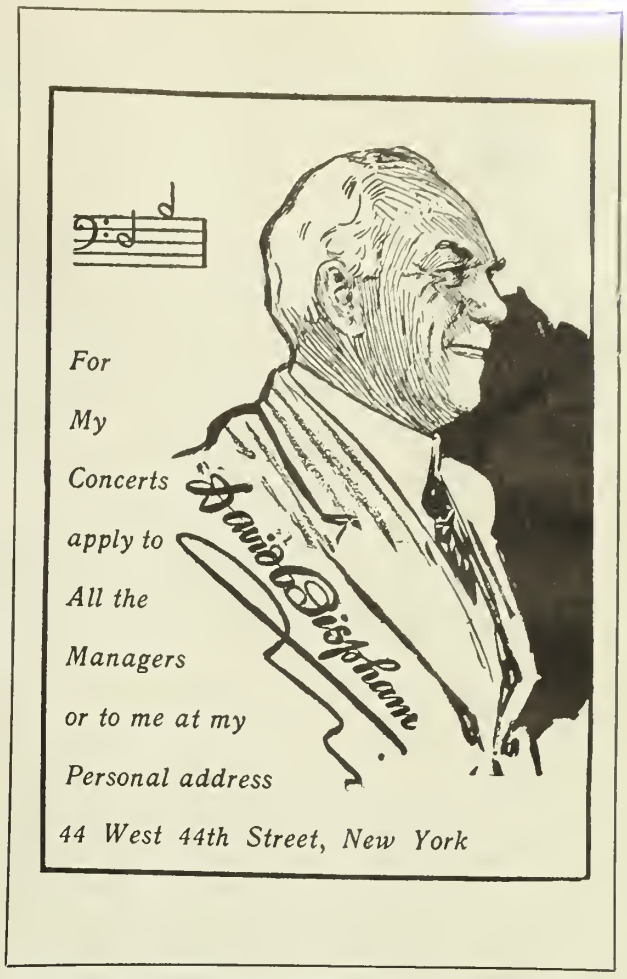

Photo copyright by Dover Street Studios, London, England.
MYRNA SHARLOW,
As Samaritana in "Francesca da Rimini."

My Lover He Comes on the Skee.....H. Clough Leighter
Scene and aria from Faust.....Gounod
Ah, Love, but a Day.....Gilberté
Allah.....A. Walter Kramer
To a Messenger.....Frank la Forge
Un bel di (from Madame Butterfly).....Puccini
The Year's at the Spring.....Beach

Songs for Children.

If the mothers of a community can start a movement to popularize the old songs, putting them into the home, the schools, the social hours, and giving them a place above that of the cheap popular song, it will be a long educational step, says The Mothers' Magazine. They have, all of them, an appealing note that will make them quickly interesting to children. It is not the fault of our boys and girls that dangerous sentimentality is the burden of their singing. They demand the lyric, the emotional in the adolescent development, and, not recognizing this fact, we have left them alone to satisfy this need as best they could.

The musical taste of the average child is good. Put a volume of fine old ballads on the piano, and begin your child's education, not only in song, but in romance.

Dora de Phillippe Praised in Boston.

Dora de Phillippe, the soprano, who is at present appearing with the Italian Opera Company at the Boston Theatre, Boston, Mass., as guest artist, has been enthusiastically received in that conservative city, as the following press notices will attest. Mme. de Phillippe is singing in special performances the roles of Nedda, Musette and Butterfly. These are her press tributes:

Dora de Phillippe, one of the stars of the company, made her debut as Nedda in "Pagliacci." She is an ideal Nedda in face and form and her voice is beautiful and well handled.—Boston American.

Miss de Phillippe, emotional by nature, spreads her voice to the winds for the sake of a dramatic effect, but the love duet of Nedda and Silvio was sung with genuine passion, and the sensual and unreflective nature of the wife of Canio was made apparent.—Boston Post.

In "Pagliacci" the principal singers were Dora de Phillippe, a dramatic soprano, who should prove to be a valuable acquisition to Manager Leaby's company.—The Boston Journal.

Mme. de Phillippe sang for the first time with the company. She is well suited to the part of Nedda and gave an excellent characterization, one in which she used her voice intelligently as a means for dramatic expression, and acted with evidences both of instinct and experience. There was evident a knowledge of how to develop a scene, as in the impatience, the amused raillery and, finally, the tigerish fury at Tonio's protestations of affection.—The Boston Globe.

Miss de Phillippe has a soprano voice of exceptional beauty of tone, clear and sure, and her dramatic intelligence is of unusual merit. We have heard few Neddas so satisfying as to voice, appearance and intelligence.—Boston Daily Advertiser.

Miss de Phillippe in voice, action and the composition of her part attained real operatic impersonation. Her coming betters the company.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Miss de Phillippe, who appeared as Nedda in Leoncavallo's opera, will be remembered as being in Mr. Savage's "Madame Butterfly" company. Last evening her upper tones were particularly effective.

There are two ways of composing this character. It may be portrayed as inherently coarse, a peasant, a woman frankly animal in her desires and passions, or Nedda may be shown as a linnet beaded soubrette, susceptible to flattery, reckless through whim, not by reason of constitutional sensuality.

Miss de Phillippe's impersonation more nearly approached the latter conception. She was animated and coquettish.—The Boston Herald.

MRS. KING CLARK
Mezzo Soprano
American Tour
WHOLE SEASON 1914-15
Management, M. H. Hanson
437 Fifth Ave New York

Myrtle ELVYN
RENOWNED AMERICAN PIANISTE
Now Booking For American Tour 1914-1915
Concert Direction, HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Bldg., Chicago
KIMBALL PIANO USED

Erie's New School of Music.

Under the able direction of Franz Kohler and Morris Gabriel Williams, the Kohler-Williams School of Music and Art, Erie, Pa., has started upon its career. There will be instruction in violin, voice, piano, organ, cello, and all other instruments, theory, harmony, counterpoint and composition, sight reading, drawing, painting and composition, elocution, etc.; in fact, all the branches included in the word "Arts."

The regular music course, consisting of freshman, junior and senior years, leads to the granting of the gold medal and diplomas at graduation. Only students who have passed their yearly examinations in vocal or instrumental music, together with the prescribed work in harmony, history of music, and piano are eligible to receive the diploma. This rule, of course, does not apply to special students, who are received at any time.

Quoting from a brochure sent out by the school, the requirements for entrance into the violin, piano and organ departments respectively are:

Candidates for entrance to the freshman class in the violin department will play before the faculty a Kreutzer etude, a Rode or Viotti concerto and all scales and arpeggios. All candidates for the diploma must pass the piano examination into the freshman grade.

Candidates for admission to the freshman year in the piano department are required to play in a satisfactory manner before the faculty, one of Bach's two part inventions, a movement from one of the Haydn, Mozart or early Beethoven sonatas, a modern composition of medium grade, scales and arpeggios, and an exercise in sight reading.

Candidates for admission to the freshman class in the organ department are expected to play a short prelude and fugue by Bach, a hymn tune at sight with and without pedals, a modern composition, scales and arpeggios. A well grounded piano technic is taken for granted as a necessary prerequisite.

There will also be lectures upon the history of music, covering the Egyptian, Arabic, Hebrew and Greek music, music of the Middle Ages, the development of church music and folksong, the beginning of operatic music and the life and influence of the modern composers to the present day.

Among the other requirements of the school is a stipulation that all students taking the regular work are required to pass a satisfactory examination at the end of each school year. All candidates for a diploma must give a recital before graduation and every regular student will appear in public at least once each year under the auspices of the school.

For more detailed information, address the Kohler-Williams School of Music and Art, Majestic Theatre Building, Erie, Pa.

Both Mr. Kohler and Mr. Williams are closely associated with the musical development of Erie, and their endeavors in the realm of pedagogy have been marked with success.

Each is an artist in his line, Mr. Kohler being a violinist and Mr. Williams a teacher of voice, and their splendid work in connection with the Erie Festival last spring demonstrated their excellent executive ability. Under such auspices the school should prove a decided success.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander in Song Recital.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander's song recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Thursday evening, October 29, was well attended by an appreciative audience.

The soprano's program was made up of four groups: Old airs and songs, Bach, Spohr and Mozart; German classics, Schubert and Schumann; modern French songs, Cesar Franck, Amhurst Webber, Debussy and Chaminade; modern songs in English, Chadwick, MacFarlane, Rogers, Foote and Henschel.

That intelligent use of her voice, which has always characterized this singer's work, was in evidence throughout each number, and her unquestionable musicianship, as usual, proved a no small asset to her singing.

Mme. Hudson-Alexander's audience gave evidence of much pleasure throughout all her numbers, but particularly following the Debussy "Il pleure dans mon Cœur," "La lune paresseuse," Chaminade; Roger's "Ecstasy," which had to be repeated, and Henschel's "Spring," also repeated.

Caroline Hudson-Alexander's vocal work is so well known not only in New York, but throughout the United States, that detailed comment on this program is superfluous. As an oratorio and concert singer and as a prominent church soloist, particularly at St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, and at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, her present position, she has established an enviable reputation for herself. Her Aeolian Hall recital served to prove her versatility as a successful and artistic interpreter of songs.

Arthur Hyde was at the piano.

WANTED

VIOLA PLAYER WANTED—Wanted capable viola player for string quartet. Only exceptional amateur or student studying for the profession who would welcome opportunity to study chamber music seriously considered. Lady or gentleman. Apply Box 34, MUSICAL COURIER Co., 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

SINGERS WANTED—Young professional singers have the opportunity to secure complete operatic training—solo parts and chorus, under operatic conductor at leading Berlin, Vienna, Budapest opera houses. Complete operatic performances at leading New York theatre. Send full particulars voice-instruction received. Write for appointment and voice trial. Address Conductor, Box 7, MUSICAL COURIER Co., 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

STRING ORCHESTRA ORGANIZING—Talented and serious professional students of violin, viola, cello and double bass are invited to join string orchestra for thorough study of orchestral playing. Concerts. Ladies or gentlemen. Applicants examined prior to acceptance. Address Box 49, MUSICAL COURIER Co., 437 Fifth Ave., New York.

Mrs. Laura E. Morrill
TEACHER OF SINGING
Tone Production
Interpretation
Repertoire
Aeolian Hall
33 West 42nd St.,
New York City

CENTURY OPERA HOUSE
Central Park West, at 62d & 63d Sts., New York City
'Phone Columbus 8800
SEASON 1914-15
Grand Opera in English and Original Languages.
SEATS ON SALE TEN WEEKS IN ADVANCE.
CENTURY LYCEUM AND CONCERT HALL
(In the Century Opera House)
Available on Rentals for CONCERTS, RECITALS, THEATRICALS, ETC.

ZOE FULTON
PRIMA DONNA CONTRALTO
Direction: Marc Lagen, 500 5th Ave., New York
Per. Add.: Pennsylvania College for Women, Pittsburg, Pa.

ETTA EDWARDS VOCAL TEACHER
4000 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

SUSANNAH MACAULAY
TEACHER OF SINGING
Perfect Method of Breathing Taught
STUDIO: 143 CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK
Composer of "Allah is Great," "The Butterfly," "Ave Maria"

CARLO NICOSIA
Formerly conductor with Century and Hammerstein Opera Companies.
Coaching for Opera in French, Italian and English.
5 West 65th St., New York.

MARIE YAHR Contralto
Oratorio - Concert - Recital and Opera
Phone. Ravenswood 2319. 849 Lakeside Place. Chicago

JOHN BARNES WELLS
TENOR
Management: Foster & David
500 Fifth Ave. Tel. 2023 Bryant

N. Y. School of Music and Arts
RALFE LEECH STERNER, Director
56-58 West 97th Street Tel. 679 Riverside
Dormitory for out-of-town students

BLANCHE HAMILTON FOX
CONTRALTO BOSTON THEATRE OPERA COMPANY,
Exclusive Management FOSTER & DAVID, 500 Fifth Ave., New York

FRANZ KOHLER
VIOLINIST—TEACHER
Conductor Erie Symphony Orchestra

MORRIS GABRIEL WILLIAMS
BARITONE
Director
Apollo Club and Erie Festival Chorus

DIRECTORS OF KOHLER-WILLIAMS SCHOOL OF MUSIC AND ART
Majestic Theatre Building :: :: :: :: Erie, Pa,

EDWIN EVANS
BARITONE
Fuller Bldg., 10 South 18th St., Phila., Pa.

ELLIS CLARK HAMMANN
PIANIST
1716 Chestnut St., Philadelphia

HENIOT LEVY PIANIST
Kimball Hall, CHICAGO

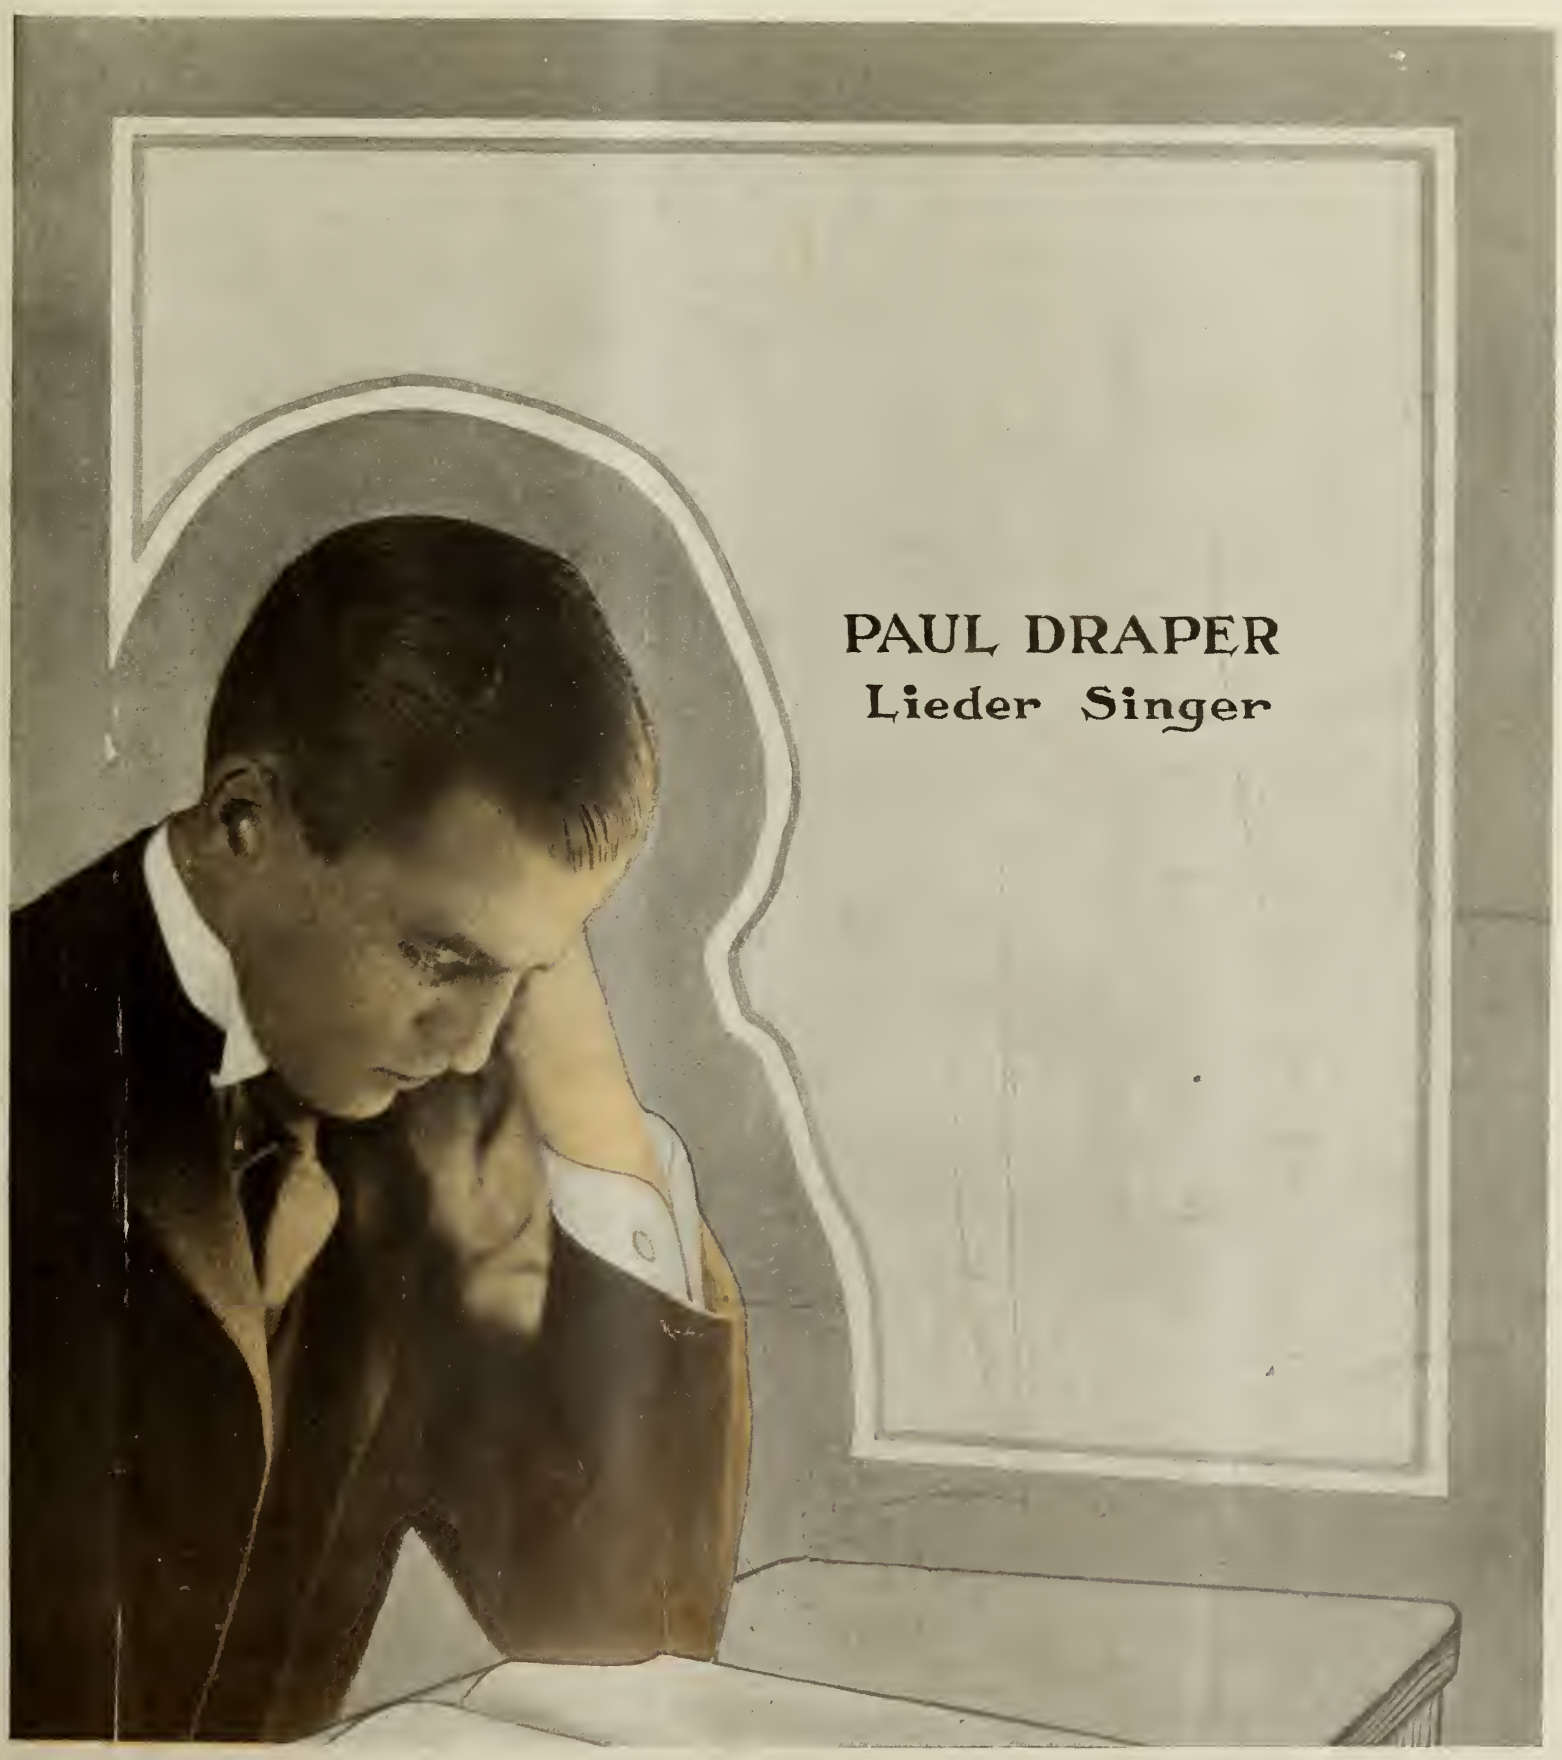
EDWARD H. FREEMAN
SOLO PIANIST
Director of the Conservatory, Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio.

EMMA NAGEL SOPRANO
SEASON 1914-15
Management, WALTER ANDERSON, - New York

SARTO
Bass-Barytone
(Late Metropolitan Opera Company)
Management: WALTER ANDERSON, 171 West 57th Street, New York

Morse - Rummel
VIOLINIST
Endorsed by Nikisch, Damrosch, Ysaye, Godowsky
DIRECTION - Walter Anderson, 171 West 57th Street - NEW YORK

WALTER ANDERSON ANNOUNCES
LOUISE VAN OGLE
In Illustrated
"TALKS ON MODERN OPERAS"
Assisted by EMMA NAGEL, Soprano
Address 171 West 57th Street
Western Tour, January-February, 1915
- - New York



UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
1914

MUSICAL COURIER

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO MUSIC AND THE ALLIED ARTS

Thirty-fifth Year | Price 15 Cents | Subscription $5.00 | Foreign, $6.25 Annually

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 19 | NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1914 | WHOLE NO. 1807

PAUL DRAPER
Lieder Singer

INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL AND EDUCATIONAL AGENCY.
Church, Concert and School Positions Secured.
MRS. BABCOCK.
CARNEGIE HALL, New York.
Telephone: 2634 Columbus.

HELENE BARTENWERFFER
MEZZO SOPRANO—VOCAL INSTRUCTOR.
111 W. 74th St. Tel. 4934 Columbus.

M. F. BURT SCHOOL
Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, Musical Stenography. Normal courses in Public and Private School Music. Special coaching for church trials.
New York School, 1202 Carnegie Hall.
Address Brooklyn School, 1202 Lefferts Place.

JOHANNA BROCKS—OETTEKING
COLORATURA SOPRANO.
Concerts, Oratorio, Musicales. Five Languages.
Also VOCAL TEACHER.
604 West 135th St. - - - New York.

PAUL SAVAGE,
VOICE CULTURE.
803 Carnegie Hall,
New York.

H. RAWLINS BAKER,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Studio, 622 Aeolian Hall.
Tel. 8296 Bryant.

MAX KNITEL-TREUMANN,
BARITONE.
Voice Culture—Art of Singing.
Studio, Carnegie Hall.
Mail address: Fifth Ave., New Rochelle, N. Y.

MRS. HENRY SMOCK — MISS SUSAN S.
Positive Breath Control, Perfect Placing. — B O I C E. VOCAL STUDIOS. — Expert Coaching. Diction in all languages.
43 E. 27th St., N. Y., Tel. 1977 Mad. Sq.

E. PRESSON MILLER,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
826 Carnegie Hall.
Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MARY HISSEM DE MOSS,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
106 W. 90th St. Phone, 3552 River.
Exclusive m'g't of Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall.

HENRY T. FLECK,
Head Musical Department,
Hunter College, New York.
69th St. and Park Ave. - - - Tel. 2443 Plaza.

FLORENCE E. GALE,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals and Concerts.
Instruction, Leschetizky Method.
151 W. 70th St. Telephone, 5331 Columbus.

ELEANOR PATTERSON,
AMERICAN CONTRALTO.
Tel. 880 Morningside. 710 W. 124th St.

ZIEGLER INSTITUTE OF NORMAL SINGING
MME. ANNA E. ZIEGLER, Director.
Met. Opera House Bldg., 1425 B'way, New York.
Tel. 1274 Bryant.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DENNIS MEHAN,
Studio: 70 Carnegie Hall.
Telephone, Columbus 5940.

HENRIETTA SPEKE-SEELEY,
SOPRANO—TEACHER OF SINGING.
1425 Broadway—Metropolitan Opera House.
Residence, 2184 Bathgate Ave. Phone, 3967 Tremont

DUDLEY BUCK,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
Aeolian Hall, 33 West 42nd St.
Phone, 7408 Bryant. New York.

LENOX ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
H. H. Reppert, Director. All Branches Taught.
Terms very reasonable. Free Scholarships.
172 E. 117th St., Tel. 6039-J, Harlem.

GRAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC,
113 West 85th St., New York. Tel. 4152 Schuyler.
Special course for teachers and professionals.
Degrees granted. Thorough course for beginners.
Dr. B. Eberhard, Pres. (Thirty-ninth year.)

ELIZABETH TOPPING
PIANO INSTRUCTION.
254 W. 104th St. - - - New York.

ELIZABETH K. PATTERSON,
SOPRANO. TEACHER OF SINGING.
Studio: 257 West 104th Street.
'Phone, 8101 Riverside.

JANET BULLOCK WILLIAMS,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
122 Carnegie Hall.

JAMES P. DUNN,
Composer and Organist, St. Patrick's Church, Jersey City. Instruction, Piano, Organ. Theory and Sight Singing. (Specialty Gregorian Chant and Catholic Church Music.) Phone, 782-R Bergen.

LOUIS CORNELL,
Four years first assistant Rudolph Ganz in Berlin.
Studio: 645 Madison Ave., N. Y. Phone Plaza 4570.

SIGNOR FILOTEO GRECO,
THE ART OF SINGING.
Studio: 62 East Thirty-fourth Street, New York.
Telephone: 4879 Murray Hill.

LOUISE KELLOGG,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
1211 Carnegie Hall. Tel. 1350 Columbus.

MORITZ E. SCHWARZ,
Ass't Organist, Trinity Church, New York.
RECITALS AND INSTRUCTION.
Address Trinity Church, New York.

ADOLF GLOSE,
Concert Pianist, Piano Instruction. Coach for professional and advanced singers.
Residence studio: 81 Morningside Ave., City.
'Phone, 2193-J Morningside.

LISBET HOFFMANN,
PIANIST.
12 Pierce Street, Stapleton (Staten Island).

WILBUR A. LUYSTER,
SIGHT SINGING SPECIALIST.
(Galin-Paris-Chevé Method).
Instructor 8 years at Metropolitan Opera Co. All Singers taught to read (church or otherwise), Rhythm, Ear Training, Supervisors' Course.
Tuesday and Friday Classes. 64 E. 34th St., N. Y.
Tel. 5460-J Bedford. 127 Quincy St., Brooklyn.

MISS EMMA THURSBY,
SOPRANO.
Will receive a limited number of pupils.
Residence, 34 Gramercy Park.
Phone, 3187 Gramercy. New York City.

BRUNO HUHN,
231 West 96th St., New York.
STYLE, DICTION, REPERTOIRE, ETC., TO VOCALISTS.

ELIZABETH PILLOW OLIVER,
SOPRANO.
Art of Singing. Voice building and development.
Available for Oratorio, Chamber Music, Concerts.
Studio: 837 Carnegie Hall, New York.

DR. A. MADELEY RICHARDSON
Member of the Faculty of Institute of Musical Art.
VOICE PRODUCTION AND TONE-PLACING.
Teacher of singing, from the earliest stages to Opera, Oratorio and Recital work.
Tel. Morningside 7587. Studio, 490 Riverside Drive.

JOHN W. NICHOLS,
TENOR.
330 W. 58th St., N. Y. C. Phone, 1434 Columbus.

CLAUDE WARFORD,
TENOR.
Metropolitan Opera House.
1425 Broadway, New York.

CARL M. ROEDER,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
607 Carnegie Hall and 423 East 140th St.

FREDERICK E. BRISTOL,
TEACHER OF SINGING.
No. 143 West 42d St., New York.

MR. CHARLES LEE TRACY,
PIANOFORTE INSTRUCTION.
Certified Teacher of the LESCHETIZKY METHOD.
Studio: Carnegie Hall, - - New York City.

JOSEPH PIZZARELLO,
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Voice Developed—Style, Opera.
851-852 Carnegie Hall, New York.

WILLIAM NELSON BURRITT,
VOICE SPECIALIST
AND REPERTOIRE BUILDER.
128A East 19th Street.
Tel. Gramercy 3848.

WALTER L. BOGERT,
President N. Y. State Music Teachers' Ass'n, 1913; Member of Advisory, Standards, and Examining Committees, 1914.
Baritone. Teacher of Singing. Lectures and Recitals.
130 Claremont Ave., New York. Tel. 291 Morn'side.
Tuesday and Friday, 114 West 72d St.

Piano Instruction — Telephone
Theory of Music — 7280 Schuyler
CARL HAHN,
MUSICAL DIRECTOR.
Studio: 172 West 79th St. (The Avonel).

F. W. RIESBERG,
INSTRUCTION—PIANO, ORGAN, HARMONY.
With the "Musical Courier"; Sec'y Manuscript Society; Organist Central Baptist Church, New York. 439 Fifth Ave.; Tel. 4292 Murray Hill.
Residence, Park Hill, Yonkers, N. Y.

JESSIE DAVIS,
PIANIST.
Concerts—Recitals—Lessons.
Studio: 701 Pierce Bldg., Boston.

CARL FIQUÉ, PIANO
KATHERINE NOAK-FIQUÉ,
Dramatic Soprano
FIQUE MUSICAL INSTITUTE,
128 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn.

MISS GENEVIEVE BISBEE,
—Leschetizky Method—
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
Also limited number of resident pupils received.
38 East 60th St. 'Phone, 6109 Plaza.

ALICE GARRIGUE MOTT,
ART OF SINGING.
172 West 79th St., New York.

WARD LEWIS,
ACCOMPANIST—With Mr. David Bispham season 1914. With Rieldaffer-Gailey Co. touring West Summer 1914.
547 Riverside Drive, New York.
Phone, 3753 Morningside.

ESPERANZA GARRIGUE,
ART OF SINGING.
Heathcote Hall, 600 West 114th St., New York
Tel. 7814 Morningside.
(Bet. Broadway and Riverside Drive.)

MRS. WILLIS E. BACHELLE
TEACHER OF SINGING.
22 East 33d St., New York City

MME. EMMA A. DAMBMANN,
(MRS. HERMANN G. FRIEDMANN.)
CONTRALTO.
Vocal Instruction, Concerts.
Residence Studio, Hotel Calumet
Phone: Columbus 1628. 340 West 57th

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTE FOR VIOLIN PLAYING, PIANO AND VOCAL CULTURE, 230 East 62d St.
Complete musical education given to students from the begining to the highest perfection.
F. & H. CARRI, Directors

MARY T. WILLIAMSON,
SOLO PIANIST.
Recitals, Concerts, Instruction.
Leschetizky Method. 21 East 75th St.
'Phone, 1302 Lenox.

MRS. J. HARRISON-IRVINE,
PIANISTE—ACCOMPANISTE.
Instruction in Piano, Teaching, Accompanying, Coaching of Operatic Roles, Concert, Oratorio, Sight Singing and Reading Classes, Harmony.
1013 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. Phone, Columbus

MR. AND MRS. THEO. J. TOEDT
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Home Studio: 163 East 62d St., New York

T. TERTIUS NOBLE,
ORGANIST AND MASTER OF THE CHOIR
Lessons in Organ, Theory and Composition
St. Thomas' Church, Fifth Ave. and 53d St.

VON DOENHOFF,
VOICE—HELEN. PIANO—ALBERT
1186 Madison Ave.
'Phone: 1332 Lenox.

DANIEL VISANSKA, VIOLINIST
Nine years of successful teaching and concert in Berlin. Will accept engagements and a limited number of pupils.
Address: 25 West 126th St., New York.
Phone, Harlem 3427.
[In Philadelphia Mondays. Address 1821 Raymond St.]

ELENA DE OLLOQUI,
PIANIST—INSTRUCTION.
111 East 62d St., New York. Tel., 2285 Plaza

DOUGLAS POWELL
VOCAL INSTRUCTION.
Special attention paid to
Concert Breathing and Tone Placement.
Studio: 448 Madison Ave., Phone Plaza 57

HERBERT WILBER GREENE,
SCHOOL OF SINGING.
Director of the Brookfield Summer School of Singing
701 Carnegie Hall, N. Y. City.

MUSICAL COURIER

VOL. LXIX.—NO. 19. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1914. WHOLE NO. 1807.

MUSICAL EVENTS IN THE KAISER'S CAPITAL.

Concerts Continue to Draw Large Audiences—King Clark's Passing—Choral Success—Augusta Cottlow Plays MacDowell—Needy Musicians to be Fed—Serato No Cafe Player.

Jenaer Str., 21,
Berlin, October 10, 1914.

King Clark, the vocal instructor, passed away here last aturday, October 3, after a very serious illness of nine eeks. Those who knew him well were not surprised, for ey were aware that Clark had been in a very precarious ondition for the past three years. Accompanied by Mrs. lark the deceased went to Lausanne on July 24 with the xpectation of spending his vacation in the Alps. In Lauanne, however, he was stricken suddenly, and for weeks hovered between life and death. He finally rallied, owever, sufficiently to be brought back to Berlin, but Mrs. lark and the physician and nurse knew that there was no ope of recovery. Clark's death was the result of a general breakdown brought on by overwork and by an unygienic mode of life. He taught all day and took absolutely no exercise.

In the death of King Clark, the musical world has susained a severe loss, for he was one of the ablest and most uccessful singing teachers of Europe. Since he came to rlin four years ago Clark had been singularly successful in placing his pupils in the German opera houses, where ey invariably gave great satisfaction. It is sad that this nial man should have been taken away at the age of ty-three, for he had a real mission to fulfill. However, splendid work done by King Clark during the thirteen rs that he was active as a pedagogue in Paris and Berhas already borne rich fruit and will continue to do so many years to come.

The Berlin American colony has lost in King Clark one its most prominent and influential members. King rk was a man who commanded the highest respect ong all who knew him well. Genial, kind-hearted, adminded, magnetic, generous to a fault, he had a kind d and a hearty handshake for everybody. His strong, gnetic personality was irresistible.

The funeral services were held at his house on Tuesday rnoon, Judge Gerard, the American ambassador, and of the prominent members of the colony attending. A istian Science service was held by Mr. Gerst, the husd of Augusta Cottlow. The body was cremated here in lin.

rs. King Clark is, of course, so crushed by her hus-l's death that she is unable to go to America, so that concert tour, which was anced for this season, under ison's direction, will have to be poned. For the present Mrs. k will remain in Berlin with her her, Mrs. Oakley.

Ochs Choir Sings.

he first concert of the famous harmonic Choir under Siegfried s, which occurred at the Philonie on Monday evening, drew an immense audience. Ochs will his regular series of four even- and four matinees during the er, and the gross receipts of all concerts will go to the War f Fund. Ochs opened his pro- on Monday with the German nal hymn, "Heil dir im Siegerz," which was begun by a boys' , followed by the tenors, nos and so forth, and finally g with the full chorus, orchestra organ, making a tremendous . The entire audience joined in final verse. Wilhelm Berger's die grossen Toten," for mixed s and orchestra, a beautiful, se- work, was admirably presented. After this Fritz Feinhe Munich baritone, whom you have heard at the Metitan, sang lieder with piano accompaniment. Feinhals een called into the army, and when he appeared on the spick and span in his new gray field uniform, he was given a rousing reception. Of great interest were seven old German folk songs, arranged by Siegfried Ochs for à capella mixed chorus. Quaint, charming old songs they were, one of them dating back as far as 1477. The celebrated chorus and its unique conductor were in excellent form throughout the evening.

FRANK KING CLARK,
One of the leading voice teachers in the world, who died at Berlin on October 3.

Blüthner Concerts Open.

First of the Blüthner Orchestra's popular concerts was that given at Blüthner Hall on Sunday evening under Oskar Fried's baton. The attendance was much larger than it ever was at these concerts in times of peace. As two-thirds of the regular personnel of the Blüthner Orchestra have been called to arms it was virtually a new band of musicians that played on Sunday. The ensemble was surprisingly good considering this fact. With the "Peer Gynt" suite in particular Fried scored a great success. Nicolas Lambenon, the concertmaster, gave finished performances of the two Beethoven romances.

AN INTERESTING TRIO OF PIANISTS.
Teresa Carreño, Alberto Jonas, Marie Gabrielle Leschetizky. The others in the group are Dr. Bernhard Pollack, the distinguished amateur pianist of Berlin, and Mme. Carreño's daughters.

Augusta Cottlow Scores.

Augusta Cottlow's concert for the benefit of poor musicians, which was given at the Singakademie on October 7, was a pronounced success. Supported by the Philharmonic Orchestra under the leadership of Ferruccio Busoni, our brilliant young countrywoman played the Beethoven C minor and MacDowell's D minor concertos and Liszt's "Spanish Rhapsody" in Busoni's arrangement for piano and orchestra. Miss Cottlow was in splendid form throughout the evening, but in the concerto of MacDowell, in particular, she rose to really great heights, giving a magnificent performance of this beautiful, interesting work. Miss Cottlow grows and matures from year to year. She has made astonishing strides during the last twelve months. Such a round, full, singing tone, and fluent, clear, pearly, reliable technic are possessed by but few women. Busoni supported Miss Cottlow with ideal accompaniment. The house was well filled, so that a considerable sum must have been turned over to the relief fund.

A Brahms Program.

A very successful piano recital for the same good cause was given on the previous evening at Scharwenka Hall by Walter Petzet, who now is principal assistant of Xaver Scharwenka at this master's school for piano playing. Petzet is a remarkably gifted and versatile man. As a critic he wields a trenchant and forceful pen; he is a very successful pedagogue, and he is an excellent ensemble player. All this is well known, but as a piano soloist he surprised me. His program was a most exacting one, consisting of the three Brahms sonatas. Petzet played them all from memory, and his performances were characterized by technical finish, masterly tonal handling of the piano and a refined, thoroughly musical interpretation. The pianist scored an emphatic success.

Large Audiences.

It is surprising where all the audiences come from, particularly as no free tickets are to be had for concerts this season. To be sure, the prices of admission are about half of what they are in ordinary times. Nevertheless I always am astonished at the full houses. A concert given by the Berlin Liedertafel in the Cathedral drew out an immense audience. To be sure, one of the soloists was Frieda Hempel, who possesses exceptionally good drawing powers. Works for male chorus, organ, soprano and contralto made up the program.

Meals for Musicians.

A kitchen, called "Die Künstlerküche," for musicians who are in absolute want has been founded here by the Union of Concertizing Artists of Germany. It is situated at Meier Otto-Strasse 10, and consists of two dining halls, which are connected with a large kitchen. The institution will be open all winter, and poor musicians are to be fed there daily. A plain but wholesome dinner can be had at twenty pfennigs (five cents) between 12 and 2 o'clock, and a supper for ten pfennigs between 6 and 8. The cooking and the service are entirely in the hands of the wives and daughters of musicians, all volunteers.

Flesch Replaces Busoni.

Busoni's Bach recital has been postponed to October 10.

as was announced; his place will be taken by Carl Flesch, who will be heard in the Beethoven concerto.

JONAS' PICTURE.

Alberto Jonas by this time doubtless has reached New York. He is unquestionably one of the most gifted piano instructors of the day and made a brilliant name for himself during the eight years he taught in Berlin. Many of his pupils made successful appearances here with the Philharmonic Orchestra and in other important German cities with the local orchestras. As his name is well known in America he will no doubt find in New York a congenial field of activity. Of interest is the photograph on page 5 showing a trio of celebrated pianists—Theresa Carreño, Alberto Jonas and Gabriel Leschetizky, which now is published for the first time.

VIOLIN PRIZE AWARDED.

The Mendelssohn prize for instrumentalists was awarded by the Royal High School last week to a young violinist named Rothschild, a native of Cologne. This prize consists of 1,500 marks.

SERATO NOT IN A CAFE.

Arrigo Serato will leave Berlin the coming week for New York via Naples. The report that recently appeared in a New York paper to the effect that Serato was playing in a Berlin café is wholly without foundation. Serato has never played in any café.

ARTHUR M. ABELL.

Hambourgs Draw Sold Out Houses.

Jan and Boris Hambourg have just started their fourth season of Hambourg Concert Society Concerts in Toronto. They have a big list of subscribers among the fashionable as well as the artistic world of Toronto. A special advantage is given to the students of all institutions in a nominal rate of admission, which has resulted in practically sold out houses. The Buffalo series opened October 20 before a large and representative audience, with Ethel Newcomb at the piano. The piece de resistance on this occasion was the Rachmaninoff trio, which made a deep impression and has to be repeated at a later concert by request. The following day a patriotic concert was given in Hamilton, Ont., before an audience of nearly fifteen hundred people, and resulted in an immediate reengagement by a prominent musician of that city for a series of concerts next season.

JAN AND BORIS, THE GIFTED HAMBOURGS.

Incidentally, the following letter was received recently by the Hambourg Conservatory of Music (Toronto) at which Jan and Boris Hambourg are directors and instructors:

Just a few lines to tell you how much I appreciated the pupils' recital on Saturday afternoon. Little scraps of information regarding Professor Hambourg's method of teaching the piano had reached my ears from time to time, but I did not fully comprehend what his method really led to until I attended a Saturday afternoon pupils' recital at the Conservatory Hall. I went quite expecting to be bored, as was my experience at similar affairs; but, on the contrary, I was thoroughly interested from the first number to the last. The recital being given by pupils from the age of six to the advanced pupil teachers of the institution, allowed the different stages of the Hambourg method to be fully demonstrated. After the style or name of piece was announced, each pupil went to the piano and without a note of music before them introduced the subject in a clear, lucid and definite manner that left no doubt in your mind but that each pupil understood exactly what was expected of them. Each note, chord and phrase had life, color, atmosphere about it. It made no difference how small the child or how simple its message, it was given in a clear and concise manner. There was no hesitation, no uncertainty regarding the subject; it was basic. There is something strong, something defined and fixed in the system of work taught by the professor, a system of teaching that forms its very foundation and has a definite purpose involved. The pupil is not kept rambling along in an aimless fashion for years, until some one suddenly discovers he has ability, temperament or perhaps genius, but from the very beginning every faculty the child possesses is developed and none more thoroughly than that of concentration as in this school. It must be an absolute faculty, for music from the very first is made so vital a thing that you must live in it to produce it and it therefore becomes a force absolute.

A Soprano New to America.

Alice Verlet, the Belgian coloratura soprano, who is about to start on a concert tour under the management of M. W. Hanson, will be a decided addition to the musical life of America this season. No artist has won higher praise from the critics of Europe, especially of Paris and London, in each of which cities Mlle. Verlet is equally well known and equally popular. She is a regular member of the staffs of the Paris Opera and Opera Comique, and is also frequently heard at the Gaite Lyrique in the same city. In London Mlle. Verlet is perhaps best known as a concert singer, although she has also been heard there in opera. She has appeared in concert in London with great frequency and always with brilliant success. Her last appearance there before coming to America was in a joint concert with Kubelik.

Marie Morrisey's Recital.

Songs in Italian, German, French and English were represented on the program which Marie Morrisey sang at her recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Monday evening, November 9. Elsie T. Cowen at the piano assisted. Bruno Huhn's new song cycle, "Love's Triumph," accompanied by the composer, was sung for the first time. As this recital occurred too late for an extended review, on account of the paper going to press, a full account will follow in the November 16 issue of the MUSICAL COURIER.

Henriette Bach with Haarlem Philharmonic

Henriette Bach, the young violinist, has been engaged as soloist for the December musicale of the Haarlem Philharmonic Society, of New York. Miss Bach was heard with much success last season in concert with John McCormack, also at a Metropolitan Opera House Sunday evening concert. Miss Bach, who is coming to the front rapidly, is engaged for a series of concerts in the West this season. She is a young violinist who takes her art seriously.

Alice Shaw's Engagements.

Alice Shaw, the Cleveland contralto, accepted a position as soloist with the choir of the Jewish Temple of that city recently. This is one of the best choir positions in the Ohio city.

Mrs. Shaw sang on October 27 before the Hudson Club and on the following day she appeared in a concert before the Presbyterian ladies of Marion, Ohio. At both these appearances Mrs. Shaw met with success.

Samaroff to Play Here.

Olga Samaroff, the pianist, after an absence of three years from the New York concert platform, will make her re-entree in a piano recital to be given in Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, November 28.

"Falstaff" (Verdi) has always been rather unfortunate so far as London is concerned, and I am afraid that it is too late now to hope that it will ever achieve that popularity with the public at large which was once anticipated for it. But to the musician Verdi's wonderful score will always be a joy. The season ends at Covent Garden on Tuesday next.—London Truth.

MAURICE VERA KAPLUN
ARONSON
PIANIST-PEDAGOG CONCERT-PIANISTE
BERLIN, W. BOZENER ST. 8

HOWARD WELLS
PIANIST AND TEACHER
Authorized representative of
LESCHETIZKY
5428 KIMBARK AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.
Appointments by telephone, Blackstone 1620.

ELEANOR HAZZARD
PEOCOCK
(SOPRANO)
Exclusive Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON
437 FIFTH AVENUE - - - NEW YORK CITY

VICTOR HEINZE
Send for free booklet "Studying Music Abroad"
Pianist and Teacher. Most modern principles. Thorough artistic education. Eminently successful.
PETER VISCHER STR. 19 BERLIN-FRIEDENAU

VITTORINO MORATTI
VOCAL INSTRUCTION
For four years the only assistant of the late G. B. LAMPERT
Authorized representative of his method
BERLIN W., MOTZ ST. 53

GEORGE FERGUSSON
BARITONE
VOCAL INSTRUCTOR
Augsburger St., 64 Berlin W., Germany

SUMMER CLASS FOR THE
LESCHETIZKY METHOD
UNDER INSTRUCTION OF
MRS. POTTER-FRISSELL
IN NEW SCHANDAU-OSTRAU, SAXON SWITZERLAND, GERMANY
Address Villa 6, as above.
Class continues until October 15, 1914

Steinway Studios, Berlin
Berlin, S. W. Bergmann St. 102
Very accessible, modern, sound-proof studios with Steinway Grands for rent.
For terms apply to warerooms
STEINWAY & SONS
Koniggratzer St. 6, Berlin, W., 9

MAESTRO FRANZ EMERICH VOCAL INSTRUCTION
and MADAME TERESA EMERICH
PUPILS PREPARED FOR THE OPERATIC AND CONCERT STAGE
Some Distinguished PUPILS of MAESTRO and MME. EMERICH:
CHARLES DALMORES, tenor, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden. Lohengrin of Bayreuth festival.
ADAM DIDUR, basso, Metropolitan Opera Co.
FRANCIS MACLENNAN, tenor, Berlin Royal Opera and Hamburg Opera.
*HANS TANZLER, tenor, Royal Opera, Karlsruhe.
CAVALLIERE MARIO SAMMARCO, baritone, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co. and Covent Garden.
PUTNAM GRISWOLD, basso, formerly Metropolitan Opera Co., Berlin Royal Opera and Covent Garden.
*MARGUERITA SYLVA, Carmen in the guest performance of Caruso at the Berlin Royal Opera.
MARGARETHE MATZENAUER, mezzo-soprano, Metropolitan Opera, New York.
*HELENA FORTI, soprano, Dresden Royal Opera.
MARY CAVAN, soprano, Hamburg Opera and Chicago Opera Co.
HEINRICH HENSEL, Dramatic Tenor, Hamburg, Stadt Theatre.
INSTRUCTION GIVEN IN ENGLISH, GERMAN, FRENCH AND ITALIAN
The names marked * are those of pupils of Mme. Emerich. *Telephone Am.tPfalzburg No. 2067 BERLIN, W.W. Nicelsbergerplatz 1

RUDOLF BERGER
FAMOUS TENOR of the Metropolitan Opera Company
Available for Concerts
May and June, 1915
Management: R. E. JOHNSTON
1451 Broadway - - New York

Sue Harvard Writes from Dresden.

Sue Harvard, the Pittsburgh contralto, who is studying in Dresden with Leon Rains has written the MUSICAL COURIER interestingly of her life abroad.

She says: "There is no war excitement in Dresden and no trouble or danger is anticipated here, hence the reason I stay. My voice has improved wonderfully, and I think Leon Rains is a marvelous teacher."

SUE HARVARD AND LEON RAINS IN THE LATTER'S STUDIO IN DRESDEN.

Miss Harvard continues as follows:

Having at last received papers from home I now clearly understand why so many inquiries were made for me through the American Embassy in Berlin. Since the European war began—with the exception of the first week when the city was crowded with thousands of soldiers and the inhabitants were greatly agitated—I have witnessed none of the excitement experienced in other cities, therefore I have decided to remain in Dresden the entire winter and continue my studies with Leon Rains, returning to America next spring with my oratorio repertoire greatly increased as well as many arias and songs, which I shall use for concert and recital work in the fall.

In a way this war has been rather an advantage than a detriment to students studying here, at least I have found it so. There is very little going on, the people being in no state of mind for pleasure of any sort, many of their dear ones being in the field as well as many already sacrificed, therefore one can devote his entire time and attention to study. I am more than pleased with the progress I have made since I began working with Leon Rains—who by the way is an American, and who is considered in Germany a great authority on vocal culture. When I came abroad it was my intention to stay six months, but my enthusiasm has grown to such an extent that I shall remain the full year with my present teacher." I have received an excellent offer to go into opera, but as I have established myself as a concert singer in America I shall continue along that line.

Living expenses here I find about the same as in America, with the exception of New York, which, of course, is more expensive.

I had the good fortune to attend the Wagnerian festspiele at Bayreuth in July, which alone was well worth my trip to Europe.

Last week, during my stay in Berlin, I had the pleasure of singing in the home of Emil Paur, formerly conductor of the Berlin Royal Opera, Pittsburgh and Boston Symphony Orchestras, and from whom I received the greatest encouragement. So my European stay—and my first trip abroad—up to the present writing has been a real joy to me. However, when my year of study is at an end I shall no doubt be quite ready to sail back to dear old America, where I can derive the benefit of my hard work as well as greet my dear family and many friends.

Miss Harvard is seen in the accompanying picture with Mr. Rains in the latter's studio.

Sam Trimmer Has Returned from Berlin.

Sam Trimmer, the American pianist, returned recently from Berlin, where he has been studying with Teresa Carreño for three years.

Mr. Trimmer, who has played a great deal in private, both in Europe and in America, is now booking engagements for his present American tour.

SAM TRIMMER.

He expected to concertize in Europe this season, but the war prevented this.

Paterson Club Engages Anderson Artists.

C. Mortimer Wiske has engaged Marie Kaiser, soprano; Rebecca Davidson, pianist, and Albin Antosch, cellist, through their manager, Walter Anderson, to appear with the Paterson Orpheus Club at its concerts on December 7 and January 11.

Florence Hardeman Plays.

Florence Hardeman, the violinist, gave a recital on November 1 at the Jewish Settlement in Cincinnati, and scored an exceptional success according to all accounts. A number of prominent women on the concert committee of the organization, headed by Mrs. Adolph Klein, urged Miss Hardeman to give a public professional recital in Cincinnati, and the artist probably will do so early in December. Other engagements in the Middle West are pending for Miss Hardeman, and several Eastern managers at present are negotiating for her exclusive services. At her recent Cincinnati appearance Miss Hardeman's numbers were Vitali's chaconne, a Sarasate Spanish dance, Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," and short numbers by Tschaikowsky, Schubert and Kreisler-Charpentier.

FLORENCE HARDEMAN.

Mme. Genovese Has Opened a Studio.

Nana Genovese, the Italian soprano, who was booked to appear in grand opera in Florence this season, has cancelled her engagement owing to the present uncertainty of musical affairs abroad, and she has preferred to postpone her return to Italy indefinitely.

Mme. Genovese has opened a studio at 1425 Broadway, New York, where she is prepared to take a few pupils.

During November and December, Mme. Genovese is to appear in concert in New York and Pennsylvania. After the first of the year, she will go on a Western tour.

DE GOGORZA

BARITONE

IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

A Few Open Dates

Apply

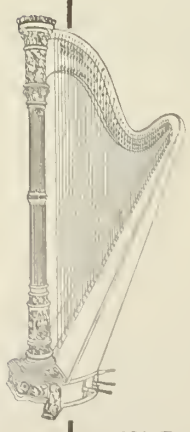
ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 B'way, New York

Steinway Piano

SAM TRIMMER
PIANIST
IN AMERICA SEASON 1914-15

HARRY MUNRO BASSO CANTANTE
Available for Recitals. Festivals and Oratorio
Exclusive Management: G. DEXTER RICHARDSON. 501 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

"The perfection of Quartet playing."—London Daily Mail.
The World's Greatest Chamber Music Organization. The



FLONZALEY QUARTET
Tour 1914-15 Now Booking
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON, 868 Carnegie Hall, New York

HERBERT
FRYER
The Distinguished English Concert Pianist
(Mason & Hamlin Piano Used)
In America the Whole Season 1914-1915
For Engagements, Etc., Address
WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 West 34th Street, New York

Madame Helene Koelling

COLORATURA SOPRANO
TOUR NOW BOOKING
Management, Antonia Sawyer: 1425 Broadway, N. Y. City

Zoellner Quartet
Coast to Coast
Tour 1914-15
H. Culbertson, Fine Arts Bldg, Chicago

—"Such purity of tone has never before been attained."
So writes Zamara, acknowledged Greatest Living Harpist—of the WURLITZER
HARP

"Marvelous in Tone, Majestic in Appearance," says Marthage, Harpist of Sousa's Band.
The Wurlitzer Harp has the only spruce veneered Sounding Board, which gives it a pure, liquid, velvety tone all its own. Write for beautiful booklet.
THE RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY
121 E. FOURTH STREET, CINCINNATI, OHIO
Chicago - - 329-331 S. Wabash Street
New York - - 113-119 W. 40th Street

MINNEAPOLIS ORCHESTRA HEARD IN TWO CONCERTS.

Appears At Young People's Concert and Sunday Afternoon "Pop."

Minneapolis, Minn., November 3, 1914.

The opening concert of the fourth season of the Young People's series by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra took place in the Auditorium, Friday afternoon, October 30. The entire seating capacity was sold and many people were turned away. Over two-thirds of the audience were children. Tickets for this series are on sale in all the public schools for fifteen cents. The music supervisor of the schools has these programs long in advance and he sees that all the children are given an idea of the story of each overture and the principal themes are played, so that the young folks have a good idea of the music before coming to the concert. The Thursday Musical Club has helped in this, too, by sending its members to the schools to play piano (four or eight hand arrangements), giving the leading themes of the music under discussion. Thus the children come properly prepared to hear these concerts. In his introductory talk, Emil Oberhoffer made the statement that he believed that Minneapolis children were better versed in this respect than children in any other city in the United States. He likened the symphony orchestra to the musical canvas upon which the pictures were to be drawn. He gave a short resume of the legend of William Tell and illustrated, on the piano, the chief themes, and then the orchestra, under his direction, gave a splendid rendition of this overture. The solo cello passages, played by Cornelius Van Vliet, were most enjoyable. Since the entire program was made up of compositions founded on legends, the second number was the tone picture of "Zorohayda," by Svendsen, founded on the Spanish story of the princess who would find peace when she was baptized. These themes were beautifully played and the atmosphere of the Alhambra seemed to prevail. The next number changed the color to East India and the overture told well the story of the Princess Sakuntala as Carl Goldmark imagines her.

Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" was given a most interesting reading. The program closed with the symphonic poem, "Mazeppa," by Liszt. These programs are very little over an hour in length. Mr. Oberhoffer uses a minimum of time in explanations, so that he can give a maximum of music. The second concert will take place on November 13 and will be devoted to music that is founded on fairy tales.

One hundred and fifty women, forming the Women's Club, are the backers for this series of concerts. They are so well patronized that the club will never lose money, and they are to be thanked and congratulated upon this worthy undertaking.

Much interest centered about the appearance of the new second cellist of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra when he played a solo at the popular concert on the afternoon of Sunday, November 1, in the Auditorium. With the engagement of Cornelius Van Vliet the orchestra claimed to have the "finest cellist in the land," and now the cello section is much strengthened by Paulo Gruppe, the Dutch cellist. Mr. Gruppe played Boellmann's "Symphonic Variations" and Bruch's "Kol Nidrei." His tone is deep and sonorous and he is particularly effective in legato passages. He played two encores, "The Swan," by Saint-Saëns, and "Tarantella," by Herbert. The program was opened with a colorful and dashing interpretation of Halvorsen's "Triumphal Entry of the Bojars." Brahms' "Academic Festival" overture followed. Next came two movements of the D major symphony of Svendsen, played with great sympathy and a beautiful tone. Richard Lindenhahn beautifully intoned the French horn themes in the "Mignon" overture, by Thomas. The string section distinguished itself in a splendid rendering of the intermezzo from "Naila," by Delibes. The program closed with the "Magic Fire" music, from "Walküre."

Northwestern Conservatory Notes.

On November 13, at 8 o'clock, in Studio 510, Elizabeth Brown-Hawkins, of the Conservatory voice department, will give the first of the informal musicales which have been a feature of her work for the last five years.

A new feature of Conservatory work has been inaugurated by Margaret Daugherty, head of the piano normal department. Miss Daugherty's advanced pupils, who are to graduate in June, will coöperate with the committee of the Young People's Symphony concerts. Brief talks will be given at grade schools on the Wednesday and Thursday preceding the Auditorium concerts. Louise Bayha and Henrietta Groth are to play the piano arrangement of the "William Tell" overture, besides other numbers, at the Webster and Logan schools on November 28 and 29.

The first of a series of faculty recitals to be given in the city high schools by members of the Conservatory faculty was held at South High School, Thursday morning, October 29, when Gladys Conrad, violinist; Robert Fullerton, tenor, and John Beck, pianist, gave an interesting, enjoyable program. Ruth Anderson.

Vida Llewellyn's Program.

Saturday afternoon, November 14, Vida Llewellyn, the young American pianist who has won laurels in Germany, will make her New York debut at Acolian Hall, playing the following program:

Toccata and fugue, D minor	Bach-Tausig
Andante in F	Beethoven
Capriccio, B minor	Brahms
Intermezzo, op. 117, No. 2	Brahms
Carnival	Schumann
Stimmungsbilder, op. 9	Richard Strauss
Intermezzo, op. 93, No. 5	Hugo Kaun
Waldesgespräche, op. 78, No. 4	Hugo Kaun
Echo de Vienne	Emil Sauer

Daniel Beddoe at Mozart Verein.

Daniel Beddoe, the Welsh tenor, was a prominent soloist at the recent Mozart Verein diamond celebration in New York.

Below appear two laudatory references to his singing:

The tenor, Daniel Beddoe, thereupon aroused the audience to stormy applause with the "Preislied" from Wagner's "Meistersinger." Those present had another opportunity to admire Mr. Beddoe, in a duet for soprano and tenor from the "Meistersinger," which he sang with Miss Hodge. Both artists this time also won enthusiastic applause—(Translation) Abendblatt, Staatszeitung, October 26, 1914.

Miss Hodge sang next the aria with Daniel Beddoe, the eminent tenor, who also gave a wonderful rendition of Walther's "Preislied" from "Die Meistersinger."—(Translation) Herold (Abendblatt), October 26, 1914.

ADA SODER-HUECK
THE EMINENT GERMAN CONTRALTO,
famous for her correct Voice Placement and Tone Development, is open for a limited number of engagements. Singers prepared for Church, Concert, Opera. Celebrated Garcia Method taught.
Metropolitan Opera House, 1425 Broadway, New York Phone 6221 Bryant

PAUL ALTHOUSE
TENOR METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
Exclusive Management:
Haensel & Jones, Aeolian Hall, New York City

HAROLD HENRY
AMERICAN PIANIST
426 FINE ARTS BLDG., - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

Mme. GUERCIAS
OPERATIC SOPRANO
Spanish, Russian, French, German, Italian
AT PRESENT IN EUROPE
SEASON 1914-1915 IN AMERICA

HELEN WARE
Exclusive Manager, Laszlo Schwartz
Room 912, 1170 Broadway, New York

ARTHUR SHATTUCK
THE DISTINGUISHED AMERICAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-15
Management, HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

REBARER
420 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK

CORNELIUS VAN VLIET
Dutch Cellist
2514 Emerson Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn.

MARGARET KEYES CONTRALTO
WITH CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.
Management, THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU, 1 W. 34th St. New York
Personal Address, 600 West 138th St. Phone 1810 Andnbon

Angelo CORTESE
America's Distinguished
HARPIST
Management, Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, N. Y.

MARGARET HUSTON
SOPRANO
In Europe Season 1914-15

J. FRED WOLLE
ORGANIST
Management, The Wollsohn Musical Bureau
1 West 34th Street, New York

Nana GENOVESE
MEZZO SOPRANO. Formerly Manhattan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts, Recitals and Musicales
EXCLUSIVE MANAGEMENT, ANNIE FRIEDBERG, 1425 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Carl Pohlig
CONDUCTOR
Address: VILLA POHLIG, PLANEGG
near Munich, GERMANY

MADAME ANITA RIO
CELEBRATED AMERICAN PRIMA DONNA SOPRANO
NOW IN AMERICA
CONCERT ORATORIO
Management - - MUSIC LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
HOWARD E. POTTER, Business Manager
AEOLIAN HALL - - - NEW YORK

GIORGIO M. SULLI
Teacher of Carmen Melis, Clara Clemens, Mme. Martha de Lachmann, Reinhold von Warlich, Mario Sammarco, Lena Mason, Tarquinia Tarquini and other well-known singers of Grand Opera or Concerts. Musical Director of the Labor Temple Choir, New York. Teaching during summer, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday only. Special terms.
VOCAL STUDIO, 1425 Broadway - Metropolitan Opera House Building, New York
(Phone, 2762 Bryant)
Public Recitals throughout season for advanced pupils. Write for Circulars.

JAN SICKESZ
DUTCH PIANIST
American Tour Begins October, 1914
Management ANTONIA SAWYER
1425 Broadway, New York
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

Reuben Davies Plays in Kansas.

Reuben Davies, the young American pianist, gave a concert at Hiawatha, Kan., on Friday, October 30. Ruth Hendrickson, soprano, assisted. The following program was performed:

Piano, Chaconne in D minor ..... Bach-Busoni
Soprano, Nymphs and Fauns ..... Bemberg
Piano, Sonato ..... Beethoven
Soprano, Elsa's Dream ..... Wagner
Piano—
The March Wind ..... MacDowell
Concert Etude, op. 36 ..... MacDowell
Polonaise in F (sharp) minor ..... F. Chopin
Soprano—
Remembrance ..... Mary Turner Salter
Her Love Song ..... Mary Turner Salter
Come to the Garden, Love ..... Mary Turner Salter
Piano, Concert waltz in E major ..... Moszkowski

The October 28 issue of the Hiawatha Democrat commended Mr. Davies' performance as follows:

The managers of the musical course deserve great praise in bringing the class of talent which was presented here last Wednesday night. The cultured people of Hiawatha are supporting this course in a commendable way. Reuben Davies, head of the music department at the Academy, graciously played his way into the hearts of the Hiawatha people. He is the possessor of a true artistic temperament, and was at his best. He produces wonderfully beautiful tones and played a balanced and finished program.

His opening number was the chaconne in D minor by Bach-Busoni. Mr. Davies plays this number with great precision and beautiful tone coloring. The Beethoven sonata, op. 37, was warmly received and an encore was insisted upon. The beautiful little musical gem with which he so graciously responded was "Meditation," composed by the musician himself. The concert waltz in E major, by Moskowski, was rendered without fault.

Belle Gottschalk To Make a Tour.

Since her arrival from abroad, where she has appeared in opera and concert with a considerable degree of success, Belle Gottschalk, the young American soprano, has been preparing for a tour under the management of Antonia Sawyer.

Few American girls have won more fame abroad than Miss Gottschalk. With the advantage of study under such notable teachers as Frank King Clark and Etelka Gerster, who also taught Julia Culp, Miss Gottschalk was, at the beginning of her career, well on the way to being a finished artist. Outside of a small circle of friends, Miss Gottschalk has yet to make a name in her native land, but if she is received with the same enthusiasm as she was received in such musical centers as Berlin, Breslau, Lodz and other cities, Americans will doubtless give her a warm welcome.

BELLE GOTTSCHALK.
Soprano.

She will begin her tour some time this month, her first bookings being in Pennsylvania.

Rebecca Davidson's Re-engagement.

Rebecca Davidson, the young pianist of Pittsburgh, was a soloist at the Pittsburgh Exposition on Thursday evening, October 15, with the New York Symphony Orchestra. This appearance was a re-engagement, her playing with the same organization last season having been very successful. Miss Davidson was heard in the Liszt E flat concerto, scoring a marked success with the orchestra, the conductor and the audience, which was large in spite of the inclement weather.

Miss Davidson is a young artist who is rapidly advancing in her profession, being a general favorite with the music lovers of those cities where she has appeared.

JACQUES KASNER
120 East 85th Street :: :: New York
Phone 2768 Lenox

MARGARET HARRISON SOPRANO
68 West 56th Street New York

DONALD CHALMERS BASSO
150 West 104th Street, New York
Phone 3832 Riverside
RECITALS :: ORATORIO :: OPERA

EVAN WILLIAMS
— TENOR —
Akron - - Ohio
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU

Horatio Connell
BASS BARITONE
Management HAENSEL & JONES, AEOLIAN HALL, NEW YORK

PHILIP SPOONER TENOR
205 West 57th St., New York City
'Phone, 6510 Columbue

GENEVIEVE FINLAY-STEWART
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
HAENSEL & JONES Aeolian Hall, New York

THOMAS FARMER Baritone
Engaged for St. Paul by Handel Society, London, May 12th
Management: Concert Direction M. H. HANSON, 437 Fifth Avenue New York

PAUL DUFAULT
TENOR
Returned from successful tour through Australia and New Zealand
NOW IN AMERICA
Address 339 West 23rd Street Tel. 7731 Chelsea

CAROLL BADHAM PREYER
TEACHER OF SINGING—Italian Method (Lamperti diploma)
Studio: 27 West 67th Street Tel. Columbus 1123

George CARRÉ
TENOR
15 East 10th St. Tel. 2927 Stuyvesant New York

Christine MILLER Contralto
Personal address: 1003 Heberton Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.
Management: HAENSEL & JONES, Aeolian Hall, New York

REINALD WERRENRATH
BARYTONE
Management: THE WOLFSOHN MUSICAL BUREAU
1 West 34th Street, - - New York

EDGAR STILLMAN-KELLEY
STEINWAY HALL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

REBECCA DAVIDSON PIANISTE
Management: WALTER ANDERSON
171 WEST 57th STREET NEW YORK

Season 1914-1915

SPALDING
Assisted at the Piano by
ANDRÉ BENOIST
Steinway Piano
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway
New York City

PAUL DRAPER, LIEDER SINGER, WILL GIVE NEW YORK RECITAL.

Gifted Tenor Returns From Study and Concertizing Abroad—Was Obliged to Cancel European Tour On Account of the War.

Paul Draper, American tenor and singer of lieder, will be heard in a song recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, Tuesday afternoon, November 17. This will be his first appearance in a New York recital, as he has only recently returned from London and from several years of study and concertizing abroad through Austria, Germany, Italy and England. Of the interpretation of the German lied he has made a special study.

Mr. Draper's season was fully booked for concerts in England, Germany and France, but the turbulent conditions abroad forced him to give up these appearances and return to New York, which, by the way, is his native city.

Braggiotti was Mr. Draper's teacher in Florence for two years. The tenor followed this period of study with four years of study with Raimund von Zur-Mühlen, whom he considers to be one of the greatest lieder singers of his time.

The tenor confines his programs for the most part to the classical German lieder and to works of the most important modern writers. In his estimation Schubert is the greatest of all song writers.

He will include in his Aeolian Hall program: "Gesänge des Harfners" (Schubert), "Dichterliebe" (Schumann), "An Kleine Mädchen," Christkindlein's "Wiegenlied," "Bestimmung" and "Einsiedel," by Karol Szymanowski. These last four are new songs by the modern Polish writer, whom Mr. Draper estimates to be the most interesting and important composer now living.

Mr. Draper made his debut in Munich, when he sang "Die Winterreise" cycle (Schubert). He includes Bach and Brahms on his programs to a great extent.

Mr. Draper's attractive appearance and interesting personality assist materially in the presentation of these recital programs. Note should also be made of his thorough musicianship, and of the fact that he is a pianist of merit.

London press criticisms, which are given below, show that the English critics estimate his art highly:

If pure, unconcealed art were that upon which the art loving world were to subsist then indeed would Mr. Draper be sent to minister to a long suffering public.—Daily Telegraph, October 9, 1913.

Mr. Paul Draper showed himself as a singer of parts and a versatile interpreter in his recital at Bechstein Hall last night. His voice is well under control and at the service of poetical insight and musical intelligence. The singer made an excellent impression.—Daily Chronicle, May 22, 1913.

Paul Draper, new to London, was refreshingly independent in the choice of his songs and in their interpretation. Groups of songs and airs by Bach and of folksongs from the collection of Brahms are not often found in recitals. A singer's powers of expression are taxed still further when he adds to these a number of fine dramatic and lyrical songs by Schubert. He attains not only variety of effect, but also of sentiment, creates a lively interest and exercises persuasive and convincing force.—Star, May 22, 1913.

He is more than a singer, he is a musician, whose taste is shown not only in the choice of songs, but in the singing of them.—Illustrated London News, October 18, 1913.

The favorable impression made by his singing a week ago was sustained and deepened by his performance last night. The extremely vocal character of his songs, combined with a pronunciation which was refreshing, clear, and especially the liquid consonants attractive to listen to, roused considerable enthusiasm in the "Dichterliebe" and in Mahler's "Ich hab' ein glühend Messer." A fine song received a fine interpretation.—Times, October 17, 1913.

In intelligence, fine and clear power of enunciation and an entirely individual method of interpretation which never for a moment conceals the intention, Mr. Draper possesses all those requisites which permit an acknowledgment of him as an artist as distinct from the singer. The program was excellent and included items from Schubert's "Winterreise" and lieder of Schumann and Brahms.—Observer, October 12, 1913.

Mr. Draper is also already booked for recitals in Philadelphia and Boston.

Memphis Beethoven Club Opens Season.

Again taking precedence in the musical life of Memphis, the Beethoven Club opened its twenty-sixth season on October 24, when the first monthly free matinee concert was given at the Goodwyn Institute, which was filled to overflowing. The program was arranged by the president, Mrs. David L. Griffith, and was most attractive. Giordino Pellonari, the young tenor in whom Memphians are deeply interested, sang several numbers and displayed rare talent.

The officers for 1914-15 are as follows: Mrs. David L. Griffith, president; Mrs. Eugene B. Douglass, first vice-president; Elizabeth Mosby, second vice-president; Mrs. Ben Goodman, third vice-president; Mrs. H. H. Fairfax, treasurer; Mrs. Richard A. Street, recording secretary; Mrs. F. Faerhmann, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. Denny Du Bose, federation secretary; Mrs. George Gunther, auditor.

MRS. DAVID L. GRIFFITH.

Blanche Goode's Recital.

Blanche Goode's recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Wednesday afternoon, November 4, introduced a young and attractive pianist to the New York audience, a pianist who apparently takes her art very seriously.

Her program included the Schubert A minor sonata, three intermezzi and rhapsodie, op. 119, Brahms, and six etudes, op. 10, Nos. 3, 8 and 7, and op. 25, Nos. 2, 9 and 12.

Miss Goode showed a marked degree of technical proficiency, which included a firm touch, facile runs, clearness and strength in chords and arpeggios and a fine sense of rhythm.

Plentiful applause and numerous handsome floral tributes testified to the popularity of the pianist with her audience. Encores at the conclusion of each group were furnished, and as the writer left the hall, the audience was still applauding for a second encore at the conclusion of the program.

Dubinsky Heard in Quaker City.

David Dubinsky, violinist, was heard in recital at Griffith Hall, Philadelphia, on October 27. His program was made up of four groups, his opening number and first group being the Brahms sonata in G major, op. 78. In this Mr. Dubinsky displayed his excellent technic and broad tone. This number was followed by the concerto in A minor, op. 37, by Vieuxtemps, all three movements being played with a careful regard for the interpretation. The third group was composed of the Tartini sonata in G minor and Kreisler arrangements of selections by Martini, Couperin, and Boccherini. Tschaikowsky's "Melodie" and Sarasate's "Spanish Dance" completed the program. Mr. Dubinsky plays with a sureness of touch and a sonority of tone which mark his thorough musicianship. In addition he is an earnest student and ever ambitious in his chosen profession.

Edith Mahon supplied the accompaniments in a sympathetic manner, adding greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

A large audience assembled on this occasion and was most enthusiastic in its praise and lavish with applause.

Piano Pupils at Long Beach, Cal.

Abby de Avirett presented the following piano pupils at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, Cal., on Friday, October 23: Isabelle Becker, Olive Powers, Madeline Lupher, Pauline Farquhar, Charlotte Gooding, assisted by Dorothy Hess, violinist, and Mrs. Bert Ensminger, mezzo-soprano. An interesting program was rendered, all of the works being selected from the best of the classical composers. There was a large and enthusiastic audience, and the Long Beach Daily Telegram speaks of "careful preparation," "artistic finish," etc.

Dorothy Hess, whose work was much appreciated, is a pupil of Mrs. Thilo Becker, of Los Angeles.

Two Gescheidt Tenors.

C. Judson House, the rising tenor of the Miller Vocal Art Science, who is under the instruction of Adelaide Gescheidt, made a decided success in the rendition of Rossini's "Stabat Mater" in the New York Avenue M. E. Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., October 25. He sang the "Cujus Animan" with great ease, breadth of expression and beauty of tone. His portion in the entire work was superbly rendered, showing fine capabilities as a singer of oratorio.

Another pupil of Miss Gescheidt, Vernon T. Carey, soloist of the First Dutch Reformed Church, Brooklyn, sang in "Elijah" with marked success on October 11. His resonant and sympathetic tenor voice impressed his audience deeply, his interpretation being intelligent and expressive.

Anne Stevenson News Items.

Anne Stevenson, the soprano, sang with success before a large and fashionable audience at a benefit concert given for the West Hoboken (N. J.) Day Nursery, October 28. Miss Stevenson, as usual, delighted her hearers with her great charm and the perfect control of her exquisite voice. Frederic Dixon accompanied the singer with finesse.

The special auxiliary classes in English diction, etc., at the Anne Stevenson studios have started with an unusually large attendance. The privilege of these classes under most competent instructors is enjoyed by Miss Stevenson's pupils without extra charge.

Jean Vincent Cooper at Shubert Theatre.

One of the numerous artist-pupils of Sergei Klibansky, who is becoming very well known, sang at a violin recital at the Shubert Theatre, New York, October 30. This was Jean Vincent Cooper, the contralto, who was heard in an aria from "Trovatore" and songs by Ronald, MacFadyen and MacDowell. Following both her appearances she was encored. Mme. Nordica's former well known accompanist, E. Romayne Simmons, was at the piano.

Thuel Burnham's Engagements.

Thuel Burnham, the pianist, who is touring America this season under the management of Harry Culbertson, of Chicago, announces three New York recitals, to be given on March 2, 16 and 30. Mr. Burnham will also be heard in New York on January 16 with the Rubinstein Club and at the Sherry-Bramhall salon in February.

Wittgenstein Announces Piano Recital.

Victor Wittgenstein, pianist, who met with favor on the occasion of his New York debut last winter, will give a recital in Aeolian Hall, Friday evening, November 20, playing compositions of Brahms, Scarlatti, Beethoven, Cesar Franck, Chopin, Goldmark and MacDowell.

HELEN BLAIN CONTRALTO
Address: Usual Agents
Residence: 29 Upper Baker St., Regent's Park, London, N.W.
Telephone 471 Mayfair

HERMANN KLEIN
Teacher of Some of the Most Successful Singers Now Before the Public
Co-Editor, Garcia's "Hints on Singing"; Author, New English Version of "Carmen"; Translator, Metzler's Mastersongs, "Lieder in English."
40 Ave. Road, Regent's Park, N. W., London

Cable: Keynote, London
CONCERT DIRECTION
DANIEL MAYER
ENGLAND'S PREMIER AGENCY
Established 1890
Chatham House
George Street
Hanover Square, W.,
LONDON, ENGLAND

MRS. F. H. SNYDER
Founder and Director

Accredited Vannini School of Singing in St. Paul

Mrs. Snyder, Favorite Pupil of the Maestro, Carries His Method to the Middle West

MAESTRO VANNINI
Florence, Italy

MRS. F. H. SNYDER, one of America's distinguished voice teachers, is opening an Italian school of Music in St. Paul, Minn. To Americans who cannot go to Italy for study she will bring intact the vocal method originated by Vincenzo Vannini, of Florence, Italy—a method of voice development that has been marvelously successful, and to which he has devoted his life.

Mrs. Snyder has long been at the head of musical affairs of the Northwest as impressaria and teacher. Her experience as a voice teacher extends back over a period of twenty-seven years. It is a quarter of a century since she first began to study with Vannini, and she has returned to him frequently during all that time, pausing last season while on a trip around the world to gain new inspiration and knowledge in his Florentine studio, which she kept fresh during winter in China by teaching singing to the princes and princesses of the Orient.

"The great advantage of my new American school," says Mrs. Snyder, "is that it brings the best method in the world into a part of the country that produces the finest voices. There is no voice in the world so vitally beautiful as the voice of the Middle West, but, in order to get the best results with it, we must have it early.

"I have watched young voices unfold from tight little buds into full and brilliant vocal flowers in a few months, even a few weeks when there were no complicated errors to overcome.

"The Vannini method is different from all others, for it puts the horse, which was for so long behind the cart, squarely before it. First the tone and then the breathing—that is the order in which they come in the Vannini studio. And it is true that the pupil, taught to sing a proper tone, will presently breathe properly, and the breathing muscles will strengthen more rapidly than in those cases where all the attention is devoted to deep breathing and the tone developed afterward. Tone placing and the division of the registers follow naturally.

"In the new school we are to have three original Vannini pupils besides myself. Mrs. Mabel Durose, who has just returned from a summer with the great maestro, will be one of the head assistants; also Miss Martha Rogers, of New York. Mrs. Durose and Ina Grange, the foremost accompanist and coach of the Northwest and for four years assistant in Mrs. Snyder's studio, will prepare pupils in St. Paul for Mrs. Snyder's studio, while in Minneapolis Mrs. Cochran and Kathleen Hart will give the preparatory work. Miss Hart has studied abroad and is an exponent of the Vannini method; she is booked for a tour with Rosa Olitzka for this season.

Mrs. Snyder's absolute fidelity to the teachings of Vannini is proven by the maestro's own letters, one of which is herewith published and which was written about twenty-one years ago.

FLORENCE, Italy, April 3, 1893.
Via Del Moro, 11.

DEAR MRS. SNYDER:

Tomorrow you will leave Florence to go back to America, and it is difficult to say if I will ever have the pleasure to see you again. It is true that you promise me to come back not before long, and it is true that you have the habit to keep your promise, but who knows (dear Mrs. Snyder), something may happen in spite of your decision may prevent your coming here, or coming, you may find me no more, so let us have a talk about our beloved profession. Let me remind you what are the most important things to be observed. Let me give you some advice. Let me praise you in what you deserve to be praised. Looking this morning, by chance, in my album in which I have my pupils write their names, it happened to me to see the one of an old pupil of mine, and under it the date of 1870—twenty-three years ago—yes, twenty-three years ago—and he was not my first pupil. So I do not exaggerate when I say that it is more than twenty-five years that I have been teaching singing. I was very young then. Twenty-five years of work has been a constant battle that I have fought against prejudices—that I do not remember to have had a moment of blessedness. I went ahead always with the Latin motto, "frangar non flectar," but I did not either break. I am surprised myself to speak the truth of the success obtained in this world of prejudice in which we live. A man who has not any ought not really to succeed, so I repeat that I am surprised. I do not understand it. Sometimes I think that, perhaps, I am mistaken, imagining that we live under the kingdom of prejudice, superstition and nonsense. But it is the allusion of the moment, then why my success,, and the success of those that try to follow my ideas? The evidence of the facts or the fascination of the truth, the facts would not, perhaps, have the force to convince the stubborns, but the fascination of the truth is the one that does the miracle, that is the only explanation for me. You, dear Mrs. Snyder, that besides the intelligence, have the force of character to continue to follow me in my ideas, don't give up; please do not give up, even for a second, and do fight, do plead against the old silly breathing and tongue down theories, try to explain and convince people that the position of the tongue is not a fact to be considered of capital importance, but a secondary fact. Teach that the position of the tongue is simply a consequence of the way we produce the voice. Teach that it is simply an effect, and not a cause, and that they may work the whole life to cure that effect with no use, because as long as the cause remains there is nonsense in curing the effect. Teach, too, that if with the work of patience people may succeed sometimes to hold down the tongue, is an illusionary success. As long as the contractions that did create the wrong position of the tongue will still remain? Do please let know that there exists some cases of people that cannot hold down the tongue, and they must neither try. The conformation of the roof of the mouth causes sometimes that necessity. This is natural law that must be respected, and none can attempt to break.

About breathing, teach to your pupils as wrote the celebrated teacher, Mr. Panofalka, that to breathe is to live, and every one knows how to breathe, and it is only necessary not to lose the head, but to keep calm (cool down, as I always say), and not try too much. Say to them that an intelligent laziness is the best food for a singer to prevent wrong breathing, wrong position of the tongue and all contractions. Illustrate, please, this idea with the way that I use; continue to have always the same faith that you have now in them, and inspire them to your pupils, with the same ardor that I inspired them to you. This is, dear Mrs. Snyder, a mission and nothing but a mission.

About the production of the voice, you know my principles, and I will not write a word about them. It would be impossible to explain them. It would take too much time without a good result. It would be necessary to write one hundred volumes or perhaps simply one page. You know how difficult it is. I do not despair to find, before I die, the way to transcribe those principles, and it is a long time I am working at it. When will I be ready? It is so difficult. It is very difficult to write about it, and is easy, very easy, to be misunderstood. Anyhow, I suppose you will never forget what you have learned by me, and you will transmit to your pupils as I do, partly speaking, partly showing it with your voice. I hope you will remember to say to them, after learning the fundamental rules, it is necessary not to try too much, and that it is quite wrong to try hard to put the sound in the right place, while it only would be necessary to let it go where must be. To try hard means simply to work against the right production of voice.

What I wrote in this letter is only what I said to you many, many times, but anyhow I felt that it was my duty to repeat it to you once more, and so I did. Is that a question of need with you? I don't think so, if I must judge from the work that you have done in a very short time (about two months) this winter with that young lady you prepared for me. Not a fault to find, not a lack of reproach, nothing that could not be but satisfactory. Brava! Brava! Mrs. Snyder. Then if it is not a question of need, why did I say all this to you? I said it because an artist who loves his profession feels that he never says too often, that he never says too much what is of capital interest. Go ahead, dear Mrs. Snyder, if you will continue to work in the way I see you have done here the success will be with you.

Sincerely yours,

V. VANNINI.

V. VANNINI
II, VIA DEL MORO
FIRENZE

I hereby authorize my pupil Mrs Fred. H. Snyder, of St. Paul Minnesota, to teach my method of voice production, as in the course of the past twenty years I have had many opportunities of hearing the work of her pupils and I have therefore seen that she thoroughly understands my method of teaching. She has also returned several times during these past years for further study and instruction, always with the happiest results.

I can sincerely recommend her as a true exponent of my method.

V. Vannini

November the seventh - 1913.

Mrs. J. A. Ryan will have a branch of the Vannini School in Dubuque, Iowa. Mrs. Ryan was for four years a favorite pupil of Vannini and has been a most successful teacher for a number of years, having had most remarkable results with her pupils.

Celebrated for a brilliant side career as an impressaria, Mrs. Snyder is a woman whose influence has permeated the Northwest. With more work behind her than most persons accomplish in a lifetime, she is now at the beginning of a work that is soon to be laid down by the great Italian voice teacher. Very soon it will be given to her alone to hold the responsibility that has for so long been his, and it would not be surprising if young people came all the way from musical Italy to learn of her the true Vannini method. Maestro Vannini, now about seventy years of age, declares that only Mrs. Snyder has kept intact his method and is able to give it to posterity as he conceived it long ago. By examining voices sent him from time to time by Mrs. Snyder, Vannini has gained absolute confidence in her ability to get results equal to his own, most notably the flawless tone and natural registration.

In addition to her mastery of the Vannini method, Mrs. Snyder possesses a natural aptitude for imparting vocal knowledge—the aptitude that comes of an intimate understanding of what constitutes the singing voice.

At home almost anywhere in the world, her influence upon the Middle West is an intensely cosmopolitan one. Among the great artists who are her friends through their admiration of her work and of her magnetic personality are Melba, Eames, Emma Nevada, Gadski, Sembrich, Fremstad, Geraldine Farrar and Paderewski, together with hosts of others. She has been confidante and counselor to a legion of younger singers and has given many of these a lift on the pathway to success.

In her school of music, which is to be named and organized this season, and will occupy its own building in St. Paul next year, Mrs. Snyder is merely co-ordinating the various parts of a work that has been growing for a quarter century. The success of the new undertaking is assured because it is built upon the sure foundation of the old.

INA F. GRANGE
St. Paul, Accompanist

MRS. MABEL DUROSE
St. Paul

MARTHA ROGERS
Of New York

MRS. BESSIE COCHRAN
Minneapolis Branch

MRS. J. A. RYAN
Dubuque Branch

KATHLEEN H. BIBB
Minneapolis Branch

Philharmonic Programs.

Julia Culp, who was to have sung at the next pair of New York Philharmonic Society concerts on November 12 and 13, having been detained a week or two longer in Europe, her appearances with the Philharmonic will be postponed till the next pair of concerts. Consequently the program will be changed and a Tschaikowsky program given. The "Romeo and Juliet" overture is to open the program, followed by the "Pathétique" symphony, the tragic swan song of the composer. The lighter part of the program will consist of the "Variations on a Rococo Theme," for cello and orchestra (the solo part played by Leo Schulz), and the "Italian" caprieeio. The following Sunday's program will have as soloist Arrigo Serato, who will play the always popular Mendelssohn concerto for violin, Weber's "Oberon" overture, Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, the two "Elegiac Melodies" of Grieg for strings, Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Spanish" capriccio and the three familiar excerpts from the "Damnation of Faust."

USE ORIENT

CLEANER AND POLISH
On Your Piano

A new Marvelous Discovery. Nothing else like or equals it. Guaranteed harmless, odorless and free from anything oily, greasy or sticky. You can sit on a chair the next minute after Cleaning and Polishing without danger of greasing or soiling the finest fabric. Cleans and Polishes while applying it, transforming a dull, dingy Piano into a most brilliant, attractive piano with magical swiftness and ease. Endorsed by Piano makers, dealers and all who have used it. To convince you how different and superior this product is over all others we will mail you a trial sample for 4 cents postage, or better still send 50 cents in stamps for large 12-ounce bottle fully prepaid. Your money back if not more than satisfied. Piano makers, Dealers and Agents, you need Orient Cleaner and Polish to protect the finish on instruments you sell; write us for prices.
ORIENT CHEMICAL CO., 472 Gumbel Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

Musicians who find it impossible to secure the proper regulation or touch in a grand piano, should write Kranich & Bach for information regarding the action patented and used only in the Kranich & Bach Grands. Therein are given some facts that are of value to any teacher of the piano, and also of value to any musician who desires to secure the greatest return for demands made upon the tonal qualities of the instrument. Free for the asking.

KRANICH & BACH
New York

Mme. Melville-Liszniewska Coming to America.

Pupils of Marguerite Melville-Liszniewska who had planned to study with her in Vienna during the coming winter, as well as those whose work was so suddenly interrupted in the summer by the breaking out of the war, will, no doubt, be glad to hear that Mme. Liszniewska is contemplating a visit to the United States in November. She is coming to America to complete arrangements for her tour in 1915-16, and having cancelled her European engagements, she will remain a few months in America. During this time she will teach twice a week at Steinway Hall, New York, and also once a week in Boston. Mme. Liszniewska had first engaged passage on the steamship Cleveland, of the Hamburg-American Line, from which she transferred to the Holland liner Rotterdam. Now the latest developments in the North Sea have decided her to start from the safer port of Genoa.

MARGUERITE MELVILLE-LISZNIEWSKA.

Reception to Alda.

A reception was held on Monday afternoon, November 2, 1914, in the rooms of the Musicians' Club of New York, 62 West Forty-fifth street, in honor of Frances Alda.

It will be remembered that Mme. Alda contributed greatly to the building fund of the club by singing at the concert given last spring for that aim.

Among the two hundred present were Alexander Lambert, Elinor Comstock (with some of her pupils), Miss Butler, Efrem Zimbalist, Alma Gluck, Rubin Goldmark, W. O. Gorski, Mr. and Mrs. Hallette Gilberte, Fay Foster, Charles Gilbert Spross, Dr. and Mrs. J. Christopher Marks, Homer N. Bartlett, Hamish MacKay, Mme. Von Klenner, Mrs. T. Vivian, Mrs. Conrad Kimball, Eduardo Marzo, J. M. Priaulx, Frederick Gunther, John M. Fulton, Walter L. Bogert, Thomas H. Thomas, Florence Foster Jenkins, Sadie Harrison, Helen Crane, Jules Wellens, Dewey Richards, Florence Loeb, Mrs. Hallam McLewee, Mrs. Roland Philips and Charles H. Harding.

A Fanning Tribute.

In the Pueblo (Col.) Chieftain, October 4, 1914, appeared the following tribute to the ability of Cecil Fanning, the baritone:

Cecil Fanning, the young baritone, is undeniably one of the greatest artists of today. His voice was a revelation to us last Monday evening at the Centennial Auditorium, when, assisted by H. B. Turpin, his accompanist and teacher, Fanning presented a wonderful song recital.

The program was exceptionally well selected, ranging from the prologue of "I Pagliacci" to German lieder, folksongs and modern compositions. It takes an artist of Mr. Fanning's strong personality, and endowed with his rare gifts and amazing versatility, to go successfully through such an exacting program and hold his audience spellbound throughout the entire evening.

It is most difficult to analyze Cecil Fanning's voice. In the first place, it is an organ of unusual purity, perfectly balanced and evenly rounded. His tones are mellow, with the underlying softness of velvet, and he sings absolutely without effort. The quality of the voice is naturally beautiful; it is rich, full sonorous, gloriously blended. His fortes are tremendous and his pianissimos are exquisite. Dramatically, Fanning is unsurpassed. His interpretations of Loewe's "Erlkönig" and "Edward" from Percy's "Reliques" stand out supremely tragic and intensely gripping. In direct contrast are the old French and English folksongs, in which Fanning is incomparable. With inimitable art he brings out every delicious detail, every bit of tender humor, and is altogether delightfully clever.

Fanning's singing of the famous prologue from "I Pagliacci" was wonderfully dramatic, and it is quite safe to say that he will probably eventually become one of the finest operatic singers of today.

It would be hard to signal out any particular song on the program and say this was the best or the most pleasing. Everything Fanning did was supremely well done. His interpretations of the Schubert, Liszt and Loewe lieder, down to the modern group of songs by Sidney Homer, Marshall Kernochan, Harriet Ware, Maude White and Liza Lehmann, though widely different, were all marvelous examples of perfect artistry. The singer was enthusiastically applauded, and responded generously with several encores. Mr. Turpin's accompaniments were especially fine.

We are indebted to Theo. Fisher, of Colorado Springs, and the Scott's School, of this city, for this rare musical treat. Those present will never forget this perfect concert. Following is the resume of the most interesting program:

Prologue, "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; "Der Wanderer," "Wohin?" Schubert; "Die Lorelei," Liszt; "Der Erlkönig," "Henry the Fowler," "Edward" (Percy's "Reliques"), Loewe; "Le Petit Bois d'Amour," "Le Cycle du Vin," old French; "Dame Durden," "No, John, No," old English; "The Last Leaf," Sidney Homer; "Smuggler's Song," Marshall Kernochan; "Mammy's Song" (written for Mr. Fanning), Harriet Ware; "To Mary," Maude P. White; "The Mad Dog," Liza Lehmann.—Pueblo Chieftain, October 4, 1914.

Eleonora de Cisneros Makes a Record.

Eleonora de Cisneros, who is touring America this season under the management of Antonia Sawyer, gives the following list of the noted opera houses of the world in which she has sung. It is certainly a remarkable record:

AMERICA.

Metropolitan Opera, New York, debut.
Manhattan Opera, New York, two seasons.
Chicago Opera Company, Chicago, three seasons. Company sang in St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco. Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Lyric Theatre, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

EUROPE.

Teatro Alla Scala, Milan, Italy, two seasons.
Teatro Del Verme, Milan, Italy, three seasons.
Teatro San Carlos, Naples, Italy.
Teatro Reggio, Parma, Italy, four seasons.
Teatro Reggio, Turin, Italy.
Municipal Theatre, Modena, Italy.
Municipal Theatre, Ferrara, Italy.
Municipal Theatre, Faenza, Italy.
Alighieri Theatre, Ravenna, Italy.
Royal Opera, Covent Garden, London, England, four seasons.
Waldorf Opera (Russell season), London, England.
Imperial Opera, St. Petersburg, Russia.
Conservatorium, St. Petersburg, Russia.
Imperial Opera, Vienna, Austria.
Municipal Opera, Trieste, Austria.
San Carlos Royal Opera, Lisbon, Portugal.
Theatre des Champs Elysees, Paris, France. (Saisa Anglo Americaine.)

AUSTRALASIA.

His Majesty's Theatre, Melbourne, Australia.
His Majesty's Theatre, Sydney, Australia.
Concert tour (sixty concerts) leading cities of Australia, New Zealand and at Honolulu, Hawaii.

Engagements cancelled by the war include Berlin, Madrid, Barcelona and Chicago.

Gabrilowitsch Joint Concert.

An appearance of unusual interest will be a joint recital in Aeolian Hall, New York, Wednesday afternoon, November 25, by the Russian pianist, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, and his wife, Clara Clemens Gabrilowitsch, mezzo-soprano. Mme. Gabrilowitsch, well remembered as the daughter of Mark Twain, has become well established as a lieder singer during her years of residence in Germany. Gabrilowitsch has not been heard in this country since 1909, when he made an extended American tour. During the last few years he has been heard as conductor as well as pianist. One of his noteworthy achievements was a series of Berlin and Munich concerts at which he played nineteen concertos, illustrating the development of the concerto from Bach to the present time.

TINA LERNER
DISTINGUISHED RUSSIAN PIANIST
FOURTH AMERICAN TOUR 1914-15 NOW BOOKING
MANAGEMENT: LOUDON CHARLTON, CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK MASON & HAMLIN PIANO

NELSON AND HIS ORCHESTRAL BAND
OF MINNEAPOLIS
Assisted by Celebrated Soloists, Will Make a Concert Tour During Months of October and November, 1914. For dates address
OTTO L. HEEGER, Mgr., Shiffman Building - St. Paul, Minn.

U. S. KERR
BASSO CANTANTE--Song Recitals and Oratorio a Specialty
For Bookings Address 538 West 143d Street, New York City 'Phone 3313 Audubon

"Tales of Hoffmann" at the Century.

"The Tales of Hoffmann," which was given with so much success last season at the Century Opera House, New York, was repeated there with no less effect during the past week, and this Offenbach fantasy has found much popular favor.

In the role of Hoffmann, Gustaf Bergman and Orville Harrold alternated, and both of them gave strikingly effective performances of this German story teller's character. Kathleen Howard repeated her excellent rendering of last season in the role of Nicklausse. Bettina Freeman was an attractive Giulietta and sang the music well. Lois Ewell as Antonia did a rather effective piece of acting.

Louis Kreidler in the three roles, Coppelius, Dapertu to, and Miracle was excellent, especially as Dr. Miracle. His singing and fine acting fit him particularly well for all three of these roles.

Frank Phillips was amusing as Cochenille, Pitichinaccio, and Franz; and the roles of Crespel and Spalanzani were adequately interpreted by Alfred Kaufman and Louis D'Angelo.

Florence Macbeth, a newcomer at the Century Opera, was cast in the part of the singing doll, Olympia, and made a strong impression, scoring an immediate popular success. Miss Macbeth looked the part and acted it with realism, merging her own personality entirely into that of the automaton, and her actions were not only graceful but also realistic. She sang the part with beauty of tone and her coloratura was flexible and clear cut.

The performance as a whole was decidedly better than last season. The work of the chorus and the stage management were excellent. The opera was conducted by Josiah Zuro.

Musical Courier Service.

Sabetha, Kan., November 1, 1914.

To the Musical Courier:

In this small town of two thousand people we have a public library, and on its reading table the MUSICAL COURIER can be found each week. This fact should interest you, when it is considered that such a small community as ours brings here such an artist as Josef Lhevinne, and many believe we have been made ready for this effort by reading the MUSICAL COURIER. We believe we are among the first of the small towns to handle a really great artist. The editor of our local paper does our advertising gratis, and will get out a special "Lhevinne Edition" just before the concert. This editor was for four years editor of the Kansas City Weekly Star. That speaks for itself.

This town had a girls' orchestra of twenty-six members, all home girls. They played such unusual instruments (for women) as saxophones, clarinets, flutes, trombone and harp. We have two $2,500 pipe organs and a municipal chorus of seventy-five members. This last was organized last year. All of them read the MUSICAL COURIER.

Had we a music school or college we could do more, but the MUSICAL COURIER has done much.

Respectfully,

MRS. MURDOCK.

A Gadski Recital.

Mme. Gadski will give her annual song recital in Aeolian Hall on Wednesday afternoon, November 11. The prima donna, who will be assisted by Walter G. Charmbury at the piano, is to sing a long list of German lieder and several songs in English. The program follows:

Widmung	Schumann
Stille Tränen	Schumann
Wenn ich früh in den Garten geh'	Schumann
Mondnacht	Schumann
Frühlingsnacht	Schumann
Der Neugierige	Schubert
Litanei	Schubert
Who Is Sylvia?	Schubert
Nachtstück	Schubert
Hark! Hark! the Lark	Schubert
Willkommen mein Wald	Franz
Für Musik	Franz
Es hat die Rose sich beklagt	Franz
Von Ewiger Liebe	Brahms
Wiegenlied	Brahms
Meine Liebe ist grün	Brahms
In dem Schatten Deiner Locken	Wolff
Auf Flügeln des Gesanges	Mendelssohn
Die Nacht	Strauss
Ständchen	Strauss

An Arthur P. Schmidt Catalogue.

Arthur P. Schmidt has just issued a most excellently compiled catalogue, the complete title of which is "Portrait Catalogue of Schmidt's Educational Series, with Biographical Notes." The portraits are splendid and have an especial interest, many of them representing composers and musicians whose appearance and history are entirely unfamiliar to the average musician. This catalogue will be sent to readers of the MUSICAL COURIER on request. Address: Arthur P. Schmidt, 120 Boylston street, Boston, Mass.

CLARENCE EDDY
AVAILABLE FOR ORGAN DEDICATIONS AND RECITALS
Address, 510 OAKWOOD BOULEVARD CHICAGO
Season 1914-15

JENNY DUFAU
COLORATURA SOPRANO
Concert Recital
Chicago-Philadelphia Grand Opera Company
Under Management of HARRY CULBERTSON, Fine Arts Building, Chicago

SEASON 1914-1915 MRS. H. H. A. BEACH
M. H. HANSON 437 Fifth Avenue New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

SEASON 1914-1915 MAUD POWELL
H. Godfrey Turner 1400 B'way, New York

VAN YORX
THEO. ——— Tenor
Studios: 21 West 38th Street, - New York
3701 Murray Hill

VERNON d'ARNALLE Baritone
Management: ANTONIA SAWYER, 1425 Broadway, New York

GABRILÓWITSCH
THE EMINENT RUSSIAN PIANIST
AMERICAN TOUR JANUARY-APRIL, 1915
Management, LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, N. Y.
MASON & HAMLIN PIANO USED

A NAME TO CONJURE WITH!
THIBAUD
For Terms and Dates Address
A Violinist Whom France Declares to Be Without an Equal
Thibaud's American visit last winter was the violinistic sensation of the season. His return in the Fall will be an event of first importance.
LOUDON CHARLTON, Carnegie Hall, New York

A. CARBONE
MASTER IN THE ART OF SINGING
(Late Leading Singer (for twelve seasons) with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company)
Art of Singing from the first rudiments to the classic "Bel Canto"
School of Opera, with Acting and Modern Languages. Carbone's Breath Controller recommended by famous singers, teachers and physicians as unique apparatus for breathing exercises. Circular sent on application
Thirty Years' Experience. Highest References.
AEOLIAN HALL, WEST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

The Guilmant Organ School
DR. WILLIAM C. CARL, Director
Twenty-five Students now holding New York positions
Send For New Catalogue. 44 West 12th St., N. Y.

Owing to the Cancellation of his European Dates
GODOWSKY
Will be in America this Season
Management: R. E. Johnston, 1451 Broadway, N. Y.
KNABE PIANO USED

DJANE LAVOIE-HERZ
CONCERT PIANIST
Touring Canada and United States Season 1914-1915
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York.
Steinway Piano used.

Walter Henry Hall
Professor of Choral Music
Columbia University
Address, 49 Claremont Avenue

WILLIAM WHEELER TENOR
Soloist Worcester Festival
Personal Address: 61 Hamilton Place - - New York

BLANCHE GOODE PIANIST
AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS
Address: JOSEPH JOINER, 439 Fifth Avenue, New York

FRANCIS ROGERS
BARITONE
Recital, Oratorio, Concert
Also a few Pupils
115 E. 53rd St., New York
Management: LOUDON CHARLTON
Carnegie Hall

LOUISE JANSEN WYLIE Soprano
Management, Iris Pendleton, Philharmony Hall, Wichita - Kansas
New York Address, 736 W. 181st Street

LILLIAN SHERWOOD NEWKIRK
VOICE CULTURE, ITALIAN METHOD.
Special attention to tone production.
1425 Broadway, Metropolitan Opera House Bldg., New York.
Mail address, 11 Morgan Ave., Norwalk, Conn.

ADELE KRUEGER DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Concert Oratorio Recital
Management of Miss Annie Friedberg
1425 Broadway :: :: :: New York

ALBERT SCHOTT
DRAMATIC TENOR
In America Season 1914-1915. Avaliable for Recitals, etc.
Exclusive Management Concert Direction, M. H. HANSON,
437 Fifth Ave., New York

MADAME MOLIÈRE
Grand Opera Prima Donna
Vocal Culture. Special attention to voice placing. Address, 426 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N. Y. Phone, 3900 New Rochelle, N. Y. Studio also in N. Y.

THEODORE SPIERING
CONDUCTOR — VIOLINIST In America Season 1914-1915
Present address: Hotel Wellington, 55th St., and 7th Ave., New York

LEO BRAUN
Voice Culture : Repertoire
Opera Concert Oratorio
STUDIO: 327 CENTRAL PARK WEST
Phone, Riverside 3170

MME. GERVILLE-RÉACHE
DRAMATIC CONTRALTO
AVAILABLE ENTIRE SEASON
Exclusive Management HAENSEL & JONES, Acolian Hall, New York

VERA BARSTOW
NOTED VIOLINIST
Management: M. H. HANSON

CECIL FANNING Baritone
H. B. TURPIN Accompanist
Having returned from a year of concert giving in Germany, Italy and England, are
NOW AVAILABLE FOR RECITALS IN AMERICA
Address: H. B. TURPIN, Dayton, Ohio

Florence Hinkle's Recital.

Florence Hinkle gave her annual New York recital in Aeolian Hall, Monday afternoon, November 2.

Miss Hinkle, already known throughout the United States as one of the leading sopranos in oratorio, can easily lay claim to being a recitalist of first rank. Since her recital of last year, she has even broadened in her art and technic and her voice has become more limpid and controlled. It was noticeable that at the close of her program her voice sounded as fresh, pure and clear as in the very first numbers.

Her consistently arranged program offered, as will be seen from the following, a pleasing variety of better and less known numbers: "Dal sen del caro sposo," from "Vologeso," R. da Capua; "Amor che cieco sei," from "La Gerusalemme liberata," V. Rhingini; ariette, "Il regardait mon bouquet," from "Le Roi et le Fermier," Monsigny; "Du bist die Ruh'," Schubert; "Auf dem Wasser zu singen," Schubert; "Meine Rose," Schumann; "Der Kukuk," Loewe; "Wiegenlied," Hans Hermann; "Schlagende Herzen," Richard Strauss; "L'Oasis," Foudrain; "Serenata Francese," Leoncavallo; "Jardin d'amour," Chansons populaires, Vuillermoz; "Les trois princesses," Chansons populaires, Vuillermoz; "Le Baiser," Goring Thomas; "All in the April Evening," Diack; "Life and

FLORENCE HINKLE.

Death," Coleridge-Taylor; "The Hour of Dreams," Ward-Stephens; "Under the Lindens," Marschal-Loepke; "A Pretty Ducke," Old English; "Sing to Me, Sing," Sidney Homer.

Miss Hinkle sang with equal ease in the four languages, Italian, German, French and English, and in each her diction was especially commendable, it being marked that she sacrificed neither beauty of tone for clearness nor distinction of enunciation for tone.

Her mood creations and her easy transitions from one mood to another, highly artistic throughout, gave the listeners no opportunity to lose interest. She not only interested immediately, but held the attention to the end. In fact, the entire delivery of her program was a continual revelation of her atmosphere creating versatility. Both lyric and dramatic were delivered with effect. In all of this, her understanding of how to color, with an adequate technic and tone always limpid and pure at her command, impressed the listener strongly. After the first numbers one had no doubt as to the ultimate success of each succeeding one. Her subtle suggestion and piquant delivery were never overdone, and there was at no time any noticeable striving for effect.

It is difficult to say in which of her numbers Miss Hinkle succeeded most, for each number had a particular message and received enthusiastic applause. The Hermann "Wiegenlied" seemed to carry an especial appeal and a repetition was given; Goring Thomas' "Le Baiser" gave great satisfaction; Coleridge-Taylor's intense "Life and Death" was a strong number and was likewise repeated.

Prominent New York vocalists were noted in the good sized audience.

The writer overheard an enthusiastic admirer of Miss Hinkle say:

"You would know she was an artist just to look at her," and Miss Hinkle's personal appearance was indeed worthy the remark.

To listen for one and one-half hours to such a satisfactorily rendered program by an artist of such winning and wholesome personality is indeed not only a pleasure, but an inspiration as well.

Charles Albert Baker's accompaniments were skillful and sympathetic.

Charles BOWES Vocal Instruction
Returning to New York in October
Address: Care of Musical Courier

FLORENCE HARDEMAN
American Violinist Just returned from Europe In America Season 1914-15
Present address: 3514 Washington Avenue, Avondale, Cincinnati, Ohio

DAVID HOCHSTEIN
Concert Violinist
—IN AMERICA NOW—
Address, Stella Comyn, 10 Carnegie Hall, New York City

NIKOLAI SOKOLOFF THE RUSSIAN VIOLINIST In America 1914-15
Personal Representative: Johanna Sherrick, 200 Fifth Ave., N.Y.
Daniel Mayer, London

YEATMAN GRIFFITH
Teacher of FLORENCE MACBETH, Prima Donna Coloratura and other prominent Artists and Teachers
318 WEST 82d ST., NEW YORK CITY Tel. Schuyler 8537

SUNG BY MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK, MME. GERVILLE-REACHE, ETC.
Three Songs of the Desert
By GERTRUDE ROSS.
Sunset in the Desert
Night in the Desert
Dawn in the Desert
WHITE-SMITH MUSIC PUB. CO.
Boston New York Chicago

Now in New York
ALBERTO JONAS
205 EDGECOMB AVENUE

MYRNA SHARLOW
SOPRANO
Boston Opera Company, Boston.
Royal Opera Co., Covent Garden, London.
Anglo-American Grand Opera Co., Paris.
Under the management
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

MARCELLA CRAFT
Five years Prima Donna Munich Royal Opera
NOW AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS AND RECITALS
SOLOIST
Maine Festivals, Portland & Bangor, Oct. 1-5, 1914.
San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 6, 1914.
San Francisco Recital, Nov. 8, 1914.
Riverside, Cal., Recital, Nov. 10, 1914.
Los Angeles, Cal., Recital, Nov. 12, 1914.
San Diego, Cal., Recital, Nov. 13, 1914, etc.
Sole Management
CONCERT DIRECTION M. H. HANSON
437 Fifth Avenue :: :: New York
For Pacific Coast Dates Apply to
F. W. HEALY, Head Building, San Francisco, Cal.

During the past four years assistant to
FRANK KING CLARK
WILHELM AUGSTEIN
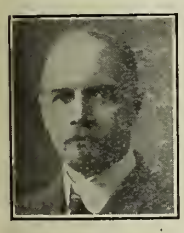
From Berlin
VOCAL TEACHER
Voice Culture, Placing and Development, Style, German, French, Italian and English Opera, and Concert Repertoire
Studio: METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE
1425 Broadway - - New York

FRANKLIN RIKER
In America Season 1914-15
Personal address: Schuyler Arms, 305 W. 98 St., New York
Phone, 3964 Riverside Studio: 603-4 Carnegie Hall, N. Y.

MME. GRACE HALL RIHELDAFFER
SOPRANO
223 Mathilda St., Apt. 5 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Florence Hinkle
....SOPRANO....
Management, The Wolfsohn Musical Bureau. 1 West 34th St., New York

BYFORD RYAN
Three Years Leading Tenor, Opera Comique, Berlin
Vocal Studio: 28 West 63rd Street - - New York



ADELAIDE GESCHEIDT
DRAMATIC SOPRANO
Instructor of the Miller Vocal Art Science and The Art of Singing
817 Carnegie Hall Tel. 1350 Columbus

JOHN THOMPSON
AMERICAN PIANIST
Management: Robert P. Strine, Estey Hall, Philadelphia

EMIL J. POLAK
ACCOMPANIST AND COACH
Address: 217 E. 71st St., New York City Telephone 923 Lenox

HELEN BIXBY WETZEL
Coloratura Soprano
Now appearing with several Italian Grand Opera Companies. MILAN, ITALY

GERMAINE SCHNITZER
THE FAMOUS AUSTRIAN PIANIST
In America Season 1914-1915
Direction: R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 Broadway, New York City
BALDWIN PIAN

LESLEY MARTIN, Bel Canto
STUDIO: 1425 Broadway, New York
SINGERS — Susanne Baker Watson, Cora Cross, Pauline Fredericks, Andrew Mack, Nellie Hart, Marion Stanley, Estelle Ward, Gertrude Hutcheson, George Bemus, George Gillet, John Hendricks, Dr. Eugene Walton Marshall, Fiske O'Hara, Horace Wright, Mabel Wilbur, John H. Stubbs, Edward Foley, Albert Wallerstedt, Umberto Sacchetti and many other singers now before the public in opera and church work.

1914-15 SEASON 1914-15
GRACE POTTER
PIANIST
MARIE HERTENSTEIN
PIANIST
FRANCIS MACMILLEN
VIOLINIST
Exclusive Management S. E. MACMILLEN, 618 Candler Bldg., 220 West 42nd St., New York. Phone Bryant 8520

Oscar Saenger
TEACHER OF SINGING
From the rudiments of tone placing to artistic finishing for concert, oratorio, recital and opera. Teacher of famous Opera and Concert singers, among whom are:
Mme. Marie Rappold, soprano; Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano; Miss Mabel Garrison, soprano; Miss Helen Warrum, soprano; Mme. Bernice de Pasquali, soprano; Mr. Rudolf Berger, tenor; Mr. Heinrich Hensel, tenor; Mr. Orville Harrold, tenor; Mr. Paul Althouse, tenor; Mr. John Young, tenor; Miss Lila Robeson, contralto; Miss Mildred Potter, contralto; Miss Kathleen Howard, contralto; Mme. Josephine Jacoby, contralto; Miss Sibyl Conklin, contralto; Mr. Henri Scott, basso; Mr. Allen Hinckley, basso; Mr. Louis Kreidler, baritone; Mr. Albert Wiederhold, bass-baritone; Mr. Leon Rains, basso.
TEL. 687 LENOX STUDIO: 6 EAST 81st St., NEW YORK
Resume Teaching October 1st.

William Thorner
VOCAL TEACHER
Mme. Schumann-Heink writes:
"To Mr. Thorner, the best vocal teacher I ever met and whom I strongly recommend.
(Signed) SCHUMANN-HEINK."
Other endorsements by Edouard de Reszke, George Hamlin, Bernardo de Muro, Marguerite Sylva, Georgette Leblanc-Macterlinck. Teacher of Anna Fitziu, Galli Curci, Carl Cochems and others.
Address 2130 Broadway, New York. Phone: 1050 Columbus.

Granberry Piano School Schedule.

Since September 30 the pupils and teachers at the Granberry Piano School, situated at Carnegie Hall, New York, have been busy with lectures, concerts, recitals, and other instructive and interesting affairs, as will be seen from the following list:

Wednesday, September 30, at 10.30 o'clock, Methods-Lecture, "The First Music Lesson," Mr. Granberry.

Saturday, October 3, at 11 o'clock, Interpretation Lecture-Recital, Dr. Elsenheimer, in this program: Prelude and fugue in D minor, from Well-tempered Clavichord, Bach; sonata in F, op. 54, Beethoven; Sea Pieces, op. 55, MacDowell.

Saturday, October 3, at 12 o'clock, History of Music, Dr. Elsenheimer.

Wednesday, October 7, at 10.30 o'clock, Methods-Lecture, "First Lesson in Reading and Memorizing," Mr. Granberry.

Saturday, October 10, at 11 o'clock, History of Music, Dr. Elsenheimer.

Saturday, October 10, at 12 o'clock, private recital in the lecture room of the school.

Saturday, October 10, at 2.30 o'clock, public recital in the Wanamaker Auditorium.

Wednesday, October 14, at 10.30 o'clock, Methods-Lecture, "Major and Minor Five Key Studies," Mr. Granberry.

Wednesday evening, October 14, at 8.15 o'clock, public recital in Chamber Music Hall, Carnegie Hall Building.

Saturday, October 17, at 11 o'clock, History of Music, Dr. Elsenheimer.

Saturday, October 17, at 12 o'clock, Musical Pedagogy, "The Music Teacher's Equipment," Mr. Granberry.

Wednesday, October 21, at 10.30 o'clock, Methods-Lecture, "The First Studies in Rhythm," Mr. Granberry.

Saturday, October 24, at 11 o'clock, Interpretation Lecture-Recital, Dr. Elsenheimer, in this program: Prelude and fugue in C sharp minor, from "Well-tempered Clavichord," Bach; sonata in F sharp major, op. 78, Beethoven; "Fairy Pictures," op. 3, Ehrich Korngold.

Saturday, October 24, at 12 o'clock, History of Music, Dr. Elsenheimer.

Wednesday, October 28, at 10.30 o'clock, Methods-Lecture, "The Music Alphabet and Its Mutations," Mr. Granberry.

Saturday, October 31, at 11 o'clock, History of Music, Dr. Elsenheimer.

Saturday, October 31, at 12 o'clock, private recital in the lecture room of the school.

Bispham Not Interested in Moving Pictures.

David Bispham is so busily engaged with his professional work this season that he has been obliged to sever his connection with the moving picture concern that recently announced him as its president.

The eminent American baritone has just returned from a Western trip after a series of very successful appearances. During this two weeks' tour Mr. Bispham sang nine times before large audiences. Most of the halls in which he appeared had a capacity of between 1,500 and 2,000 people, and in Springfield the hall holding 2,600 people was almost completely filled. Mr. Bispham was in admirable voice everywhere, one writer describing his voice as "opulent with richness and unsounded depths of volume, spontaneity and eager, temperamental force," which is a fine descriptive criticism. In several places Mr. Bispham's concerts were second in the series opened by Mme. Schumann-Heink, and in one of these a writer ended his notice of the baritone's recital thus: "There are many great singers the country ever, but from Hell Gate to Golden Gate there are few who equal this pair in popularity."

Mr. Bispham has been engaged for a return to Galesburg, Ill., in December. This college town is well known for its appreciation of good music and is a fine example for many other college towns where the value of music as an educator and mollifier is less recognized.

Mr. Bispham's next series of concerts will be given in Philadelphia (University Extension Series), November 11; New York (Columbia University), November 13; Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa., November 14; Philadelphia (sacred concert), Sunday evening, November 15, and at the Belasco Theatre, Sunday evening, November 22.

Gittelson's New York Recital.

Frank Gittelson, the young American violinist, who made his New York debut last Sunday, will give his first recital in Aeolian Hall on Monday afternoon, November 23. This week, on November 13 and 14, he will be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Second Borwick Recital.

Leonard Borwick, the English pianist, will give his second recital in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday afternoon, November 24.

The Talismans of Success

Genius, Principle, Honesty

These are the talismans that have won for

The Chickering PIANO

unchallenged leadership since 1823 : : :

The GENIUS of producing a marvelously deep and limpid tone, durability and finish : :

The PRINCIPLE of giving America the Best Piano :

The HONESTY of placing real worth into every part of the instrument

"The Oldest in America—The Best in the World."

Sold Everywhere. Write for Catalog and full information.

Chickering & Sons
Division of American Piano Co.
PIANOFORTE MAKERS
BOSTON, U. S. A.

MARQUIS de TRABADELO
4, rue Marbeuf, Paris

Jean Verd PIANIST
35 Rue Vineuse - Paris

CAMILLE DECREUS
47 rue de la Tour :: :: :: PARIS

JOHN HEATH PIANIST AND TEACHER
(Care New York Office, Musical Courier)

WILLY von SADLER
TEACHER OF SINGING (Italian Method)
STUDIO 23, rue de l'Université - - - PARIS

ELIZABETH MACK
GESTURE DRAMATIC ACTION
FRENCH AND ENGLISH READINGS
Returning to America November 1914.
ADDRESS, CARE OF MUSICAL COURIER

WAGER SWAYNE Pianists Prepared for Public Appearances
Teaching in New York This Season. STUDIO: 326 W. 90th St.

THE DEVERELL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
9 rue de Chaillot, Paris, France
(Champs Elysées)
LANGUAGE, ART, MUSIC
Until War Is Over—Branch School, New York City
Address, Care Musical Courier

GABRIEL LAPIERRE
(With Melba and Kubelik in America, Winter, 1913-14)
Teacher of Singing
15 bis Boul. Jules Sandeau - - PARIS

DELMA-HEIDE
30 Rue Marbeuf (Champs-Elysées,) Paris
Maestro di Bel Canto Italiano
Prepares Singers for Opera and Concert in Italian, French, German and English

Jean de Reszke
53 Rue de la Faisanderie
Paris

L. d'AUBIGNÉ
Teacher of Singing
(Formerly of Paris)
Will teach in N. Y. after Dec. 1st.
Address care of Martha Greason, Sec'y, 506 W. 111th St., New York

LAMPERTI-VALDA
SCHOOL OF SINGING
61 Avenue Niel - - - Paris, France
All Communications to Be Addressed to
MME. GIULIA VALDA

ARTHUR
ALEXANDER
THE TENOR
who will sing to his own accompaniment is now available for recitals.
First Chicago appearance December 14.
New York Studio, No. 100 Carnegie Hall
A Few Pupils Received
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., New York

Louisville Applauds Myrna Sharlow.

Myrna Sharlow, the young American soprano, who is making her first concert tour under the management of the Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, gave a recital in Louisville, Ky., on Thursday evening, October 29, under the auspices of the Woman's Club there. Her great success is told in the following notices culled from the Louisville press:

Surely Fate, like other givers, gives twice when she gives quickly. Myrna Sharlow is in her early twenties, yet she sings, as she did not last year, with the assurance of past successes, with the confidence of continuous experience in opera, of training with Clement in Paris. And yet how true it is that Fate knocks at those doors whose steps are garnished and whose latches are made ready. When Melba was suddenly indisposed on that night of opera in Boston, which Louisville still memorializes, why was Myrna Sharlow chosen to substitute and why was the audience delighted with the performance? Those who attended the concert at the Woman's Club last night are in a position to explain. The two arias from "La Boheme," sung in costume, revealed a charming Mimi who interpreted by voice, look and gesture the dramatic story and the flowing music which clothes it. Miss Sharlow's versatility enables her to present successfully even so widely varied a program as that of last evening, but she interprets some things better than others, and those that she sings best she sings exquisitely. In everything that was sung last night there was the evidence of an admirable technic. Her breath control is beyond criticism, her tone ample, her execution confident, easy. Every detail has been prepared and polished; there are almost no flaws. Some were more highly polished, more brilliant than others and some were sung with greater inspiration, and among those were the Puccini arias.

It would be difficult to find an Antonia to give the "Turtle Dove" song with daintier or more poetic effect than did Miss Sharlow. Her personality and her style, as well as her youth, aid in the appeal to the imagination. Back of all this is that sure technic, holding her tone firm and ample, her legato secure, so that the difficulties of that tricky aria vanish and only its beauty, its arresting grace, appear.

MYRNA SHARLOW.

The prayer from "La Tosca" was sung by Miss Sharlow in her previous recital here and she gave it last night. It showed, as did the entire program, again in confidence, in spirit, in subtle shading. Not that Miss Sharlow failed to please on the previous occasion, but she has developed naturally, if rapidly. The former promise has been fulfilled, the slight stiffness has become ease, the erstwhile pale passages are coleur de rose. These fulfillments were most apparent in the arias mentioned, in certain recondite discoveries in the form of folksong, in such modern gems as Campbell-Tipton's "The Spirit Flower," Rachmaninoff's "Lilacs," Laroux's "The Nile." The hearty, homely sentiment of "Mein lieber Schatz" was unexpectedly congenial to Miss Sharlow, who gave it with the gusto of a Schumann-Heink in German humoresque. The "Maman, dites moi" of Weckerlin was delicate, tripping, naive, dainty—all, in short, that it should have been.

The group of American songs included Frank Bibb's "Rondel of Spring," new, interesting and a little Mrs. Beachey; Walter Kramer's "Allah," with a fine climax for Miss Sharlow's splendid high tones; Frank la Forge's engaging love song, "To a Messenger," and "The Year's at the Spring," delightfully, thrillingly sung.

It was an unqualified triumph for Miss Sharlow, even trailing Bostonian clouds of glory. The audience was large, representative and responsive; they loved the singer—their singer—glowing in young pleasure and sweetness. No wonder the Bostonians were willing to forego Melba.—Louisville Courier-Journal, October 30, 1914.

In a widely varied program, which not only afforded scope for unusual talents, but put versatility to a severe test, Myrna Sharlow at the Woman's Club last night proved fully equal to the difficult task which she had set herself and rendered her selections with such consummate artistry that her hearers were moved to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. It was a distinct triumph for Miss Sharlow, for it not only revealed the heights which she has already attained, but it opened a new and far away vista of possible achievements in the future. Her audience was responsive to an unusual degree and at the conclusion of the brilliant recital the gifted little singer, scarcely beyond girlhood's years, was acclaimed an artist who had "arrived" in the fittest sense of the word. So flawless was her technic and so confident and charming her manner that her hearers forgot that they were listening to what might be called "a slip of a girl."

In the "Turtle Dove" song Miss Sharlow realized every phase of its poetic beauty, touched every finer vibration with something of her own sympathetic soul. Youth and imagination infused the whole rendition, which was exquisite. She repeated the prayer from "La Tosca," a number which she sang in her previous recital here, and gave it with even more delicate shading and subtle interpretation. The two arias from "La Boheme" were given in costume and revealed a dramatic poise, a mastery of effect, which was truly superb.

Miss Sharlow was especially happy in the group of modern selections, embracing Campbell-Tipton's "The Spirit Flower," Rachmaninoff's "Lilacs," Laroux's "The Nile" and "Mein lieber Schatz." The offering of American songs included Bibb's "Rondel of Spring," Kramer's "Allah" and La Forge's "To a Messenger" and "The Year's at the Spring."—Louisville Times, October 30, 1914.

(Advertisement.)

Augstein Endorsed by King Clark.

American pupils of the late Frank King Clark, of Berlin, will be pleased to know that Wilhelm Augstein, the vocal teacher who was connected with the King Clark Berlin studio, is now located at 1425 Broadway, New York. Already some of these students are pursuing their studies under Mr. Augstein, who had the advantage of being associated with King Clark for four years and is now imparting the King Clark method.

Herewith is appended a splendid encomium of Mr. Augstein by Frank King Clark:

Wilhelm Augstein has had an unusual opportunity to learn my system of teaching voice. He has been for a long time connected with my studio and has applied himself diligently and successfully to his work. Besides being well prepared as a voice teacher, he is a thorough musician, and I feel sure he will duplicate in his new field the success he has always enjoyed.

McCormack's Second New York Concert.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, will give another concert in Carnegie Hall, New York, Sunday afternoon, November 22. This will be his only appearance in New York, prior to his departure for the West, where he is booked for an extensive tour.

THUEL BURNHAM
PIANIST
IN AMERICA ENTIRE SEASON
MANAGEMENT, HARRY CULBERTSON, CHICAGO

MARTINUS SIEVEKING Pianist
INSTRUCTION BY A NEW METHOD.
Pupils limited. Results guaranteed.
36, rue Theophile Gautier, Paris, XVI.

REGINA de SALES
TEACHER OF SINGING
Formerly at 40 rue de Villejust, Paris
NOW LOCATED IN NEW YORK
Studios: 124 West 82nd Street, 'Phone Schuyler 7511
Reception hours: Tuesdays, 3-4
1013 Carnegie Hall, Thursday mornings.

OSCAR SEAGLE

In America Season 1914-15
Personal Address: Hotel Laurelton, 147 W. 55th St., New York
Management: Loudon Charlton, Carnegie Hall, New York

Yvonne de Tréville's Costume Recitals.

Yvonne de Tréville introduced a unique form of recital to New York music lovers, when she appeared in a costume song recital in Aeolian Hall, Friday afternoon, November 6. The complete ensemble showed Mlle. de Tréville to be a thoroughly artistic personality. The French garden setting, the gowns worn by the soprano and her accompanist in this "Three Centuries of Prime Donne" program, each denoted her to be a refined and discriminating artist, even had she not sung at all. Months have been spent by Mlle. de Tréville in the preparation of this program. She has delved into eighteenth and nineteenth century literature, seeking to make the historical setting without anachronism. She herself made numerous illustrations for her costumes and those of her pianist, before deciding upon the ones which she wears and even the minutest detail of her entire recital has been the product of the versatile resources of Mlle. de Tréville.

As Mlle. de Maupin, the soprano opened her program, the first part of which was devoted to the Louis XIV period. Lulli's "Menuet Chante" proved a quaintly charming and pertinent number with which to begin. Martini's archly rendered "L'Amour est un Enfant Trompeur," followed by the two final period songs in English, "Phillis" (Anthony Young) and "Pastorale" (Henry Carey), disclosed the well schooled coloratura of the soprano.

Part II brought Mlle. de Tréville to the stage as Jenny Lind in a group of Scandinavian folksongs and the "Mad Scene" from the "Camp of Silesia" (Meyerbeer), the last with flute obligato, composed for Lenny Lind. This group disclosed an admirable legato and especially rich tones in the middle and lower register, unusual in a coloratura, and it also emphasized the florid style of singing, delightfully illustrated by Mlle. de Tréville.

Mlle. de Tréville's atmosphere-creating ability was gratifyingly combined with a well grounded technic and a musicianship which is equalled by few artists on the concert stage today.

In the guise of Mlle. de Maupin, Mlle. de Tréville presented an alluring picture, as Jenny Lind she was indeed winsome and attractive, but as herself in the final group, Part III, which represented the twentieth century, she was perhaps more appealing and the most satisfying of all. The air from "Louise" was an exquisite interpretation of that much sung aria. The audience would have liked to hear it again. Her delivery of Charles Wakefield Cadman's "Thistledown" and Frances Wyman's "Song of Spring" (composed by these American composers and dedicated to Mlle. de Tréville) was given hearty endorsement by the audience. "Chanson Provençale" has been arranged for Mlle. de Tréville by the composer (Dell' Acqua), which the soprano interpreted with characteristic piquancy and to which she added the Gounod "Chantz Tujours," sung to her own harp accompaniment with flute obligato. This made an unusually strong appeal to her listeners, not only to the ear but to the eye, for Mlle. de Tréville, singing to her own accompaniment, was not only picturesque and charming, but fascinating. "Auf der Bleiche" (Bungert-Carmen Sylva), arranged for Mlle. de Tréville by her Majesty, Carmen Sylva, Queen of Roumania, and Richard Strauss' aria from "Ariadne auf Naxos" (first performance in New York) gave evidence of the artist's ability to enter into the spirit of the German and showed that she was as thoroughly conversant with the "Stimmung" of the German as she had previously proved herself to be in the French chansons and the English and Scandinavian songs. Her German diction impressed by its purity and her French was particularly delightful.

This was a recital which appealed to the artistic eye as well as to the artistic ear, and offered throughout a wide variety of enjoyment. Mlle. de Tréville is a musician through and through, which, combined with a lovely voice, unusually refined and intelligent interpretations and a keen artistic sense in everything, make her recital a complete success. Mlle. de Tréville played her own piano accompaniment in the encore sung at the end of the second group. She was her own harp accompanist in the encore numbers. The artistry of Yvonne de Tréville cannot be overemphasized, for her finished delivery, whether it was a matter of fine technic, a subtle suggestion in interpretation, a movement, or facial expression, continually aroused the admiration of her listeners and combined to impress them with the the harmonious completeness of the afternoon's program.

A good sized and appreciative audience listened intently throughout, and contributed much spontaneous applause and beautiful floral tributes.

An artist of Mlle. de Tréville's caliber should be heard often, not only in costume recital, but in the more conventional ones, for hers is a refined art and she is an artist with a distinct musical message. She offered the same program in the Brooklyn Academy of Arts and Sciences course, on Wednesday evening, November 4, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, and was likewise welcome there.

Mlle. de Tréville has met with unusual success throughout the West and South in this unique program, and her Aeolian Hall and Brooklyn appearances warrant equal success throughout the East.

Kotlarsky Returns.

Sergei Kotlarsky, the young Russian violinist, whose appearances as a boy at several Sunday night concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House during Conried's regime, and as soloist on tour with Caruso on his first and only American concert tour, are well remembered, has just returned from abroad, after having concertized through France, Mexico and Cuba.

Kotlarsky is just out of his teens and returns to New York with considerable success abroad as a conductor, as well as soloist. He will give a violin recital at the von Ende School of Music on Thursday evening, November 12, having studied exclusively with Herwegh von Ende, director of the school, for ten years. He is to play Bruch's D minor concerto, Lalo's "Symphony Espagnole," Paganini's "Witch's Dance," and a group of smaller pieces. He will be accompanied by Maurice Kisner, Kocian's accompanist abroad for several seasons.

FRANK
GITTELSON
The Distinguished American
VIOLINIST
New York Debut, New York Symphony Orchestra, November 8th
Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 W. 34th St., N.Y.

Ada Soder-Hueck Entertained.

In the beautiful pine forest of Oberhof, Thuringen, during the latter part of August, Ada Soder-Hueck, the German contralto, spent a few very pleasant weeks with the great German composer, Max Bruch, and his wife. Both were greatly grieved over the present conditions in Europe, and expressed an earnest desire to see the war quickly settled.

PIANOS IN PARIS
Weber & Steck Pianos. Pianolas. Pianola-Pianos
We invite comparison with any and all French makes both as regards quality and price.
Renting for Music Students a Specialty
THE AEOLIAN CO., 32, AVENUE DE L'OPERA

Louis Cornell Will Concertize in America.

Louis Cornell, Rudolf Ganz's only assistant in Berlin during the past four years, has returned to America on account of the European war. "During my six years of study and living in Germany," said Mr. Cornell recently, "I have become a sincere admirer of German life in general, the culture of the Germans and their form of government, and I deplore exceedingly any existent feeling against that nation." He was an active assistant of Mr. Gerard, the American ambassador in Berlin, at the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Cornell is well and favorably known throughout Germany, having many successful recital and orchestral appearances to his credit. He was booked for concerts throughout the season in Europe, but the war made this impossible.

His Aeolian Hall, New York, recital will occur February 26. In January he will play in Chicago. Other important engagements are pending.

Charles L. Wagner will manage Mr. Cornell's concerts in New York and the East.

Mr. Cornell also will devote some time to teaching. His studio is located at 645 Madison avenue, New York.

D'Aubigné in New York.

By the time this notice appears, L. d'Aubigné, the singing teacher of Paris, will be on the ocean, on his way from Marseilles to New York. Mr. d'Aubigné's Paris class, a large number of the members of which are now on this side of the Atlantic offered him such an excellent guarantee for the coming teaching season that he decided to abandon his original plan of remaining in Nice during the winter, doing such teaching as came to hand and enjoying a half rest from the strenuous labors which he has been obliged to undertake during the last few years in Paris.

Mr. d'Aubigné, it will be remembered, is the teacher, among others, of Felice Lyne, formerly of Oscar Hammerstein's forces, and Lois Ewell, of the Century Opera House.

Any communications regarding lessons, etc., should be addressed to his secretary, Martha Greason, 506 West 111th street, New York.

Hertenstein in Lima.

Lima, Ohio, November 4, 1914.

Marie Hertenstein, the Columbus, Ohio, pianist, who made her American debut here last night as soloist with the Russian Symphony Orchestra, left for Indianapolis today, where she is to appear at the Murat Theatre in conjunction with Francis Macmillen, the violinist. Rarely has an artist appeared in this city who achieved such instant success as that accorded Miss Hertenstein, although she was little known here. Lima musicians were led to look for something out of the ordinary in this modest young American, and they heard it. That Miss Hertenstein more than came up to expectations was evinced by the burst of applause which followed the completion of the Saint-Saëns concerto, her principal number of the evening. She was recalled again and again and responded to several encores.

GALVIN.

Flonzaley Quartet's New York Concert.

The Flonzaley Quartet will open its New York subscription series with a chamber music concert in Aeolian Hall, Monday evening, December 7.

SCHUMANN-HEINK
Available for Chautauqua Engagements Summer 1915
Tour Season 1914-15 Now Booking
Direction: Wolfsohn Musical Bureau, 1 West 34th Street, New York
STEINWAY PIANO USED

KATHARINE COODSON
Management: Antonia Sawyer, 1425 Broadway, New York.
"A POETESS OF THE PIANO"
In America January to April 1915
TOUR NOW BOOKING
KNABE PIANO

BARONESS SIGNE VON RAPPE
SOPRANO

Prima Donna, Vienna and Stockholm Operas. Principal Soloist 6th QUADRENNIAL MUSIC FESTIVAL OF THE AMERICAN UNION OF SWEDISH SINGERS, MINNEAPOLIS, JUNE 8-9, 1914.

"A voice of great range and brilliance."
—Minneapolis Tribune, June 9, 1914

American Tour, March-May, 1915

OPERA :: LIEDER :: ORATORIO
in Swedish, Italian, German, French and English

Sole Management:
Concert Direction M. H. Hanson, 437 Fifth Ave., N. Y

Mme. DE VERE-SAPIO
Prima Donna Soprano from Paris Grand Opera; La Scala, Milan; Covent Garden, London; Metropolitan Opera, N. Y., etc., etc., in America Season 1914-15. For terms and dates address:
65 Central Park West, New York.

ROMUALDO SAPIO
Formerly Conductor Metropolitan Opera, New York, and having coached the majority of great operatic artists, among whom: Adelina Patti, Nordica, Tamagno, Etc.
VOCAL STUDIO, 65 CENTRAL PARK WEST, N. Y.

Florence Macbeth
PRIMA DONNA COLORATURA
Lately Chicago Grand Opera
NOW WITH CENTURY OPERA CO.

WILLIAM WADE HINSHAW
Now in America
AVAILABLE FOR CONCERTS, ORATORIO RECITALS
Address Personally Residence, Hotel Ansonia, New York

MME. MARIE RAPPOLD
Celebrated Prima Donna Soprano
of the Metropolitan Opera Co.
Available for Concerts — January to June, 1915
Exclusive Management:
R. E. JOHNSTON, 1451 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

